....Since Mr. Mangasarian has gone tobogganning in theology he has gone down the slide pretty fast. Before the Suffolk Conference in Boston lately he traced the course "of his painful progress in getting rid of all the old doctrines and accepting the broad and generous teachings of Unitarianism. He said that, as an occupant of the pulpit, he could not conscientiously make himself to be a mere reporter to report what the Princeton professors had told him. A man cannot preach successfully unless he preaches the truth out of his own heart. In Unitarianism he found that it was possible for him to be a man in earnest—a free man, just as free as John Calvin or John Wesley."—The Presbyterian.

What Instead?

WE often feel disposed to say to the persons who desire to do away with the Christian religion, "What are you going to give us?" We are, we trust, rational beings. We stand prepared to give up any system which we hold when we see good reasons for doing so. You are going to take away from us religion. Well, what will you give us instead? We know personally a man who, a few years ago, was a drunkard, down in the gutter. He is now a temperate, hard-working man, supporting his family. What did it? Religion. If you take away his religion what will you give him in place of it?

Recently, in a little prayer meeting, a sister spoke of the support which she had when she looked on her baby and knew that it was dying. In that hour Christ was near her. You would take away her religion? What will you give her in its place?

We heard not long ago a sister in a prayer meeting tell of when she was crossing the ocean; the waves were high; all were in alarm; many dreaded that the ship would go down; the passengers were crying with fear; then, just when the fear was at its height, a woman's voice was heard amid the confusion, singing,

Thou refuge of my weary soul,
On Thee, when sorrows rise,
On Thee, when waves of trouble roll,
My fainting hope relies.

Shortly there was a hush; men and women ceased their wild cries to listen; their minds were calm.

Then the same voice sung:

Jesus lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly.

And one and another voice took up the hymn and carried it along.

You would have taken away from these people religion? Well, what would you have given them?

We have seen a woman whose life was one of trouble, whose face was worn with care and labor, speak of the joy which she felt from day to day, of her many mercies, of the abounding goodness of God to her. Would she be better off if you should take away her religion?

If you don't take away our religion until you are prepared to give us something better, we suspect that the old religion will last our time out.

The Real Trouble.

"I HAVE a legal mind," said a young man to his mother, who had earned the money to educate him, "and therefore cannot believe in Christianity." So? Sir Matthew Hale and Lord Bacon and Sir William Blackstone found no difficulty. Several of the greatest lawyers in this and neighboring States are among the most devout believers. On the 8th of this month the Hon. Luther Day, LL.D., ex Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio, died at his residence at Ravenna, Ohio, aged 72 years. His funeral took place at the Methodist church, of which he was a member, on the 11th inst. His last words were: "I am not afraid to die; yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil." This was the passage in which Daniel Webster sought for comfort when the splendor of his career passed under the shadow of the grave. Young man, have you a legal mind? If you have, and cannot believe the Gospel, the trouble is not with your mind, but with your heart.—Dr. S. M. Buckley, in Christian Thought.

A CLOCK would be of little value which should only strike "one." There is but little more of value in the spiritual experience and influence of those who make a public profession of Christ, and then cease to grow.—T. L. Cuyler.

Financial.

TUESDAY, March 2d.

IMPORTS of merchandise at this port last week were $11,663,978 and exports $5 246,043. The banks last week lost $5,763,100 in surplus of reserve and it now amounts to $25,937,780. Money continues easy at 1 1-2 to 2 per cent on call. Foreign exchange is $4.87 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4.89 1-4 for demand. On Saturday Government bonds were in active demand, the 4 per cents selling for 127 3-8, the highest price ever reached. It is generally believed that the Drexel-Morgan syndicate will succeed in carrying through their project, thereby greatly benefitting the anthracite coal properties.

Dr. Doremus on Ammonia in Food.

In analyzing samples of baking powder purchased by myself of a number of grocers in New York City, I find that CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER contains only pure Grape Cream of Tartar, Bicarbonate of Soda and a small portion of flour, while the Royal Baking Powder contains in addition thereto, Tartaric Acid and Ammonia. The Ammonia gas is observed not only in the Royal Baking Powder when it is heated, but even in biscuits made therefrom.

My examination shows that Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is better than the Royal Baking Powder, because:

1st. It is compounded of better and more wholesome ingredients.

2d. It yields a larger amount of Carbonic Acid Gas and in a more satisfactory manner, in consequence of which less powder is required to produce light bread material.

3d. It is honestly sold as to weight. The Cleveland cans contained full net weight, while the Royal cans were short weight.

NEW YORK July 11, 1884.

R. OGDEN DOREMUS, M.D., LL D.,

Prof. Chemistry and Toxicology in "Bellevue Hospital Medical College;" Prof. Chemistry and Physics in the "College of the City of New York."

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The delegate appointed by France to inspect the work on the Panama Canal is said to report adversely to his government ... Queen Victoria was present at the performance of an oratorio at Albert Hall... The fishery question is being carefully considered in Canada... The Pan-Electric Telephone scandal is to be investigated by Congress ... One of the severest storms, accompanied by the highest wind known in fifteen years, swept over New York and vicinity yesterday....The Knights of Labor are to be opposed by the Roman Catholic Diocese in Milwaukee, Wis....Several buildings were burned in Troy and considerable damage in many places caused by the recent storm.... A burglar was shot in New York while attempting to rob a grocery store....The investigation of the Broadway franchise proceeds very slowly....The McCormick Reaper Works in Chicago are soon to be re opened....Boulin, the wife murderer, hung himself in his cell at the Tombs.... The steamer "Idlewild" was run on a reef by the wind and wrecked.

MONDAY, MARCH 1.—The treaty between France and Madagascar has been ratified. ...The examination of the Socialists in London is continued ...The strike in France continues and large accessions are expected by the rioters....Several large meetings of unemployed workingmen were held in England....Servia refuses to accept the treaty of peace proposed by the Powers....A great deal of damage has been done by the recent gale in the Atlantic States....The police commission of Cincinnati have been ousted by the Supreme Court of Ohio....The crews of the scows in distress off Coney Island have been rescued and the men were in a helpless condition ...It is believed that the lifeboat of the ill-fated steamboat "Idlewild" was lost with all on board....Heavy snow falls are reported in several quarters. ....A synagogue in New York, a chapel in Brooklyn and a Presbyterian Church in Yonkers were destroyed by fire yesterday. ....A boy in New York was killed by two other boys sitting on him and taking off his skates .:.The Postmaster-General is criticized severely concerning the mails which are not carried by American steamships.... There is a fight over the liquor question in Plainfield, N. J.

TUESDAY, 2.—Sir Henry James makes a speech, wherein he gives his reasons for seceding from Mr. Gladstone's party....The wife of the United States Minister, Mrs. Phelps, is received by the Queen at Windsor Castle, an unusual compliment....Heavy snowstorm in Great Britain....Servia objects to the Turco-Bulgarian draft of the treaty. ....The President sends a message to the Senate, taking issue with that body, and defending his refusal to send papers in the Duskin case....Mr. Pugh presented a minority report....Work is resumed in the McCormick Reaper Works in Chicago .. Parson Downs assaults a reporter in Boston. ....Graham, of Springfield, Mo., confesses the murder of his wife....The lifeboat of the "Idlewild" found empty, the nine occupants supposed to be dead.

Subscribers Notice.

We desire to return our thanks to those subscribers who so kindly and promptly responded to our call in last week's paper for copies of the INTELLIGENCER of January 27th, 1886.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

MARRIAGES.

COWLEY—KEESLER.—On Thursday evening, Feb. 25, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. E. O. Moffett, Le Roy H. Cowley, of Middletown, N. Y., to Miss Minnie H. Keesler, of Pine Bush, N. Y.

HARRIS—CHIPP.—At Kingston, N. Y., on Thursday, Feb. 25, by Rev. J. F. Harris, John F. Harris, Jr., of Cherry Hill, N. J., son of the officiating clergyman, to Katherine B. Chipp, daughter of Warren Chipp, Esq., of Kingston, N. Y.

MILLER—DU BOIS.—On Thursday evening, Feb. 18, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. E. O. Moffett, Benj. T. Miller, of Walden, N. Y., to Miss Charlotte A. Du Bois, of Shawangunk, N. Y.

VERNON—McCONNELL.—At Prospect Hill, N. Y., Feb. 27, by Rev. H. Hageman, Elvin H. Vernon, of Port Jervis, N. Y., to Sarah E. McConnell, of Prospect Hill, N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

ANTONIDES.—At Flatbush, L. I., Feb. 17, John Antonides, in the 76th year of his age.

Mr. Antonides was a lineal descendant from the Rev. Vincentius Antonides, who in 1705 came from Bergen, in Friesland, Holland, as minister to the United Churches of Kings Co., L I. It is said of him "that he was of condescending behavior and conversation, and of regular exemplary piety," and "resigned under all his afflictions." The language describes as well the character of his descendant.

Mr. Antonides united with the Reformed Dutch Church of Flatbush when in the vigor of his manhood. He was a consistent Christian, faithful to every obligation of his profession, "benevolent and charitable to all, according to his ability." From the very beginning of his Christian life he was called to serve in the consistory of the Church. As an elder he ruled well. He was careful in the performance of every duty; wise in counsel He was especially interested in the education of young men for the ministry. For many years he contributed annually the yearly payment to a student under the care of the Board of Education.

"Being dead he yet speaketh" through those who by his liberality are preaching the Gospel. For several years before his death he was an invalid, and bore his trials with patience, cheered and comforted by the Divine presence. The memory of the just is blessed. C. L. W.

MOUL.—At Poestnkill, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., on Monday morning, Feb. 22, Mrs. Peter Moul, in the 98th year of her age.

Eva Figingham was born in the city of New York, Dec. 31, 1788. When about fourteen years of age she united with one of the Reformed Dutch churches of that city. May 30, 1845, she united by letter with the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of Wanantskill. She attended church regularly until she was nearly ninety years old.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 20, 1880, then in her 92d year, she for the last time worshipped with God's people in the church she loved so well. The closing years of her life were truly spent in communion with God. Until her eyesight failed, about three years before her death, her Bible and hymn book were her constant companions—also the Heidelberg Catechism. After her eyesight failed she read from memory's page and sweetened many an hour with Scripture, hymns and catechism learned in early life. She walked with God and she was not, for God took her. I. V. A.

STAATS.—In Schodack, Jan. 12, of diphtheria, Herman Lewis, in his 10th year; Feb. 7, Peter L., aged 13 years, sons of Joachim P. and Catherine L. Staats; grandsons of the late Joachim P. Staats.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Publisher's Department.

A VIOLENT COUGH CONTINUED through the winter often brings Consumption in the spring. Soothe and tone the irritated and weakened lungs with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and the Cough yields and the danger disappears. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

"All signs fail"—except pimples and blotches. These never fail to indicate an impure condition of the blood, which may be thoroughly cleansed and renewed by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The most efficacious and economical of blood purifiers.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents, 2d, the proportion. 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The Church.

The Word of Promise.

(BY SUPPOSITION.)

[An Hymn set forth to be sung by the Great Assembly at Newtown, Mo. 12. 1. 1836.]

LORD, Thou hast led us, as of old,
Thine Arm led forth the chosen Race
Through Foes that raged, through Floods that roll'd,
To Canaan's far-off Dwelling-place.

Here is Thy bounteous Table spread,
Thy Manna falls on every Field,
Thy Grace our hungering Souls hath fed,
Thy Might hath been our Spear and Shield.

Lift high Thy Buckler, Lord of Hosts!
Guard Thou Thy Servants, Sons and Sires,
While on the Godless heathen Coasts
They light Thine Israel's Altar fires!

The savage Wilderness remote
Shall hear Thy Works and Wonders sung;
So from the Rock that Moses smote
The Fountain of the Desert sprung.

Soon shall the slumbering Morn awake,
From wandering Stars of Error freed,
When Christ the Bread of Heaven shall break
For Saints that own a Common Creed.

The Walls that fence His Flocks apart
Shall crack and crumble in Decay,
And every Tongue and every Heart
Shall welcome in the new-born Day.

Then shall His glorious Church rejoice
His Word of Promise to recall—
ONE SHELTERING FOLD, ONE SHEPHERD'S VOICE,
ONE GOD AND FATHER OVER ALL!

The 250th anniversary of the First Church, Cambridge, Mass., was celebrated on February 12th. The above hymn was written for the occasion by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, and was sung by the congregation. The church was originally evangelical. Unitarianism crept into it, and in 1830, by a legal decision, was declared to be the church and was put in possession of the property. Rev. Dr. Abiel Holmes, the father of Dr. O. W. Holmes, was pastor at the time, and with the orthodox majority of the communicants maintained the organization in a new building, as the Shepard Church, so called from the first pastor, Rev. Shepard, a native of Lowchester, England. Both organizations claim to be the original church. Both united in the recent celebration.

The Pastor's Relation to Missions.

IN his lecture before the Society of Inquiry of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, the Rev. John Hall, D.D., said:

We come now to the relation ofethe settled pastor to missions. Unless he has at the start an unusually large congregation he should do personal mission work. I am sometimes puzzled to know what a vigorous young minister does with himself, when he is placed in charge of a very small congregation. He is educated, and has a vigorous constitution. How does he employ his time, with a church 50x30 feet, and a congregation of 50 families and a membership of about 80? Probably in writing the most eloquent, splendid, transcendant discourses; but his light shines where it is not appreciated. Young pastors so situated should do active missionary work. Let us suppose one to be settled in some quiet New England or New Jersey village. He will find few places where there is not a floating population who have no definite connection with any church. Let him be a missionary to them. How can he? Let me draw a little from my own experience. You are asked to conduct a funeral in some household not closely allied with any church. Ask them incidentally whether they have any church connection; if not, invite them to your church and Sunday-school, it will often lead to their conversion. Upon some such occasions you may be introduced to relatives of people belonging to your church, who will ask you to call and see them. Take them at their word, and do not lose sight of them until you have them under Gospel influences. In such ways missionary work can be done just as genuine as that accomplished upon heathen soil.

If the church is to do the work committed to her by her King, she must be aggressive. The necessity for this is increasing every day. We have papers to satisfy the intellectual curiosity of our people, entertainments to minister to the taste for pleasure; social arrangements, benevolent and quasi-benevolent; some sensible, some sensuous, all tending to the development of a selfish, proud, arrogant, mean individualism against which the Church must contend. Added to this is the influence of foreign unbelief. The Church must do aggressive work to counteract all this. Let us suppose you are settled in a city of 10,000 inhabitants with many churches and a constituency in this Church which includes a number of country people round about. Say from your pulpit that you will on such a day visit this or that district, and will preach at the house of Mrs. So-and-so in the evening. Devote the day to visiting and reach the appointed house in time for tea, where you will probably find a company of neighbors awaiting you. In the evening the people whom you have called upon will come; preach informally, and in course of time they will say "He is in earnest; it is a shame we do not go on Sunday to hear him preach from his pulpit." You will gain many adherents in this way. Men gifted with apostolic fervor and piety will not be content to prepare one sermon and lecture a week. If we have the piety of the early Church, we, with the blessing of God Almighty, will be able to achieve results of the same kind.

You can do a great deal for missions in your pulpit. Preach upon the subject, not only upon stated, formal occasions, but at other times. The Bible is full of missionary subjects. The epistles of Paul cannot be expounded faithfully without frequent reference to missions; neither can prophecy be understood apart from this subject. Talk about missions occasionally when there is no collection to be taken up, though do not yield to the ordinary prejudice against "begging sermons." Bring the people into constant living contact with the truth and they will not be thinking of the collection.

My ideal of missionary preaching is to incorporate with all my teaching the great truths about missions; the duty of the individual Christian and of the Church to the world; and thus lodge the great principles of the work in the minds of the people, so that the soil will be prepared for the presentation of the claims of the separate fields of China or India in the more formal missionary addresses, and the giving will be more intelligent. That pastor poorly performs his duty toward missions who reads a profound theological essay upon "The Distinction between Supralapsarianism and Infralapsarianism," or upon some other equally live topic, and then merely announces that the customary collection for foreign missions will be taken up. Have the courage of your convictions, and lay upon the conscience of the people the question whether they will be active or apathetic in this work. Constant reference to this subject will make the people better, large-hearted, more spiritual and consecrated.

Some will say that this will do very well for wealthy churches, but their congregation is poor and their own regular expenses can hardly be met. Such an objection may be well meant, but it does not reveal an accurate knowledge of human nature. By placing the demands of the mission fields before the people their sense of responsibility as stewards will be deepened; their hearts will be enlarged, and the local interests will gain in proportion to this increase in liberality, for it is not so often the means that are lacking as the will to give. There is much of criminal ignorance or negligence among nominal Christians regarding the claims of missions. The sooner such are made to understand their responsibilities the better it will be for the Church. The pastors should be leaders in educating them to a higher standard of duty and cultivate a spirit of large-hearted liberality. I have found many of the most liberal givers are those who earn their bread in the sweat of their brow. It is no uncommon experience for me to receive a letter from a hired servant regretting that she would not be able to come the next Sunday, as it was her day to stay at home, and enclosing perhaps five, and, in one case, ten dollars for the foreign missionary collection. I would rather lose all the wealthy carriage-owning people than this class who form the strength and glory of the Church. I wish nothing better than that you should look upon people as men and women; never mind their wealth. Make them all, rich and poor, feel that the field is the world, and they will be your firmest supporters in your home work.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 11, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Vashti Divorced.....Esther 1:1-22.
T. Esther made Queen.....Esther 2:1-23.
W. Haman's Plot.....Esther 3:1-15.
T. Esther's Resolve.....Esther 4:1-17.
F. The King's Favor.....Esther 5 and 6.
S. The Plot Defeated.....Esther 7 and 8.
S. Esther's Memorial.....Esther 9 and 10.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

March 14th.—Esther's Petition.—Esther 4:10-17; 5:1-3.

Golden Text.—"So will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish."—ESTHER 4:16.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Neither count I my life dear unto myself."—ACTS 20:24.

INTRODUCTION.

OUR lesson presents to us a mere fragment from one of the most remarkable and interesting books of the Old Testament. It represents as well as any fragment could the character and teaching of the entire book, but no fragment of this work can be understood without some acquaintance with all the book. A very important part of the preparation of this lesson will be the careful reading of the entire story of Esther. A fitting introduction to our comments will be a brief review of the preceding narrative. The book brings to view at the outset the magnificent court of Ahasuerus, who is supposed to have been the great Xerxes. The feast described in the first chapter is probably that at which he unfolded his plan for the conquest of Greece, and demanded from the representatives of his various provinces their support in men and means. At the climax of this feast, when full of wine, he commanded Vashti, his favorite queen, to appear and exhibit her beauty before the assembled guests. Her dignified refusal was followed by her loss of favor and position. After the return of Xerxes with the remnant of his expedition from Greece, he sought a substitute for the dishonored Vashti, and in the Providence of God Esther, a Jewess, was chosen, her nationality being kept from the knowledge of the king. Haman, one of his courtiers, had succeeded in so winning the king's favor as to become almost absolute in his influence. His arrogance was met by the manly and conscientious refusal of Mordecai, the foster father of Esther, to give him Divine honors, and he immediately began to plan a revenge. In accordance with the unscrupulous vindictiveness of the times he plotted the destruction of the entire race of the Jews. The king gave him the desired authority without much consideration, and the time was set for the act of extermination, and orders issued to all parts of the kingdom for its execution. Here again God interposed, and so ordered the lot by which the day was set that the greater part of a year intervened between the promulgation of the decree and the time for its fulfillment. Mordecai, who appears to have been a leader among the Jews at Shushan, immediately put on sackcloth with ashes, and appeared as near the palace as he could in this garb of mourning. Esther sent her attendant, Hatach, to inquire into the cause of Mordecai's mourning, and was thus informed of the terrible fate hanging over her countrymen. Mordecai saw that she was the only one who could, humanly speaking, avert the calamity, and besought her to use her influence with the king to this end. Our lesson represents the struggle in Esther's mind, and her heroic resolve to take her life in her hand for the sake of her people. The latter portion of the book unfolds the queen's plan more fully, with its successful issue in the destruction of Haman and his house, and the deliverance of the Jews, together with the appointment of their fast of Purim, observed in thankful remembrance of their escape.

THE LESSON.

I. DIFFICULTY.—VS. 10–12.

V. 10.—"Again Esther spake unto Hatach." This eunuch seems to have been devoted to the queen, and willing to be her messenger on such a delicate errand. If he had been less trustworthy the affair might have been prematurely defeated. Esther knew how capricious her lord and king was, and how little of real influence she had with him, being regarded more as a plaything than anything else.

V. 11—"All the king's servants....do know, that whosoever....shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law....to put him to death." This strict rule of court etiquette was probably devised for the purpose of protecting the king's person from assault. It was a well-known regulation, and apparently carefully observed. Any escape from the penalty attached was entirely dependent upon the mood of a capricious and irresponsible man at the moment. "I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days." This fact made the risk still greater, because it indicated either that the king had tired of Esther or that some new favorite had taken her place for the time being. Esther stated these facts not so much in order to evade her responsibility as to show the hopelessness of any effort on her part. That is not courage that ignores difficulty and danger.

V. 12.—"They told to Mordecai Esther's words." He was the queen's only real friend and counsellor, and upon his wisdom and piety the entire story turns. If his character had been less noble, the story would never have been written.

II. ENCOURAGEMENT.—VS. 13, 14.

V. 13.—"Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape." Although Esther's nativity had been concealed from the king it was not probable that it could long escape the knowledge of H man, if indeed he were not already aware of it. Mordecai shows her that it is not a question of risk in intruding upon the king, but of greater risk in refusing to make the attempt.

V. 14.—"If thou holdest thy peace at this time." Esther alone could, by the blessing of God, avert the impending destruction, but, "There shall arise enlargement and deliverance to the Jews from another place." Mordecai's faith was like that of Abraham counting that God was able to raise the promised seed even from the dead. "Thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed." This hope did not meet the present emergency. The rage of Haman would certainly be sated with blood if she did not interfere. "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" To recognize one's place in the plans of God, and to seize the blessed opportunities as they come to us is the perfection of wisdom.

III. RESOLUTION.—VS. 15-17.

V. 15.—"Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer." She immediately recognized the force of his argument and appeal, and made her heroic resolve, yet not in vain self-confidence.

V. 16.—"Go gather together all the Jews....and fast ye for me." Although the name of God is not mentioned in this book, the work of God in the hearts and affairs of men is seen on every page. Esther did not dare to make her perilous attempt until she had strengthened herself in God. She sought the sympathy and prayers of her countrymen as she was about to enter the lion's den for them. "I also and my maidens will fast likewise." She was not unmindful of her own spiritual need, and spent the time intervening between making her resolution and its execution in seeking God's help. "If I perish, I perish." All thought of self preservation is swallowed up in that of duty. If her countrymen cannot be saved without the sacrifice of her life, she is ready to be offered up. No good cause, undertaken with such dependence upon God, and such surrender of self has ever failed, or ever can fail.

V. 17.—"So Mordecai went his way." By faith he could see the clouds already lifting, and as he summoned his friends he could inspire them with fresh hope and courage.

IV. SUCCESS.—VS. 1 3.

V. 1.—We have in these three verses only the beginning of Esther's scheme in behalf of the Jews, but enough is related to give a clear intimation of what follows. When the king graciously received her, her success was assured. "Esther put on her royal apparel." She did not undervalue the importance of appearances. She made herself as attractive to the eye as possible, depending upon God, yet neglecting no means within her reach. Thus apparelled she entered the inner court and stood within sight of the throne, yet at a distance from it.

V. 2.—"When the king saw Esther, the queen, standing in the court, she obtained favor in his sight." Vashti has suffered because she had disobeyed the king's personal command; why should Esther escape when violating one of the permanent laws of the Medes and Persians? Because "the king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will" (Prov. 21: 1.)

V. 3.—"What wilt thou, Queen Esther?....It shall be given thee to the half of my kingdom." The king knew that some desire had caused the queen, at her own peril, to venture uninvited into his presence, and promised to grant the request before it had been preferred. So wonderfully does the LORD turn the enmity of man into friendship, and overrule in the most complex affairs of nations. The lesson, and in fact the entire book, is an exposition of the ways of God among men.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

Divine Providence.

1. It reaches everywhere.
2. It embraces all things.
3. It controls all men.
4. It surmounts all obstacles.
5. It demands human effort.
6. It honors human prayers.
7. It rewards self sacrifice.
8. It furthers God's gracious purposes.
9. It manifests the unseen Lord.

Confirmations of the Bible.

IN each new discovery of students and travellers we acquire a fresh evidence of Christianity. We live in an age of skepticism, and yet in every old coin or Moabite stone or Phrygian inscription or recovered writing or broken slab or crumbling tomb in Asia Minor, in Palestine, even on the far-off banks of the Tigris or the Euphrates, the Great Head of the Church is ever supplying us with fresh historic confirmations of the facts which we have historically received.

If the New Testament were taken from us to-morrow, it is hardly too much to say that from medals and catacombs and the ruins of long-forgotten cities, and relics and writings of days within two generations of the death of Christ, we could reconstruct and demonstrate every essential fact of "those sinless years which breathed beneath the Syrian blue."—Archdeacon Farrar.

Did Not Go Where They Were.

"I'VE been in India for many a year, and I never saw a native Christian the whole time." So spoke a colonel on board a steamer going to Bombay. Some days afterward the same colonel was telling of his hunting experiences, and said that thirty tigers had fallen to his rifle. "Did I understand you to say thirty, colonel?" asked a missionary at the table. "Yes, sir, thirty," replied the officer. "Because," pursued the missionary explanatorily, "I thought perhaps you meant three." "No, sir, thirty," this time with emphasis. "Well, now, that's strange," said the missionary; "I've been in India twenty-five years, and I never saw a wild live tiger all the while." "Very likely not, sir," said the colonel; "but that's because you didn't know where to look for them." "Perhaps it is so," admitted the missionary, after a moment or two of apparent reflection; "but may not that be the reason you never saw a native convert, as you affirmed the other evening at this table?"

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

For Alcoholism.

Dr. C. S. ELLIS, Wabash, Ind., says: "I prescribed it for a man who had used intoxicants to excess, for fifteen years, but during the last two years has entirely abstained. He thinks the Acid Phosphate is of much benefit to him."

Care for the Children

Children feel the debility of the changing seasons, even more than adults, and they become cross, peevish, and uncontrollable. The blood should be cleansed and the system invigorated by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them completely; and they have been healthy ever since. I do feel that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my children to me." MRS. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.

Purify the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your Home. 9th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.

YOU CAN DYE ANYTHING ANY COLOR

With Diamond Dyes. for 10 cts. They never fail. 32 fast colors. They also make inks, color photo's, etc. Send for colored samples and Dye book. Gold, Silver, Copper and Bronze Paints for any use—only 10 cents a pkge. Druggists sell or we send post-paid.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass.

NEW PERPETUAL FLOWERING FUCHSIA "STORM KING"

This new Double Perpetual-Flowering Weeping Fuchsia, "Storm King," is the grandest plant novelty in many years. It is always in bloom, often as many as 200 buds and blossoms on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before they expand are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; and when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a sight which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid, 50 cts. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack secure from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. Form Clubs for this grand Fuchsia. See the low price at which they can be secured by the dozen.

Our new Double White Perpetual-Flowering Violet, "Swanley White," is the queen of fragrant flowers. It produces in great number large pure white double blossoms of great beauty and fragrance. A splendid winter bloomer and desirable for pot or open ground culture. Strong plants, which are now budded and blooming, by mail, 30 cts. each, 3 for 60 cts, 12 for $2.00.

Our new Imperial German Pansies have created a sensation and are the floral wonder of the times. Flowers of enormous size, with colors and markings entirely new and of marvelous beauty (see catalogue). They bloom from May to December; always large and profuse through the dry, hot weather of Summer when other sorts fail. Mixed seed of over 50 distinct colors, 25 cts. per paper. We have 40 distinct colors separate, such as pure white, black, yellow, blue, spotted, &c., at 25 cts. per paper.

We also send 12 large flowering bulbs of Double Pearl Tuberoses for $1.00; 5 fine hardy Lilies, including Auratum, 75 cts.; 12 choice mixed Gladiolus, 50 cts.; 4 beautiful Tea Roses—white, red, yellow and pink, 50 cts.; 4 Chrysanthemums or 4 Carnations, 50 cts. See our large, beautiful catalogue, free to all, for other special offers. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly as represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our great business, extending to all parts of the world. Orders can be sent at once. The white Pansies are magnificent for cemeteries.

SEEDS, BULBS and PLANTS.—Our large, beautifully illustrated catalogue sent free to all who apply. New and beautiful novelties in Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Gladiolus, Lilies, Amaryllis, Roses, Carnations, Geraniums, Clematis, &c. Preserve this advertisement, as it may not appear again, and remember that our goods have an established reputation and are warranted true. See catalogue which will be sent free to any who purchase or expect to.

Address, JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral, Queens Co., N. Y.

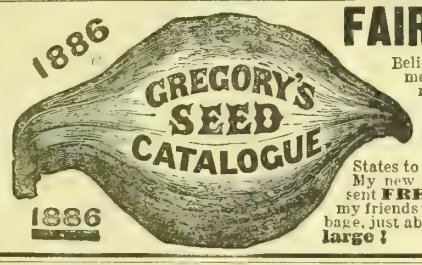
N. B.—Remittance can be made in money orders, Postal Notes, Bills, Drafts, or Stamps. To those who order, or expect to, we will send free, with our elegant catalogue, beautiful colored chromos of Storm King Fuchsia, Swanley White Violet, and German Pansies. Also, for every dollar's worth ordered from this advertisment, the buyer can have free a paper of PURE WHITE or PURE BLACK German Pansy Seed.



FAIR AND SQUARE DEALING.

Believing that if a man has dealt squarely with his fellowmen his patrons are his best advertisers, I invite all to make inquiry of the character of my seeds among over a million of Farmers, Gardeners and Planters who have used them during the past thirty years. Raising a large portion of the seed sold, (few seedsmen raise the seed they sell) I was the first seedsman in the United States to warrant (as per catalogue) their purity and freshness. My new Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1886 will be sent FREE to all who write for it. Among an immense variety, my friends will find in it (and in none other) a new drumhead Cabbage, just about as early as Henderson's, but nearly twice as large! James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

HIGHLAND PARK, VOLUSIA COUNTY, FLORIDA.

Parties desiring to purchase Land in Florida should visit and examine this Beautifully located Town before purchasing elsewhere. Situated on a bluff of high rolling land, one of the highest points in Volusia county, and noted for the fertility of the soil. Some of the CHOICE ORANGE GROVES of the State are in this vicinity. The natural attractions of this place are unsurpassed, and the fine climate here helps to make this Town one of the most attractive places for those wishing to make a winter home

For Orange Culture it has no superior, and the lands are also adapted to the culture of Vegetables and the smaller fruits. Some of the Finest Garden Lands in Florida may be found here.

Highland Park is located directly on the main line of the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West Railroad, 104 miles south of Jacksonville, and three-fourths of a mile east of good steamboat landing. The town has been beautifully laid out in good sized building lots, adjoining and near which are tracts in any size to suit purchasers, both pine and hammock lands Bargains are now being offered to ACTUAL SETTLERS such as will not be found in any other part of the State. Parties wishing to secure one of the best spots in Florida for either a winter or permanent home, should inspect the rare chance now offered. Lots and Lands will be sold on EASY TERMS.

The Highland Park Hotel is situated a few rods from the railroad depot, fronting on the beautiful and picturesque Highland Park. This hotel is now open for the reception of guests. It has all the modern improvements, including Gas, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Water Baths, pure Water and a perfect system of drainage. In fact this Hotel is one of the most complete and best furnished in the State, outside of the large cities. No pains will be spared to make the guests comfortable. The house is delightfully situated in a grove of oak and magnolia, and helps to form one of the most attractive places in Florida. The Hotel is kept by E. H. SANBORN & CO., of White Mountains, N. H. Persons desirous of spending the winter in Florida, or wishing to make a winter or permanent home, will do well to call and examine Highland Park before locating elsewhere. For further information or particulars, call on or address,

GEO. H. NORRIS, P. O. Spring Garden Centre, Volusia County, Florida.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated. Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 130 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

Is a Book of 70 pages, with 200 engravings of Orchard and Small Fruits, Nuts, &c. Gives honest descriptions of Golden Queen Raspberry, Lawson Pear, and over 400 other Fruits, instructions for planting, pruning, cultivation and management, with low prices for Trees and Plants. Price 10c. with colored plates; without plates 5c. Price Lists free.

25 YEARS IN THE POULTRY YARD.

27th Edition. 108 Pages, explains the business. Symptoms and remedies for all diseases. Written by a farmer for farmers. 25cts. in stamps, or one ct. a year for my experience. A 50 page Ill. Cir. free.

A. M. LANG, Cove Dale, Ky.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

"A direct, practical "experiment in a laun- "dry has proved to "me that the "Ivory," "tested against a cer- "tain well-known "brand of laundry "soap, has the same "amount of cleansing "power and one and "two-thirds the last- "ing capacity. That "is, the Ivory Soap "will do one and two- "thirds times the work "of the soap against "which it was tested. "I therefore consider "the Ivory a very "good laundry soap."

JOHN W. LANGLEY,
Professor of Chemistry,
University of Michigan.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

Rev. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
Dr. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
Hon. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
Rev. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
Dr. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%.

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. Perkins, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. Perkins, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE
Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

AGENTS with small capital. We have something new, no risk, large profits, special 30 day offer, write at once. Empire Co., 381 Canal St., N. Y.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET
NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

WHY DO MOTHERS Put stiff corsets on their growing Children? Don't do it, but BUY FERRIS' PATENT GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS Fit all ages. All Physicians recommend them. Ask your merchants for them. Take no other.
FERRIS BROS., Manuf'rs
81 White St., New York.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY CLOTHING FOR BOYS, GIRLS or BABIES—or anything needed for Complete Outfits from Hats to Shoes you will find the largest assortment, the best styles and the lowest prices, at the

Illustrated Catalogue, containing latest styles, sent free on application.

BEST & CO.,
60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE!

So great is our faith that we can cure you, dear sufferer, that we will mail enough to convince you FREE. Send 10 2c stamps to cover expense & postage. B.S. LAUDERBACH & CO., Newark, N.J.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.

New York Office, 51 Wall Street
Organized 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement,
Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,611,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	232,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,
Real Estate Office,
336 Broome Street,
ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR
German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES.

Everybody can now enjoy my Patent Boots and Shoes. I am now manufacturing my Patent Boots and Shoes on a large scale with new and improved machinery, and selling at greatly reduced prices so as to place them within the reach of all. I will send to all applicants price-lists, full instructions for self-measurement for men, women and children, and return the shoes as quickly as they can be made. They will fit beautifully, will never warp, distort, or injure the tenderest foot, and will restore bad and distorted feet to symmetry and comfort. I make no shoddy goods, and my highest class boots and shoes are unsurpassed either in material or workmanship, and my lowest class goods are superior in every respect to all others at the same price. Those who desire perfect boots and shoes should send for my free illustrated pamphlets, JOEL M'COMBER, Inventor and Manufacturer, of M'Comber's Patent Boots and Shoes, and M'Comber's Patent Lasts, 52 East 10th Street, New York.

To preserve the leather of all kinds, for ladies' or gentlemen's boots and shoes, and to make them soft and beautiful, use my Seal Polish Blacking. Mention the Intelligencer

SPECIAL HOSIERY SAL

900 DOZEN

Gentlemen's Plain and Fancy

HALF HOSE

ALL GRADES;

ALSO,

400 DOZEN

Ladies' and Children's

SILK HOSE,

ALL COLORS,

At Prices Never Before Offer

Arnold, Constable & C

Broadway, Corner 19th S

NEW YORK.

BLACK SILKS.

JAMES M'CREERY & C

ARE SELLING, NOTWITHSTANDI THE HEAVY ADVANCES IN PRI MADE BY ALL MANUFACTURE THEIR ENTIRE IMPORTATION RICH AND RELIABLE BLACK SI AT EVEN LOWER PRICES TH HAVE PREVAILED DURING L SEASON.

COLORED SILKS, SATINS, FAU FRANCAISE, RHADAMAS, AND OTE SILK DRESS TEXTILES AT EQUA ADVANTAGEOUS PRICES.

ORDERS BY MAIL PROMPTLY TENDED TO.

Broadway and 11th Street New York.

THE SECURITY
MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIET

No. 233 Broadway, New Yor

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging a year, and making the cost for assessments a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wan

Remunerative employment offered ener and reliable men.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY.

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time! Get orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Tea Set. For full particulars address THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO., P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New Yo

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural la which govern the operations of digestion and n tion, and by a careful application of the fine pr ties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has pro our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored erage which may save us many heavy doctors' It is by the judicious use of such articles of die a constitution may be gradually built up until s enough to resist every tendency to disease. dreds of subtle maladies are floating around us may attack wherever there is a weak point. may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping our well fortified with pure blood, and a properly ni ished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus: JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chem London, Engl.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 10. WHOLE No. 2902. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE STRIKES.—It shall ever be our endeavor to denounce oppression in whatsoever form it appears and with whomsoever it originates, and to strive to induce men to deal justly with their fellow men. We shall likewise denounce, with equal fervor, all unlawful and outrageous methods by which the oppressed may seek to enforce their demands for justice. They have no right to trample the law under their feet to attain their ends, however worthy they may be. If their cause is just, in the end it will succeed without a resort to violence, thereby disturbing the peace, inflicting damage on property not their own, and imperilling life and limb. For the time being violent measures may insure speedy concessions to just claims, but the danger might follow to embolden the victors to become themselves oppressors by pushing their demands beyond a just limit, which in the long run will be sure to react against them.

A MODERN HERETIC says that "Thoughtful men have long been waiting for some statement of the doctrine of future punishment which should be scientific as well as Scriptural." We doubt this very much. Truly thoughtful men would feel that this is a matter with which science has nothing to do. It is confined to the present and the seen. The future God alone can unfold, and when He has spoken there is an end of controversy. The question is one of Scripture only. So the Church has held in all ages, and so it is likely to hold. To the law and the testimony! One clear and distinct Thus saith the Lord is worth more than all the investigations and conclusions of the most acute scientists, for He sees the end from the beginning, which they neither do nor can.

THE WORD HONORED.—One reason why the evangelists, whose services are always in demand, are so successful in winning souls to Christ, is because they "preach the Word." Take Mr. Moody, for instance, the prince of modern evangelists, he never preaches without the Bible in his hands. And so familiar is he with the Scriptures, so simple and strong is his faith in them, and so endued is he with their power, that they seem all to be in his head and heart as well as in his hands. He honors the Word in all his preaching, and the Lord honors his preaching with the salvation of thousands. He magnifies the Scriptures, exalts them above all testimony, esteems no authority higher, believes that they are they which testify of Jesus, and hence his utterances and arguments are all clinched with a "thus saith the Lord."

These remarks also apply to other men of God who have won distinction as evangelists. They get their power from the Word, and hence have power with the Word; they are mighty in the Scriptures, and hence are mighty through the Scriptures. The Bible is the subject of their daily study; it is their library, their magazine of arms, from which in their preaching they draw their supplies. They spend no time in matching their opinions against the opinions of others. It is in no controversial spirit that they go forth. "What saith the Scriptures?" is the burden of their inquiry, and to these they repair as to the court of final resort, and by their testimony they abide. To this we trace one great secret of their success. Their example enforces Paul's charge to Timothy: "Preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine." We may rest assured that if we preach the Word, the Word will not return unto God void.

FAITH.—What a stupendous faith in Christ was exhibited by Peter in the words which he addressed to the cripple at the gate Beautiful of the Temple: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk!" To the blurred vision of poor, weak human nature it seemed like presumption. To that vision what a possible disappointment and embarrassment Peter was preparing for himself by the bold words of command! Look at those helpless, useless feet and ankles. They were born so; suppose they had remained so; suppose the miracle had not been wrought and the purposed blessing had not come; suppose, after all, the cripple had remained a cripple still. What a silly predicament Peter would have been in! How any looking on would have laughed at him! How it would have seemed like jesting with misfortune; like making a mockery of suffering; like adding deeper anguish to a soul into which, from conscious childhood, the iron had terribly entered! But to Peter's belief there was no such possibility. He had confidence in his commission and in the authority and power back of it. He knew that in that name which is above every name there was restoration for the suffering as well as salvation for the sinning. His faith was sufficient. The miracle was wrought "in the name of Jesus." Faith in that name is never disappointed. Faith in that name never suffers embarrassment. In that name what seems impossible to effort is made possible—the mightiest works that seem impracticable to human endeavor are accomplished.

MR. BEECHER'S ERRORS.—In Part II. of his Evolution and Religion, the preacher illustrates the evolution of human character by that of Egyptian wheat, which, he says (p. 275), after lying three thousand years in company with hideous mummies, when taken out and planted comes up and brings forth fruit as though it had not taken a wink of sleep. Yet all this story about the vitality of wheat taken from the mummies is a pure fable, with not a single fact to rest upon. So, after setting forth that view of the atonement which represents God as so vengeful that He rushed out to vindicate His broken law and was not stayed till Christ came and sprinkled it with His blood, he says that this view is petrified in some of the great mediæval confessions and stands there to-day (p. 285). This is a gross and inexcusable error. There is not a Christian confession extant which does not formulate its doctrine on this point in entire consistency with the saying God so loved the world that He gave His Son to die for it. Indeed, this is always made the fundamental position. The students of Symbolics would be much obliged to Mr. Beecher if he would point out one Confession that justifies his statement. Besides, what are the "mediæval confessions"? No author, that we are aware of, seems to know of any such. So again (p. 199), Mr. Beecher wonders why Christ's washing the disciples' feet was not made into an ordinance. "It sinks deeper than the Lord's Supper, has a profounder grip upon man's nature, duty and destiny." The answer is that Christ made His ordinances, not the Church. And what comparison is there between the symbolic illustration of one point of Christian ethics and a rite which represents the one foundation of all human hope? There are one or two feet-washing sects in this country. Mr. Beecher had better join them.

The Victory of Both Sides.

TRADITION tells the story of two famous Kilkenny cats who fought in a sawpit so ferociously that when the battle was over only the tail of each was left. This has usually been considered a myth, but its exact counterpart was actually seen in a controversy last year between two distinguished philosophers whose passage at arms was so severe that at the conclusion not even the tail of either was to be seen. The combatants were Mr. Herbert Spencer and Mr. Frederick Harrison. The latter is a Positivist of the school of Comte, the former is—a Spencerian, being the founder of his own philosophy. The point at issue was religion. Mr. Spencer maintained that this consists in wonder and awe at the inscrutable mystery in which all science ends, and knows only one absolute certainty, viz., the infinite and eternal Energy from which all things proceed. Mr. Harrison, on the other hand, holds that religion has three elements—belief, worship and conduct; and that the proper object of these is not the unknown or unknowable, but Humanity as supported by Nature, a real aggregate worthy of respect and gratitude.

Each of these writers supports his own views with acuteness and vigor, and each attacks the other with argument and sarcasm. Both fail in defence and both succeed in onslaught. The dispassionate reader of the discussion, as presented in a small volume published by Prof. Yeomans a year ago, finds that the two disputants have ended in mutual annihilation. It is very clear that Agnosticism is not a religion. It calls for no worship and has nothing to do with either knowledge, affection, sympathy, faith, hope, duty or happiness. Its whole nature is summed up in the cabalistic formula, "the consciousness of a Mystery that cannot be fathomed and a Power that is omnipresent." No man knows or can know anything beyond this. But this is not religion in any sense which that word has or ever has had. It neither has the characteristics nor exerts the influence which in all ages have been attributed to religion. It is a mere makeshift intended to meet the religious instincts which it must be admitted belong to the whole human race. So that instead of concrete science "enlarging the sphere for religious sentiment," as Mr. Spencer claims, it takes away and stamps out all reason for religious sentiment, nay, indeed, any possibility of cherishing it.

But the Positivist theory, reverence for "the adorable Great Being," is no better off. "The whole of human beings, past, present and future," cannot possibly be an object of worship, because it embraces a multitude of what men justly stigmatize as monsters of iniquity, because even the better part of it has been marked always by mental or moral imperfection or both, because the real beings summed up under the ideal "Humanity" are but an abstraction in this point of view, without any common consciousness, and because progressive civilization has been carried on without any intent to further human progress, and therefore can make no claim upon the gratitude or veneration of subsequent ages. People cannot love, fear, obey or worship an abstraction. The attempt of Comte to meet this difficulty by making concrete embodiments of the civilization of the past, or establishing a hierarchy of saints of humanity with an elaborate ritual, by which men could worship collective humanity in the persons of its most eminent representatives, has usually been considered but one remove from madness.

We have only to express our unfeigned satisfaction with the negative conclusion of each of these philosophers. Mr. Harrison has shown that agnosticism, whatever it may be, is not a religion, and therefore utterly fails to meet what is seen to be a crying want of humanity, as shown by the whole experience of the race, whether barbarous or civilized. And Mr. Spurgeon has performed the same useful office for the loud-sounding religion of Humanity, whose authors and professors have signally fulfilled the Apostle's words respecting their earliest predecessors, Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools. Besides this useful service, the discussion has shown that the odium theologicum does not belong only to orthodox disputants. These philosophers who calmly relegate the supernatural to the realm of fable, and make their continual boast of "science" (which with them always means physics), can yet say as sharp things of each other and show as much sensitiveness as is found among ordinary controversialists. Their scientific religion is just as weak in practical restraining power as any of the faiths which they contemptuously deride.

"Old Colony" Papers.

A VERITABLE "GOD'S ACRE."

II.

As we enter the Princeton cemetery at its southeast corner we notice a space enclosed by a high evergreen hedge, crowded with marble monuments of the horizontal, box-like style, customary in the older part of this ground. This is the burial plot of the Stockton family. Their illustrious ancestor, Richard Stockton (who with President Witherspoon, also of Princeton, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence) is interred in an unmarked grave in the old Quaker burying ground a couple of miles away at Stony Creek. His grandson, Commodore Robert F. Stockton, one of the most notable names in the naval annals of our country, is buried in this enclosure. He was in the service from 1810 to 1849, and afterwards served as U. S. Senator. His chief exploits were in procuring the cession of Liberia as a Free State, in breaking up the slave-trade on the coast of Africa and piracy in the West Indies, in the conquest of California in 1847, in building the "Princeton," the first steam vessel of war which ever belonged to any marine, and the abolition of flogging in the navy.

The peculiar interest of this cemetery, however, clusters about the tombs of its academic worthies. First in order comes the row of College Presidents, including all but the first, Jonathan Dickinson, who is buried at Elizabeth. It was not till the administration of his successor, President Burr, that the College was finally located at Princeton. Burr was a godly and accomplished man, an eloquent preacher, and a special friend of Whitefield.

His successor, and father-in-law, was Jonathan Edwards. Though he held the office only a month before his death, he is somehow so identified with it as to be known as President Edwards. Certainly no tomb in this country ever swallowed up so great an intellectual light, or a more remarkable man, whether we regard him as a thinker, a writer, a preacher, or a saint. The epitaph designates him as "secundus nemini mortalium." He was only fifty-one when he died, and was a victim of the old method of inoculation for smallpox. Like Richard Baxter, to whom he had many points of resemblance, he contended with lifelong disease. He describes himself as having an "unhappy constitution, attended with flaccid solids, vapid, sizy and scarce fluids, and a low tide of spirits." This was, of course, Edwardsian for dyspepsia. His tomb has been sadly vandalized, pieces of the marble having been knocked off in all directions. There was for a while a placard hung upon it, warning off the relic-robbers, but it probably did more to put the idea into people's heads than to drive it out of their hearts.

And now perhaps the most pathetic sight I ever saw in any graveyard,—here at the feet of his father and grandfather, by his own request, lies the dust of what was once the brilliant, handsome, eloquent, successful, graceless, unprincipled, shunned and ruined Aaron Burr. The inscription records simply the dates of his birth and death, and that he was "a colonel in the army of the Revolution" and "Vice-President of the United States from 1801–5." Absurd myths long had currency, that he had to be buried at dead of night, and that his tombstone was placed there secretly at the instance of some lady, but the fact is that his funeral services were held in the College chapel with a sermon by the President, that he was followed to the grave by the Faculty and students in a body, and that his tombstone was erected by his relatives in 1856 in the middle of the day,—which spoils another romantic story. This stone is also mutilated by the insatiate ghouls. The other day when I looked at it last, there was fluttering upon the grave a little flag placed there on Decoration Day. It was a discriminating as well as a kindly act, for Burr's military career was as glorious as all the rest of his life was discreditable. What a touch of nature is there, and not less a glimpse of what was his real estimate of true living and of the life eternal, in this poor old man's dying wish to nestle in death at the feet of his simple and godly sires!

Next in the list of buried Presidents is Samuel Davies, probably one of the half dozen greatest pulpit orators whom our country has produced. His term of office was also brief, only about a year and a half. Samuel Finley is the next name in "Presidents' Row." He too was a famous man in his day, an associate with Whitefield in revival work, and under his administration occurred one of the most extraordinary revivals which Princeton ever enjoyed. His death was so triumphant, that Dr. Mason preached upon it as a contrast to the death of David Hume.

The next name is in some respects as great a one as Edwards. President Witherspoon was a distinguished leader of the Church of Scotland, before he was induced to come to America to take charge of the College. He had only been here six years, when the Revolution broke out. And yet so thoroughly and ardently had he identified himself with the cause of the patriots, that he was already recognized as a foremost champion. He is well known as the one clergyman whose name is signed to the Declaration of Independence. His spirit is shown by his eloquent words two days before:

"For my own part, of property I have some, of reputation more; that reputation is staked, that property is pledged, on the issue of this contest. And I would infinitely rather that these gray hairs should descend into the sepulchre by the hand of the executioner, than desert at this crisis the sacred cause of my country."

He served in Congress during six of its darkest and most critical years. He lived long enough afterwards to gather again the scattered forces of the College, and probably saved it in the crisis of reorganization by his prestige and the pecuniary aid which he obtained. He was of noble presence, like Washington, a great horseman, a man of spirit and wit and "more of genius than of learning," a powerful preacher, a devout and exemplary Christian. A colossal bronze statue of him, in the quaint custom of those days, adorns Fairmount Park in Philadelphia.

His successor was his son-in-law, Samuel Stanhope Smith. He also is entitled to great credit for the reorganization of the College, while professor under Dr. Witherspoon, as also in restoring it after the fire of 1802 during his own presidency. He is also one of the traditional great preachers of this country, his style being that of the French school. But his power, like a great many others, seems to have lain in the exquisite and thrilling charm of his elocution, and in the impressiveness and grace of his personal appearance. He was the first graduate of Princeton who ever held its presidency.

Ashbel Green also served in the Revolutionary war, and was chaplain of Congress during Washington's administration. He was one of the founders of Princeton Seminary, and by his proceedings against Albert Barnes had much to do with the disruption of the Presbyterian Church in 1837. He was essentially a leader of men, and while able in all departments of his service was chiefly felt as an ecclesiastical statesman. He was a special friend of the colored people, and preached for two years and a half to an African Church. Daniel Webster pronounced him "one of the most remarkable men he had ever met."

The last of the row of buried Presidents is Dr. Carnahan. The venerable ex-President Maclean is still living, but several members of his family are interred in this "College Lot." And as the family monument of Dr. McCosh, already inscribed with the name of his only son who died four years ago, has been here erected, we may draw the conclusion that his dust will lie amid the long line of his illustrious predecessors. Serus in cœlum redeat!

Here is another "row" of academic and theological anakim. Archibald Alexander was, at the start, the Theological Seminary—teaching Hebrew, Greek, theology, hermeneutics, and Biblical criticism, besides conducting its administration. He had few early advantages, yet was a foremost scholar of his day. His preaching was so clear and simple, that any child or uneducated person could understand all he said. His "talks" in the Sunday afternoon conferences are among the great traditions of Princeton. The narrative of his religious experiences is one of the most remarkable on record. His knowledge of the dealings of God with the soul was such, that President Woolsey has called him "the Shakespeare of the human heart." He is said to have resembled Wilberforce in appearance and manner,—small in person, with an "eagle eye," and a voice of great sweetness and penetrating force. His sons, Joseph Addison and James Waddell, are laid beside him, both professors in the Seminary, though the latter is best known as pastor of what is now Dr. John Hall's church in New York. I used to hear him very often in my youth, and look back upon him as perhaps the most uniformly interesting and edifying preacher I ever knew. Addison was a linguistic prodigy. By the time he was of age he was versed in the French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, modern Greek, Danish, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic, Syriac and Chaldeic, Persian and Turkish languages, adding soon after Sanskrit, Polish, Malay, and Chinese. To hear him preach (which was a rare occurrence) was a memorable event in one's life. He was only fifty years old, when he died.

When Archibald Alexander died, Dr. Charles Hodge exclaimed that the glory and prestige of Princeton Seminary had departed. But his own fame promises to be a more enduring one, being based upon his writings rather than tradition. The tomb of Charles Hodge will long be the theological Mecca of those who hold to a strictly Scriptural faith. His colossal "Institutes of Theology" leaves little to be said in defence or exposition of the Calvinistic system, except so far as scientific discovery shall (as it is all the while doing) confirm it from the analogies of God's natural revelation.

Dr. Samuel Miller became Archibald Alexander's first colleague in the Seminary. He was the model of a Christian gentleman. Dr. Nevins relates that he once said to a group of students, "I solemnly believe that Dr. Alexander is the greatest man who walks the earth." And, after he had left the room, the students all agreed that he himself was the holiest. As he lay (as he expressed it) "on the border of the other world" he exclaimed, in reply to the question how it appeared to him, "Ineffably glorious!"

And it is ineffably glorious and inspiring, as one walks amid the graves of all these great and holy men, to think of the general assembly of such as these whose spirits are with the saints of all ages, who see no more through a glass darkly but face to face.

F. N. Zabriskie.

March 1st, 1886.

Sun Images and the Sun of Righteousness.

BY TALBOT W. CHAMBERS, D D.

I.

ONE of the excellencies of the Revised Version of the Old Testament is that it incorporates in the text the correct translation of a number of words which, in the Authorized Version, are misrepresented or are rightly given only in the margin. Instances are grove, plain, scum, owl, dragon, college, etc. One of the most conspicuous cases of this kind is found in the plural of the word image. It is used in the A V. to render five distinct Hebrew words, matstsebah (Ex. 23:24), tselem (1 Sam. 6:5), atsab (2 Sam. 5:21), teraphim (Gen. 31:10), and chammanim (Lev. 26:30). The evil is not of much consequence in regard to the first three of these words, since, although there is a distinction in their meaning, the distinction has no particular significance. It is different with the other two, for one of them (teraphim) expresses the Hebrew equivalent for the classic Lares et Penates, and shows how rooted in the minds of the people was their attachment to the tutelary household gods, their images being found in the families of Jacob and David (1 Sam. 19:13). The remaining term shows the occasional participation of the covenant people in the oldest, the most wide-spread and the most enduring of all the forms of idolatry known to man, viz , the worship of the sun. Chammanim is derived from a word signifying heat, which is used poetically in the Bible to represent the sun (Job. 30:28; Song of Sol. 6:10), and its meaning is now universally admitted to be images of the sun, and not images in general. The places in Scripture where the word occurs are these:

The first is the passage already referred to, in the last chapter but one of Leviticus, where Jehovah sets forth, with solemn emphasis, the retribution to fall upon Israel in case of disobedience. In verse 30 the abominations of their false worship are threatened with overthrow. "I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols." In Isaiah the term occurs twice, and in each case conjoined with "groves," i. e., Asherim; 17: 8, "neither shall [a man] have respect to that which his fingers have made, either the groves or the images," (margin, sun images); 27:9, "the groves and images (margin, sun images) shall not stand up,"=shall arise no more. The combination here favors the view that the two words represent, the one Baal, as the god of the sun, the other Astarte, as the goddess of the moon. In Ezek. 6:4, it is said "your images shall be broken," and in verse 6, "that your images may be cut down," in both cases, with sun images in the margin. In 2 Chronicles mention is made twice, with the same margin, of the removal of this form of idolatry. Asa (14:3) "took away the altars of the strange gods and the high places and brake down the images," and more than two centuries afterward, Josiah (34:4) ordered the same iconoclasm, "And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images that were on high above them he cut down." The interpretation of the term thus used is as old as Kimchi, and was established in modern times by the discovery of many Punic cippi with the inscription to Ba'al Chamman, i. e., Baal the Sun. In the account given in the second Book of Kings of Josiah's reforming measures (23:5, 11) we are told that he put down "them also that burned incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the planets, and to all the host of heaven. And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun, and he burned the chariots of the sun with fire."

The universality of this form of idolatry is something remarkable. It seems to have prevailed everywhere. The chief object of worship among the Syrians was Baal = the sun, considered as the giver of light and life, the most active agent in all the operations of nature. But as he sometimes revealed himself as a destroyer, drying up the earth with summer heats and turning gardens into deserts, he was in that view regarded with terror and appeased with human sacrifices. Men carried this to the frightful extreme of parents offering their own children as victims to the fire-god. And such is the perversity of human nature that this revolting cruelty was often imported into Israel, notwithstanding the rigid prohibitions against it. "They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons in the fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal; which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind" (Jer. 19:5. Cf. 2 Kgs. 17:16, 17, and 21:5, 6.) In Egypt the sun was the kernel of the state religion. In various forms he stood at the head of each hierarchy. At Memphis he was worshipped as Phtah, at Heliopolis as Tum, at Thebes as Amun Ra. Personified by Osiris, he became the foundation of the Egyptian metempsychosis. It is said in Genesis that Joseph married the daughter of Poti-phera, priest of On. But On is represented in Hebrew by Bethshemesh, and in the Septuagint (Jer. 43:13) by Heliopolis; both = City of the Sun. There is a single red granite obelisk remaining erect on the site of the ancient Heliopolis, not far from modern Cairo, and there is every reason to suppose that the obelisk in Central Park at New York once stood within the temple of the solar god among whose priests was the father-in-law of Joseph.

Another Heliopolis is found in the ancient Cœle-Syria in the large and splendid ruins of Baalbek, as the place was called before its conquest by the Seleucidæ. Here, as would be expected, the most imposing of the huge edifices erected upon a vast substruction, unequalled anywhere on earth in the size of its stones, some of them being sixty feet long and twelve feet in both diameters, is a great temple of the sun, 290 feet by 160, which was built by Antoninus Pius, and indicates how easily the emperors adopted and fostered the solar worship prevalent in all the East.

In Babylon the same thing is observed as in Egypt. Men were struck by the various stages of the daily and yearly course of the sun, in which they saw the most imposing manifestation of Deity. But they soon came to confound the creature with the Creator, and the host of heaven became objects of worship, with the sun as chief. Hence the great majority of the old Akkad hymns were addressed to him as the supreme benefactor of mankind. At times the moon and the planets became rivals, but in the end Shamash (= the sun) prevailed, and temples were erected to him in every province. In Persia the worship of Mithra, or the sun, is known to have been common from an early period. No idols were made, but the inscriptions show ever-recurring symbolic representations, usually a disk or orb with outstretched wings, with the addition sometimes of a human figure. The leading feature of the Magian rites derived from ancient Media was the worship of fire, performed on altars erected upon high mountains, where a perpetual flame, supposed to have been originally kindled from heaven, was constantly watched, and where solemn services were daily rendered. The remnant of the ancient Persians who escaped subjugation by Islam, now known as Parsees, unite with their reverence for the holy fire equal reverence for the sun as the emblem of Ormuzd. And even in our own time they have been known to stop wherever they happen to be at the setting of the sun, and take a posture of adoration, raising both hands and bowing profoundly in homage to the luminous orb. Among the native races of India the same worship continues in another form. There are very few temples or images dedicated to the sun, and yet he is the object of universal adoration. The Gayatri, the most ancient of Aryan prayers, first uttered more than three thousand years ago, is a prayer to the sun, to this effect: "Let us meditate on the excellent glory of the divine vivifier; may he enlighten all our undertakings." This is the most sacred of the Vedic utterances,* and takes precedence, with a Hindu, of all other forms of supplication. It still rises towards heaven day by day from millions of worshippers.

Among the Greeks and Romans solar worship had no such predominance as it enjoyed all through the Orient. Still Helios was a distinct and distinguished member of the Greek Pantheon, and his worship was widely spread, and the more, as after the time of Æschylus, he began to be identified with Apollo or Phœbus, the characteristic divinity of the Hellenic race and the impersonation of their life in its most pleasing and beautiful forms. This identification has been described as proceeding in this way. It is the sun's rays, or the arrows of Apollo, that everywhere, as the fields and gardens teach us, quicken life and foster it towards maturity; through them a new life springs all around, and in the warmth of their soft, kindly light, the jubilant voice of nature is heard, and awakens an echo in the human soul. At the same time these arrows destroy the life of plants and animals, since the summer heats produce destructive plagues. All these ideas are reproduced in the myth of Apollo, who is conceived in various ways corresponding to the influence of the sun, sometimes as a Nemesis whose glittering shafts strike down insolent offenders, but more generally as a genial radiance whose influences are all friendly. Hence Helios-Apollo is viewed as the personification of youth and beauty, the source of earthly blessings; the god of the herds and flocks grazing on the fields warmed by him; the god of medicine who provides for the growth of healing plants; the god of music, for everywhere are heard happy, joyful sounds when his kindly beams spread light and warmth over nature; and the god of oracles which reveal the secrets of the future, just as the light of heaven penetrates the darkest corners and brings to view every hidden recess. Physicians, poets, musicians and artists were under his immediate guardianship.

Under the Roman emperors the Oriental solar worship was introduced with great pomp. Reference has already been made to the magnificent structure erected by Antoninus Pius at Baalbek. But half a century afterward Heliogabalus put up a similar stately temple on the Palatine mount to the Sun-god, where sacrifices were offered with every circumstance of cost and solemnity. Varus (for that was his real name) was a grand-nephew of the wife of Septimius Severus. In his youth he was made high-priest of the Phœnician Sun-god at Emesa in Syria, and while there, through the intrigues of his mother with the legion stationed at that place, he was proclaimed emperor, and having conquered his rival Macrinus, got possession of the throne. This result he considered to be due to the deity at whose altars he had ministered, and hence, as Gibbon says, the display of superstitious gratitude was the only serious business of his reign. The honored name of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, which he had at first assumed, was exchanged for that of Elagabalus, borne by the Syro-Phœnician god at Emesa. This god was proclaimed the chief deity in Rome, while all other gods were his servants. Of course, this predominance of the sun-worship did not continue, but the worship itself survived. For we find fifty years later, when Aurelian (274 A.D.) celebrated his triumph over the queen of the East, the temple of the sun received the gift of fifteen thousand pounds of gold. This temple was a splendid edifice on the side of the Quirinal Hill, dedicated to that deity whom Aurelian adored as the parent of his life and fortunes. His mother had been an inferior priestess in a chapel of the sun, and he had imbibed in his infancy a peculiar devotion to the god of light, a devotion which appears in his letters and on his medals. So at the end of the second century, when Diocletian would take a very solemn oath in the face of the army, it was by "the all-seeing deity of the Sun." He was still the universal object of worship; to the philosophic as an emblem, to the people at large as the deity himself. And curiously enough, this cult is found in an important sect of the ancient Christian heretics, the Manichæans. They sang hymns to the great principle of light, and addressed prayers to the sun, or at least, when praying, turned their faces to that tabernacle in which as they supposed Christ dwelt. The emperor Constantine, before his conversion, reverenced all the gods as mysterious powers, especially Apollo, the god of the Sun, to whom, in the year 308, he presented munificent gifts, and when he became a monotheist the god whom he worshipped was, as Uhlhorn says, rather the "Unconquered Sun" than the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. And indeed, when he enjoined the observance of the Lord's day, it was not under the name of Sabbatum or Dies Domini, but under its old astronomical and heathen title, Dies Solis, so that the law was as applicable to the worshippers of Apollo and Mithras as to the Christians. In the eclectic religion of his nephew, the apostate Julian, the same feature appears conspicuous. He revered indeed the one immaterial, inconceivable Father who dwelt alone, but the direct outward object of worship was the great sun, the living and animated, the propitious and beneficent, image of the immaterial Father.

The prevalence of this form of worship among the Teutonic races is sufficiently shown by the name given to the first day of the week, Sunday (German Sonntag, Dutch Zondag, Ang. Sax. Sunnen-daeg, Dan. and Swed. Söndag), i. e., the day held sacred to the sun. But the most complete system of sun-worship of which we have any account is that existing in Peru when discovered by the Spaniards. The changes in this luminary were identified with all the feelings and the fortunes of the Peruvian. The dawn was hope to him, the midday brightness was power to him, the declining sun was death to him, and the new morning was a resurrection to him. The Incas, as the monarchs were called, claimed to be children of the sun and his representatives on earth. In the capital was a magnificent temple, in the interior of which, at the western end, was a representation of the sun's disk and rays in solid gold, so placed that the rising sun, as it shone in, fell full upon the image and was reflected with dazzling splendor. In the court before the temple a great annual festival was held at the summer solstice. The multitude, assembled from all parts of the empire, waited in breathless solemnity till the first rays of their deity struck the golden image, when the whole body prostrated themselves in adoration.—The Old Testament Student, January.

*The Rev. H. M. Scudder, D.D. recently told the writer that once on his reciting this prayer in the original Sanscrit before a Brahmin, the man was horror-struck, and mourned that he should have lived to see the day when so holy an utterance was polluted by passing the lips of an unclean person.

Our Church.

Our Foreign Missions.

THE Board received in February $7,371.15. This is $2,000 more than the receipts for February, 1885, though a legacy has furnished half of the increase. The churches have given just $1,000 more in February than they did a year ago.

The receipts, however, are still $14,000 behind those of last year; the Board still owes $38,500—not one dollar of its customary loans having yet been paid,—and $40,000 are needed simply to meet the expenditures of the year which closes April 30th, and leave the debt at $9,000, where it was when the year began. By whatever sum the receipts of March and April shall fall short of this amount, by so much will the debt of the Board be increased.

In view of these facts the Board has directed a circular to be prepared, signed by its Treasurer and the members of its Finance Committee, reviewing the situation and the serious results that must follow unless there be a generous and prompt response. A copy of this circular has been sent to every pastor. If any should wish to distribute it they can be supplied.

Less than two months remain. What is to be done needs to be done quickly. Cor. Sec.

Two Letters.—Two letters have been received at the office of the Board of Foreign Missions within a few days that, together or singly, suggest ways in which the treasury may be entirely relieved and the way made clear for the work of another year.

One of them is brief but to the point, and reads thus:

New York, March 5th, 1886.

"I enclose check for $250, the amount on account of the debt of your Board. Please credit as cash from —— Reformed Church. Trusting you will be successful in raising the required amount to clear off the debt, I remain," etc., etc.

It is safe to presume that there are at least one hundred men and women who might follow the example thus set with satisfaction to themselves, and manifest advantage to the work of their Lord and the Church to which they belong.

The second letter is not so brief, but it is equally pointed and suggestive. It is from a pastor of one of our churches, who has a family of six and receives a salary of $800, and it reads, in part, as follows:

New York, March 2d, 1886.

"The most earnest appeal from the Treasurer of our Foreign Board is at hand. I have read the same to my consistory. What is the cause of this critical position of the Board? Has the Lord not supplied us with means? Yes, thank God, abundantly. Why is it not forthcoming? Because so many of His people think more of laying up something for a rainy day, for old age, for families, wife and children; because God might possibly die, or withdraw His promises from His faithful children. Had I a voice like an angel, I would cry aloud and say, 'Brethren, beware; let not the god of this world blind your eyes and you be led away from God and Christian duty.'

"I have been thinking over this painful situation of the Board, and asked myself, 'How must the money come to wipe out the debt and push things ahead?' The suggestion comes, 'Bring on the cocoanuts and break them over the wheels.' I respond, Amen! Let all the 'priests' take the lead, bring on the cocoanuts, and the mission chariot wheels of both our Boards will roll along majestically, and the shout of joy will be heard in all our land from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and on and on to China, India, Japan and the distant isles of the sea.

"To make a beginning, I see we have on our list 587 ministers. If each minister would give now, at once, on an average, say $20—587x20=$11,740. Would that not give an impulse to 83,115 communicants to give on an average, now, say $2? and we would have 83,115x2=$166,230+$11,740 $177,970. Brethren, how would that do for a start, and then go on as the Lord prospers us, to pay our honest debts to the Lord? There is too much talk of giving. Let us stop this. But let us call the thing by its right name and say, Debts must be paid.

"I enclose $20, hoping you will get 586 more such, on an average.

"I am yours in Christ, —— ——."

The effect of such a "start" as that would not be lost for years, and the danger of a "stop," that in some direction or other now seems imperative, would disappear.

We should like to see it tried, or something like it.

Elocution at New Brunswick.

AT the last meeting of General Synod, held at Syracuse, N. Y., June, 1885, a petition was presented from James Anderson, M.D., of New York city, calling attention to the need at New Brunswick of proper instruction in the principles of Elocution, and offering four hundred dollars collected by him as the first contribution toward a principal fund, the interest of which shall be devoted to this object. The Synod heartily approved of this cause, accepted the first gift through Dr. Anderson, and appointed a committee to secure, if possible, during the year five thousand dollars. This committee now turns to you.

There can be no question as to the value of proper elocutionary training. For want of it many strong thoughts are lost in the utterance, good sermons fall on listless ears, and the reading of the Scriptures becomes an unprofitable form. This is not a matter which corrects itself. Time only confirms habits, good or bad, and each year renders the voice less flexible.

The cause carries its own argument and appeal. Our Seminary has funds amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars devoted to teaching the ministry "What to say." Let the Church now give at least five thousand dollars, with a view of teaching them "How to say it."

It is proposed, if possible, to extend the benefits of this fund to Rutgers College and Grammar School, that the voice may be trained rightly before being hardened, and correct principles of reading and speaking may be early implanted.

The amount named can be easily realized. We do not ask for a few large contributions, although such will be gladly received, but for many small ones. One dollar will be as gratefully acknowledged as one hundred dollars. We trust there may be found one individual in each church sufficiently interested in this cause to bring it to the notice of others, and secure and forward their gifts.

Rev. W. H. De Hart, Jamaica, N. Y., is authorized to receive and acknowledge all contributions.

A. V. V. Raymond,
W. E. Griffis, D.D.,
W. H. De Hart,
} Synod's Committee.

This circular has called forth from Professor Demarest the following communication on the subject:

Dear Brother Raymond: I was very glad to receive the circular of the committee of General Synod which has in charge the obtaining of funds for procuring instruction and training in Elocution in our institutions at New Brunswick. The appeal made will, I hope, meet with a ready and liberal response, and the effort be crowned with complete success. A better thing could not at present be done for us than the establishment of a fund, the income of which will be sufficient to give the students the help they need in this direction. We hope that some man or woman whom the Lord has blessed with means will be moved to do this thing.

Of course, the importance of a good utterance and effective delivery to the preacher of the Gospel is confessed by all, but all do not see the importance of some measure of training in order to attain these desirable ends. Some will tell us that nothing is required but that we speak naturally. We must simply open our mouths and speak naturally. But the trouble is that we have departed from nature, and we need some help in order to get back to it. We have formed bad habits that have become a second nature; we grow up with faults of utterance, and these habits should be broken and these faults corrected. For the accomplishment of this work we have elocutionary science and art and instructors and drillers in elocution. Elocutionary training that results in an artificial delivery, full of all sorts of tricks and affectations, is worse than nothing and disgusting to all sensible people. Perhaps the prevalence of quackery among instructors and credulity and servile imitation among pupils has tended to bring the whole subject into disrepute. Nevertheless, there is an important field here for the honest and capable instructor, and the faithful, earnest student.

The theory of elocution is a very simple thing, easily understood, and a man who can teach anything can teach it. But comparatively little has been done when it has been taught. The peripatetic elocutionist who delivers a dozen sound and admirable lectures in the course of a fortnight in some college or seminary and then goes on his way to do the same thing in another institution, is of little use. What is needed is a judicious driller, who will statedly and frequently meet the individual student by himself and give him just the treatment that he needs. Professors whose hands are full of other subjects might indeed teach the principles of elocution, but for the drill of individuals they have not the time, nor have they the skill of the specialist. It is gratifying to know that increasing attention to vocal culture, and to this whole subject of elocution, is paid in our public schools, grammar schools and colleges, so that the student does not come to the theological seminary needing to begin the study of elocution as he does that of Hebrew. But the chief thing is to maintain a system of vocal gymnastics for the improvement of the voice, and persistently to persevere in exercises that belong directly to his calling, as reading of Scriptures and of hymns, and exercises in speaking.

I am very sure that in what I have said I have expressed the views of my colleagues as well as my own, for the subject has often been up for discussion among us. Hoping that the committee will be gladdened by speedy and complete success, I am fraternally yours, David D. Demarest.

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 26th, 1886.

Our New Northwest School.

VERILY, the unpretentious academy at Orange City, I believe to-day to be one of the most important institutions of the Reformed Church. At all events, some considerations come to mind which serve to show that the work begun there, however humble, is noticeably one of promise and ought to secure the earnest, intelligent care of the whole Church. True, the school is now without endowment, without buildings, without teachers of note, and without a throng of pupils. Very certainly it is a school without a past and without much of a present, but just as certainly, unless all signs are fatuous, is it a school with a future.

Less than a schoolboy's age ago and where Orange City now stands was an unbroken, treeless, wind swept prairie. A colony of Hollanders, mostly from Pella, Marion County, Iowa, came and selected that then bleak prairie for their home. They brought their Bible and their Church with them, their love for truth, for home and God. They brought little else. They staked out their lands in a wide, illimitable expanse of earth under an equally illimitable expanse of sky, and reared their dwellings—dugouts, at first, mere caves in the earth, or huts with walls and even roof of prairie turf. Then they subdued the soil, they planted trees and gradually got their barns—mostly of straw and earth at the start—and gathered around them flocks and herds. The first years were of pitiless and indescribable hardship from the terrible grasshopper plague. Numbers lost heart and hope and returned. But to-day Orange City is the centre of a beautiful champaign country, with gardens and groves and well-tilled fields, with sleek cattle that a Rosa Bonheur would delight to paint, and herds of swine, good barns and comfortable, even elegant, farm-houses surrounded with trees and shrubbery and often with lawns well kept and velvety blue-grass pastures. Groves extend everywhere and far and near fill the circle of the horizon without a break.

The land is one of beauty—of its kind none fairer spreads beneath the sky. The town claims eight hundred inhabitants at the least, and perhaps it is entirely safe to say there are not less than five thousand Netherlanders occupying the country round about, or finding local centres at Alton, Hospers and Maurice. These latter are railroad points having a somewhat mixed population. Orange City, also on a great railroad—the Hawarden line of the Northwestern—is the county seat, owing to which fact it has a few American families; but, while a genuinely Dutch town, it aims, not unsuccessfully in many ways, to be American in spirit. It is certainly Hollandish, however, in its somewhat peculiar interest in church and school. The academy, originating less than two years ago, and set in operation so quietly as scarcely to attract attention away from home, met at once a want in the colony that was beginning to be felt profoundly. These Holland farm-houses and village homes are full of children; these children must be educated. First of ambitions ever is this among a sturdy, God-fearing people. The daughters must be prepared for home, and the sons for business life, but especially for college, whence all without exception nearly are expected to make their way eventually to the Theological School and so into the ministry of the Church.

From the start, however, the Academy has not been by any means what it might be, from its lack of so much that a school demands of facilities and accommodations. But weak as it is in many ways, it is yet very dear to the hearts of the most thoughtful and farseeing of these people. It is a mere infant, but an educational infant, a child of prayer and of hope. It is bound to grow. It fills a want which will increase as it is filled, and that which fills or supplies it will be of ever enlarging importance. The institution, in a local aspect merely, takes rank as one of greatest promise. But there is a broader view. No institution like this can be simply of local worth even at first, much less at last. Hence, though only the outgrowth of home need, and happy if it can be but decently equipped to meet that need—without any but most quiescent ambition further—yet no institution of the Reformed Church has, or can well have prospectively a nobler field before it than this now weak Orange City Academy.

This is plainly so for several reasons. The population of the colony and of its various dependencies is constantly growing. From this far-off corner of Northwestern Iowa, moreover, to Western Michigan, the nearest other educational point in the Church, is six hundred miles. It is fifteen hundred miles to New Brunswick. Now evidently, if there is to be advanced education here—at least in the Church and for the Church—the school must be here. Besides, the Academy, not so unwise as to be a sectarian, much less a mere Hollandish school, has right around it at home a magnificent field. Fairly equipped, and the whole of Northwestern and nearly all of Western Iowa would become its ground. It has really no rival now in the region. Give it a chance to take the position it should hold and it will inevitably make much territory, not now specially its own, thoroughly tributary to it. Anyone acquainted with the history of the great educational institutions of our land knows how this may be. Put this academy upon its feet, and it has at least the opportunity of becoming the capital, educationally, of a region larger and fairer far than double and treble the territory now embraced in some of our richest Eastern States.

But further, this Iowa colony does not stand alone. It is the base of other colonies. There are Hollandish settlements in Kansas, in Nebraska, several at various points in Dakota, and two or three prospective ones in central and Southwestern Minnesota. These all look to Orange City, and educational wants are sure to arise sooner or later among them. They are, in fact, manifested from the very start, for the Academy has students the present season, not only from near home in Iowa, but also from Nebraska and from widely separated points in Dakota. These other colonies are also to form growing and prosperous communities. Who does not therefore—in the greatness of the prospect—hesitate in attempting to forecast the future of this new educational enterprise? A great responsibility certainly rests upon the Church in connection. The future may be made a gloriously useful one. A great door is open to us in the mission field, assuredly among the Hollanders and to some extent also among American populations, but no more promising opening is there than in this new school of the Church; and as the wise and experienced know there is no more effective and absolutely requisite auxiliary in the work of church extension or the evangelization of this fair land.

Three hundred miles on further to the Northwest is the newest settlement of Netherlanders. In the near future doubtless other points will be occupied. What is the Church going to do with all this work? It ought to do something not only, but much, and do it at once. It ought for one thing to put this Northwestern School immediately upon its feet. No petty questions of rivalry with other institutions of the Church, or of injury to them, ought to be allowed to interfere. They are all a mistake where a mistake is a crime. The school needs endowment. There are individual men and women who could easily afford this endowment this very hour and so write their names up high in God's good work, where a good name is above all else to be desired. A full, strong corps of instructors is needed. The school needs buildings. Its present accommodations are an aggravation to professors and students. Good class-rooms with fitting apparatus are needed, and especially dormitories, that pupils from abroad may find accommodation suited to their slender means The school, in fact, from the outset needs simply to be made strong and capable. There can be no question about the field for it. The trouble is now that it is so largely field. It is a fair prospect. a golden opportunity, a mighty call. It is a great call of God to the Reformed Church. Will she hear it? There is money in the Church, then let it be invested here. It will bless this particular region but it will bless the whole Church more. This school blessed will bless every other school and agency and mission among us—will only help and never hinder any other good work in the land.

Let the whole Church give this cause its interest, take pains to become thoroughly acquainted with it, remember it in its prayers and not from its abundance withhold the gifts which are needed to fit it for the great work which it is called so plainly to-day to do. WM. J. SKILLMAN.

SIOUX FALLS, Dakota, February 20th, 1886.

....THE MIDDLE COLLEGIATE CHURCH, LAFAYETTE PLACE, N Y.—The special services which have been held in this church every evening except Saturday, during the last two weeks, were brought to a close on Sunday evening. The average attendance, including the week night services, was considerably in advance of the regular Sabbath congregations and was largely made up of non-church-going strangers, the unusually large proportion of men being generally remarked. A deep solemnity marked the Spirit's presence from first to last. The methods employed were not calculated to reveal immediate results. There was no rising for prayer or to indicate acceptance of the truth, but evidence of conviction and conversion and revival is by no means lacking. Dr. Chambers, Dr. DeWitt, Dr. Parkhurst, Mr. Smyth and Dr. Cuyler did earnest and powerful work at the first five services and in the after meetings, which were especially solemn. Seven of the eight remaining services were conducted by the Rev. Graham Taylor, of Hartford, Ct., whose success was attested by a continued increase of attendance during his mission, by the seriousness of a number of inquirers, and, above all, by the cordial sympathy and interest of Christians which his earnestness and manly gentleness won for him among all classes.

The afternoon services for children were very largely attended. These also Mr. Taylor conducted during his stay. Two special German services for women were conducted by Rev. Mr. Geyer and Dr. Oerter. The preparatory work included the visitation of every family in the district bounded by First street, Eighth street, Avenue A and University place. More than ten thousand invitations were distributed.

....PROSPECT HILL CHURCH, EAST 85TH STREET, N. Y.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. D. McL. Quackenbush, D.D., the first, and still the senior pastor of this church, occurred on the first Lord's day in January last.

Quite a large congregation was present, many familiar faces of former members being seen in the audience. The pulpit was tastefully adorned with flowers, and Dr. Quackenbush, in a rapid review of the past twenty-five years, gave to his people a most interesting and instructive anniversary discourse, which was listened to with deep feeling and profound attention. The consistory and the people had desired, however, not to let the event pass without giving to their senior pastor some expression of their united and unabated regard and affection. A few ladies, therefore, went quietly among the congregation and raised the money with which they purchased a handsome mahogany cabinet of unique design; a beautiful silk covered down spread, and a fine Daghistan rug, which they thought would please him. But, as the pastor's health would not allow of a public reception, these articles were, on New Year's eve, quietly placed in his parlor; and it proved to be a complete, though a very agreeable surprise to him, and at the same time showed that ladies could keep a secret. In the meantime, the consistory prepared a testimonial on behalf of themselves and of the members of the church, expressive of their high appreciation of the remarkably able, sound and deeply interesting instruction which they had so long received from the Rev. Dr. Quackenbush, and of their gratitude to God for the uniform and unbroken harmony, confidence and love which had existed between them during the full period of a quarter of a century.

This testimonial was most beautifully engrossed by the artist, Mr. T. D. Ames, in album form, with seal skin covers; on the front of which in gold letters was the name of the Rev. D. McL. Quackenbush, D.D., and above it the figures, "1861," and below it, "1886." The testimonial was signed by the associate pastor, Rev. Oliver H. Walser, and by each member of the consistory; and on Saturday evening it was quietly placed upon the cabinet which the ladies had given him. This also was an entire surprise to the domine, and proved to be an excellent tonic. A.

NEW YORK, March 1st, 1886.

... HOPEWELL JUNCTION, N. Y.—One of my parishioners, Mr. Jacques Cortelyou, celebrated his ninetieth birthday to-day. He was born in the "1699" house, Brooklyn, on March 1st, 1796; was baptized and afterward received into the old First Reformed Church of Brooklyn, where he still holds a pew. Brooklyn had then but 2,000 inhabitants and all communication with New York city was by sail or row-boat He was brought up by his grandfather at the old homestead where Fort Hamilton now stands, and at the early age of sixteen took possession of property in Brooklyn, extending from the old Gowanus road into the woods, now forming Prospect Park. In the war of 1812 he was one of the home guard on Fort Greene; and has been through every transition of land and water transportation, even to joining in the celebration of the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge. He is still vigorous and cheerful, and joined heartily in the celebration of this day, assisted by children, grandchildren, nieces, nephews, and his pastor. Letters of congratulation and birthday remembrances poured in, and at the close of an evening dinner an immense birthday cake containing ninety candles was cut and all wished him many birthday returns, and God's continued blessing even to the one hundredth anniversary. What a period of time such a life covers, from the Presidency of Washington to the present day; and from the simplest colonial era to the present existence of a mighty republic with great cities and towns, connected by steam and electricity, planted over the whole face of it. For over fifty years he has been a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER and for thirty years to the New York Times. C. H. POLHEMUS.

MARCH 1st, 1886.

....POMPTON PLAINS, N. J.—Last Sabbath was a day to be remembered by us. Forty-one persons had come before the elders and given satisfactory evidence that they were born again; and on last Sabbath they stood together before the people to make confession of their faith in Christ. Eighteen of the number were baptized. These are but the first fruits. The work is still going on, and I can see no abatement of the interest. There are at present at least twenty more who are waiting for the next communion. One year ago the first of March, I administered the sacrament here for the first time. Just fifty have been added since that time. Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the Young People's Meeting filled the chapel. The church was also well filled at the preaching service, a half hour later. Sixteen young men were among the number of those who united with us, of whom twelve have taken part in our Young People's Meetings. The others will also, but have not yet had an opportunity. They have come with us to be workers with us.

H. W. T.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met on Monday morning, March 8th, at 34 Vesey street and listened to a very enjoyable paper by the Rev. E. B. Coe, D.D., on "Mission Work on Fifth Avenue." The subjects for the next three months have been arranged by the Topic Committee, and are published under "Notices," in this issue. The new officers of the Association are: President, Rev. E. J. Runk; Secretary, Rev. D. W. Skellenger.

....THE THIRTY FOURTH ST. CHURCH, N. Y.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of this church was observed on Sabbath, the 7th inst., with a general reunion on Monday evening. On Sabbath morning, the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. M. Dickson, preached from Philippians 3: 13, "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before." With a brief review of the church under former pastors—Rev. Dr. P. Stryker, Rev. Isaac Riley and Rev. C. Martyn, the sermon was an inspiration in view of the future. In the evening Rev. Dr. F. N. Zabriskie gave "A Backward Glance over the Quarter-Century," giving a succinct view of the progress of the world during the twenty-five years The services, including a Sabbath school reunion at 2 30 P.M., were largely attended.

This church has lately adopted a free pew and voluntary offering system, which promises to be very much of a success. The fact was developed in connection with the services that this is the very system for which Dr. Zabriskie "labored and prayed" in his pastorate of the Livingston Reformed Church, which was merged in the Broome Street Reformed Church when it moved uptown and commenced arrangements for erecting the present Thirty-fourth street house. In his discourse in the morning Dr. Dickson said, "The question is merely conjectural yet it is legitimate: What might have been accomplished if the uptown church had taken on more of the character of the Livingston church in the matter of missionary effort and financial plan?" In the evening Dr. Zabriskie, who had occupied a place in the morning congregation unbeknown to Dr. Dickson, said, When I heard a few weeks since of this new departure of this church, which is not new, but the exact reproduction of what I labored for years ago, I could have wept aloud for joy."

Dr. Zabriskie once publicly expressed himself upon this feature of his Livingston pastorate as follow "The one idea of my three years' ministry was to gather and feed a flock, among whom there should be no such thing known as a taxation of the Gospel in the shape of assessed pews, and no precedence shown to the "gold ring" over the "vile raiment;" in other words, a church governed by the principles of the "kingdom" and not the maxims and customs of the world."

....THE VEDDER LECTURES.—The lecturer this year is the Rev. George S. Bishop, D.D., of East Orange, N. J. He delivered the first of the course on Sunday evening, Feb. 28th, in the Second Reformed Church, New Brunswick, N. J., before a large and interested audience; subject, "Common Sense and Faith;" the second on Monday evening in the Kirkpatrick Chapel; subject, "God Above Nature;" and the third at the same place on Wednesday evening; subject, "Creation above Nature."

....NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Dr. T. C. Easton administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the First Church last Sabbath morning. At this closing service of his very successful pastorate there, he had the pleasure of welcoming fourteen new members to the communion on confession. Dr. Easton begins his labors in Newark next Sabbath.

....PORT JERVIS, N. Y.—During the recent gale the spires of this church were blown over; the taller one crashed through the roof, completely demolishing the organ and inflicting other damage to the extent of about $15,000. Only a short time ago this church liquidated a debt of several thousand dollars, and now this severe calamity has befallen them.

....GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Second Church has voted to hold evening services in the English language. This church makes a good showing in finances. It raised last year for the poor $875, missions $450. Other expenses, including salary and debt on church, $3,489; total $4,814. The Sunday-school contributed $489, of which sum $223 were for missions.

....NYACK, N. Y.—The Rev. W. H. Clark, D.D., has resigned the charge of this church, after a successful pastorate of nearly five years, and accepted a call to the Second Church of Philadelphia. His resignation is to take effect April 1st, when he expects to begin work in his new field. During Dr. Clark's ministry at Nyack the church has had large additions to its membership, and has increased very perceptibly in the spirit of liberality. For the year ending January 31st, 1886, the receipts for current expenses were $3,339.41, for benevolence $1,624.18, for Sabbath-school purposes $232.14, making a total of $5,195.73.

....THE NORTH CHURCH, CLAREMONT AVENUE, BROOKLYN.—The pastor, Rev. Wm. D. Perry, received nine into its membership last Sabbath.

....SCHOHARIE, N. Y.—A committee has been appointed by this church to secure plans and estimates for a new parsonage.

....PERSONAL.—The Rev. Ralph W. Brokaw has declined the call to the General Secretaryship of the Society of Christian Endeavor.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3.—Mr. Morley, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, predicts that the government will fall on the Irish question....There was a vicious attack made on the Dominion Government of Canada, especially against Sir John MacDonald for the hanging of Reil....A fight occurred at Nantes, France, between the anarchists and the workingmen. The former were put to flight ...The American bark "Surprise" was wrecked on the island of Madagascar and was looted by the natives....A treaty of peace between Servia and Bulgaria has at last been signed at Bucharest....A motion expelling the French princes from France was proposed in the Chamber of Deputies by M. Clemenceau....A street car strike on four lines in New York has been ordered by the Empire Protective Association....A Prohibition murder took place in Atlanta, Ga....The President has sent a message to Congress on the outrage recently perpetrated on Chinamen ...Charges of fraud have been made in the tax department of Pennsylvania.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

Resignation.

BY WM. RANKIN DURYEE, D D.

WITHIN the darkness where no light has come
Save from the stars so silent in their rest,
My heart cries out, though quivering lips are dumb,
Thy will, O Lord, is best.

Though dear ones leave me and the home is rent,
Than which no home on earth had been more blest.
A power devising good has sorrow sent,
And on that heart I rest.

For I do know, not think but surely know,
From thousand tokens in this earthly frame,
Whate'er the blessing or whate'er the blow,
Love is its Sovereign's name.

Accurst of earth and heaven the bigot's dream,
That He who gave the life and formed the heart
Frowns on all love, however sweet it seem,
And forces souls apart!

Far sooner let me follow fools who swear
Man sits the monarch on a despot's throne,
No powers above whose might he may not dare,
No wills beyond his own.

Forgive the blasphemy, O gracious Lord;
Temptations strong assail me in my need;
Thou hast not Thine own blessed gift abhorred,
Nor taught the woeful creed.

For love that claims Thy blessing is Thine own,
From Thee it sprang, alone in Thee can grow;
With everlasting arms beneath it thrown
Death it can never know.

Life parts the loving, not the less than Death;
Death, not the less than Life has owned Thy power;
For saints above, as on the earth beneath,
Gleams bright love's trysting hour.

Love is but drawn from earth to heaven and Thee,
The Sun that shines 'mid stars of weaker beam;
Thy love with theirs combined eternally,
In glory how supreme!

So here on earth Thou once did'st leave Thine own,
Though one was leaning closely on Thy breast,
A little while to wait in lands unknown,
Till they should gain Thy rest.

Thy will be mine, O Lord; each parting make
The hour of deeper longing for Thy light;
So, gathering store for coming love, I take
My song up in the night.

MARCH, 1886.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt)

CHAPTER X.—EXCHANGE OF GARMENTS.

PHILIP CRUIZE on learning Floris' purpose to go to Mechlin, resolved to accompany him. They reached the episcopal city without molestation on the way. Floris had readily discovered Brigitta, who was safely domiciled at her brother's apartments in the prison. When she heard that her former master was so near her, and she was informed of the plan to rescue him, she determined to persuade her brother to lend himself to the plan. He was much attached to his sister, and he loved the priest for the kindness and favor he had ever shown to them both. Thus, although he was strongly impressed with the personal peril to which it exposed him, he agreed to do his part.

About an hour before her brother opened the tower gate for Lord Imbize, Sister Brigitta had found a means of introducing Philip Cruize and Floris into the prison, the former in the disguise of a monk. These two were actuated by but one desire—to save their beloved friend, the former priest, and they were resolved to perish in the attempt. They felt less concern for Herman Van der Woude and the other prisoners, because they were aware of the measures that had been set on foot by Lord Imbize. They knew that between two and three hundred men were held in readiness in the vicinity of the cathedral, prepared to assemble at a preconcerted signal and venture an attack on the prison as the first step towards wresting the government from the tyrants who now wielded it to the people's destruction. But none of these thought of Mr. Justus; and yet the hatred of Father Josephus was most fiercely directed against him. Philip and Floris, therefore, wished to see whether there were not some possibility of snatching this victim out of the persecutor's power.

While Floris was hid by Brigitta in her brother's room, Philip was conveyed by her to a small apartment that adjoined her own. He was here alone and in the dark. In a corner of the room he knelt down and prayed fervently for help and success. But as he prayed, leaning his head against the wall, he imagined he heard a man talking to himself in the next room. He noticed, too, a light streaming through a little opening. Applying his eye to this, how great was his surprise when he perceived that the person in the other room was none other than Father Josephus. The monk was alone and was pacing up and down the apartment. Once in a while he would stop and stand before a table, take some documents provided with great seals into his hand, and then a smile of exquisite malignity would appear upon his countenance. Philip laid his ear to the opening and sought to catch every word when Father Josephus next stopped and muttered to himself while fondly examining the papers.

"This," Cruize heard him say, "is the accusation against Herman Van der Woude. The other is an order from the Court of the Inquisition to put the priest of Weersbeek to the torture to compel him to recant or confess. Ha! how I shall exult when the screws press from that heretic a cry of pain!"

Philip's heart beat with a passionate indignation. He put his hand into his bosom to assure himself that the pistol wherewith he had provided himself was there. He rose softly from his knees, saying to himself, "Now, or never." He went to Brigitta's room and asked her:

"Is there no way of getting into the room next to the one I was in? I can find no door."

"There is one, however," replied she. "Near the furthest corner of the room you will find a small iron knob down by the floor. Pull hard on this and you will find that you are lifting up a door. What do you wish to do in that other room?"

"Never mind now, Brigitta," replied Philip, "you'll know afterwards. But hurry and call Floris, and tell him to bring a rope and that brown, patched cloak of mine."

Philip hastened back to the room, found the knob, placed his ear again at the opening and listened. Father Josephus was still pacing up and down and soliloquizing. When he again stopped at the table, Philip heard him say:

"This is a permit from Granvelle, endorsed by the Governess-General, granting me access at any time to the prisoners. I will make good use of it! By-and-by I shall go to the priest's cell and feast my eyes upon his misery. How it will humble his proud heart." He took up another paper, and opening it, said: "And this is an order, direct from the Governess, giving me the power to at once and unconditionally set free any prisoner I choose. This will enable me to tantalize him to perfection. He will see that at a word from me he is free. How he will cringe and creep before me, begging me to save him!"

He began again to pace the room. After a few moments he stopped in the middle of the apartment. Philip looked and saw an expression of rage coming over his countenance; he clenched his fists and said in a loud tone:

"But that arch-heretic, Philip Cruize; he who is the cause of all the heresy in these regions—what a pity that he has escaped me again. Oh! that I had him in my power! Where can he be? He must be in this city, for I was informed that he and his nephew were seen on their way hither. Ha! then we'll catch them before long! Let them come to this town and—"

At this instant Philip pulled up the sliding door, and, followed by Floris, rushed into the other room. Ere Father Josephus could utter a word he placed the pistol to the heart of the monk and called out:

"Make an outcry, and through it goes!"

The astonished monk had the name of his assailant upon his lips, for he recognized him at once, but the sight of the firearm paralyzed his tongue

"Wh—at—do—y—you—wish?"

"Be still, traitor! and speak only when I ask you a question. If you don't do as I shall tell you, I will shoot you dead. If you obey me, not a hair of your head shall be harmed."

"What must I do?" whined Father Josephus, for he was as cowardly as he was cruel.

"Put off that monk's gown and cape and put on the cloak which this lad shall give you."

"Now," continued Philip, when the monk had divested himself of his outer garments, "wrap yourself in this brown, patched cloak. I believe you know it; I shall exchange with you and put on your gown;" and he suited the action to his words.

"That cloak," said Father Josephus, with abhorrence; "but this is well known as that of the heretic peddler; if I am found clad in this I shall be taken for him—"

"Be silent," rejoined Philip, and made a threatening movement with his pistol; "Obey me, and not a word."

"I am putting it on, I am putting it on," cried the monk in terror. He wrapped the cloak about him, and then looked demurely at his opponent, as much as to say, What more?

"Seat yourself upon that chair with your back to the table." Josephus obeyed, trembling with fear.

"You have nothing to fear," Philip assured him, "if you do what I tell you. We are not as bloodthirsty as you are, and will not shoot you unless in case of necessity."

Philip now gave another sign to Floris, who, taking the rope from his pocket, tied the arms and legs of the passive monk securely to the rungs and back of the chair, his uncle meanwhile standing before him with the pistol. When this was done, Philip whispered something in Floris' ear, gave him the pistol and told him in audible words to stand guard over the monk and shoot him if he attempted the least outcry. He then collected the documents that were upon the table, whose contents he had heard the monk describe, and hastened with them through the sliding-door out of the apartment.

Floris remained alone with Father Josephus. The lamp cast its light full into his face, which seemed to have grown older within these last few days by reason of the experiences through which he had passed. Yet was he but little more than a boy in his feelings and his knowledge of men. He was nothing of a warrior, though endowed with a dauntless moral courage, and was a little alarmed at being compelled to handle a firearm.

For quite a while not a word passed between the two. The monk appeared in a very pitiable plight and his fear of the pistol made him assume a most woe begone expression. Floris' kind heart was melted to compassion. And suddenly another thought struck him. Why not speak to this poor man of the true way of salvation? He at once began to address him upon this topic, pointing out the grace of the Lord Jesus, which was sufficient to save without the intervention of saints or the additional necessity of penances and ceremonies.

At first the monk gave no reply except a look of horror at this poisonous heresy. But presently a change seemed to come over him. He looked searchingly into the frank, confiding features of the youth before him. A little better acquaintance with the world would have taught Floris the significance of that sudden gleam in those small gray eyes. But the father's face was turned from the light and the lad would not have suspected any evil had he seen the look. The monk now affected a sudden emotion, and said brokenly:

"I must indeed—believe what you say—to be true—but I—tremble—"

A ray of glad hope shone into Floris' heart. Surely the wicked monk was being moved by the Spirit. He quickly replied:

"You need not tremble, worthy father. God does not cause you to hear His Gospel in order to make you afraid, but to make you glad. It is the 'glad tidings of great joy.' Therefore fear not, only believe!"

The monk seemed deeply agitated; a sound escaped him as of a suppressed sob. The inexperienced Floris had no longer a doubt but he had repented. He bent over him and inquired with a voice full of tender feeling:

"Shall we unite in prayer to the Lord?"

The monk heaved a deep, sad sigh and said plaintively:

"These bands!"

"Oh, that is soon remedied," and in the gladness of his heart Floris forgot all prudence and quickly untied the rope that held the monk, having laid the pistol on the table. No sooner did the monk feel that he was free than he sprang to his feet, threw himself upon the lad, seized him by the hair and cried out at the top of his voice:

"Help! help! A heretic! a murderer!"

Floris, at first almost paralyzed by surprise, soon wrenched himself loose from the monk's feeble grasp, for his wounded arm was not yet healed. But the latter now took the pistol from the table. Floris rushed toward the sliding-door, pursued by the enraged father. But being a few paces ahead he succeeded in vanishing from his sight before Josephus reached the doorway. Dashing through the opening, the latter was about to hurry through the door into the next apartment, when he beheld Petrus Dathenus, Herman Van der Woude, the ferryman and a number of others standing before him. They left him no time to recover from his astonishment, but hurled themselves upon him and dealt him several sabre cuts.

At this moment, however, the soldiers of the prison guard appeared upon the scene, and there arose a desperate conflict. The numbers of the conspirators grew apace and soon Lord Imbize placed himself at their head. He fought like a lion and succeeded in covering the retreat of our friends and in disarming and disabling a number of the soldiers. He would certainly have succeeded in making himself master of the prison, if the guard had not been reinforced by a large detachment of the city garrison, who far outnumbered Imbize's men and were much better disciplined. Imbize quickly comprehended his situation, and wishing to spare himself and his followers for another more decisive occasion, he commanded them to draw back, conducting the retreat in an orderly manner.

The soldiers of the garrison now made a thorough search of the prison to recover, if possible, some of the escaped prisoners. They came to the apartment where Father Josephus had sunk to the floor, exhausted by the loss of blood. He was lying with his face down and the officer no sooner perceived his prostrate form, than he called to the soldiers:

"Despatch this wretch! It is the peddler, the arch-heretic who has escaped us so often. Make sure of him now; I know him by the brown, patched cloak he wears. No mercy to him! Despatch him, so he'll not get away from us again!"

The soldiers obeyed the order and threw themselves upon the unfortunate monk, who had consciousness enough to hear the command, but not sufficient strength to make himself known. It needed but few more blows to put an end to his miserable existence. His persecuting spirit had thus become the cause of his own destruction.

And what had become of Philip Cruize and the priest of Weersbeek? The two documents so fondly handled by Father Josephus, the one giving him access to the prisoners and the other permitting him to set any free whom he should select, produced their desired results in the hands of Philip, personating the influential monk. Before the rising of the populace and the attack upon the prison, the two friends had quietly left the prison and betaken themselves to a place of safety, where Floris was awaiting them.

It was not long before Herman Van der Wonde joined their number. They then all left the city of Mechlin, succeeded in crossing the borders of the province, reached that of Holland and took up their residence in one of its cities, where they were in less danger of being molested in the exercise of their religion. Herman eventually, when matters came to open war between the Provinces and Spain, enlisted in the army of the patriots and fought bravely under William of Orange and his brother Louis. The priest and Philip Cruize, who had been educated for the priesthood, naturally devoted themselves to the preaching of a purer Gospel than had at first been taught them. And it need hardly be told that Floris Berthem prepared himself to follow their example and to proclaim to the people who were plunged in the darkness of Romish superstition, that corner-stone of Christian doctrine which once he had written as part of his Latin exercise: "BEING JUSTIFIED FREELY BY HIS GRACE, THROUGH THE REDEMPTION THAT IS IN CHRIST JESUS."

Bible-Searching Christians.

BY REV. C. P. DITMARS.

THESE are just what is needed in every part of the Church to day. Our life is a warfare against the world, the flesh and the devil. God's Word is a most complete armory for the battle. But how shall we furnish ourselves with weapons, or how shall we wield them, if we are not fully acquainted with what the armory contains and how to use it? Paul, in his summing up of what the Christian soldier needs, gives us last of all and as the only offensive weapon, "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." This we are to wield prayerfully and righteously against evil; with this we are to strike sturdy blows against error, superstition and wickedness; with this we are to thrust back the tempter and pierce the hardness of men's hearts. But how few really know how to use it? In some countries men carry a sword at their sides, even in most peaceful times. But unless they are watched and kept bright by polishing these unused swords will rust fast in their scabbards. Suppose a foe should spring upon one whose sword had been suffered to rust fast. Could he use it? Could he bring it forth? He might seize it with great energy, but alas! it is fast where it has so long rested —a useless weapon. How often is it so with the believer and his Bible? God has given into his hands "the sword of the Spirit;" "the sharp, two edged sword of the word of God." How many have it ever ready for effective use? How few are skilful in using it aggressively against the sin which rises up all around. How few, when temptation comes, can press the keen edge of some ready command, or precept, or example against it. Alas, too often when the enemy comes upon many of us, we are overwhelmed because our minds are dull concerning the truth. We have not a ready grasp upon our weapon. The cutting power of the sword lies wholly in its edge and in the determination of him who wields it. So the piercing, heart-touching power of the Word lies in the pointed, practical use of it. The great aim is to cut the soul loose from sin, or to pierce the soul's enemy to death. It is indeed a mighty weapon that God has put in our hands. It is "quick and powerful," "sharp," "piercing," if we wield it with prayer. And, above all, it is the Spirit's great instrument, and the Spirit is promised to help us in the use of it. By His help we shall learn the effective use of it for our soul's defense, and for advancing the Lord's kingdom. O then, how we ought to search more and more these Scriptures. How we ought to seek more and more the help of the Divine Spirit. Ask Him to apply the Word you read and think upon, to your own soul. Ask Him to apply the Word you speak or teach to others, unto their souls. Seek the saving, quickening, enlightening power of this God-inspired truth. So search it that in darkness you may find its light; in weariness its rest; in trouble its comfort; and in affliction its rich consolation. Above all and through all, so search it that you may find Christ. Unless you find Him you miss its very heart. Unless you know Him you cannot know and understand God. Unless you receive Him you cannot be saved. As He comes to you out of this Word, He is "the way, the truth and the life."

NISKAYUNA, N. Y.

Letters from Florida.

I.

ST. AUGUSTINE, February 10th, 1886.

IT occurred to me that a brief communication on my Southern tour may be deemed worthy of a place in your valuable paper, if for no other reason than that of furnishing information to readers of the INTELLIGENCER who may have a desire to sojourn in a more mild and genial winter climate. The climate of Florida is one of its chief attractions; it is quite like summer in January and February. It is no wonder that so many people come here to exchange the season of Northern snows for the Southern sun.

Invalids who are disturbed by pulmonary complaints need not go to Greece or Asia Minor in search of a more mild and salubrious winter climate; they can select any temperature in the Southern States they need. If you desire a moist climate you will find it on the seashore at St. Augustine. If you should need hot, go to Key West, where there is perpetual summer, or if you wish it more cool, you will find it in the pines of North and South Carolina.

St. Augustine is the most ancient town in North America, situated upon a narrow strip of land formed by St. Sebastian river on one side, and the Atlantic ocean upon the other. The city is protected by two small islands, between which there is a channel for shipping to enter the harbor. Approaching the city by land over a bridge and causeway crossing the St. Sebastian river, we enter a well-shaded avenue, flanked by beautiful gardens and orange groves, which leads directly to the centre of the quaint old city. St. Augustine is noted for its ancient land marks. It is interesting to walk through its narrow streets, stroll through Fort Marion, or along the city sea wall; visit the city gates, or to sail on its beautiful rivers, covered with yachts and other small craft of different rigs. Among other places of interest are the numerous orange groves and flower gardens, and a trip across the Matanses river to the lighthouse, where you can gather a variety of sea shells and sea beans of several colors. Here stands the old Spanish cathedral, as firm as when built centuries ago, and there is the old slave market, wherein, when slavery existed, negroes were bought and sold as merchandise, at public auction, to the highest bidder. The sea wall, or breakwater, is a line of massive masonry, built by order of the United States government at a great cost, for protection of the city from the wash of the ocean. This wall extends from the United States barracks to Fort Marion, affording to the inhabitants a pleasant promenade.

The old Spanish fort is the chief attraction. It was the first fort erected in the United States; it commands both land and sea. Cannon are mounted on the ramparts. It is constructed entirely of coquina stone, a peculiar substance, supposed to have been formed by coral animals, quarried and brought from the seashore, which material is said to stand the test of shot better than Northern granite. Within the fort are shown chambers without light, said to have been used by the Spanish inquisition, from the fact of a skeleton in chains having been found in one of them. There are several of these mysterious vaults. One of these chambers evidently has been the chapel for religious service, for the stone altar is still in a good state of preser vation. As you enter the fort, over the gateway, is the arms of Spain, elaborately carved on the breast-work.

The city itself is purely of Spanish origin. The dwellings are mostly built of the coquina stone, one story, with wide balconies, steep roofs, and small windows and doors. The streets are narrow and winding, not more than from twenty to thirty feet in width, without sidewalks. The new dwellings now being constructed by Northern people are of modern architecture. They have a good supply of churches, of different denominations, and of schools. The original natives were of Spanish descent and a law-abiding people. There is a large number of colored people in the town, but the Indians, the first settlers on the soil, have all disappeared.

There is no more beautiful sight than an orange grove. The crop is now ripe and mostly gathered, yet there is enough remaining to show the golden fruit hanging in tempting clusters among the fresh green leaves, while here and there peep out the white delicate blossoms, filling the air with their delicious odor. Long before the oranges are plucked from off the branches, blossoms spring forth for the new crop. The ripe fruit will remain firmly on the trees for at least six months. As the fruit is picked fresh, it is of much better flavor and more delicious to the taste than that you get at home in the North. The crop cannot endure frost. It is estimated that the late cold wave has destroyed at least $1,000,000 worth of fruit, besides killing many young trees.

The cultivation of oranges, strawberries, and other fruits has grown to be a considerable source of wealth to the State. Cotton, sugar, rice, yellow pine and live oak timber, oranges, fish, and wild game may be considered the most valuable products of Florida.

Most all the best land along the St. John's river has been taken up and improved by orange growers, and that more in the interior has been purchased in large blocks by foreigners as a matter of speculation. Those who are desirous of making Florida their home should first see the land and try the climate, whether it will be suitable as a permanent home.

The surface of the State, as a whole, is remarkably level and broken, largely covered with lagoons, sunken rivers and everglades, which abound with alligators and reptiles of a dangerous character. The soil is generally light and sandy, except what is commonly called the hammocks, where it is intermixed with clay. The hammock land is usually covered with a heavy growth of red, live and water oak, and magnolia intermingled with the wild orange and lemon growth, and is better adapted to the cultivation of the orange, sweet potato, and many other fruits. The Savanna lands are of rich alluvian, which, during the rainy season, are inundated with water from two to three feet, and the bottom covered with a heavy growth of rank grass, only adapted to grazing. The everglades are a vast marsh, interspersed with many small islands, but that part not covered with water can be utilized for the cultivation of the banana and plantains. The pine forest soil is very poor, light and sandy, much of which is absolutely worthless for farming purposes.

G. E. WINANTS.

WHO SEES THE BLOOD?—That delightful passage in Exodus came flashing up to my mind just now, where the Israelite sprinkled the blood on the lintel and the two side posts. Then he shut the door. He was inside: he did not see the blood any more. The blood was outside upon the posts, and he could not see it himself; but he was safe? Yes, because it is written, "When I see the blood I will pass over you." It is God's sight of the blood of His dear Son that is the everlasting safeguard of all who are in Christ. Though it is most precious and sweet to me to look at that blood once shed for many for the remission of sins, and I do look at it; yet if ever there should come a dark night to me in which I cannot see it, still God will see it and I am safe. I am saved, because it is written, not "when you see it," but "when I see the blood I will pass over you." It is the perfection of the sacrifice, not your perfection of sight which is your safeguard. It is the absence of all blemish from the sacrifice—not the absence of blemish from your faith—that makes you to be "accepted in the Beloved."—Spurgeon.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“The Praise Songs of Israel.” A New Rendering of the Book of Psalms. By John De Witt, D.D., Professor in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. New and Revised Edition. The first edition of this book was appropriately noticed in our columns, when it appeared a year or two since. We are pleased to see that the volume met with so cordial a reception both in this country and in Great Britain that a new edition has been rendered necessary. Advantage has been taken by this fact to subject the work to a “severe scrutiny (as the Preface tells us) in which every word has been challenged anew, and the structure of every sentence and phrase carefully pondered.” Hence, while in their general arrangement the pages stand nearly as before, yet in many individual passages the fresh results of further labor have been embodied. In the Preface the author meets in a modest and manly way some criticisms that were made on the first edition, and justifies his usually close adherence to the massoretic text.

The book as a whole is very much the best English rendering of the Psalter now before the public. Of course it does not take the place of the Revised Version of 1885. That was made under limitations which were essential to its having any prospect of acceptance among the people generally. This has been carried through simply with the design of putting the exact sense of the original into the clearest, strongest and best English idiom. And it has attained a wonderful degree of success. There are occasional slips, as in Ps. 71: 3, “My high lifted rock,” where the sense is obscure and hardly warranted by the Hebrew, and in the fourth page of the Appendix transpiring is used in the sense of occurring. In the same Appendix there is a brief but admirable statement of the origin and meaning of the Divine name Jehovah.

We have no heart for microscopic criticism, for often the choice of a word depends upon the taste or the associations of the individual; and in very difficult places where it is hard to doubt that there is some corruption of the text (such as Ps. 58: 9; 141: 5, 6), the author has brought out an intelligible sense, and one as likely to be correct as any other. The general reader may accept the volume as a faithful representation of these precious praise songs, and one that conveys as much of their beauty, pathos and power as transfusion into an occidental tongue will allow. He will rarely be disturbed by meeting clauses or words that seem obscure, and usually can get the sense as he goes along, which, alas, is not the case always with the Authorized Version or even in the Revision. To the ministry the book will be of great service. It will serve most of the purposes of a brief commentary. If ever a man is in doubt as to the exact sense of a verse or section he proposes to treat, a recurrence to these pages will dispel the doubt and show the precise meaning of the inspired singer.

It is to be hoped that Professor De Witt's health and leisure will allow him to complete the promised series of explanatory notes, of which a few specimen pages are appended to this volume. Such a volume will be especially helpful to younger students and to some that are not young. There is a call for such explanations from a competent hand, from one familiar with the literature of the subject as well as with the latest results of Hebrew scholarship, one endued with sound judgment and free from the “sacred rage” after novelty, and above all, one in hearty sympathy with the underlying spirit and general tone of these blessed Psalms. The sample given at the close of this volume is such as to awaken a keen desire for the full collection. It will fill a vacancy of long standing in our current exegetical literature. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“Oceana.” By James Anthony Froude. Mr. Froude made the journey around the world, embarking on the “Australasian,” an Aberdeen steam packet bound for Australia. Probably he was in need of rest after the work and worry of editing the Carlyle manuscripts and enduring the fire of the critics. But he had also in mind words written by Sir James Harrington two hundred years ago, who thought he could foresee Britain and her conquests united in an Oceana, “a commonwealth for increase, and upon the mightiest foundation that has been laid from the foundation of the world.” Mr. Froude had also his vision of a confederacy of Britain and her colonies, and the work he united with pleasure was an inquiry into the feeling of the colonists toward the mother country and their disposition in regard to a confederacy and their opinions as to the basis on which it could be formed. A few days were spent with the Cape Colony, investigating the condition of affairs and gathering the views and hopes of leading men. Weeks were devoted to Australia, visiting various cities and making short journeys into the interior. New Zealand was next visited and some of the wonders of the island explored. From New Zealand the party sailed to Honolulu, and from Honolulu to San Francisco, and returned to Great Britain by way of New York. The description of this journey makes up what to many will be the most engaging book Mr. Froude has written. The incidents of the voyages and of the journeys by land, the appearance of the country, the people he met,—people of all classes, Governors, judges, merchants, scientific men, professors, farmers and laborers,—the flowers, the birds, the stars overhead, the fish in the sea, are delightfully described. Most interesting and rather philosophical digressions occur frequently, always practical and abounding in terse sayings. One may not always agree with these comments, but must admire the force and beauty of the language in which they are conveyed.

Not least attractive are the engravings from drawings by Mrs. Froude and by Lord Elphinstone who accompanied him, and from photographs.

The book may have a great deal of influence with Englishmen, and may lead to some sort of a confederation with the entire British Empire, which would be a mighty power among the nations.

The volume would be an agreeable and instructive companion to an intelligent man or woman on a journey South this winter, or it can be preserved for enjoyment during the approaching summer vacation. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“Platform and Pulpit Aids.” This new volume of “The Clerical Library” series, excels, we think, in the interesting nature of its contents, any that have preceded it. It contains speeches delivered from the platform at notable public gatherings by the most eminent Christian orators of Great Britain, of present and recent times. They are compiled from reports in the Church of England Temperance Chronicle, the Christian World, and other journals. The speeches are on Home and Foreign Missions, Bible Distribution, and Temperance, and may well be studied as models in effective oratory, as well as for the extensive knowledge they impart on these absorbing themes. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The New Princeton Review for March more than fulfils the promise of its first number. In fact, we consider it a clear improvement, from the larger proportion of distinctively literary matter, and the less disproportionate space occupied by its story. This latter, by the way, introduces us to a Norwegian “Howells,” by name Jonas Lie, through the translation and adaptation of H. H. Boyesen. There are two articles of extraordinary value. One is a brilliant and thorough review and critique of “Contemporary English Ethics,” by Prof. Francis L. Patton, of Princeton. The other is Lowell's essay on the poet Gray. It is a rare thing now a days to meet with Mr. Lowell in our periodicals. And, highly as we estimate his poetry, we confess to a disposition to rate him even higher as an essayist. This subject is one peculiarly congenial to his taste and style, and he writes from a full mind, having had occasion to make a special study of Gray in connection with the recent ceremonies in the poet's honor, in which he took so conspicuous and brilliant a part. This article is as electric with wit and wisdom and imagination as Lowell's best literary essays. Public questions are treated with ability in Mr. Nadal's, “Do We Require a Diplomatic Service?” and in the very timely article on “Federal Aid in Education.” Mr. J. B. Harrison recounts, in a very interesting and suggestive way, “The Movement for the Redemption of Niagara.” The religious element is represented by Dr. George Dana Boardman's “The Just Scales,” a searching and comprehensive application of a great ethical principle to many sides of life. The editorial department of the New Princeton Review (“Criticisms, Notes, and Reviews”) is a unique feature in the periodical world, embracing the freshest things to be said about politics, philosophy, art, science, literature, reform, education, archæological research, etc. The literary element includes a bright review of Stedman's “Poets of America,” with other book reviews, and some timely “Chat about Periodicals,” with references to those before and contemporary with the Biblical Repertory, the original Princeton Review.

....Lippincott's Magazine for March has, besides its two serials, one of Brander Matthews's capital short stories, “Perchance to Dream.” Better and stranger than fiction is the account of Thorold, “the One Pioneer of Tierra del Fuego.” An interesting history of “the American Play” is given by Laurence Hutton, clearly showing (without specially intending to do so) the retrogression and degradation of the stage. A specially valuable article is “Song games and Myth-dramas at Washington,” by W. H. Babcock. The poetry of Lippincott is uncommonly good, of late. “As I came down from Lebanon,” by Clinton Scollard, betokens to our eye a new star on the poetic horizon. “The March Wind,” by F. D. Sherman, which is invoked to “wake the sleeping violets” and “burst the winter's frosty prison-bars,” etc., comes rather unfortunately on this March day, when the wind is blowing fifty miles an hour and the mercury stands at six degrees. The “Monthly Gossip” is good.

....The New Englander for March is unusually good. It opens with Dr. A. P. Peabody's article on “A Liberal Education,” which is set forth with great clearness and vigor. If the author's own work is a fair specimen of the training he recommends, the case is closed and nothing more need be said. Article IV. discusses the Encyclical Letter of Leo XIII. and shows how absurd is the claim of some that the present Pontiff abates anything from the claims of his predecessor. The writer deals fairly, constantly quoting his authorities and making out his points conclusively. Article V. handles “Progressive Orthodoxy” as set forth in the book under that name by the Andover professors. The writer shows very clearly how unsatisfactory is the method of the authors and how far it falls short of a true theodicy. He also convicts them of “unconscious rationalism,” a happy expression for a good deal that now-a-days passes for exposition of Scripture. The Educational Topics are as usual local, but none the less timely and readable. The Notices of Books contain a satisfactory estimate of Mr. Wilson's Congressional Government, a very wholesome and stimulating book, though by no means flawless in substance or style.

....St. Nicholas for March contains a collection of “Dog Stories,” amusing and entertaining. The interest of these is enhanced by a delightful picture of Dr. John Brown and his famous “Rab.” The article on “French Painters,” too, is illustrated by three noteworthy copies of paintings—“The Seaport with the Great Tower,” by Claude Lorraine; “The Dog of the Regiment,” by Horace Vernet; and “Madame Le Brun's Portrait of Herself.” The sixth chapter of Mr. Stockton's “Personally Conducted,” which is descriptive of Florence and Venice, is fitly accompanied by representations of scenes in those picturesque cities. Another art treasure is a full page illustration called “The Wolves and the Roeback,” and yet others illuminate “Quaker Esther's Ride.” Who does not become a child in the enjoyment of St. Nicholas?

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: Platform and Pulpit Aids. (The Clerical Library.) 12mo, pp. 284. $1.50.

Daniel W. Knowles: Jewels of Praise. A Collection of Choice Original Hymns and Tunes, suitable for Sunday-schools, Bible Classes and the Home Circle. By Asa Hull, author of “Gem of Gems,” etc. 12mo, pp. 190. Board.

Phillips & Hunt: Yard-Stick and Scissors. By Edward A. Rand. (Up-the-Ladder Club Series.) 12mo, pp. 305. $1.25; also, Annals of the Round Table and Other Stories. By Jennie M. Bingham. 12mo, pp. 279. $1.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Letters to Dead Authors. By Andrew Lang. 16mo, pp. 234. $1; also,

The Fight for Missouri. From the Election of Lincoln to the Death of Lyon. By Thomas L. Snead. With Maps. 12mo, pp. 322. $1.50; also,

The Wonders of Water. From the French of Gaston Tissandier. Edited, with numerous additions, by Schele De Vere, D.D., LL.D. Illustrated. (Wonders of Science.) 12mo, pp. 350. $1; also,

Wonders of Architecture. Translated from the French of M. Lefèvre. To which is added A Chapter on English Architecture, by R. Donald. Illustrated. (Wonders of Art and Archæology.) 12mo, pp. 264. $1; also, Adventures on the Great Hunting Grounds of the World. By Victor Meunier. Illustrated. (Wonders of Man and Nature.) 12mo, pp. 297. $1.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Flower Talks at Elmridge. By Ella Rodman Church, author of “Birds and Their Ways,” etc. 12mo, pp. 320. $1.15; also,

From Accadia to Machpelah; or, The Homes and Journeyings of Abraham. By the Rev. James Marshall Thompson. 12mo, pp. 312. $1.15.

John B. Alden: The History of Russia, from the Earliest Times to 1877. By Alfred Rambaud. Translated by Leonora B. Lang. In Two Volumes. With Illustrations. 12mo. Vol. I., pp. 309; Vol. II., pp. 305. $1.75.

Funk & Wagnalls: The Poet Scout. A Book of Song and Story. By Captain Jack Crawford. Quarto, pp. 181. $2.

Robert Carter & Brothers: Synoptical Lectures on the Books of Holy Scripture. By Donald Fraser, M.A., D.D. In Two Volumes. Fourth Edition. Carefully revised throughout. 12mo, cloth. Vol. I., Genesis-Habakkuk, pp. 370; Vol. II., Zephaniah-Revelation, pp. 357. $4.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Cavalry Life; or, Sketches and Stories in Barracks and Out. By J. S. Winter. (No. 59, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 149. 25 cents; also,

Movements of Religious Thought in Britain During the Nineteenth Century. By John Tulloch, D.D., LL.D. (No. 60, same.) 16mo, pp. 210. 25 cents; also,

Until the Day Breaks. A Novel. By Emily Splendor, author of “A True Marriage,” etc. (No. 514, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 54. 20 cents.

The Choice of Books and Other Literary Pieces. By Frederic Harrison. 16mo, pp. 446. 50 cents. Macmillan & Co.

The Rivals and the School for Scandal. By Richard Brinsley Sheridan. (Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 191. 10 cents.

Christian Work in New York. Being the 59th Annual Report of the New York City Mission and Tract Society. With Brief Notices of the Operations of Other Societies, etc. 8vo, pp. 146.

The American Male Choir. A Collection of Sacred and Secular Music for Male Chorus and Quartet Choirs, Clubs, Colleges and Singing Societies. By John Harrison Tenney. 8vo, pp. 159. 50 cents. Oliver Ditson & Co.

PERIODICALS.

January and February.—The Monthly Interpreter.

March.—New Englander and Yale Review, The American Missionary, The Missionary Herald, The Pulpit Treasury, The Homiletic Review, The Library Magazine, Magazine of American History, Words and Weapons, The English Pulpit of To-day, The Book Buyer, The Brooklyn Magazine, The Pansy, The Musical Visitor, Our Little Ones and the Nursery, Methodist Review, Outing.

Tributes to John B. Gough.

IN his "Prelude," delivered in Tremont Temple, Boston, Feb. 22d, Joseph Cook said: "Two nations, now the foremost on the earth, mourn a fiery man of Kent. Humanity mourns; for this man had fire in his emotions, in his imagination, in his intellect, in his will and in his conscience; he was himself a pillar of fire, through which God looked in the morning watch of a great reform, and troubled the hosts of its enemies and took off their chariot wheels. He who has addressed more than 8,500,000 hearers, he who has spoken to more than 8,500 audiences, and travelled more miles on his lecture tours than would reach twenty times around the globe, lies at rest in his own library yonder at Hillside."

"Dead he lies among his books;
The peace of God is in his looks.
Traveller! in what realms afar,
In what planet, in what star,
In what vast aerial space
Shines the light upon thy face?"
—Longfellow.

In an eloquent address delivered by Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler in the Collegiate Church, Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, New York, on the life of John B. Gough, he said: "Gough wrought deeper, wider work in temperance than any man since Father Matthew. He was unique in character. His life was a romance. The elements of his power were his marvellous impersonation, instantaneous representation. He taught truths by pictures; his arguments were impersonation, but he had deep discernment and he was one of the wisest counsellors in the temperance movement; sympathetic and catholic in spirit, though opposed to compromise."

"A Literary Enterprise Unique in the Annals of Publishing."

CASSELL'S National Library.

A series of weekly volumes, each containing about 200 pages, clear, readable print, on good paper at the low price of

TEN CENTS PER VOLUME, or 52 volumes, postpaid, $5.00, when subscribed for by the year.

NOW READY.

My Ten Years' Imprisonment. By Silvio Pellico.

Childe Harold's Pilgrimage. By Lord Byron.

The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin.

The Complete Angler. By Isaac Walton.

The Man of Feeling. By Henry Mackenzie.

The School for Scandal and the Rivals. By Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

Sermons on the Card, and other Discourses. By Bishop Latimer. (March 12.)

Plutarch's Lives of Alexander and Cæsar. (March 19th.)

Other Volumes in Preparation.

ADAM HEPBURN'S VOW.

A Tale of Kirk and Covenant. By Annie S. Swan. 12mo, Extra Cloth. Price, $1.

"The Scene of this story is laid during the stirring times of the Scottish Covenanters, and holds the attention of the reader from the first chapter to the end."

Complete Catalogue of Publications sent free by mail to any address.

Cassell & Company, Limited,
739 and 741 Broadway, New York.

NEW BOOKS—NOW READY.

JUST PUBLISHED BY

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON

RELIGION IN A COLLEGE.

What place it should have.

Being an examination of President Eliot's Paper read before the 19th Century Club, Feb. 3, 1886.

By President JAMES McCOSH.

Pamphlet, 25 cents.

FOREWARNED FOREARMED.

By J. THAIN DAVIDSON. Uniform with "Talks with Young Men." Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

"The favor accorded to 'Talks with Young Men,' and the pleasing testimony to its usefulness which I am constantly receiving, have induced me to yield to the request to issue another series of these homely addresses. There is no class of persons more amenable to sound advice, when given in a brotherly, straightforward, and unaffected manner."—Author's Preface.

New Volume (7th) of CLERICAL LIBRARY.

Platform and Pulpit Aids.

THIS NEW VOLUME OF THE CLERICAL LIBRARY is intended to assist the clergy, Christian laity, and Christian workers generally in a department of their labor daily growing in importance, and in which there has hitherto been little to help them. It consists of the most striking speeches delivered during recent years by distinguished pulpit orators on such subjects as the "Bible," "Missions," "Sunday-schools," "Temperance," etc. To this is added a selection of pithy and striking anecdotes." Crown 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

Moments on the Mount.

A SERIES OF DEVOTIONAL MEDITATIONS. By Rev. G. MATHESON, D.D. (From second English Edition.) 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

"In this volume we are brought into contact with a writer whose whole soul is saturated with divine ideas, and to whom Scriptural images are the exponents and symbols of spiritual conceptions. It is not one to be read through at a sitting, and then laid aside; rather, each meditation is to be pondered over and enjoyed singly and separately."—The Scotsman.

Copies sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

A. C. Armstrong & Son, 714 B'way, N.Y.

Just Published.

Messianic Expectations,

AND MODERN JUDAISM.

A Series of Lectures Delivered by SOLOMON SCHINDLER, of the Temple Adath Israel, Boston, with an Introduction by

MINOT J. SAVAGE.

12mo. Cloth. Price $1.50.

Lately Issued.

THE INSUPPRESSIBLE BOOK.

40 PAPERS.

HERBERT SPENCER and FREDERICK HARRISON on the Nature and Reality of Religion; with new Notes by

GAIL HAMILTON.

12mo. Cloth. Price $1.50.

For sale by all Booksellers, or by the Publishers,
S. E. CASSINO & CO., 41 Arch St., Boston.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE,
By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.

16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

OR LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.

ANNETTE L. NOBLE.

16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.

MRS. E. R. CHURCH.

16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.

MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.

MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.

REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.

16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.

Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.

Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.00.

Address orders to

Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

New Sunday School Music Books.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Jewels of Praise.	$30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gem of Gems.	$30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gospel Praise Book.	$40 per hundred. Specimen copy 50c.

NEW EASTER MUSIC.

OUR RISEN LORD, SERVICE. 5 cts. $4 per hund.
HULL'S EASTER ANNUAL. 5 cts. $2 per hund.

Address ASA HULL,
150 Nassau St., New York City.

STANDARD MUSIC BOOKS.

For Quartet Choirs.

DOW'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 80 cts.
STRACHAUER'S CHURCH MUSIC. $1.00.
SHEPARD CHURCH COLLECTION. $1.00.
BAUMBACH'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.
BAUMBACH'S NEW COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S 2D MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
EMERSON'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.

These are all collections of the best and most refined Sacred Music.

For Choruses.

EMERSON'S CONCERT SELECTIONS. In 6 numbers, each 25 cts. Complete $1.00.
Admirable Selections, Sacred and Secular. Ditson & Co. also call attention to the exceedingly rich treasury of the best sacred music contained in the more than 100 Masses (by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and other masters) which they publish. No Choral Society or Choir should be without them. Latin and English words. Send for lists, Average price 75 cts.

For the Home.

CHOICE VOCAL DUETS. $1.00.
HALFDAN KJERULF'S ALBUM OF SONGS. $1.50. Very superior collections.
LEAVES OF SHAMROCK. $1.00. 100 Irish Melodies, arranged for piano.

For Music Students.

RITTER'S STUDENTS' HISTORY OF MUSIC. $2.50. The most condensed and practical history extant.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC.

"CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE." A new arrangement of Scripture Selections for Easter tide, interspersed with appropriate hymns, set to original music, the whole Service being eminently fitted for use on Easter Sunday for young and old. 16 pp. By Rev. ROBERT LOWRY.
Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"EASTER ANNUAL NO. 10."—Issued this season. Contains new and original songs by popular composers, furnishing an abundant variety of appropriate material for Sunday School Easter Festivals. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"FESTIVAL ANTHEMS." 64 large octave page Anthems, for Easter and other joyous occasions. Price, $3.60 per doz; 35c. each by Mail.

A complete Catalogue of Easter Music, Services, Carols, Anthems, etc., sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 833 N. Second St., Phil. Pa.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. FOR THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN, with a complete College Course, Schools of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers, and thoroughly equipped for its work. Students at present admitted to a preparatory course. Catalogues sent on application.
J. RYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Acting President.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.....
Murdock's Liquid Food.....14.10		1.97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's.....Not any		54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's .. ..do.		28 67	22 62	11.09
Johnston's.....do.		20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's .....do.		56.13	60.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent

It contains 0.42 of Ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23 74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

SEEDS! SEEDS!

My Annual Priced Catalogue is now ready, and will be mailed free to all applicants. It contains all the leading and most popular sorts of

Vegetables, Farm & Flower Seeds,

Besides all the desirable novelties of last season, and nearly everything else in my line of business.

ALFRED BRIDGEMAN,
37 East 19th Street, New York City.

25 YEARS IN THE POULTRY YARD.

27th Edition. 108 Pages, explains the business. Symptoms and remedies for all diseases. Written by a farmer for farmers. 25cts. in stamps, or one ct. a year for my experience. A 50 page Ill. Cir. free.
A. M. LANG, Cove Dale, Ky.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our Ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

The Little Girls.

IN a charming letter, not intended for publication, a friend says to Aunt Marjorie, apropos of certain words in this "Corner" and elsewhere:

"You find your girl friends enlivening company at times, yet I feel sure the most of your sympathy is for the boys, judging from the articles I have read. If I could write just now, I would take issue with you about the difference made between son and daughter. If there is any, I fancy it is just the other way. My experience and observation have been, the boy has the new suit first, the boy spends his pocket-money as he pleases, and has the lion's share always; the boy goes to the entertainment, for which only one ticket can be afforded; the boy's foibles are overlooked or laughingly condoned, but the sister's extravagances? or girlish bits of folly never escape the notice of either father or mother."

I wish very much that we might, in order to comparison of views, hear bits of experience from our readers. The truly wise and loving parent makes no difference in the treatment of the children at home, except as each child needs to have its own special development considered. In the same household the children differ, and cannot receive precisely the same discipline. Home training should not be cast-iron nor arbitrary. Aunt Marjorie has always seen little girls receive more petting, especially from papa, than their brothers do, and she is therefore always ready to break a lance in defense of her friends, the boys. It is not that she loves them better. A sweet little girl is the very sweetest thing on the face of the earth. It is not uncommonly the case that justice is not dealt alike to the children of a family, because one is more demonstrative than another; has a way of coaxing and persuading which wins the pence and the kisses from father and mother; or because one is passionate and stubborn, and short-sighted parents, dreading a contest, are ready to sacrifice right principle for the sake of a transient peace.

Let us hear from you, friends. If this is to be a mother's corner, mothers should not be reluctant to occupy it, helping each other by their counsel.

One of us has her contribution ready, and here it is:

MOTHER'S RIGHT-HAND MAN.

Dear Aunt Marjorie: I hope that the subject of "Boys" is not yet exhausted, for my youngster of eleven is a real comfort in the house, and I would like to tell you some of the useful things he does. He always cleans and oils my sewing machine for me, having learned how by carefully reading the directions. He frequently sews on it as well, or sometimes turns the hand attachment for me to sew. But instead of my saying "stop" or "start," he wishes me to direct him by "get up" or "whoa."

He always cleans and fills my calligraphic pen for me; and in fancy work his rule and compasses make many a line or circle.

If his father is absent he carves at table, having learned by carefully watching the process. I am happy to say that he will also ask the blessing if I request him to do so. He does most of his own shopping, bringing suits or shoes home on approval if at all doubtful about them. He has a button-hook, in the handle of which are buttons, fasteners, and the needle for inserting them, and he keeps the buttons on his own boots.

He keeps the spring rollers to the shades up to their duty by taking them down and winding them up when they show signs of weakness, and he does other little tinkering jobs about the house. But lest you should think he has a dull life, or an old head on young shoulders, let me add that he is the veriest romp at play; kicks out shoes at "shinney" as fast as any boy I know, and races with the swiftest at the Institute. I hope to see further suggestions on the subject in your "Corner."

A Suburban Mother.

Brightness in a Dreary Place.

BY SARAH GOULD.

MY friend, who regularly visits the city hospital, diffusing kind words and deeds on every side, a short time since saw a new patient in one of the wards. She was a Swede, still in the prime of life, with something so foreign in her strongly marked features as suggested there was little hope of saying much to her on the most weighty of all subjects at the bed of the sick and dying. As the lady remarked, there seemed to be "a stone wall" before her. But her pleasant answer, in broken English, to a question about her health was encouraging. She spoke of the Lord's goodness to her and the comfort she had in Him. On inquiry, she found the young woman had had a life of many trials. She had come to Philadelphia in the Centennial year. She said she had desired to be happy, and sought enjoyment in various ways. She married and had a good home and one child. But still life was not complete. Death took both away. Since then she had found peace in Jesus Christ. She talked intelligently on religious subjects, and showed a lovely spirit of resignation. The lady was questioning in her own mind whether the invalid was a Presbyterian or Methodist, being sure she must be one or the other. At last she told herself, to what organization she belonged. She is a Chris-tian, or Campbellite, of the same belief as President Garfield and family. The Chris-tians now worship in a hall in this city, and their minister comes often to the hospital to cheer and pray with the lone foreigner.

It was truly refreshing to meet in a place so full of suffering an inmate of such a spirit. There is a positive brightness about the spot.

Philadelphia.

The Mother's Sabbath.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

ONE of the great questions of the hour which is being considered by the pulpit and by the press with more earnestness than ever before on account of its issues, which must be for the weal or for the woe of our nation, is the Sunday question. There are unselfish efforts being made to give the workingman his chance for a half day's rest, so that he may meet the Sabbath in such a physical and mental condition as shall enable him to regard it as something more than an opportunity for recuperation or a chance for amusement.

In an able sermon upon the "Sunday" subject, as it is related to the needs of these times and of all times, by the Rev. Henry J. Van Dyke, D.D., we find a sentence which seems full of significance, namely, "There is a golden mean between the falsehood of extremes." These words somehow seem to hold the key to the secret of many of the miserable, unprofitable Sunday experiences of the past as of the present, and to suggest an adjustment of opportunities to needs, by the recognition of the "golden mean."

Were those unlighted Sundays, which many remember with a kind of horror, the result of falsehood? It seems hard to acknowledge it with respect to our high souled Puritan ancestors, who have bequeathed to us so much that has built the moral stamina of our nation; and if we must, we must also allow that their environments were peculiar, and that in the stress to find truth there is often an unnatural strain put upon the soul's energies, which places one in a false attitude before the great principle towards which he is blindly groping. In taking second hand rules, customs and traditions, have fathers and mothers been false to their own individuality and to the home trust, when they should have stood like children before their God, asking the meaning of Sunday as related to the deepest needs of their homes?

If over strictness has been the result of a false position of the soul, may not the same be said of laxity and Sunday desecration?

Has not the use of Sunday been abused because man has not been willing to let the light of truth shine widely in upon his soul and thus enable him to see clearly its true wants? The lower nature through darkness, thus been exalted over the [illegible], and the day which was given to man as a blessed benediction for his soul has been used for pleasure and mere physical rest.

The great Sunday question has, without doubt, come to the heart of the home as never before, and this question, if considered and decided as in God's very presence, will save our homes from the falsehood of extremes. The "thou shalt" of the old Mosaic law shall be illumined by Christ's law of love, which will surely reveal the secret of true Sabbath-keeping.

Said one to a friend who found the Sabbath an especial delight, "How is it that you are able to get such peculiar joy from the Sunday?" and the reply was, "It is through the home influence. There was nothing strained in my mother's intellectual or spiritual attitude towards the day. Somehow she seemed to understand the true meaning of shall and may as related to the duties and joys of Sunday. I can never forget how she always went apart from us at one particular hour of the day, and when she again joined us her face shone with a spiritual light; it was as if it had been touched with beauty, and power, and peace all at once. In a child's vague way I understood that she had gained this at the very fountain of joy and that she lifted our Sundays above desecration as she did above slavery and mental discomfort. Sunday for this reason, if for no other, has become a delight to me."

Oh, what cannot a mother do who, like this one, understands the meaning of Sunday for the true needs! Blessed influences like these can never make fanatics or socialists, never swell the lists of restless spirits who in asking for Sunday freedom mean a desire for Sunday license.

Aunt Marjorie will be very glad to receive letters on this subject from mothers and daughters.

"Puddings and Dainty Desserts."

A DAINTY little book, with the fascinating title which it makes the mouth water to read, comes from the press of White, Stokes & Allen, and is the appropriate companion of other little books which bear on their title page the name of Thomas J. Murrey. All who possess "Fifty Soups," or "Fifty Salads," or "Dainty Breakfast Dishes," will feel that they must buy this book of dainty desserts as soon as possible. We give one or two receipts by way of sample:

Spanish Fruit Pudding.—Line a baking dish with a light puff paste, add a layer of shredded pineapple and cover it with powdered sugar; add a layer of sweet oranges sliced, strew over them a thin layer of sugar; next add a layer of sliced bananas with sugar strewn over them. Repeat the process until the dish is full. Cover the dish with a light puff paste and bake to a delicate brown.

Apple Charlotte.—Line a pudding dish with thin slices of home-made bread, buttered on both sides. Peel, core and slice a quantity of sour apples; put in a thin layer of apple in the dish, spice moderately and add a liberal quantity of sugar; then add a layer of any kind of home made preserves, and so on till the dish is full. Put slices of buttered bread on top and bake till the top is crisp and brown.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Sparrow's Song.

I AM only a tiny sparrow,
A bird of low degree;
My life is of little value,
But the dear Lord cares for me.

I have no barn or storehouse,
I neither sow nor reap;
God gives me a sparrow's portion,
But never a seed to keep.

I know there are many sparrows,
All over the world they are found;
But our heavenly Father knoweth
When one of us falls to the ground.

Tho' small, we are never forgotten;
Tho' weak, we are never afraid;
For we know the dear Lord keepeth
The life of the creatures He made.

I fly to the thickest forest,
I light on many a spray,
I have no chart nor compass,
But I never lose my way.

And I fold my wings at twilight,
Wher[illegible] I rapture [illegible];
For the Father [illegible] watching,
And no harm will come to me.

I am only a little sparrow,
A bird of low degree;
[illegible]
[illegible] faith than [illegible]

—Selected.

The Hallowed Name.

"HALLOWED be Thy name." To hallow is to account sacred. Persons and places are hallowed in our affections when they are held in special reverence, and their names call up cherished memories, or grateful feelings, or sincere admiration. Thus we hallow the burial places of parents, patriots, poets, and of the dead who died in the Lord. They are not put to common uses, nor are they profaned by idle jests or mocking discourse. The respect we have for hallowed names of great men is useful in forming our opinions and in shaping our characters. Whoever is without reverence for sacred things is apt to be low, vulgar, coarse in conversation, and without any of the better and nobler traits of manhood. He belongs to the viler herd of the profane multitude, who scoffs at virtue and sneers at piety, and makes "a mock of sin."

Therefore, dear children, true religion begins in reverence for the true God, the Lord who made heaven and earth and all that is therein. He is God, and there is no other God. The gods of the nations are the works of men's hands or the representatives of human passions. To worship them is to be weak and wicked and degraded to the level of the beasts. The pagan gods were pagan heroes. The gods of the savage portions of mankind were horrible, cruel monsters, and the gods of the heathen now are steeped in vices most foul and infamous. Their worshippers grow worse and worse, for they do but worship the depraved appetites and impure desires of their own hearts. They have no reverence for the true God, for they do not know Him until the Gospel shows them God revealed in Christ. As soon as they receive Christ as their teacher and Saviour the heathen throw away their idols and their false gods and forsake their unclean and defiling ways of worship, and hallow the name of our Father who is in heaven, who is the Creator of all and the Father of all who believe in Jesus Christ, whom He has sent to seek and save the lost.

A name is often made to mean more than volumes of history can contain. Many instances are given us by travellers in which the simple declaration, "I am an American," has saved them from imprisonment or death. Because that name stands for all the power of the United States of America, for our republic, which is respected and revered in the most distant parts of the world, and among the most barbarous tribes.

The name of God signifies His character. It includes all His attributes. It means that He is Jehovah God alone. To profane that name is a great crime against one's self. To treat irreverently the Majesty of the Universe, the Holy One whom angels adore and worship with devoutest reverence, and praise with holy ecstasy, is a sort of soul-suicide. Hence, in the law we are forbidden to take the name of the Lord our God in vain. For that is the beginning of all sins, and the showing forth in speech of the worst form of wickedness. We must not trifle with the name of God, for He is good and true and merciful and kind, and well deserves in Himself the adoration and praise and love and service of all rational beings, whether in heaven or on earth, or among the shining spheres that are in the vast spaces of the universe. He is God over all blessed forever, and willing to hear us when we pray unto Him aright. There can be no right prayer which does not hallow, that is, regard as most holy the name of our Father in heaven, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the everlasting God who will judge all. E. S. P.

Claverack, N. Y.

How Seth Captured the Bear.

ONE afternoon in the early December of 1800, a hunter with his gun on his shoulder might have been seen pressing through the thick woods of Northeastern Ohio. Only a few months before, with his wife and two little children, with their worldly possessions packed in a covered wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen, he had made the long forty-days' journey from Massachusetts to what was then known as the "New Connecticut." Another axe was added to the chorus that rang through the forest, and another log-cabin, with its puncheon floor and doors, to the little settlement that was helping to lay with toil and privation the foundation of a rich and populous State.

It was of the near, not the distant future, however, that Seth Hayes was thinking that chill afternoon, for winter had set in early; little grain had been raised; markets were distant and difficult to reach, and the main dependence of the pioneer's cabin lay in the skill and success of the hunter. A light snow had already fallen, and as Seth crossed a little open space in the woods some marks in it caught his watchful eye. The boys and girls of to day might have thought them the footprints of a large dog, but he recognized them at once as the track of a bear.

The trail was not difficult to follow, and soon led him to a small cave at the foot of a rocky ledge. Closing up the holes that the bear might not pass through and out, he stopped to consider what it were best to do. To attempt the capture of the powerful animal alone was a most hazardous and dangerous undertaking. Should he return for assistance Bruin would very likely escape. At this juncture the memory of General Putnam might have occurred to him, as the destitute condition of his own home and of the settlement steadied his nerve for a feat requiring equal courage and daring. Setting down his gun, with his hatchet he proceeded to cut and drive a row of stakes at the mouth of the den, making holes for and sharpening, but not driving the last two, thus leaving room for his own entrance and egress. Then putting punk, wood, and sticks ready for a fire by this opening, he boldly crept into the cave on his hands and knees, and assaulted the bear with hatchet and knife.

As he carefully retreated foot by foot, the enraged animal closely followed him, its eyes gleaming and its strong white teeth snapping in the dim light. But Seth managed to keep beyond the reach of those strong paws, whose terrible hug, as he well knew, would have crushed every bone in his body, until he reached the entrance. Then, springing out, he hastened to drive the two remaining of his row of stakes that held the bear back, while he struck his flint and punk and kindled the fire that should intimidate Bruin. Having only shot for his gun, we may well believe that he had his hands full between fighting the furious bear back from the stakes and cutting beech slugs with which to load his gun. The flint of his lock was bad, and aiming as well as he could, he touched off with a brand from the fire. But his shots only seemed to madden the animal the more, and he drove him back with his hatchet again and again, till he had fired eight shots into him before the desperate struggle was ended.

It had been a hard battle, and it was not only a proud victory for Seth Hayes, but one with a substantial result, for the great bear that weighed over four hundred pounds furnished the settlement their supply of meat for the winter. Ela Thomas.

How John Eliot Cut the Knot.

JOHN ELIOT, known as the Apostle to the Indians, was one of the best of men. When he was appointed minister of the Roxbury church, in 1632, no one cared for the wretched Indians living in the colony.

Eliot learned their language that he might preach the Gospel to them. He translated the Bible for them and taught them to read it. His zeal made him indifferent to danger and fatigue. Such was his dislike to wigs and tobacco, that he would turn aside to preach against hairless heads being covered with foreign hair, and Christian mouths emitting volumes of smoke. He was so radical that one of his books, a work on civil government, was condemned for its seditious principles. Yet he was so charitable that his friends had to resort to devices to prevent him from giving everything away.

The parish treasurer once paid him his salary. Knowing his passion, the wise man of business put the coin into a handkerchief, which he tied into a dozen hard knots.

On his way home the good pastor called to see a poor, sick woman.

"God has sent you a relief," he said, as he tried to undo one of the knots. But the treasurer had done his work well, and Eliot's aged fingers could not extract the smallest coin. He thus cut the knots: "Here, my dear," he said to the woman, handing her the handkerchief, "take it; the Lord designs it all for you."

No wonder Cotton Mather said of him, "He that would write of Eliot must write of charity, or say nothing."—Ex.

Grandpa's Queer Cane.

A TRUE STORY.

IT was a cold winter night, seventy years ago. Little Polly had made a "breath-hole" on the frosty window-pane, so she could peep out and watch Jonas watering the cattle at the brook, and see the red sunset clouds; and there was grandpa coming home from the woods with an axe on his shoulder and a cane in his other hand.

He came into the large warm kitchen where she was, a few minutes later.

"Here, Polly," he said, "come and see my new cane."

Polly ran to examine it. It was slender and tapering, the head looked just like a snake's head, and it was striped and spotted like a snake.

"It looks just like a snake," said Polly, "only it is so straight and stiff. Where did you get it, grandpa?"

"I found it in a hollow log I was chopping to-day. I thought it would make me a nice cane, so I walked home with it to-night; and it did very well. It's slender, to be sure; but it seems stout, and I don't believe it would break very easy."

"It's nice and smooth," said Polly; "and it's pretty, too, if it didn't look so much like a snake. I don't like snakes very well."

"Don't you? Well, set it up in the corner now, and put the chairs about the table. I see Jonas coming in, and I want my supper."

Polly set the cane in the corner near the great fireplace; and just then grandma came in from the back buttery, with a bowl of apple sauce. Jonas came in with a pail of milk, and soon they all sat down to supper in the pleasant firelight.

They had just finished eating, when there was a little noise in the corner. They all looked around, but no cane stood there. Instead, a snake was squirming and twisting on the floor.

"For the land sakes!" cried grandma. "How on earth did that snake get into the house?"

"I found him frozen up stiff in a log," said grandpa, "and walked home with him for a cane. He made a very good one; but, now he has thawed out, Jonas, I guess you had better take him out and chop off his head."

Which Jonas was very willing to do.—The Well Spring.

Flies.

FLIES are distinguished from most other insects by having but a single pair of wings; what corresponds to the second or hinder pair in other insects being a pair of knob-like "balancers." The flight of the house-fly is most rapid in warm, sultry weather. We all know how busy and pertinacious their movements are in dog-day weather.

It has been found that a common fly when held captive moves its wings three hundred and thirty times a minute, whereas a honey-bee, whose powers of continued flight are much greater, moves its wings one hundred and ninety times in the same period. The wings describe a figure 8 in the air.

The buzz of the fly has been carefully studied by Landois. During flight the fly's buzz or hum is in a relatively low tone; when it is held so that the wings cannot move the buzz is higher in pitch, and it is higher still when the fly is held so that all motion of the external parts is prevented. The last mentioned is the true voice of the insect; it is produced by the breathing holes of the thorax. The buzz of the fly thus expresses the emotions of the creature; the low hum being one of contentment, the shrill excited buzz, one of alarm and disturbance.

Little Heads Together.

SCRIPTURE ACROSTIC.

1. A son of Ham. 2. The largest dry measure of the Hebrews. 3. The son of Amoz. 4. A friend and disciple of Christ. 5. One of the capitals of Bashan. 6. One of the minor prophets. 7. Naomi's daughter-in-law. 8. The sixth son of Jacob.

Primals.—A citizen of Colosse to whom Paul wrote an epistle. "Ittalie."

CHARADE.

When I one day my second spied
My first I saw him do—
To try to catch him was in vain—
It seemed as though he flew.
My whole's a game oft played by boys,
Amusing to the mind,
Now put your heads together, pray,
And thus my riddle find. S. H. Jackson.

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 20 letters and am what many a scribbler vainly hopes to be.
My 8, 7, 16, is a wild animal.
My 2, 9, 11, 17, is very annoying in dry weather.
My 1, 6, 20, is part of a musical composition.
My 12, 16, 4, 18, is an exclamation commanding quiet.
My 3, 19, 5, 15, is a very small quantity.
My 10, 17, is a pronoun.
My 14, 16, 13, 5, is a song in two parts. S. H. J.

Answers to Puzzles of February 17th.

Double Acrostic.—
P rover B
RomancE
I dy L
N eutra L
T reu T
I mag E
N ava L
G rap E
P hili P
R aleig H
E ch O
S almo N
S mok E

Printing Press. Bell Telephone.

Pi.—
Vex not thou the poet's mind
With thy shallow wit;
Vex not thou the poet's mind,
For thou canst not fathom it.
Clear and bright it should be ever,
Flowing like a crystal river;
Bright as light and clear as wind.

Diamond.—
J
S E T
W A F E R
S A F F R O N
J E F F E R S O N
T E R R I E R
R O S E S
N O R
N

Correct answers from Edith A. Glenney, Rappie Bowne, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh, Carrie S. and Louie Rapalje.

The "Little Heads" are invited to send puzzles and answers to Cousin Lois, at this office

The Record of an Humble Life.

AFTER their death we remember the good who were great, and draw lessons from their lives; while we seldom remember the humble workers, and more rarely still regard their lives worth imitating. Yet many a lowly worker's devotion, were we to study it, might give us inspiration that we fail to find among many of the nobler Christian workers.

In an obituary published in the INTELLIGENCER, February 17th, appears the brief record of an humble life that may soon be forgotten; but its influence will live. Rather to give a few additional facts, that others may draw a lesson from that life, than to perpetuate the memory of Peter Davis, of Flatbush, Ulster County, N. Y., in this sketch written.

Fifty-five years ago last January, and some time after he had become a professing Christian, Mr. Davis, then a young man, wrote his consecration, from which the following resolutions are copied:

"I resolve henceforth, through the grace of God, to live, for the glory of His great name, a life of thankfulness for His mercy to me, an undeserving sinner."

"I resolve, through the strength of my Saviour, henceforth to love and serve the Lord, and do all I can, through His grace assisting me, to promote His glory and the eternal welfare of souls."

For fifty five years those resolutions were kept. It may have been with faltering and fear at times, but faithfully, steadily, in face of discouragement and opposition, he kept them until life ended. Thankfulness to God marked his prayers and religious conversation. Even more faithful was he to the other resolution. In his last illness he did not forget the souls of some for whom he had been peculiarly anxious. To some who visited him he spoke of their need of a Saviour; and of others he inquired whether, during the revival services in the church, they had decided yet for Christ.

He was converted when temperance societies, Sunday-schools, and even prayer-meetings by laymen were unknown in his native place. About the time of this consecration of himself to the Lord he began active work. His education was very limited; he was the son of an ordinary farmer, and himself but a day laborer; he had not even the advantage of being an officer in the church; yet he determined to do what he could near his home for the Lord's cause.

Total abstinence was almost unknown in the neighborhood; and to be temperance people meant not to become drunk. There were not many then who had never been other than temperance men. Even ministers were known to indulge too freely and to speak favorably of drinking. Perhaps by the advice of his excellent pastor of blessed memory, Rev. P. A. Overbaugh, Mr. Davis began to work for total abstinence. He signed such a pledge and started a total abstinence society. When other speakers could not be procured he gave temperance addresses; the writer has one of them in his possession; he same position taken by the mass of Christian temperance men of to-day was taken in that written address. Not content with a single society Mr. Davis held temperance meetings in the different neighborhoods to promote the cause he had espoused.

How much good was done by that society and meetings it would be difficult to say now; but very few drunkards were found in the community for many years after. For twenty years after there were probably less than half a dozen drunkards found in a community numbering fully one hundred times as many, where the influence of that society was most felt. The boys who signed the pledge then grew up, with scarcely an exception, sober, strict temperance men, as their children are after them.

Soon after his conversion Mr. Davis became convinced that it was his duty to begin a Sunday evening prayer meeting. There was no evening service in the church, on account, probably, of the pastor's work elsewhere, and this young man determined to hold meetings in the schoolhouse. He persuaded some of his young companions to help him. They promised, if he would lead. Notice of the meeting was sent around the neighborhood and created no little stir. Some ridiculed, others wondered, still others pitied the young men, while a few were in hearty sympathy with them. A few regarded it as almost a matter for church discipline to hold a meeting and pray in public, especially during the pastor's absence. The meeting was held, but only one beside the leader had the courage to pray or speak. The two after that for a time bore the title of "young domines." The prayer meeting did not stop with the first one. For fifty five years it has continued, with perhaps some intermissions, though of late years held in the church. Not content with a Sunday evening meeting, Mr. Davis after a while began a prayer-meeting during the week, several miles from his home. When he could persuade others to accompany him he did so; nor did he need, after a time, much persuasion while a number of his young companions remained with him. Through cold and heat, storm and darkness, the long journey was made, usually on foot, to the place of meeting. For a considerable time that meeting was continued; it later ripened into the Plattekill Reformed Church. Still another meeting for prayer during the week was begun and for a long time continued at Glenerie by Mr. Davis, aided by o her workers in the Flatbush church.

As no Sabbath school had ever been held in Flatbush, Mr. Davis, early in his Christian life, determined, perhaps acting on the advice of his pastor, to start one. This met with criticism and even ridicule; but the young superintendent, having probably never seen a Sunday-school, went forward, learning all he could and acting on his best knowledge, until the school became his joy, as it did of many a child who learned the truth in it. When others were able and willing to take charge of the school its superintendent gave it into their hands and started another in an other neighborhood. That, too, became a success. Later its superintendent gave it into other hands and started a third school at Glenerie.

The first and last mentioned still remain; the other was many years ago united with another school. On the records of those schools are the names of men who have been or are the elders and deacons in a number of churches; and there are also among those names five who are now successful ministers of the Gospel. How much these owe to the influence of that humble superintendent it is impossible to say. But of one, at least, the writer can speak, now a missionary in the far West. He attributes, as he has said, much of his success and Christian life to what he learned from that superintendent, also his teacher in that little country Sunday-school. Two others were quite certainly led to give themselves to the ministry of the Gospel through his counsels and life.

More might be said of the work of this unassuming man; of his visiting from house to house to speak with individuals about their souls; of his efforts in meetings for a special work of grace—but enough has been told to show that the learned and the great are not alone in their consecration and success. S. C.

The Origin of the Bible Society.

AN exchange in its exposition of last Sunday's lesson on "Reading the Law," relates the following incident, which led, it is alleged, to the organization of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

"Mary Jones was the daughter of a poor weaver living in an humble dwelling at the foot of Cader Idris. She was born in 1782, and early in life began to learn her father's trade. She attended a Sunday-school, and was soon distinguished for her readiness to learn and repeat large portions of the Word of God. As yet, although there had been many editions of the Welsh Bible published, it was an exception to see a copy in a poor man's house in Wales. The nearest Bible was two miles distant from Mary Jones' house. She had permission to read it as often as she chose. Meanwhile she carefully set aside all her pence, determined if possible to buy a Bible of her own.

"After years of saving she succeeded in making up the sum necessary to buy a copy of the Welsh Bible. She ascertained that Bala was the nearest town in which a copy might be got; and it was twenty five miles away. But, nothing daunted, the girl set off, and walked all the way footbare, carrying her boots in a bag in order to put them on just before entering Bala. She arrived at Bala late in the evening—too late to see Mr. Charles, from whom the Bible was to be had. In the morning she went to Mr. Charles, and he was touched by her simple story. He said, 'I am sorry that you have come all the way to obtain a Bible, seeing I have no copy to give you. All the Bibles I received from London have been sold months since, excepting one or two which I have promised to keep for friends.' Mary Jones wept bitterly. The disappointment was too much for her. But Mr. Charles could not withstand her tears, and he at last gave her one of the promised Bibles. Mary placed the Bible in her bag, and bade good-by to the good Mr. Charles, feeling grateful to him for letting her have what she considered the greatest of treasures Her visit to Mr. Charles left a lasting impression on both. Often afterward did Mr. Charles refer to that touching incident to convince his English friends of the intense craving of the Welsh nation for the Word of life. In December, 1802, Mr. Charles laid before the Committee of the Religious Tract Society the pressing needs of his country; and related the story of Mary Jones. The story awakened sympathy in every breast, and it was then resolved not only to have a Bible Society for Wales, but for the whole world.

"Mary Jones' Bible is now in the library of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and on her tomb at Bryncrwg is an inscription stating that her journey to Bala in 1802 led to the establishment of the British and Foreign Bible Society."

American Bible Society.

THE stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House on Thursday, March 4th, 1886, the Hon. Enoch L Fancher, LL.D., President, in the chair.

A letter was presented from the British and Foreign Bible Society, announcing the election of the Right Hon. the Earl of Harrowby as successor to Lord Shaftesbury in the presidency of that Society, and of Mr. J. Gurney Barclay as treasurer in place of the late Mr. Hoare. Lord Harrowby's father had been offered the post of president when a vacancy occurred thirty five years ago, but had declined it that he might press its acceptance on the Earl of Shaftesbury.

Grants of books were made for benevolent distribution, chiefly in the United States, of the aggregate value of about $4,433. Appropriations of funds were made for printing and circulating the Scriptures in foreign lands, to the amount of $92,893 61. This includes appropriations to the agencies of the Society in Mexico, Japan and the Levant, and also to the American Board for its mission in Austria, to the Valparaiso Bible Society, to the Bible Society of France, and to the Russian Bible Society.

Two Bible Societies were recognized as auxiliaries in Kansas, one in the Territory of Dakota, and one in each of the States of Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Nebraska and Ohio.

The total receipts for February were $35,464 43. The total issues from the Bible House during the same period were 60,446 volumes.

"Colonial New York."

MR. EDITOR: It was a great pleasure to read the above-named article quoted from the Critic in your paper of Feb. 24th. All honor to the English Puritans, and it is through no fault of theirs that the changes upon this one harp-string have been rung so long and in so large a measure unfairly. It seems rather strange that this grand, free and fair country should be the field in which two important parties should have been robbed of their rightful honors, first Columbus, and next the colonial Hollanders.

It may be due to the fact, that the Dutch have been content to be actors rather than talkers in the world's history that such tardy justice has been done them, in reference to their part in the building up of our American civilization. Truly enough, the way is open for a worthy history to be prepared by a worthy son of this staunch ancestry which will set this matter right.

Moved, that a committee be appointed to wait upon some good brother of the church and ask him to furnish this "desideratum" which the Critic calls for. There are, no doubt, many who could do this. One might be mentioned who has learning enough, skill enough, enthusiasm more than enough, if he could only be provided with time enough, who could do this and do it well. Reference is had to Rev. David Cole, D.D., of Yonkers, who has just completed a valuable series of chapters to the new History of Westchester County, which is about to be published.

The Knickerbocker History, though at once recognized as a caricature has, however, unintentionally, by its genial and charming author, had a rather misleading influence, and blinded many to the obligations this nation is under to the indefatigable, uncompromising, and enlightened people, the Hollanders. A. W. K.

A MAN may be a miser of his wealth; he may tie up his talent in a napkin; he may bury himself in his reputation; but he is always generous in his love. Love cannot stay at home; a man cannot keep it to himself. Like light, it is constantly travelling. A man must spend it, must give it away.—Macleod.

Let Your Light Shine.

ONE of our exchanges gave the following illustrative anecdote:

"I have a friend, Judge ——, an excellent man, eminent in his profession. Once a year, or oftener, he was visited in the way of business, by a gentleman from Texas, and a cordial friendship sprang up between the two, founded on esteem.

"During one of these annual visits, at the conclusion of the business, the Texas gentleman said:

"'Judge C——, we have known each other many years. I have the highest regard for you as a man of honor, and I have no doubt you have an equal regard for me. In all this acquaintance, I am ashamed to confess, I have never inquired whether you are consecrated to the service of the Master I love, nor do I know.' The Judge was completely broken down. 'God forgive me,' he cried. The ice was broken. The two Christian brothers, with flowing tears, and clasped hands, begged each other's pardon, and there on their knees, upon the dusty office floor, they held a blessed prayer meeting, one never to be forgotten by either of the participants."—Golden Rule.

Financial.

TUESDAY, March 9th.

THE report of the Associated Banks for the week ending last Saturday is: Loans, $354,539,900; specie, $89,732,600; legal tenders, $31,665,700; deposits, $393,299,600; circulation, $7,882,500 The surplus of reserve continues to decrease and now is $23 073,405. Money can be secured in abundance at 1 1–2 to 2 per cent.

Last week the imports of merchandise at this port were $8,225,481, against $8,091,452 last year; and exports $5,246,043, against $5,689,353 last year. Foreign exchange is dull at $4.87 1–2 for 60 day bills and $4.89 1–4 for demand.

On Saturday quotations for grain were, for March delivery: Wheat here 95 3–8, in Chicago 80 3–4; corn here 49 7–8, in Chicago 37 1–2; oats here 38 1–8, in Chicago 29.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, March 6, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 18,027 pks.; exports 1,396 pks. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery.—	@35
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery...33	@35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh..... ..28	@30
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire ...—	@23
Fair to good dairies.....16	@22
Fine summer firkins 20	@24
Fresh Western imitation creamery... 23	@27
Western store-packed butter..... 7	@10
Winter make, common roll butter..... 9	@13
Grease..... 4	@ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 9,179 boxes; exports 10,872 boxes.

There has been a buying export demand at about 8c. for good fair stock, and 3,000 to 4,000 boxes were purchased here and in Boston and Montreal of these lower grades. Cable is lower and English markets and English buyers here quiet. Lower grades are generally pretty well picked up and top qualities very dull.

The cheese market is peculiar in that it takes a longer time for prices to produce an appreciable effect upon consumption than in almost any other staple. In flour, grain, butter, pork, you get a quicker responsive demand to lower prices—lower the platform of price and they will slide out into the sea of consumption—but it is not so with cheese. You may drop their wholesale price 20 or 30 per cent and the corresponding effect is not soon produced. An overstocked sickly cheese market is a hard case for market doctors to remedy, and the common practice has rather been to bolster up the patient until dissolution came, and then clear away the remains as in 1879. Now there seems to be a disposition to take the market in hand at the start and to forelay against possible disaster by considering whether an early opening of cheese factories is desirable. It is a good sign and a step in the direction of intelligent marketing. These fodder cheese will not be taken by the home trade as long as they can get good old stock and the weather remains suitable to their use. They will, therefore, have to be mostly thrown upon English markets, demoralizing them and reacting upon our markets here, and so far as our grocers here place inferior hay cheese upon their counters it will tend to lessen the entire season's demand. The vigor of the cheese market, as a whole, is more dependent upon quality than upon price. This was shown last year, when skimmed cheese being partly knocked out, full cream cheese went into home trade and did some good so that the consumption of the country, in spite of general bad trade, was largely increased. Probably doctors will disagree, and the current of events decide how early factories shall be opened, but the consideration of the subject from every one's point of view is certainly useful. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese.....	9½@10
" " white "	9 @ 9½
Good early useful cheese.....	8½@ 9
Skimmed cheese	6 @ 8

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 12,068 bbls. and 6,036 cases.

Receipts very largely increased and prices dropped to 16a17c. Sales to-day on 'Change of several Western lots at 14½a15c. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz..... 16	@18
Southern and Western, per doz.	14½@15½

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

Judge Gildersleeve delivered a scathing charge to the Grand Jury of New York on the Broadway bribery cases ...Mr. Charles Pratt gave $100,000 to the Adelphi Academy of Brooklyn.

THURSDAY, 4.—Lord Randolph Churchill spoke at Manchester, denouncing the Government and advocating the establishment of a unionist party....The Socialists of London accused of inciting the recent riots were committed for trial....The steamer "Beta," which arrived at Halifax, reports the wreck of two steamers and the loss of a captain and six men....A number of overdue steamships have arrived and very severe weather has been experienced at sea....A large schooner is anchored off Rocky Point, L. I., and is in distress. It is feared that she will be wrecked and all on board lost, as help cannot reach her....General Terry has been nominated to succeed General Hancock. ....Many acres of land have been washed away by a freshet in the Delaware River.. The street car strike has reached Brooklyn and several lines are tied up....The Pacific Mail Steamship Company are buying new vessels to improve their service....Mrs. Morgan's valuable collection of pictures is being sold in New York....Governor Hill presided at a meeting for the benefit of the Parnellites at Albany ...Keeper Laverty, of Trenton, has been impeached.

FRIDAY, 5.—Mr. Gladstone refused to disclose his policy on the civil service estimates. The Conservatives have endeavored to force him, but the Parnellites aided him in his resolution....The Chamber of Deputies in France refused to expel immediately the French princes, and a vote of confidence in the Government was passed by a large majority....The German Government is considering a tax on liquors. ..The Queen of England has decided to be less secluded.... An investigation of the Indian Government is proposed in the Parliament of Great Britain....Alaska is to be included in the operations of the Blair educational bill.... Speaker Carlisle has appointed a committee to investigate the telephone scandal....The Capitol appropriation bill passed the third reading at Albany ...The first step toward the impeachment of Keeper Laverty has been taken ...A very extensive and in some instances riotous strike took place on all the car routes in New York and Brooklyn in which Mr. Richardson is director. The interruption to travel was very great. Considerable damage was done to property and the difference is widening between the opposing parties.

SATURDAY, 6.—Lord Hartington, in a speech before the Eighty Club at London, defended Mr. Gladstone and denied that the Liberal party was committed to Home Rule for Ireland....A man in the French Bourse shot three times into the group of brokers, wounding one man. His name is Petrovich and he professes to be an anarchist....The Queen was too fatigued to perform the ceremony of knighting Mr. Russel....The education bill passed the Senate by a vote of 36 to 11....The strike of employés on the Texas Pacific still continues. The hands refuse to handle freight on the Missouri Pacific.... There are loud calls for relief among the street railroad men in Philadelphia and Baltimore....A bill to withdraw the charters of street railways was offered in the State Senate....The strike on all of the railroads in New York and Brooklyn lasted until after 2 P M. yesterday. Railroad Commissioner O'Donnell was successful as an arbitrator, and all the lines are running again as usual. ....James T. Holland, who was tried for killing "Tom" Davis, the sawdust swindler, was acquitted yesterday....A number of ruffians caused a riotous disturbance in West street yesterday....There is great discontent at Nanticoke over the refusal of the company farther to attempt to reach the dead miners....A car strike is threatened in Jersey City.

MONDAY, 8.—Bismarck expects to speak on the Spirit Monopoly bill before the German Reichstag....More arrests are expected because of information given about fortifications in Germany ...A severe earthquake was felt in Italy....Mr. Gladstone is making rapid progress with the Landlords' Expropriation bill....A number of British officers in the Egyptian army are to be replaced by Turkish officers....Abbers Malegue Caseponce was murdered by robbers. ...A negro was lynched in Eatontown, N. J., for an awful crime....The oat-meal mills at Akron, Ohio, were burned....The investigation of the Payne bribery charges are being investigated in Ohio ...Nine thousand men are out on a strike on the Gould system of railroads in the Southwest. ....A number of miners have struck in Pennsylvania....A severe landslide took place at Kingston, N. Y....A compromise has been reached between the railroad companies and the strikers of New York city. ....A reluctant effort is being made to capture the lynchers of Eatontown, N. Y.... Memorial services were held for Mr. Gough at Chickering Hall, N. Y., a large number of clergymen and laymen taking part.

TUESDAY, 9.—Two sailors were lost from the steamer "Acton" and one killed at the wheel in a stormy voyage from Baltimore to Queenstown....Ten thousand business men petition the U. S. Senate in favor of the Arthur Kill Bridge....The Senate and House adjourned out of respect to the memory of Senator John F. Miller, of California, who died yesterday afternoon ...Mrs. Horatio Seymour is dead....Strike in the Eastern soft coal region....The lynching at Eatontown, N. J., is being investigated....Fifteen men hurt and two killed by an explosion at Connellsville, Pa....The New Orleans carnival opened....An elevated road in Broadway of this city is proposed....Monarch pier in Jersey City damaged by fire $300,000.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

MARRIAGES.

JOHNSON—TURK.—At the home of the bride's parents, at Muitzeskill, N. Y., by the Rev. Wm. Veenschoten, on March 4, Mr. John H. Johnson to Miss Martha Turk, both of Muitzeskill, N. Y.

NICHOLS—GUION.—At the home of the bride's parents, Greenburgh, N. Y., March 3, by the Rev. Wm. A. Dumont, Mr. Wm. H. Nichols, of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., to Miss Ida Guion.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

CLASSIS OF SARATOGA.—A special meeting will be held in the chapel of the North Reformed Church, West Troy, to receive Rev. E. A. McCullum and arrange for his installation, and to dispose of such other business as may come before it, on Monday, March 15th, 1886, at 10.30 A M.

J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

PASTORS' ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.—Following is the list of subjects to be discussed at the meetings of the Pastors' Association, Monday mornings at 10 o'clock, at the rooms, 34 Vesey street, from March 15 to Sept. 28, 1886: March 15, "Relative Place of Preaching and Pastoral Work in Ministerial Effort," Rev. E. G. Read; March 22, "Typology," Rev. J. F. Riggs; March 29, "Feasibility of an Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System," Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor; April 5, "A Study of Gibbon's Five Causes," Rev. D. Van Pelt; April 12, "Vacant Pulpits and Unemployed Ministers," Rev. E. J. Runk; April 19, "Rights of Property," Mr. Henry George; April 26, "The Resurrection," Rev. A. V. V. Raymond; May 3, "Baptism for the Dead," exegesis of 1 Cor. 15:29, Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers; May 10, "Progressive Orthodoxy," Rev. Dr. A. G. Vermilye; May 17, "Evangelistic Work," Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton; May 24, "Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic," Rev. Dr. J. M. Dickson; May 31, "Dr. Shedd's Doctrine of Eternal Punishment," Rev. Dr. G. S. Bishop; June 7, 'The Work of the Holy Spirit," Rev. Dr. G. H. Smyth; June 14, "Reminiscences of the General Synod," discussion; June 21, "Is Ordination Necessary to the Constitution of a Minister?" Rev. Dr. H. C. Berg; Sept. 13, "Vacation Experiences," discussion; Sept. 20, "Paul a Castaway," exegesis of 1 Cor. 9:27, Rev. Dr. D. Cole; Sept. 27, "Liturgical Position of the Reformed Church," Rev. Dr. E. A. Reed.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. William D. Perry at No. 95 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Publisher's Department.

A VIOLENT COUGH CONTINUED through the winter often brings Consumption in the spring. Soothe and tone the irritated and weakened lungs with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and the Cough yields and the danger disappears. 25c, 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kill Corns, Bunions, 25c.
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Relief is immediate and a sure cure. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

Clergymen, lawyers, public speakers, singers, and actors, all recognize the virtues of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of our most eminent public men says: "It is the best remedy that can be procured for all affections of the vocal organs, throat, and lungs."

To thoroughly cure scrofula, it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. That pleasant and active agent in the cure of all consumptive symptoms, "Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime," is being universally adopted in medical practice. Sold by the proprietor, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases. —M. A. Rust, M. D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

Cured By Using

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured. —Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.
THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS
has a Pad unlike all others. It adapts itself to all positions of the body while the Pad presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With it Rupture is held securely day and night, and a permanent cure certain. It is easy, durable, cheap. Pamphlets and circulars free. EGGLESTON BROS. & CO., Chicago, Ill.

PILES. Instant Relief. Permanent in a few days, and never returns. Never requires no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

The Church.

The Sweet Old Story.

TELL me about the Master!
I am weary and worn to-night,
The day lies behind me in shadow
And only the evening is light!
Light with a radiant glory
That lingers about the West.
My poor heart is aweary, aweary,
And longs, like a child, for rest.

Tell me about the Master!
Of the hills He in loneliness trod,
When the tears and blood of His anguish
Dropped down on Judea's sod.
For to me life's seventy mile-stones
But a sorrowful journey mark;
Rough lies the hill country before me,
The mountains behind me are dark.

Tell me about the Master!
Of the wrongs He freely forgave;
Of His love and tender compassion,
Of His love that was mighty to save;
For my heart is aweary, aweary,
Of the woes and temptations of life,
Of the error that stalks in the noonday,
Of falsehood and malice and strife.

Yet I know that whatever of sorrow
Or pain or temptation befall,
The infinite Master hath suffered,
And knoweth and pitieth all.
So tell me the sweet old story,
That falls on each wound like a balm,
And my heart that was bruised and broken
Shall grow patient and strong and calm.

—The Watchman.

A Remarkable Conversion.

MR. HENRY E—— died in this village on the twenty-seventh day of last December, at the age of seventy seven years. He was very widely known, and wherever he was known it was as a man of unusual mental ability, and as an infidel. His infidelity was of the boldest and baldest type. Perhaps the best idea of what he was, is given in what a Christian neighbor used to say to him: "Mr. E——, you are the most honest devil that I ever knew."

For two or three years before his death, he had been something of an invalid. His illness had not been sufficient to prevent his attending to his business, or to affect in the least the clearness and vigor of his mind. It refused, however, to yield to remedies, and steadily, though almost imperceptibly, gained ground. He became quite infirm in body, but not till within two or three weeks of his death did his mind begin manifestly to fail.

In the early part of last May, a Christian lady asked me if I would not call upon Mr. E——. I replied that I would, but in my own mind put off my going to some undetermined day in the future. Twice afterwards in the same month I met that lady, and each time she renewed her request, and each time I renewed my promise, with the same postponement to the indefinite future. I had heard such accounts of Mr. E——'s infidelity, of the scorn and contempt he felt, and did not hesitate to express, for Christianity and Christian ministers; I had heard such a story of the treatment actually received from him by a clergyman only a few weeks before, that I did not care to expose either my faith or myself to similar treatment. Early in June, meeting the same lady again, she said, "You have not made that call yet." "No," said I, "I have not." "Well," said she, "I really wish you would. Mrs. E—— has said she would like to have you, and I am sure that Mr. E—— would be willing to see you." Out of shame and in desperation, I said, "I will make that call next week." I did so. To my utter surprise, I was received with the utmost courtesy and even gladness. After a little preliminary conversation, Mr. E—— himself turned the talk to religion by saying, "I have been looking the whole ground over, and have concluded that I shall not get up from this illness, and that sooner or later it will bring me to the end, and I am not quite ready for that, and wish to know more about it; and we have wished to have you come to see us because we feel that you can speak with authority."

The talk that followed was purely religious, but general and inconclusive, and at best only prepared the way for other conversations. I meant to see him again in a very few days, but was prevented. About ten days afterwards, I was sent for to come as soon as possible. I went instantly. I found Mr. E—— in dreadful distress. There was some pain of body, but that was as nothing compared with his mental and spiritual suffering. It was the most terrific conviction of sin I have ever witnessed; at times it overpowered his utterance, his lips trembling so that he could make only inarticulate sounds. I had scarcely seated myself, when he said, "Mr. Hopkins, I don't know that you can help me, but I think you can tell me how I can get relief, or of some one who can help me." "No," said I, "I can't help you, Mr. E——. Christ is the only one who can do that. Christ is the one you need." "I can accept Christ as a principle," said he. "Ah," said I, "that won't do. Christ as a mere principle won't help you in the least. You need Christ as your personal Saviour." Then I took a seat close to him, and tried to make just as plain as possible to him the truth as it is in Jesus. There was something almost awful in the way he watched me. I shall never forget the keen, eager, intense questioning of the gaze he kept fastened upon me. At length his wife said something about prayer. He fairly sprung forward in his invalid chair, and said, "O yes; do pray! Let me get down on my knees, too." I did not know that he was able to stand, and so said, "No, Mr. E——. You can get just as low before God in your chair as on your knees. Just follow me, and make my prayer your own." I then prayed with him, and as I closed he burst forth into a passionate, broken cry to God for himself. His wife told me afterwards that he did little else all the morning of that day, and the preceding night, and the night that followed, but walk up and down his parlor crying to God for mercy.

It was nearly, if not quite a week, before he began to obtain any relief. Then the possibility of salvation for him began to dawn into his heart as a hope. "If He should save me now, it would be a case unparalleled in history." He understood Paul's "Of whom I am chief." Gradually as he grew into faith, the storm and struggle of his soul ceased. Peace entered his heart. He came to know the blessedness of the man whose iniquity is forgiven, whose sin is covered. The change that came over the whole man was marvellous. He had been proud, self-centered, self-reliant. He grew into the most beautiful and touching humility and childlikeness. "I am a novice in religion," he once said. "I don't know anything. I want all the help you can give me, and I want the sympathy and prayers of all Christian people."

His attitude towards Christ became that of tender and clinging faith and love. He could scarcely speak the name of Christ without tears coming into his eyes. Often when kept awake by restlessness or pain, he was overheard talking to Christ, and the form of his address was almost always, "O my dear Master." His life became one of almost literally unceasing prayer. It did not seem possible for him to have enough of it. He never let a Christian come into the house without asking him to pray, and praying with him. He used to have his little grandson come in to repeat for him and with him the Lord's Prayer. Once, when on account of absence from home I had not seen him for a week, he said, "I have been hungry, hungry, HUNGRY for prayer." So his life went on, his faith growing clearer, his hope brighter, his assurance stronger, his rest in Christ sweeter and more full of peace and joy, till at last the earthly end came.

His conversion has produced the most profound impression wherever he was known. Citizens of this place have been met at points along the whole length of the Delaware to Philadelphia, and along the line of the Erie as far east as New York, with the question, "Is it possible that Henry E—— has become a Christian?" Many old friends have come here from other places to see him and talk with him, and more than one has said to me, "I never expected to hear Henry E—— speak of Christ as he has. He is the last man in the world that I ever expected to hear pray." The first reports of his conversion were received with the utmost incredulity. A prominent Christian man of the village, when I told him of Mr. E——'s conversion, looked at me in a pitying sort of way, as if I had allowed my sympathies to run away with my judgment. After some weeks he went to see Mr. E——. The next day he met me and said, "I went yesterday to see Henry E——. It is perfectly wonderful. It just shows how we can go to God. If that man had sinned against any earthly law as he has sinned against God, there would not have been any possibility of pardon for him. But he goes to God, and God forgives him, and he has the assurance of that forgiveness." "Then," said I, "you have no doubt now in regard to his conversion!" "Not the least in the world," said he.

There has been, for many years, a strong infidel clique in this village. Mr. E—— was one of its leading members. His conversion has been the most staggering blow that clique has ever received. They do not know what to make of it. In their attempt to account for the change in him, they have resorted to falsehood and slander, as the Pharisees did in their attempt to explain the miracle of the day of Pentecost. But the fact remains, that in the case of this man, a notable miracle has been wrought, and they cannot deny it. The fact remains that this man who for years had only scorn and contempt for Christianity, came before his death to hold and preach the faith which once he would gladly have seen rooted from existence in the world. And, like the disciples of old, the Christians of this village have glorified God in this latest Saul of Tarsus.—Rev. Stephen G. Hopkins, Deposit, N. Y., in The Evangelist.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 12, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Messiah's Coming and People.....Mal. 3:1-18.
T. Messiah's Enemies and Messenger.....Mal. 4:1-6.
W. Messiah's Messenger Foretold .....Isa. 40:1-11.
T. The Messenger's Ministry.....Matt. 3:1-12.
F. Messiah's Work .....Isa. 61:1-11.
S. Messiah's Wrath and Mercy.....Isa. 63:1-19.
S. The Desire of all Nations.....Hag. 2:1-9.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

March 21st.—Messiah's Messenger.—Mal. 3:1-6; 4:1-6.

Golden Text.—"Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me."—MAL. 3:1.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Surely, I come quickly."—REV. 22:20.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS lesson completes our course of seven years' study in the Old Testament, and appropriately presents for our consideration the closing words of that ancient revelation. The name and message is all that we know concerning this last of the seers of Israel. There seems to be some uncertainty among commentators as to whether the name Malachi, which means "My servant," shall be regarded as a proper name or only a title. The majority incline to the opinion that it is a significant proper name. Malachi lived about 400 years B. C., and delivered his message during the later years of Nehemiah's life. The character of his prophecy well sums up the entire teaching of the Old Testament, in which the faithfulness of God and the waywardness of the Jews are continually seen in contrast. In the Hebrew there are but three chapters in the book, so that the selections which compose our lesson are in reality the opening and closing words of the same chapter. The text of the entire book is found in God's statement, "I have loved you." (1:2) The prophet complains that God's love had been poorly requited, and upbraids the priests for offering unworthy and formal sacrifices to Him. Their religion had become heartless. In chapter 2 he rebukes them for immoralities, especially for marital unfaithfulness. The prophecy of the coming one follows immediately upon these rebukes and brings with it both a promise and a warning. The blessing and the curse which will flow from the coming of the Messiah are so intermingled in the words of the prophet that we cannot divide our lesson by subject without destroying entirely its order and natural impressiveness. We shall therefore follow the division presented by the two passages.

THE LESSON.

I. MESSIAH THE PURIFIER.—3:1-6.

V. 1.—"Behold, I will send my messenger." While the prophecy begins and ends with reference to the coming of John the Baptist, yet the reference to him is purely incidental. John recognized some of the prophecies concerning himself, but evidently did not see himself described in these words of Malachi. "He shall prepare the way before me." In their spiritual condition at the time when Malachi wrote, and even at the time of Christ, the people were unprepared to receive the Messiah just in proportion as they needed him. The messenger was to arouse them to a sense of need so that they might be prepared to appreciate and receive the offered help. "And the Lord whom ye seek." Note the progress of revelation from the first promise of the seed of the woman to this declaration of the coming of the Lord,—Adonai—the Master. The Jews prided themselves on their relations to Jehovah, although practically ignoring their covenant with Him continually. When Christ came, the people were looking for Him, and hoping great things from Him. "Shall suddenly come to his temple." It is not necessary to refer this to the second advent, when He shall come to judge the earth. When Jesus appeared in the temple early in His ministry, driving thence all that polluted the sacred courts, and claiming the rights of His Father's representative, His appearance must have startled priest and people alike, by its suddenness and by the power of His indignation against sins very similar to those which called forth Malachi's invectives. "The messenger of the covenant." Or the angel of the covenant, He who was with the Church in the wilderness. "Whom ye delight in." This is not sarcasm, but shows that the Jews had a kind of formal regard for the promises of God, although these had but little effect upon their lives. If Christ had humored their wishes He would have been received by the entire nation as their king.

V. 2.—Who may abide the day of his coming." They were looking for a helper, one who would do great things for them, but require nothing of them beyond an outward worship or allegiance. They are called to look at their unworthiness to stand in the presence of the Messiah. They are warned that His first work will be to purify. "He is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap." The gold has nothing to fear from the fire, but the dross has; the cloth dreads not the fuller, but the dirt is taken away. There can be no salvation without sanctification. Imputed holiness must be followed or accompanied by imparted holiness.

V. 3.—"He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." Continuing His process until His own likeness is reflected, by which test He will know that His work has been perfected. "He shall purify the sons of Levi." Judgment and cleansing begin at the altar. When ministers are revived, churches are quickened; when churches are quickened, sinners are saved.

V. 4.—"Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant." Our offerings, whether of worship or gifts or service, are acceptable only in the beloved. We need mediation continually. The cup of cold water in Christ's name will not be unnoticed, the greatest appearance of worship presented on its own merits will be rejected.

V. 5.—"I will come near to you to judgment." This verse anticipates the warnings of the second selection of our lesson. The anger of God is tempered with mercy, yet in His mercy He is just. He will by no means clear the guilty. "I will be a swift witness." God will not lack for evidence upon which to condemn those who fear not Him. The eye that saw the blood of Abel upon the ground has seen every act of injustice, violence, and uncleanness since that time, and for all these must men give account to God in that day. "I am the Lord, I change not." If God had been as fickle as Israel, they would have been cut off before reaching the promised land. Had He been as unfaithful to covenant obligations as they, no remnant would have been left to receive these words of mingled promise and threatening. "It is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed."

II. MESSIAH THE JUDGE.—4: 1-6.

V. 1.—While not limiting the reference in these verses to the final judgment, yet that day is undoubtedly included in the prophet's vision. Judgment is continually taking place, but from the time He came unto His own until the day when all things shall be declared, Jesus has been and is judging the children of men. "For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven." Christ has been purging His threshing-floor by His providence, and burning the wicked as stubble. No refuge of lies can hide from His wrath. "Shall leave them neither root nor branch." The destruction of the wicked shall be beyond remedy. When the only Saviour becomes judge, who shall plead for sinners?

V. 2.—"But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings." The cross which to the Jew is a stumbling block and to the Greek foolishness is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe. The day of judgment will see the vindication and glory of those whom the world has despised and hated.

V. 3.—"Ye shall tread down the wicked." This does not indicate a personal revenge on the part of God's people, but it is a foreglimpse of the revelation made by Christ of the share which the saints will have in His glory in that day.

V. 4.—"Remember ye the law of Moses." Obedience is the best preparation for welcoming the coming One. Blessed is that servant whom his lord shall find so doing. Christ did not make void the law for us, but confirmed it.

V. 5.—"Behold, I send you Elijah, the prophet." From Christ's interpretation of this verse, we know that it refers to the Baptist, who came in the spirit of Elijah to warn against sin, and to arouse slumbering consciences. If any man is taken unawares by that "great and dreadful day of the Lord," it will not be for want of warnings and entreaties.

V. 6.—"He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children." This may mean that there will be a seed worthy of the fathers and heroes of the faith, or that there shall be a unanimity of sentiment among old and young in seeking the LORD. "Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." The last utterance of the Old Testament is a solemn warning. Man must not make light of his sin and danger. Christ has come not because God did not hate sin, but because He did love sinners.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. God is long-suffering.
2. God never forgets either His promises or threats.
3. The wicked cannot stand before Him.
4. If Christ does not purify you He must consume you.
5. There is mercy for repenting sinners only.
6. The Sun of righteousness has healing for you.
7. "Kiss the Son, lest ye perish from the way."
8. "Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse."

The Watermill.

LISTEN to the Watermill
Through the livelong day,
How the clanking of the wheels
Wears the hours away!
Languidly the autumn wind
Stirs the greenwood leaves;
From the fields the reapers sing,
Binding up the sheaves.
And a proverb haunts my mind,
As a spell is cast—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that is past."

Take the lesson to thyself,
Loving heart and true;
Golden years are fleeting by.
Youth is passing too;
Learn to make the most of life.
Lose no happy day;
Time will never bring thee back
Chances swept away.
Leave no tender word unsaid;
Love while love shall last—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Work while yet the daylight shines,
Man of strength and will;
Never does the streamlet glide
Useless by the mill.
Wait not till to-morrow's sun
Beams upon the way;
All that thou canst call thine own
Lies in thine to-day.
Power, intellect, and health,
May not, cannot last—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

Oh, the wasted hours of life
That have drifted by!
Oh, the good we might have done,
Lost without a sigh.
Love that we might once have saved
By a single word;
Thoughts conceived, but never penned,
Perishing unheard.
Take the proverb to thine heart,
Take—oh! hold it fast—
"The mill will never grind
With the water that has passed."

—Selected.

A Little Golden Brick.

PHILLIPS BROOKS in a sermon on the text, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord," says these beautiful and encouraging words to those who can do but little in making straight the Lord's pathway. "Not one little brown and withered leaf falls to the ground on one of the November days but the shape of the plant is changed; so there is not one little act of yours, one whispered prayer that His kingdom may come but becomes a factor in the world's redemption. If I can only place one little golden brick in the pavement of the Lord's highway, I will place it there, that coming generations may walk thereon to the heavenly city."—Advocate and Guardian.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
For Wakefulness.

Dr. WM. P. CLOTHIER, Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I prescribed it for a Catholic priest, who was a hard student, for wakefulness, extreme nervousness, etc. He reports great benefit."

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly I am three times as much as U.S. BONDS, known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.
D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans,
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

6|o, 7|o, 8|o.

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

THE GREAT AMERICAN T E A COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.
Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.
The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.
J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.
Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.
H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.
Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement,
Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,111,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,127,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

MEMORIAL TABLETS.
MEMORIAL WINDOWS, CHURCH FURNITURE, INTERIOR DECORATIONS.
J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE!
So great is our faith that we can cure you, dear sufferer, that we will mail enough to convince you, FREE. Send 10 cent stamps to cover expense & postage. B.S. LAUDERBACH & CO., Newark, N.J.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

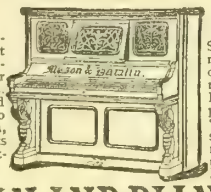
LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

"Dirt rots the fiber and invites the moth." To cleanse and purify woolens thoroughly, wash them with Ivory Soap. Professor Cornwall, of Princeton College, says the Ivory Soap is an excellent Laundry Soap, of great purity and more than average cleansing power.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.



PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route

C. B. & Q. R. R.

It is the only line with its own track from

CHICAGO TO DENVER,

Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.

It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,

For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address

T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
HENRY B. STONE, Asst. Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, Gen. Pass. Agt., Chicago.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

BLACK SILKS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO. ARE SELLING, NOTWITHSTANDING THE HEAVY ADVANCE IN PRICES MADE BY ALL MANUFACTURERS, THEIR ENTIRE IMPORTATIONS OF RICH AND RELIABLE BLACK SILKS AT EVEN LOWER PRICES THAN HAVE PREVAILED DURING LAST SEASON.

AS IT WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE TO CONTINUE TO DO THIS AFTER OUR PRESENT CONTRACTS EXPIRE, WE RESPECTFULLY ADVISE IMMEDIATE SELECTIONS.

Broadway & 11th St., New York.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. 7% Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)

Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000.

7% WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES 7%

In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.

First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St, Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kendall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Craufurd, Norwalk, Ct.

NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. OFFICES. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St.
BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

Peter Henderson's

SEEDS PLANTS

EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

HIGHLAND PARK, VOLUSIA COUNTY, FLORIDA.

Parties desiring to purchase Land in Florida should visit and examine this Beautifully located Town before purchasing elsewhere. Situated on a bluff of high rolling land, one of the highest points in Volusia county, and noted for the fertility of the soil. Some of the CHOICE ORANGE GROVES of the State are in this vicinity. The natural attractions of this place are unsurpassed, and the fine climate here helps to make this Town one of the most attractive places for those wishing to make a winter home

For Orange Culture it has no superior, and the lands are also adapted to the culture of Vegetables and the smaller fruits. Some of the Finest Garden Lands in Florida may be found here.

Highland Park is located directly on the main line of the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West Railroad, 104 miles south of Jacksonville, and three-fourths of a mile east of good steamboat landing. The town has been beautifully laid out in good sized building lots, adjoining and near which are tracts in any size to suit purchasers, both pine and hammock lands. Bargains are now being offered to ACTUAL SETTLERS such as will not be found in any other part of the State. Parties wishing to secure one of the best spots in Florida for either a winter or permanent home, should inspect the rare chance now offered. Lots and Lands will be sold on EASY TERMS.

The Highland Park Hotel is situated a few rods from the railroad depot, fronting on the beautiful and picturesque Highland Park. This hotel is now open for the reception of guests. It has all the modern improvements, including Gas, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Water Baths, pure Water and a perfect system of drainage. In fact this Hotel is one of the most complete and best furnished in the State, outside of the large cities. No pains will be spared to make the guests comfortable. The house is delightfully situated in a grove of oak and magnolia, and helps to form one of the most attractive places in Florida. The Hotel is kept by E. H. SANBORN & CO., of White Mountains, N. H. Persons desirous of spending the winter in Florida, or wishing to make a winter or permanent home, will do well to call and examine Highland Park before locating elsewhere. For further information or particulars, call on or address,

GEO. H. NORRIS, P. O. Spring Garden Centre, Volusia County, Florida.

Arnold, Constable & Co

PARIS NOUVEAUTES.

Now opening a magnificent assortment of High Novelties in Fancy Velvets, Velvet Grenadines, Beaded Gazes—Crepe de Chines, plain and figured.

Fancy Silk Fronts, with plain Silks to match. Pekin stripes, and a fine line of new Colorings in Satins, Failles Francais, Tricotines, Bengalines, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

Arnold, Constable & Co

SPRING STYLES IN DRESS FABRICS.

Special Novelties will be exhibited this week in Lace and Plush, Silk and Wool and all-Wool Combinations, Albatross Cloths with Cashmere Borders; also, for evening wear, White Nun's Veilings embroidered in White and Colored figures, together with a splendid stock of All-Wool, Plain and Fancy Suitings, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

THE

SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging [illegible] a year, and making the cost for assessments [illegible] man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for [illegible] of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Made only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 11. WHOLE No. 2903. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

SUNDAY DESECRATION.—A "Professor Cromwell" sends round cards saying that he gives Illustrated Lectures on Sunday evenings at the Grand Opera House which have unqualified commendation from "the Press and the Clergy." We cannot answer for the Press, but we are very sure that very few clergymen give their sanction to such a needless misuse of the day of rest and worship. The lectures may be good in themselves, but they interfere with the hours of public service, they divert the minds of the hearers from sacred things, and so contribute to break down the sanctity of the Lord's day. The best way for receivers of the "Professor's" cards is to leave him severely alone. There is a plenty of good lectures in this city during the week and no excuse for anybody to waste holy time for the sake of putting a little money into "Professor Cromwell's" pocket.

RELIGION IN A COLLEGE.—Under this title Dr. McCosh has published his side of the second debate with President Eliot of Harvard before the Nineteenth Century Club. We do not wonder that his opponent declined to have his paper printed in the same pamphlet, for the key-note of Dr. McCosh's argument—and its most telling point—is taken from Eliot's own lips on another occasion, in a paper read before the Unitarian Club on "Secularization of Education not a Rational End." The edge of this quotation, which with genuine Scotch wit and persistency the Princeton President thrusts into his antagonist's side again and again, reads: "This is the interest of the family and morality. Nobody knows how to teach morality effectively without religion." So far, in fact, did Mr. Eliot go in this direction as to affirm that "there is no such thing as a science of ethics," enabling his opponent mercilessly to say: "I am sorry to find the President of a great college declaring that there is no science of ethics, whereas I hold there has been such a science since the time of Socrates and Aristotle." The truth is (and it is nowhere better recognized than at Cambridge) that Harvard's accomplished President does well to confine his efforts to the executive and financial departments of his office, and not to venture too boldly into the learned or speculative.

But not only is Dr. McCosh's pamphlet an argumentum ad hominem, but an argumentum ad collegium. He shows how the gradual giving way of Harvard College in the matter of religious instruction and requirement has resulted in a complete demoralization of the student mind on the subject, and brought the institution to the brink of abandonment and agnosticism. "There will be no attempt to drive religion out of the college, but it looks as if some were preparing to let it die out. . . . It looks already as if religion was a vanishing quantity. In the eyes of students, it appears as it were waxing old and ready to perish." There is nothing left except morning prayers, not required every day, and already more than 800 students with the concurrence of the professors have petitioned that these be given up. With emphatic plainness Dr. McCosh adds: "I regard it as wrong in a college to call students away from their parents, away from home influence, and then allow them to spend their Sabbaths as they please—in idleness or dissipation."

The position which this able and intensely earnest paper takes is, that religion in a college must have a place of honor and authority, if at all. "I object to its being merely tolerated, or having an ambiguous position, as if the college was afraid of it or ashamed of it and wished to confine it as much as possible. If this is done, the question will be asked (as it is asked) why strive to keep up religious services; and the students will say, it is time we were done with it for it is a farce."

Dr. McCosh does not hesitate to state distinctly the true ground of religious requirement in a college, namely, the same ground as justifies the requirement of Greek or mathematics or any other means of culture and discipline, as also daily attendance at recitations and rigid examinations. He answers the objection of the petitioning Harvard students, that non-compulsory attendance on religious services would be a sign of sincerity, by applying the argument to—say, mathematics. How absurd to excuse a youth from attention to mathematics because he pleaded no taste for it, whereas "it is one of the grand offices of a college to kindle a taste for all that is good and elevating, be it mathematics or be it religion, and to foster it when it is feeble."

There is much more in this weighty and incisive pamphlet of twenty pages, which we cannot now notice. It is a voice of solemn and startling warning of an impending calamity, in the insidious decay of religion in our American colleges. The Spirit of the Lord has set up a standard, in these uncompromising words of one of our oldest, ablest and most experienced college presidents. Let us all rally about him and arouse the American Church to the issue, which is nothing less (to use his own words) than "the immortal interests of the young men of this generation."

An Illogical Argument Against Plenary Inspiration.

IN the Schaff-Hertzog Encyclopædia it is said (p. 1105) that "If a literal inspiration were necessary for the Church, God (so we should expect) would have provided for the errorless preservation of the text. Moreover, the great mass of Christians has to depend upon vernacular translations, for none of which infallible accuracy is claimed." This argument against the plenary or verbal inspiration of the Bible has been repeated times without number, and is often considered to be decisive of the whole question. Is it valid?

It is very true that the autograph copies of the sacred writings have all disappeared. Nor did God see fit to perform a continuous miracle in securing that every transcript should be immaculate. His general providence was exercised in so ordering events that we have tenfold better means and aids for ascertaining the text of Scripture than we have for ascertaining that of any ancient classic. Still with all these aids one can only approximate the truth. By far the greater part of the text is indeed so well established that no reasonable man cherishes any doubt as to its accuracy, but in other places the evidence is conflicting, and the learned speak modestly, if they do not hold judgment in suspense. This being the case, what ground is there for saying that the question of verbal inspiration loses its importance? The comparatively few cases of doubt and difficulty in no respect impair the value of an assurance that where we have the ipsissima verba of the sacred writings we have an unerring guide to the mind and will of God as revealed for human salvation. We need to know whether the guidance of the Holy Spirit took in the sacred penmen, all and singular, as to form and substance, as to thought and expression, for if so, the Scripture is the Word of God and we have something solid to rest upon. We can follow it without the least misgiving. Whereas if qualifications are to be made, if men are to sit in judgment upon the Word, and say, This part is merely human while that is divine, or here the writer was left to himself, and there the Holy Ghost directly inspired him, we are thrown at once into inextricable confusion and perplexity. For when opinions differ, as they certainly will differ, who is to decide? The only safe course is to take the whole book as at once human and divine, i. e., the work of men under God's direction, and therefore in all its parts an infallible directory. Hence where we feel sure of having the true text we know what an inestimable treasure it is, and where we feel uncertain we have a mighty stimulus to the greatest zeal and energy in ascertaining what is the text.

The same considerations may be applied to the argument from translations. It is very true that all the world (save of course the learned) now has to depend upon versions into the vernacular for their acquaintance with Scripture, and it is truly said that for none of these is infallible accuracy claimed. But it is insisted that the degree of their accuracy will be affected very much by the view their makers take of the nature and intent of Inspiration. Besides, the versions made now are all taken directly from the original. In the case of sacred codices there may be twenty steps from the autograph to the oldest MS. we now have, but in versions there is but one step. And the success of the version depends upon its maker's fidelity. It is all important that he reproduce the Hebrew and Greek text just as it stands according to the laws of the language in which he labors. And so far as he does this truly, his rendering is the Word of God, and carries with it all the divine authority of the original. If it errs, the error can be corrected by recourse to the original. But there can be no such appeal if errors are discovered or supposed in the inspired writings. Hence the necessity of holding fast the inerrancy of the Divine Word as the one perpetual standard to which all versions are to be conformed and by which they are to be tested. Hundreds of these versions have been made, and hundreds more are yet to be made. They are more or less adequate to their purpose. And although not one of them is or will be perfect, it is an unspeakable comfort to know that the common source from which they all come is perfect, whatever tests be applied.

It is therefore to the interest of all plain people who read the Scripture in their vernacular to know that the original norm of doctrine is thoroughly inspired, i. e., is given in all its parts and features under the hand and seal of the Most High as the record of His revelation. Such people read their Bibles with a good deal more confidence than they could otherwise possibly attain. It is, then, an unfounded assumption to assert that the literal inspiration of the Bible logically involves the errorless transmission of the text and the infallible accuracy of the versions made from it. The ordinary providence of the Most High may be cheerfully relied upon for the transmission and translation, as the experience of the Church shows, but for the perfection of the original text there is no substitute. Without that, one is ever at sea, "amid wandering mazes lost." With it, he has an anchor, one that entereth into that within the veil. There is no inconsistency, therefore, between fully admitting on one hand the defects of manuscripts and the shortcomings of translators, and insisting on the other upon the literal accuracy of the Divine Word as given by those who received it from the mouth of God.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Fata Morgana:

OR, MY VISIT TO THE "MORGAN COLLECTION."

I.

A FRIEND, happening to notice during a call some modest little attempt at the picturesque in our domestic arrangements, amused us by exclaiming, "Why, it's quite the Arabian Nights!" She did not mean to be satirical, and was only expressing a general conception of effect, which may pertain to the humblest and least expensive as to the most costly and magnificent objects. Tennyson's genius has given expression to this feeling in his "Recollections of the Arabian Nights." The royal crank, who is piling up the consuming treasures of Bavaria on the fires of his æsthetic craze, seems emulous of the Sultan of Bagdad's glamorous fame, as indicated by the following description of one of his eccentricities:

"The sudden appearance of the royal sledge at night in some unexpected quarter seems like a scene out of a fairy tale. As it approaches it looks like a golden swan with wings displayed. Within one may see the pale-faced king reclining on the richly embroidered blue velvet cushions. The interior is lit up by a soft but brilliant electric light, which illuminates everything around to a considerable distance. It flashes by the wondering spectator, who has hardly time to notice the agraffe of brilliants which adorns the artist's hat of the king, or the uniform of the young aide-de camp who sits by his side."

I have known a serving-woman to have an insatiable craving for cast-off bottles of various shapes and colors, and to be made perfectly happy at the permission to have as many as she could carry away, though they could be of no practical utility to her. What is this but the rudimentary and impecunious stage of that desire to surround one's self with glittering luxuries, which has evoked this marvellous "art collection formed by the late Mary J. Morgan"? Here was a woman—who, up to the time of her husband's death, had never evinced any peculiar art instinct, nor commanded the means of gratifying it on an extensive scale—but who, on coming suddenly into the uncontrolled disposal of seven or eight millions, conceived the idea of surrounding herself with all manner of expensive objects in gold, silver and bronze, in pottery and precious stones, statuary and cabinet objects, paintings, engravings and sumptuous books, and the most bewildering display of orchids and other rich and rare plants, and in five or six years had lavished half her fortune upon them.

As one passes from the outer darkness into the full burst of this revel of cost and color, this debauch of bric-a-brac, this gilded shrine of an art-devoteeism, one feels somewhat as the poet, when

> "With dazed vision unawares
> From the long alley's latticed shade
> Emerged, I came upon the great
> Pavilion of the Caliphat.
> Right to the carven cedarn doors,
> Flung inward over spangled floors,
> Broad based flights of marble stairs
> Ran up with golden balustrade,
> After the fashion of the time
> And humor of the golden prime
> Of good Haroun Al Raschid."

And yet, as I think how, having filled her house to bursting, she was about to purchase another wherein to bestow her goods, her soul was required of her after only five years' enjoyment of the raptures of getting and gazing at her treasures, I am forcibly reminded of the atmospheric phenomenon indicated by the title of this article. Surely Morgan la Fay, the queen of the fairies, could hardly evoke a more brilliant or fleeting spectacle than that which this plain woman summoned about her by the rubbing of a purse more potent than Aladdin's lamp, to fade from her eyes and to be dissolved by the auctioneer's hammer more suddenly than it arose.

> "And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
> The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
> The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
> Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
> And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
> Leave not a rack behind."

And true it is, as the great student and painter of man goes on to say, that we ourselves

> "are such stuff
> As dreams are made on; and our little life
> Is rounded with a sleep."

On the two occasions on which I spent several hours in this collection, the rooms were crowded almost to suffocation and dislocation. The financial greed, which seems to have pursued this poor woman in those strange last years, was reveling over her "remains" now. "Move right along to your left; have your money ready!" was the cry heard over the din of the throng. It was a similar cry that hurried her through her brief frenzied career of expenditure, for seldom have the artist and the artful found such a bonanza mine as her pocket.

This intensely commercial aspect of the scene contended with the element of curiosity for the precedence. The collection as a whole, while of unquestionable æsthetic value, is after all most marked as a vast and costly curiosity shop. The paintings are generally good, and some superior, but there is not one which can rank as a great world picture. They are limited to contemporary art, on which the judgment of time has still to decide, and belong mostly to the French school, and entirely to the painters who happen to be the fashion of the time. In this restriction of purchases to living artists, whose works were in the market, we have a broad suggestion of the commercial genesis of the collection.

Its special value, as a study of the average works of the most notable painters of the day, will be lost by its scattering. Here one can soon familiarize himself with the manner (for mannerism in art is everything towards success in these days) of the popular artists, till he can name them as quickly as these chattering groups about me. Without a catalogue they will recognize the sombre, neutral tinted Millets, the microscopic work of Meissonier, Corot's blurry-graphs, Daubigny's clear, fresh landscapes, Diaz's feasts of brilliant color; Schreyer's endless Arab horseman, as inevitable as G. P. R. James's "solitary" ditto; Gerome's intensely sensational and realistic pictures, analogous to the French literature of the period; Vibert's ecclesiastical scenes which might be called the "cardinal flowers" of art; Meyer Von Bremen's irresistible charm of child-faces and simple peasant life; Alma Tadema's miraculous marbles, and Escosura's draperies and decoration; Henner's nude offenses; Bougereau's insipid classicisms; Jules Breton's eloquent and touching tales in color; Knaus's homely whimsicalities; Monticelli's Turnerism gone to seed; Ary Scheffer's pale and pious canvases; the great cattle pictures of Troyon, and of his pupils Von Marcke and Verboeckhoven; and more than we can name, including just a dozen American and English painters.

I do not wonder at the popularity of the French school. As in their literature, so in their art, the French know how to tell a story. They make their pictures interesting and intelligible, which is what we average people in our hearts must have. To my mind, the two best paintings in this collection were recognized by the public taste in bringing decidedly the largest prices.* One was Jules Breton's "Communicants," a large canvas representing a procession of children, clad in white from head to foot, on their way to their first communion. One of the little girls has stepped out of her place in the line for a moment to receive the kiss and blessing of her aged grandparents. The expression of mingled awe and peace, of human affection and divine love on that sweet, innocent, childish face is ineffable, and one cannot help murmuring to himself, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven!"

The other was Vibert's, "The Missionary's Adventures." A group of typical ecclesiastics are listening (?) to a veteran missionary's journeys and hardships. The old man is poorly clad, emaciated, hectic with fever, and blind, and is showing the wounds which he has received in his self-denying and perilous labors. Two cardinals are lounging on a sofa before him, one asleep, and the other (a portrait of Prince Canino, a Bonaparte) regarding him with a cynical expression as a moral curiosity. At a table behind him a pursy and purple-robed prince of the Church (the portrait of no less a personage than the late Father Antonelli) is enjoying a cup of tea, and chuckling at his own thoughts. Another group consists of a green-caped priest laughing with zest at the jokes of a smart young fratre, and a third old priest in white is looking through his eye-glass with blank curiosity at the scars upon the missionary's wrist. The picture needs no interpreter, and he would be a narrow bigot who should restrict its application to the Romish Church. For there is an official and corporate and comfortable Christianity in all denominations, and there is a real and Christ-like and Christ-constrained Christianity. There is a religion that would "live of the Gospel," and one that would die for the Gospel. There is a "service" which serves and sacrifices; and it would not be hard to find just now an example of a ministry whose end is to be ministered unto, and which is quick to take advantage of confiding weakness in order to enrich itself at whatever scandal to the cause of Christ. There is a discipleship which bears about upon itself the marks of the Lord Jesus and His crucifixion, and there is one which is known by its regalia and popular recognition. There is a faith whose story is told in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and there is one whose features are depicted in the second chapter of James.

These two pictures I have pronounced the best, because they tell the most significant story in the most vivid and imaginative style. And I rejoice in the popular verdict, as indicating that "art for art's sake," rather than for the truth's sake and the soul's sake, is not yet triumphant in our land.

There is sometimes as much entertainment, if not more instruction, to be got at an exhibition from the persons looking as from the things looked at. I could not help overhearing many remarks which were freely made in the crowds about me. They were generally expressed in such terms as these: "How lovely!" "Cute, isn't it?" "So awfully pretty!" "Horrid! no beauty in that, I'm sure," and (with bated breath) "I wouldn't give ten cents for it," or (more elegantly and languidly) "That doesn't appeal to me." "Oh! oh!" vented the feeling of overcharged souls, or "Look at that there!" The young ladies were generally enthusiastic, their gentlemen escorts acquiescent or inclined to poke fun at these raptures. The heavy fathers were usually in an advanced stage of boredom. A dazed expression was apparent in many eyes, compounded of a sense of expensive display and an inability to comprehend what it was all about. One frank fellow declared "life was too short" to try and see into this thing; and another, of practical mind, "How she must have distributed her funds!"

It was especially worth lingering near the case containing the famous "peach-blow" porcelain. Everybody came with eager expectation to see a bit of pottery only 8 feet by 3, which was reported to have cost $15,000. The effect was precisely what I witnessed at Boston at an exhibition of Turner's "Slave Ship." People, for the most part, stood gazing blankly at it, and walked silently away,—evidently "dumbfounded," to use Mr. Cleaveland's expression. Some, however, tried to make themselves believe that they found something wonderful in it, and a few endeavored to show their superiority to the gaping crowd by assuming the air of a connoisseur and the talk of a learned critic.

F. N. Zabriskie.

Princeton, N. J., March 1st, 1886.

* $45,500 and $25,050 respectively. The whole collection sold for $885,200, said to be $300,000 less than Mrs. Morgan paid for it.

A BOSTON NEWSPAPER speaks in a contemptuous way of Mr. Joseph Cook and Dr. DeWitt Talmage as windy and nonsensical, professors of verbosity who pour out words in an endless wishy-washy flood, and at whom ridicule hurls its shafts in vain. If this be true it is very strange that these gentlemen have large audiences to hear them year in and year out, and that their utterances when reported and printed are widely copied even on the other side of the Atlantic. Are the American people in love with mere words? Does emptiness draw continuous crowds? And as to ridicule, there are respectable journals in New York which, whenever at a loss for a theme, poke fun at Dr. Talmage, his face, his voice, or even his legs, and do it with much skill. But they do not make him ridiculous, because they cannot. There is too much solid worth in the man, with all his extravagances, to be hurt by such things. The jest perishes, but its object lives, and is the stronger for such puerile attacks.

A Sonnet.

The Rose in the Preacher's Bouquet.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

UPON the pulpit desk the bright bouquet
A sacred lesson in sweet silence teaches.
Its rainbow tints and its rich perfume preaches
A sermon, and gives emphasis to-day
To the pure thoughts of grace and peace that may,
Like the flower's fragrance, spread until it reaches
The multitude whose consciousness impeaches
The unrepentant in their wicked way.
The Saviour from His mountain pulpit taught
The doctrines, shining with transparent thought,
Steeped in truth and sweetness, and love and beauty;
His text, sometimes the lilies fair that grow
With petals white as flakes of unstained snow.
That rose gives radiance to the path of duty!

Sun Images and the Sun of Righteousness.

BY TALBOT W. CHAMBERS, D.D.

II.

THUS universal was the adoration of the sun in both hemispheres, among all races, and in the most divergent civilizations. The only exception was found in Judea. True, as we have seen, it intruded even there, but always under protest and against law. The statute ran (Deut. 17:2–7) that if a man or woman went aside and worshipped other gods, or the sun or the moon or the host of heaven, they should be brought forth and stoned with stones till they died. And the principle underlying this statute was fully recognized by Job in his passionate assertion of his innocence (31:26–28).

> If I beheld the sun when it shined,
> Or the moon walking in brightness;
> And my heart hath been secretly enticed,
> And my mouth hath kissed my hand:
> This also were an iniquity to be punished by the judges;
> For I should have lied to God that is above.

Accordingly the prose narrative of the Old Testament records the creation of the heavenly luminaries, and represents them as always under the control of their maker. It is said of God that He

> Commandeth the sun, and it riseth not;
> And sealeth up the stars.
> He appointed the moon for seasons:
> The sun knoweth his going down.

A signal illustration of this was given in the conquest of Canaan, when "the sun stayed in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day. And there was no day like that before it or after it, that Jehovah hearkened unto the voice of a man; for Jehovah fought for Israel." Hence the shining orbs on high, instead of being themselves objects of reverence, are summoned to join in the homage of the Creator.

> Praise ye Him, sun and moon;
> Praise Him, all ye stars of light (Ps. 148:3)

Nay, this they do continually, whether men hear or forbear, for

> The heavens are telling the glory of God,
> And the firmament is declaring the work of His hands.
> In them hath He set a tent for the sun,
> Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber,
> And rejoiceth as a strong man to run his course.

So completely are the celestial luminaries under the control of their Creator that the common symbol of the prophets,* to set forth great and sudden revolutions in human affairs, is an assertion that "the sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood,"—expressions which are repeated by our Lord in the great prophecy recorded by the first two evangelists. The glittering host of heaven, so far from being objects of homage or controllers of destiny, are but images to represent the fearful vicissitudes of men and things on the earth.

It is not often that tradition lends much to enforce Scripture truth, but there is one old story on this point which is worth repeating. It is referred to by Philo and Josephus, and is given at length in the Midrash and the Talmud, and also in the Koran.* It turns upon the way in which Abraham came to escape the idolatries of the primeval world. The Koran puts it in these words:

When night overshadowed him he saw a star and said, "This is my Lord." But when it set, he said, "I like not those that set." And when he saw the moon rising, he said, "This is my Lord." But when the moon set, he answered, "Verily if my Lord direct me not in the right way I shall be as one of those who err." And when he saw the sun rising, he said, "This is my Lord. This is greater than the star or the moon." But when the sun went down, he said, "O my people, I am clear of these things. I turn my face to Him who hath made the heaven and the earth."

Surely of such a narrative, one may say, se non vero ben trovato. Dean Stanley, who quotes it in his Lectures on the Jewish Church, subjoins the words of Ephraem Syrus, another dweller in Ur of the Chaldees, who, gazing upon the heavens, far more brilliant there than in our thicker atmosphere, exclaimed, "If the brightness of these stars be so dazzling, how will the saints shine when Christ comes in glory!"

But the heaven-wide difference between the Pagan and the Scriptural view of the sun is vividly shown in the metaphorical applications which are common with the sacred writers.

Instead of the hideous delusion, "the sun is a god," the devout Psalmist transposes subject and predicate, and states the cheering and satisfying truth, "God is a sun." What the orb of day is to the earth, the source of light and heat and fertility and beauty, without which there would be no herb nor fruit nor flower nor song of birds nor voice of man, but only unbroken frost and endless night, all this is the living God to them that know His name.

The same imagery is employed to set forth God manifested in the flesh. The last words of David, the sweet singer of Israel, describing the ideal ruler over men, declare that He shall be (2 Sam. 23:4),

> As the light of morning when the sun riseth,
> A morning without clouds;
> When the tender grass springeth out of the earth,
> Through clear shining after rain.

So Isaiah, foretelling the wondrous change to be wrought in Galilee of the nations, uses the same figure (9:2).

> The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light:
> They that dwelt in the land of the shadow of death,
> Upon them hath the light shined.

But the illumination is not to be confined to a single people, for it is afterwards said that this personage is to be "a light to the Gentiles," and

> Nations shall come to thy light,
> And kings to the brightness of thy rising.

The orient beams first fall upon the land of promise, but they cannot be confined there. They spread and diffuse themselves till they fill the whole earth. The last of the prophets rounds out the full force of the symbol in the promise "the sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings"—a phrase which recalls the disk with expanded wings that occurs so often in the ancient Persian and Assyrian tablets, but immeasurably surpasses them by its association with ethical and humane ideas. What is to come is a sun, but a sun of righteousness, and its influence is not only cheering and animating, but restorative; for its outstretched wings drop healing wherever they go. Hence it is not surprising that the great revealer of God, when He appeared among men, appropriated the saying to Himself, calmly declaring "I am the light of the world;" no transient or limited luminary, but shining everywhere on land and sea, and giving to all the children of men the light of life.

As is natural, the property of the head passes over to the members. That which God is through His own inherent and uncreated excellence is in measure imparted to His people, and the same expressive figure is used for both. Thus Deborah concludes her triumphal song with invoking destruction upon Jehovah's enemies, adding, "But let them that love Him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might," words which the blessed Saviour converts into an absolute promise when concluding His exposition of the parable of the tares and the wheat, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father" (Matt. 13:43). In the exquisite Song of Songs the imagery is poetically used of the present condition of the Bride of the Lamb, as the consentient voice of the historical Church in all ages has interpreted the recondite meaning of this Oriental idyl.

> Who is she that looketh forth as the morning,
> Fair as the moon,
> Clear as the sun,
> Overpowering as an army with banners?

This is striking enough, but it is far surpassed by the bolder symbolism of the Apocalypse, where we are told (12:1) of the great sign seen in heaven, viz., "a woman arrayed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." To seek a separate meaning for each of these objects, as do many expositors, is tame and prosaic beside the conception of the Church's glory which one gets from this accumulation of all the luminaries that adorn the heavens to do her honor.

This brief recital shows how deep is the gulf which divided pagan worship from the pure and lofty ideal contained in the Scriptures. The whole race went hopelessly astray, and the severe words of the great apostle are exactly true. "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools. They exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever." It may be, as has been claimed, that there were those who reverenced the host of heaven simply as symbols or representatives of superior, invisible and spiritual powers. But this was not the case with the great body of the people. To them the deification of nature was real and complete. They identified the material object with the divinity whose name it bore, and fell into the grossest idolatry. This impiety led to immorality, for those who abandon God, He abandons. Yet justly as all men now reprobate the worship which once was universal, that worship has as much to say for itself as any of the modern rivals which men have set up in opposition to the one true and living God, whether it be the impersonal force which lies behind all phenomena, or the uniformity of natural law, or collective humanity conceived of as Le Grand-Etre Supreme. These are only abstractions of the mind, metaphysical conceptions, which cannot possibly stir the human soul and meet its craving for something to love and honor and obey. Such divinities are the merest mockery. To seek by them to satisfy the inborn longing of the heart for an object of worship is to offer "well watered chaff to the giant dray horse." Far better than such airy dreams was even the solar worship of antiquity. For as has been well said by a scientist of our own day, "For us practically, and for our earth the sun is all in all; and when its energies expire, all the energies on earth which it animates will expire also." This fact was as well known of old as it is now, and when the Pagan bowed down to the glorious king of day, it was to a concrete object whose beneficent influence he traced every day and every hour. It was exalted infinitely above the earth, and yet its light and heat penetrated everywhere. There was, therefore, in those who did it homage, a show of reason for which one looks in vain in the arid and juiceless tissue of mere formulæ. And we may here apply the oft-quoted exclamation of Wordsworth,

> Great God! I'd rather be
> A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn.

There are in the Greek poets, notwithstanding their idolatry, moral judgments and religious suggestions which could never originate in systems which hand over the universe to unconscious natural law, and so starve man's emotional nature.

But the blessedness of our day is that men are not shut up to either of these rival theories. We are not called to choose between the worship of nature, even in its loftiest forms, and the empty caricature of worship offered to that which neither does nor can perceive its worshippers. On the contrary, the great revelation of the Old Testament is the existence of a personal God, who knows and is known by his intelligent, moral creatures. He is immanent in nature, yet is transcendently above it as its Creator and its Lord. All its varied array in heaven and earth and under the earth is the expression of his wisdom and power and love, and is summoned again and again to join in His praise. And it is an affecting evidence of the extent of human depravity that generation after generation among the Jews could construct sun-images and bow down in adoration before the orbs in the sky, when their sacred books everywhere re-echoed the strains of the noble Psalm (148),

> Praise ye Jehovah.
> Praise ye Jehovah from the heavens;
> Praise him in the heights.
> Praise ye him, all his angels;
> Praise ye him all his host.
> Praise ye him, sun and moon;
> Praise ye him, all ye stars of light.
> Praise ye him, ye heavens of heavens,
> And ye waters that be above the heavens.
> Let them praise the name of Jehovah,
> For he commanded, and they were created.

—The Old Testament Student, January.

* Isa. 13:10; 24:23; Jer. 15:9; Ezek. 32:7; Joel 2:30; Amos 5:8; Micah 3:6. Cf. Hab. 3:11.

* In Augustine's Confessions (B. X. sec. 9) may be found an interesting passage, evidently an enlargement of this tradition.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Another Word for the Board of Education.

At this writing about six weeks of the fiscal year remain. Will those churches and individuals who propose to do something this year for educational work, either for students, or Hope College, or Western Seminary, or Classical Academies, please forward their offerings to the treasurer on or before the 30th day of April next, when the year's account closes? Very little has yet been appropriated for our institutions. They are in great need; and the professors and teachers should not suffer for lack of at least the usual sum from this Board. Do not lose your opportunity. The time is short. The need is urgent.

Giles H. Mandeville, Cor. Sec.

Our Liturgy.

A GREAT anticipation of a revival or awakening of our Church and its people to a better life, greater usefulness and more work for the cause of Christ is now enjoyed by many, and let us hope it may come and strengthen our cause and Church very much. Many things are said to show that the world is ready for such a movement, and it behooves us to be ready to help it on and take advantage of its results.

A church is made up of all kinds of people and should be sufficiently elastic to be able to provide a satisfactory and agreeable place of worship for all temperaments. In the wisdom of the rulers of our Church, certain things are made mandatory and certain things are suggested only.

The Reformed Church would seem to occupy a happy medium between the compulsory ritual of the Episcopal Church and to the any ritual you please of the Presbyterian Church. Both of these churches are strong and growing, but each is for a special class only. The one desiring that there should be mostly service, the other mostly preaching.

Our Church is the more closely allied to the Episcopal Church, as we have a Liturgy, for which we give God thanks. But nevertheless, the Liturgy is divided into two parts, the one optional, the other compulsory. Yet with all our attachment to our forms and ordinances, every pastor seems to make out to conduct his church and its services in a different way.

The Constitution of the Reformed Church embraces the Catechism, the Compendium, the Confession of Faith, the Canons of Dort, and the Liturgy. And in addition the Church has authorized the Westminster Catechism. These embrace and contain all the rules for our government and guidance, and it would seem to be practically possible to go into any of our churches and be at home. Yet we actually find many decided differences.

Our creed is set forth at length in several places, in the ordinance for the Lord's Supper and in the catechism, and in the latter each sentence is explained at length; yet many churches omit the phrase "He descended into hell," and there does not seem any authority for doing so. Dr. W. H. Clark's article on that subject, recently published in the Intelligencer, would seem to be unanswerable. So you never can tell, when you commence to recite the creed, which particular style is to be followed. It seems to me that the Apostles' Creed is a part of our Liturgy, and should be recited as it is written.

In the Liturgy, the forms for the administration of the Sacraments, for Ordination, and for Discipline are obligatory and, with few exceptions, and those of no great importance, (though every variation is in bad taste,) are used in their entirety. The addition of hymns and prayers being the chief variation.

The Order of Worship is the great trouble; we stand or sit, or pray or sing, or praise or read Scripture, or omit or add according to the whim of the pastor.

We find, however, that we have an order of service for worship and that the same is obligatory. Yet how many ministers, elders and deacons, who have promised to follow and obey the ordinances of our Church, deliberately depart from their duty in this matter.

In the Constitution we read under the title "Of Customs and Usages," Art. X., Sec. 4: "For the purpose of uniformity in the order of worship, the following is to be observed by all the churches":

1. Invocation. 2. Salutation. 3. Reading of the Ten Commandments, or some other portions of Scripture, or both. 4. Singing. 5. Prayer. 6. Singing. 7. Sermon. 8. Prayer. 9. Collection of Alms. 10. Singing. 11. Benediction. The order of the afternoon and evening services shall be the same as the morning, excepting the reading of the Ten Commandments. The last service on the Lord's day shall conclude with the Christian doxology. Sec. 5 No Psalms or hymns may be publicly sung in the Reformed churches but such as are approved and recommended by the General Synod. Can anything be more plain or more simple? Yet how few there be who walk in the straight path.

The remaining forms, as we are told in the revised Liturgy, are only suggestive of the best and most edifying way to render the services; but how much better are they than the ordinary ceremonies of marriage and burial of the dead. And we should hope that all may soon be made obligatory.

Our Church has everything necessary to become a great organization. Our history is a grand one, and to day we want to be able to take advantage of any general religious movement, such as now seems to be about to commence, and do our share of the great work to be done.

Our ancestors kept Sunday, Christmas, Easter and Whitsuntide, the circumcision and ascension of our Lord. They used one order of worship and never felt strange in any of our churches. They said the creed in its entirety and never omitted or added anything. They sang the doxology at the close of each day's worship, giving earnest praise to God. They had ministers who loved the Church and all its ordinances, who were anxious to uphold it and not introduce strange forms and ceremonies. Let us do likewise and be true to our promises and obey all our rules and ordinances. Suppose they do not suit us, we must obey. A murderer does not like to pay the penalty of his crime, but the laws of the land must be enforced; how much more should we strive to uphold our Church.

Chesty.

....Nyack, N. Y.—The consistory of this church adopted the following minute, relating to the resignation of the Rev. W. H. Clark, D.D., and the dissolution of the present pastoral relation: "In acceding to the request of our pastor, the Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Clark, to unite with him in seeking a dissolution of the pastoral relation, in order that he may enter upon a new field of labor, we, the Consistory of the Reformed Church of Nyack, hereby express our regret that we are called to sever a relation which has been exceedingly pleasant and fruitful of much good.

"We record our appreciation of the faithful, thorough, earnest, and effective manner in which the Gospel has been presented in his public ministrations. We will ever remember gratefully the untiring zeal, the kindly sympathizing spirit, and the self-sacrificing devotion with which he has discharged the duties of a pastor; offering comfort to the sick and sorrowing, wise counsel to the inquiring, needed reproof to the erring, and affectionate entreaty to the impenitent. By old and young, rich and poor, his name will ever be cherished as that of a true and valued friend.

"In the growth of our membership, the improved condition of our finances, the peace, and harmony, and development of the Christian activity of our congregation, we recognize with thankfulness the signal marks of the Divine blessing on his faithful labors.

"Thanking God for his life, his words, and his work among us, we will follow him to his new field of labor with most sincere good wishes and earnest prayers that his service for Christ and His Church may be divinely honored in even larger measure than ever before."

A special meeting of the Classis of Paramus is to be held at the Synod's Rooms, 34 Vesey street, N. Y., at 11 o'clock on Monday, March 22d, to act upon the joint request of Dr. Clark and the Church of Nyack for the dissolution of the pastoral relation between them.

....Schodack, N. Y —This church has decided to call Mr. Norman Plass, a student in the senior class of Yale Theological Seminary. He has signified his willingness to accept the call, and to take charge immediately after his graduation in May next.

....The Classis of New Brunswick met March 8th, and dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., and the First Church of New Brunswick, N. J.

....Fonda, N. Y.—On Sunday, March 7th, eighteen persons were received on confession. There was a large attendance at the communion and much interest was manifested.

...Port Jervis, N. Y.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, pastor of the church at Port Jervis, writes us that there were some errors in our last issue, with regard to the casualty that befell their church edifice. The loss, he says, is very great and comes upon the people at a time when they were thankfully rejoicing in their possession of a church premises, in every respect complete and all paid for. The congregation a.e, however, by no means disheartened, but meet the case with becoming fortitude. The plans for repairs do not contemplate so large an expenditure as was at first reported to be necessary. A kind Providence gave favorable direction to the falling steeple; so that, while the top of the small spire was broken off, and some portions of the roof crushed in, and the organ demolished, and the audience room made to present a fearfully desolate aspect, yet the beautiful parsonage escaped the whirling timbers; nobody was hurt, and no more damage done than will cheerfully be met by a people who trust in God, and have both means and heart to stand by the church. The following is from the Port Jervis Evening Gazette of March 9th:

"There was a large attendance at the meeting of the congregation of the Reformed church held Monday evening in the chapel to consider the subject of repairing the damage to the church edifice resulting from the heavy gales. Mr. John I. Westbrook was elected chairman of the meeting, and Francis Marvin, Secretary. It was resolved to proceed at once and repair the damages and replace a new steeple in the place of the fallen one. A strong and efficient committee was appointed to take charge of the work and proceed with it as speedily as possible. The committee are: Peter E. Farnum, Francis Marvin and Thomas Sharp. A committee was also appointed to provide the necessary means to prosecute the work, a generous subscription being made at the meeting, the idea being to have the entire work paid for when completed. The steeple will not be quite so high as the former one, but will be in graceful proportions to the building. The plans have not been fully decided upon. The interior of the building was also considerably damaged and will need extensive repairs. When the work is completed the church, both inside and out, will present as attractive an appearance as it did before the damage was inflicted.

"The meeting was a large and representative one, and there was great harmony in the councils, the best of spirit prevailing throughout. There is a strong probability that a new organ will take the place of the one destroyed, and if so it will no doubt be placed at the pulpit end of the church instead of in the organ loft as formerly."

....First Bethlehem, N. Y.—On Sunday, March 7th, the Rev. Joseph P. Davis, pastor, received an addition of ten members, seven by confession of faith in Christ, and three by letter. During the past year, that is, since the last annual report was handed in, this church has received twenty members. Although there has not been any period of special interest which might be called a period of revival, a healthy religious interest has been sustained throughout the entire year. Since Mr. Davis assumed the pastorate of the church in June, 1884, there have been added to it in all about forty members; and pastor and people are praying that God will continue to bless them by continuing the work of the Spirit, in reviving God's people and awakening sinners.

....Northumberland, N. Y.—Twelve new members have been added to our church membership since the last report a few weeks ago. This makes a total of thirty three within three months; all but three being on profession of faith.

J. W. B.

....Closter, N. J.—This church has enjoyed a delightful work of grace since the beginning of the year, and special meetings have been held up to the 1st of March. Last Sabbath we received twelve persons into full communion, ten on confession of faith, and there are more to follow at the next communion. The work has been a deep, thorough and quiet one, and the quickening of Christians, the awakening of the unconverted, and the ingathering of the young from the Sabbath-school have been its marked features.

On Sabbath evening the church celebrated the occasion by a service of song and short addresses, and on Monday the Auxiliary to the Board of Missions turned over to the Foreign Board $32.30 as a thankoffering for the work of grace enjoyed.

P. B.

....Ridgewood, N. J.—The church in this place has been enjoying for some weeks past the rich blessing of its Great Head, by having with it in two-fold power the Holy Spirit. God's own people have been quickened and souls converted. On Sunday, March 7th, as a portion of the harvest gathered in, ten confessed Christ and were publicly welcomed into the church. Nine of these are of the older scholars of the Sunday-school. Two were received at the same time by certificate.

It may be added that the consistory has under advisement an addition to the church building to provide for an increasing demand for pews. Three months since twelve new pews were added. "God hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

V. N.

...Canastota, N. Y.—Mr. J. Calvin Mead, a member of the Senior Class of Auburn Theological Seminary, has been invited to become the pastor of this church. He has expressed his purpose to accept, and to enter upon the duties of pastoral work at the close of the seminary year.

....Brighton Heights, Staten Island.—A deep work of grace is still in progress. The services on the Sabbath and during the week are largely attended and a deep spiritual interest is manifested among many of the church members.

Last Lord's day, in addition to those who united with the church by letter, there were eleven who made public confession of their faith, eight of whom are heads of families, and three young persons. This makes twenty-two who have confessed Christ since the beginning of the year, and there are unmistakable evidences that there are many "more to follow."

The treasurer's annual statement which has recently been issued shows the best financial record that has yet been presented, while the offering for missionary and charitable purposes is more than double that of any preceding year.

Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Clark, has just left us for this week to conduct a series of evangelistic services in Lakewood, N. J., and our prayers go with him that he may carry with him and bring back again to us "the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ." B

....Havana, Ill.—A member of this church writes: "The Lord is blessing us. We have received into our communion since the 1st of January twelve persons, nine on confession, and the prospect is very encouraging that others will be added at our next communion. Much interest is being manifested by our citizens generally in our services, and the church is well filled every night at our meetings. I believe the Classis made no mistake in sending Brother Zigeler here, for a more earnest worker it is hard to find, and the people all like him."

....Port Richmond, N. Y.—A large audience assembled on Sabbath afternoon, March 14th, to witness the dedication of the chapel just completed for the use of the congregation of the Church. The exercises, in accordance with the liturgy of the Church, were conducted by the pastor, Dr. I. Brownlee, and the associate pastor, Rev. A. H. Demarest, assisted also by the ministers of the Baptist and Methodist denominations. The building is attractive and admirably fitted in its arrangements for the weekly prayer-meeting and the use of the Sabbath-school, having beside the main audience room, apartments for the Bible classes and library. It will doubtless prove a great help in the work of the church and tend to make the future, as the past has been, full of honor and usefulness.

....Bequests.—The late John Antonides, of Flatbush, L. I., bequeaths $25,000 in trust to the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, to be known as the John Antonides Scholarship Fund, the income of which is to be used in aiding "poor, pious, worthy young men, who are preparing for the Gospel ministry in the Reformed Church." The following receive $5,000 each: The Board of Domestic Missions, the Board of Foreign Missions, the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, the Church Building Fund, and Rutgers College. The Board of Publication receives $1,000. If there is any excess from the estate after the bequests are paid it is to go to the Scholarship Fund. The estate is valued at about $300,000, of which $55,000 are bequeathed to charitable purposes.

....Centreville, Mich.—Twenty-four persons were received into the membership of this church Sunday, March 7th. Among them were several members of the Sunday-school. Three of them were the great grandchildren of the first minister of the Reformed Church in Centreville.

....Western Items.—The Rev. Wm. Moerdyk, of South Holland, Ill., has accepted a call from the First Church of Pella, Iowa....A parsonage is being built at Maurice, near Orange City, Iowa....Work has commenced on a residence for the President of Hope College, Holland, Mich.

...New Brunswick, N. J.—The large parlors of the parsonage of the First Church were filled a few evenings since with the friends of Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., who assembled to make him a farewell visit, and to show their appreciation of him, and of the work he has done among them. During the evening Mr. John Voorhees made a neat little address expressive of their tender regard for him, and of their regrets that he was leaving them. At the close of his remarks he presented Dr. Easton and his wife with a bouquet made of five dollar greenbacks, and an envelope, the two containing the sum of $400, and also a present of a $50 check from one of the congregation.

The Doctor responded in a very feeling address, thanking the donors and also the church choir, who had previously presented him with an elegant set of resolutions handsomely framed, and closed his remarks by extending a cordial invitation to all to come to 15 Clinton avenue, Newark, N. J., his new field of labor, and they would always find a warm welcome.

Resolutions of Classis.—It is with unfeigned sorrow and deep regret that we, the committee appointed by the Classis of New Brunswick at its special meeting held in the lecture-room of the First Reformed Church, March 8th, 1886, feel called to perform the sad duty assigned us in preparing resolutions relative to the departure of Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., from a field which he has occupied for five years with such marked evidences of the Divine approval

The duty is sad to us, first, because of the apparent absence of sufficient cause for leaving a field where his labors have been so abundantly owned and blessed by the Great Head of the Church; and secondly, because his departure from such a position of influence as the First Church holds in its close relations to the College and the Theological Seminary, will be a loss which we shall all feel.

But desirous of recognizing the mysterious providence by which our beloved brother is called to leave us, we present the following resolutions: First, that as a man, Dr. Easton has always acted the manly part, never failing, in his broad sympathies, to exhibit his interest in his fellowmen in a thousand practical ways. Second, that as a citizen he has, without compromising the dignity of his sacred office, been ever the unflinching advocate of views which have tended to inspire the masses with the principle of true loyalty to the government. Third, that as a Christian he has exemplified in his intercourse with the people a living illustration of a follower of Him who "went about doing good." Fourth, that as a preacher he was earnest, faithful and untiring in his efforts to be the instrument in the hands of God of saving the souls of his fellowmen, not only in the congregation to which he ministered, but in localities where the dwellers were compelled to exclaim, "No man careth for our souls." Like the great Apostle, he was willing to become all things to all men, if by any means he might save some.

As he goes from us to another part of God's vineyard, he will be followed by the prayers of thousands in New Brunswick, in which we shall heartily join, that our blessed Lord will go with him and continue to make him a polished shaft in the accomplishment of the glorious work that awaits him in his new field of labor.

Jacob Cooper,
James Cruickshanks.
Hiram Garretson.

....Ellenville, N. Y.—On Sunday morning last forty-two stood up and made confession of their faith in Christ. Twenty-one of these received the ordinance of baptism. Among the latter is one old gentleman in the seventy-ninth year of his age. His figure is tall and still commanding, notwithstanding his great age. It so happened that the place he occupied in standing was almost the middle one among the rest, while next him, and the next to receive baptism, was one of the youngest, a young lad from the Sunday-school. The whole scene was a most affecting one and not likely soon to be forgotten. The ages of those received, range all the way from eleven up to this aged pilgrim. The grandson of this oldest candidate was baptized and received at the same time. A mother and her two daughters were admitted; also a father and his daughter. This accession makes now forty nine received upon confession since the Week of Prayer. Several were providentially prevented from coming. Others are still receiving instruction, the interest in the things of eternal life continues and the regular April communion is likely still to witness many accessions. After the admission of candidates all sat and partook of the Lord's Supper. We have learned through all to rejoice most in this, that these are the fruits of God's simple Word and His mighty Spirit. No other agencies have been sought or used. Laus Deo! H.

....Hudson, N. Y.—The installation of Rev. William H. Gleason, D.D., as pastor of the First Church of this city, on the evening of the 10th inst., was an occasion of great interest, calling out a very large audience. A wealth of rare and beautiful flowers, arranged by the ladies of the church with great taste, graced the pulpit and platform, and fine music lent an additional attraction. Not the least pleasant feature of the latter was the unusually excellent congregational singing. This church has an enviable notoriety in this particular, and Dr. Gleason is to be congratulated that he has a people who evidently can sing, will sing, and do sing, and the heartiness with which they participate responsively in the liturgical service is quite as noteworthy.

The sermon by Rev. Dr. Ormiston, of the Collegiate Church, was of marked ability, taking for his theme "The fulness of the Gospel of Christ," and holding by his tenderness and power the close attention of his hearers for nearly an hour.

The office of installation was read by Rev. Wm. J. Leggett, of Claverack, President of the Classis of Hudson, and an impressive charge to the pastor was delivered by Rev. Dwight M. Seward, of South Norwalk, Conn., father-in law of Dr. Gleason, and to the people by Rev. James C. Garretson, of Copake. Rev. Messrs. Gebhard, of Philmont, and Le Fevere, of Linlithgo, participated in the exercises.

The cordial recognition of the new pastor at the close of the service, when hundreds of his people pressed forward to take him by the hand, was a marked outward manifestation of the sincere harmony and cordiality which marks this new relation. The new pastorate, commencing with the first year of the second half century of the existence of this influential church, opens under the happiest auspices. Dr. Gleason is rapidly drawing to himself the confidence and affection of his entire charge, and both pastor and people are in the confident expectation that a rich and abundant blessing will follow this union. Com.

....A Voice from India.—A leaflet with this title, containing the appeal of Rev. J. W. Conklin, published in this paper January 6th, 1886, has been issued by the Board of Foreign Missions. Copies can be had by those who wish it, for distribution, by applying to the Corresponding Secretary.

....The fourth lecture of the Vedder course was delivered by Dr. Bishop in Kirkpatrick Chapel, Rutgers College, New Brunswick, on Wednesday evening, March 10th; subject, "The Bible Above Nature."

....Blawenburg, N. J.—Twenty-two persons have just been added to this church on confession of faith.

....Brooklyn, L. I.—The property of the First Church, the Rev. D. N. Vandeveer, D.D., pastor, has been sold for $250,000. With the proceeds of this sale the congregation expect to secure an eligible site, and put up a handsome edifice.

....Howe's Cave, N. Y.—On last Sabbath seventeen persons were received into this church on confession. Five were heads of families; ten were baptized.

....Calls.—It is reported that the Rev. W. E. Griffis, D.D., of Schenectady, N. Y., has accepted the call to the Shawmut Avenue Congregational Church of Boston, Mass....The Rev. Andrew Parsons, of Sharon, N. Y., has been called to the pastorate of Knox and East Berne Churches, New York.

....Grand Haven, Mich.—The Rev. Henry E. Dosker, pastor of the First Church, writes: "We are passing through a most refreshing revival here. My whole church seems aglow. Meetings are crowded. The Spirit of God brings low the most hopeless sinners. The impenitent are crying for mercy. In the last month, twenty-five people, young and old, have joined the church. The Second Church is sharing in the refreshing. Our hearts are kindled with joy in the Lord. Pray for us!"

News of the Week.

Wednesday, March 10.—There was a division in the House of Commons over the vote to disestablish the Church of Wales. ....The continued war preparations by Greece excites the gravest apprehensions in European Cabinets....Anam is said to be again in revolt, bands of robbers are scouring the land, and the French have been attacked near Huè....The report of the doctors who examined Riel pronounces him sane....Mr. Gladstone is better, recovering entirely from his recent illness....Prince Bismarck is very ill with rheumatism.... Mr. Edmunds addressed the Senate on the power of that body over all papers on file in the departments....The Senate Railway Committee made a preliminary report to the Senate at Albany on the Broadway investigation....The Ninth Regiment of New Jersey has been ordered to disband ...The strike on the Gould system of railroads in the Southwest continues ...A boy in Osage, Mo., is suspected of killing his father, mother and sister....Ex-Senator Chaffee is dead....Seton Hall College was burned; loss $45,000.

Thursday, 11.—Very great distress is said to prevail in islands lying off the western coast of Ireland; the people have been living for months on sea-grass and moss, and many are said to be starving to death. ....The seamen left the docks in a procession and marched to the rooms of the Board of Trade, London, and asked for a revival of the foreign and domestic trade....Greek and Turkish powers are unable to come to an agreement, and warlike preparations are being carried on....Jules Verne, the novelist, was wounded by his nephew, who tried to kill him, but only slightly wounded him. It is thought that the nephew is a monomaniac....The suffering at Labrador is terrible from want of food....Mr. Pugh replied to Mr. Edmunds in the Senate.... Resolutions of sympathy were adopted in both Houses of Congress for the late Senator John F. Miller....Andrew S. Draper has been elected Superintendent of Public Instruction of New York....A tug-boat blew up in Boston harbor and five men were instantly killed....The street-car companies of New York and Brooklyn are to combine for mutual protection.

Friday, 12.—In the Canadian Parliament yesterday afternoon there was a bill introduced condemning the Government for the hanging of Riel, but no action was taken on it....A railroad accident occurred near Monte Carlo, France, in which two railroad trains collided, and five passengers were instantly killed and a large number were injured....The Turco-Bulgarian treaty is said to be acceptable to the Powers and will be adopted in its entirety... In the Senate the Administration was severely arraigned for withholding public papers....The Indian problem was discussed in the House of Representatives....The strike on the Gould system of railroads in the Southwest continues; engineers and firemen have left their locomotives; many manufactories have closed because of a lack of raw material; four large flouring mills have stopped....Strikes are reported from Cohoes, Troy, Philadelphia, and other places....Arthur G. Ogilby, treasurer of the Dime Savings Bank of New Brunswick, is found to be a defaulter to the extent of about $75,000, and he is said to be insane at his home....The filibusters of the Fourth Ward have returned home....A National Musical League has recently been formed....There is considerable hesitation in the Senate of the State over some of Governor Hill's appointments.

Saturday, 13.—The Catalinas Custom House at Buenos Ayres with all its contents was destroyed by fire; the loss is estimated at $5,000,000....The station master at Monte Carlo who was to blame for the accident committed suicide....Very severe weather has been reported by all vessels arriving at Glasgow this week....There was a heavy fall of snow at Berlin and throughout all Germany....The Spirits Monopoly bill was defeated in the committee of the Reichstag....A bill to provide for a Board of Gas Commissioners has been introduced into the Assembly at Albany.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

The Divine Presence.

BY CECILIA A. GARDINER.

My presence shall go with thee and I will give thee rest."

I WILL be with thee when the shadows lengthen,
When hope and joy have folded their bright wings,
When to the tempest tossed, the sad and weary,
No beacon light cheer and refreshment brings.

There is no gloom my presence will not lighten,
No road so rough but I will smooth for thee;
Thy shoulders cannot bear a weight so heavy
But thou may'st quickly roll it off on Me.

My presence will illume the darkest midnight,
In all thy fitful tossings give thee rest;
With sweetest, gentlest, tenderest ministrations,
Will pluck the sting that rankles in thy breast.

I will be with thee when the grave is closing
O'er the still form which thy fond heart held dear;
E'en when in blackness all the heavens are frowning,
Glimpses thou'lt gain of skies serene and clear.

I will give ease from ills that now oppress thee;
A calm, a sweet, a trustful hope and rest;
A joy with which no stranger intermeddleth
Shall find its lasting home within thy breast.

Oh! weary soul, forlorn and heavy laden,
Come, lay thy head upon my loving breast;
Come seal with me a compact firm and binding,
Assurance of my presence and my rest.

Phebe and the Prayer-Meeting.

BY MARY E. BRUSH.

WHATEVER Phebe Dorrance did was done with a will. There was no half-way work about her. If it was only sewing on a button or making a pie, she did it with a deft eagerness that showed she had an interest in it. One sometimes caught a bit of inspiration in watching her.

Now it so happened that in the large seminary where Phebe was finishing her last year's course, the spirit of revival was at work, and the young girl's heart, always pure and tender, was awakened and warmed by its glow. She came out boldly for Christ, and with her customary ardor set herself to work for Him. She found the way easy and pleasant at first, especially among her teachers and schoolmates, most of whom shared in her enthusiasm. There were interesting meetings in the pleasant old chapel; there were quiet, helpful chats in cosy corners; there were many plans laid for the advancement of the cause they had espoused, and so it was not at all surprising that presently Phebe announced her intention of becoming a foreign missionary.

"I am young and strong," she said. "My parents are not millionaires, it is true, but they are abundantly able to prepare me for such a work. I am not needed at home, for they have sister Mattie. She is ten years older and very much wiser than I am. She manages the household affairs most beautifully, and father and mother are made very comfortable under her care."

Accordingly, Phebe set herself soberly to work. Like a bright-winged butterfly fluttering near some old gray column of ancient ruins this pretty, rosy cheeked, yellow-haired lassie hovered around Professor Digby, who, spectacled and grim, was said to be a perfect master of all Oriental languages necessary to be learned by a missionary. Phebe was courageously floundering among these, when a letter from home caused her to pause in dismay.

Her father's words ran thus:

"I have a pleasant surprise for you. John Harmon, our Martha's lover, whom we all thought lost at sea some six or eight years ago, has come home. He was shipwrecked, met with many adventures, and finally landed in Australia, where he has since remained, accumulating quite a property. He says he wrote several letters to us, but as ill luck would have it, they must have miscarried or been lost. However, he has remained faithful to our dear Martha, and has come to win her as his wife. He is as honest and manly as ever, and we are all very proud and happy, especially dear, patient, hard-working Martha, who seems ten years younger now that this joy has come to her. She is busily preparing for her marriage, which will take place the Wednesday after your school closes. Both your mother and I look forward with much joyful anticipation to your return, for now that Martha is to leave us, you, dear Phebe, will be the one on whom we can depend for comfort and companionship during our declining years."

The letter dropped from Phebe's white fingers, and the dingy, black-covered book full of queer, twisted letters and mysterious hieroglyphics, slid from her lap and fell with an ominous thud upon the floor.

Was she glad of this news or was she sorry? She thought of sister Mattie, always quiet and cheerful, but from whose face grief had stolen the early bloom and whose soft brown eyes were full of patient longing, and she could not help rejoicing that Providence had seen fit to reward one so entirely worthy. Then came the thought of her own scheme. In her enthusiasm, she had renounced the world and all its pleasures; she was ready to welcome a future of hard work and privation. It was rather humiliating, after she had resigned herself to social martyrdom, to find that there was no need of the sacrifice. Phebe felt like one who has prepared for a journey of importance and stands at the open door awaiting the signal for departure, but is bidden instead to turn and go within, to fold up and lay aside the travelling garments and take up the dull routine of household work.

But be it said to her credit that above all fleeting desires of pride and fancy, she had an earnest longing to do something for Christ. "Perhaps I may yet," she said to herself with a wistful smile as she took up the professor's book and laid it on the stand. And there came to her the comforting remembrance of a legend good Mr. Pendergast, her minister, had once related—a legend of two angels whom God sent upon the earth. One was to rule an empire; the other merely to sweep a crossing. The latter went with as much cheerful alacrity as did the former. It was not doing the task that was thought of but doing the will of the heavenly Father—there all the honor and pleasure lay!

Phebe reached home in time to participate in the wedding festivities and to bid her sister God-speed as the latter set out for her distant home. The remainder of the week was spent in putting the house to rights and becoming acquainted with her new duties. But in the midst of all the excitement, she did not forget her religious privileges, and when, in the soft twilight of a mild May evening, the old church bell rang out its usual invitation, Phebe hastily threw on her hat and shawl, and, after seeing that father and mother were all comfortable, she left the house and ran down the familiar garden path, bordered now by pink and white spikes of fragrant hyacinths and purple and golden cupped crocuses, over to her next-door neighbor, Cara Lindsay.

Miss Lindsay, tall, stately, black-eyed and raven-tressed, did not much resemble dainty little Phebe, nevertheless the two had been firm friends since early childhood.

"Ready for meeting, Cara?" Phebe inquired after the first greeting.

"I? I was not intending to go," languidly, adding with a significant shrug of her fine shoulders, "In fact, Phebe dear, I very seldom go now."

"Why, pray?" was Phebe's frank inquiry. "I hope you haven't quarrelled with any of the members?" laughing.

"Oh, no! There isn't life enough in any of them to get up a good, lively quarrel!" Cara replied with a grimace, and she added earnestly, "the fact is, Phebe, there isn't a bit of life about the meetings!"

"But, Cara, I always thought you liked to have things carried on in a quiet, dignified manner. I remember you were used to find fault with what you were pleased to term the 'ranting roarers' down at the M—— Chapel."

"Oh, well! But one musn't carry things to extremes, you know. Why, Phebe, you can't imagine how our meetings have degenerated! There aren't more than a dozen and a half of the faithful who attend—a few devout, elderly sisters. As for the brethren—mercy! we don't have any representatives of the opposite sex, unless it's dear old Brother Benson—and he's nearly in his second childhood! He comes generally, snuggles down into a warm corner, and when called on for prayer smiles blandly all over his darling old rosy face, and gets up and says the same words that he has said ever since you and I were little tots learning catechism questions. During the remainder of the meeting, he leans back, with a red and blue bandanna handkerchief thrown over the bald spot on his head to keep off draughts, and dozes in the blissful consciousness of having done his duty."

"How do you get along for music? Who plays the organ?"

"We have 'no little Johnny Morgan,'" with an irreverent giggle. "Miss Grace Burbank used to play, but she got mad, I believe, because somebody told her that Mr. Perry made the remark that the slippers she presented him with on Christmas were too small—it was some such nonsense, anyway."

"But there's Cora Maxwell—she used to play occasionally."

"Oh, she goes down to the Methodist chapel. Her 'young man' has joined that denomination—hence Cora's attraction."

"But why don't you play the organ yourself, Cara?" was Phebe's pointed question.

Cara raised her white hands in a theatrical way.

"Play that organ! Send me to the insane asylum at once, if you please! It was never a good organ to begin with, and now that it has been carried from consistory room to concert hall, has been used at fairs, festivals and funerals; the much-abused instrument is about done for. It wheezes as though it were in the last stages of asthma! The pedal rattles like a concealed skeleton! One of its stops has a peculiar fashion, when you pull it out, of resembling Tennyson's 'Brook'—'goes on forever!' It is impossible to stop it, for three or four measures at least. Oh, Phebe, it's dreadful!"

"But what do you do for singing?"

"Oh, dear, Miss Janie Bell, who is of the same material from which martyrs are made, jumps up and strikes the key on the organ; then she and Mr. Perry start the tune, 'Mandy McAlpin quavers along, and they hunt and chase and scramble for that poor tune, until somewhere about the third verse good Mr. Benson wakes up and joins in from memory."

Phebe could not help laughing at Cara's graphic description, though her sunny face soon put on a more sober expression, and reaching out her soft hand she patted Cara with a coaxing caress, saying in her irresistible way, "I don't see that you have anything to do this evening, unless it's reading that crusty, cranky Carlyle. So suppose you put on your things and go with me to the prayer-meeting. Now, please do! Remember it's a long while since I've asked a favor of you?"

Cara tossed aside her book with a groan of mock despair, saying:

"Oh, Phebe! you'd 'wheedle the heart out of a wheelbarrow,' as Zeke, our hired man, used to say! Well, then, to please you, I'll go this once."

(Conclusion next week.)

Infidelity in Japan.

[This paper was read before the Society of Inquiry of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J., by a Japanese student of the Junior Class, A. Miyake by name, who did not use English before he came to this country six months ago.]

I.

ON the western coast of the Pacific, about twenty-one days' sailing from San Francisco, there is a land rich in all its natural endowments, which gave rise to the development of a peculiar form of religious worship from the very beginning of her history. Man is a religious animal, and the system of worship among a people is greatly influenced by its external circumstances. It would be thought that people, having all the beautiful earth and heavens spread out before them and entirely free to account for their origin as they please, would invent none but really beautiful myths and divine stories by way of explaining them. The beautiful sky, the salubrious climate, the lofty mountains, the pleasant streams, the delightful forests, the rich flora, and the productive soil naturally led to the deification of nature. This is Shintoism, and was the only primitive faith till the time when Buddhism was imported from Corea by a missionary of that faith in about 550 A.D., and which has been steadily propagated throughout Japan. These two religions exercised great influence upon the moral condition of the people during thirteen centuries, till the time when feudalism was destroyed, which was the turning point to the dawn of modern progress.

When a religion waxes old in a country—when the circumstances which at first favored its formation or introduction have changed; when in an age of reason it is tried and found unreasonable—when in an age of learning it is discovered to be the product of the grossest ignorance, then the infidel spirit takes courage and proceeds to destroy all existing temples and altars, and erect no others in their room. Neander says: "The popular religions of antiquity answered for a certain stage of culture." When the nations in the course of their progress have passed beyond this, the necessary consequence is a dissevering of the spirit from the religious traditions. Japan is a new country. Japan is not the Japan of twenty years ago. Shintoism and Buddhism may have exercised great influence among the old people, but have no power among the modern people who receive the supreme blessing of education. Intellectual culture came into collision with the mythical religions handed down from the infancy of the people. Religions are despised as being fit only for the ignorant people. Buddhism is gone. Shintoism has lost its power.

The temples are left in their former grandeur, but they have few worshippers, and those few worshippers consist only of old men and women belonging to the uneducated class. Old religions are all gone. What building may be raised on the ruin of ancient superstition?

This is an important question and we must know its answer. We know what must take their place and we rejoice. But we also know what is taking their place and we are saddened. To the minds of the young men, Buddhism is foolishness, Shintoism is only ridiculous. Materialism in its grossest form, atheism in its absolute sense—this unhappily is the religion, if it can be called a religion, that is taking the place of the old ones. All those views of science, being one in their object of attacking Christianity, are eagerly sought after. All those theories of the universe which see no trace of the creative plan in this beautiful cosmos, and which explain the formation and the development of the world and all its inhabitants by spontaneous generation, are as firmly believed as they were by their originators. The young men's proud contempt of Christianity, as being fit only for the ignorant people, is not very different from the attitude of some of the scientists of the West, from whose works they have received their notions. They have absolutely no religion, and we know to have none is a state more lamentable than to believe in the basest form of superstition.

Such being the brief and condensed sketch of the present condition of Japan in regard to the religious matter, I may distinguish the infidels in Japan by two classes. First, superstitious, which includes Buddhists and Shintoists, consisting of uneducated people. Second, speculative, which includes atheists and materialists, consisting of well educated people.

Buddhism and Shintoism, together, have about 75,000 temples and 240,000 priests, and are still pow erful religions. The old men being habituated to their religious customs, still keep them tenaciously. They are bowing down to wood and stone. They trust to the unreliable doctrines; and are perishing in their sins. The religious or superstitious principle cannot willingly allow the opposing doctrine to reign without contest. The priests summon councils to discuss the policy of attacking and destroying Christianity; and they are becoming mad, more and more, as Christianity spreads wider and wider. For instance, I mention the condition of Christian lec tures which are delivered once a month in the city of Kioto. You have often heard that Kioto is the holy city; the cathedrals or headquarters of all the Buddhist's sects are found there, and consequently more priests and monks than elsewhere. About two thirds of the audience in every lecture are the priests. The priests shave their heads and wear loose robes, so that we can easily distinguish them from common people. During the lecture, being careless of their position as the teachers of the people, they keep up a continual shout of reviling words, with the intention of thwarting the lecture. Whenever the lecturer comes to the positive declaration of Christian truth, their faces turn like a roasted lobster, and the cries of No! No! shake the building, compelling the speaker to stop the speaking for a moment. After such a lec ture, they soon publicly give notice of a meeting on the attack of Christianity and make several lectures, reproaching the Christian doctrine in every possible way. But they, possessed of wit and acuteness, without earnest purpose or depth of research, and with a worldly understanding that glances merely at the surface and delights in hunting up difficulties and contradictions, are seeking to hide the truth of Christianity from their own believers, otherwise their followers would depart from their religion and attach themselves to Christianity, which would cause the contributions to diminish, and consequently they would starve to death. Indeed, they are doing an immense evil to the ignorant people, leading them astray, deeper and deeper, into the way of superstition.

This is the field where we are working and where we can already see a marked effect. The difficulty in meeting this class of infidelity is that reason has no effect. The people scarcely have the power of reason and judgment, and therefore the things proved by reason have no impression upon their hearts. Here the ministers must have great patience, and must teach the words of God plainly and popularly, and after a time they will see the effect.

But the greater difficulty in mission work is in relation to the second class of infidels, which consists of educated men both in the foreign and home universities. They hold in contempt all religions, true and false, without distinction. I know in the western countries there are men of high authority in science who yet are the humble believers of the words of God, but we have none in Japan. They attack Christianity from every quarter—historically, politically, philosophically, and finally from the faults of the believers. Darwin's theory of the descent of man is accepted, and the belief in the existence of one personal creator, though Darwin himself admitted that it is probable the principle of life was breathed into a few original forms. Like Haeckel, they trace the origin of man into what is called membranous monera, which developed spontaneously. It developed higher and higher into worms, fish, reptiles, birds, animals and monkeys. From the semi-ape, which is now an extinct species, developed man. Spencer's unknowable theory and Mill's atheistic view are welcomed. Bain's theory of the mind as the function of brain is believed, and the immortality of the soul is denied. Stimulated by Buckle and Draper, they attack Christianity as contradicting science. Studying the antiquity of man, they reproach the account of Genesis as contrary to scientific investigation. Kant, Hegel, Spinoza, Hume, Huxley, inspire them, and thus their thoughts are transplanted to the soil of Japan, and their views brought before the public. They are growing greater and converting the hearts of the young men to their views.

Boston Letter.

March 11, 1886.

In all the suburbs of Boston there is no more interesting ride than that between Mt. Auburn and the city. At Mt. Auburn is Boston's noted cemetery. Midway in the tall iron fence rimming the front, are set the heavy Egyptian portals, and beyond are the many and elaborate memorials of the dead. As one rides past he can see Indian Ridge, not a bold, abrupt swell of ground, but a humble, graceful slope occupied by the silent encampment of the dead. On Indian Ridge is Longfellow's last resting-place. A granite border encloses the lot, and within is a polished sarcophagus bearing the poet's name. There are two trees that rise at one corner of the lot, and in summer they hang down their leafy boughs as if armorial banners announcing the presence of an honored master. Beyond Mt. Auburn Cemetery one sees a large, three-story yellow house set in a rural environment, ample and wooded grounds enclosing it. It is the old home of Longfellow's friend and America's late Minister to England, James Russell Lowell. Passing this neighborhood and approaching Harvard Square, on the right one looks across an open field to the valley, grooved by the channel in which the tides keep the waters of Charles river playing backward and forward like a shuttle. Opposite that open field, on the left hand side of Brattle street, is a house that says very plainly, "I am old. I do not belong to this generation." It is indeed an ancient lodger in Cambridge-town. As if to seclude the house from the street, tall lilac bushes raise in summer their walls of green, while standing here and there, like sentinels irregularly posted, are trees bare and naked now, but they will have, at a later date, a uniform emerald enough to satisfy the most ardent lover of Erin. The house, two-storied, capped with old-fashioned chimneys, its walls painted yellow, its gambrel-roof lifting a prim railing, is known as Longfellow's old home, and generations ago served as the historic headquarters of Gen. Washington. Longfellow had secured the field before his house, keeping it as an open lot that his look toward the Charles might be unobstructed. At a dignified pace moves the blue river, and beyond are the housetops of Allston and Brighton, districts in Boston. The poet and Cambridge are names that are very closely intertwined. In his poetry are various reminders of the old town. His home is remembered in the "Children's Hour" and also in the "Lines to a Child." There is the sonnet to St. John's, Cambridge, and there, too, are the stanzas, "In the Churchyard at Cambridge." That sinuous stream, the Charles, seems to turn and flow in those lines, "To the River Charles." The college-town and the river twining about it are a lasting memorial of the poet. The association formed to raise funds for a Longfellow memorial now has over thirteen thousand dollars for that purpose. It has been contemplated to raise a statue in the open lot opposite Longfellow's house, and if the house itself could some day be secured by this association and sacredly kept as a memorial of the poet and of the father of his country also, it would be a very magnetic centre of interest. Near the Longfellow house is the picturesque, elaborate group of stone structures belonging to the Episcopal Theological School, and Harvard Square, bordered on two sides by the buildings of the University, soon opens before the visitor. Among the latter structures, Sever Hall has a prominent place. Erected at an outlay of a hundred thousand dollars, it has a flattering reputation as one of the world's amplest, most finely-constructed halls for recitation and lecture purposes. Its portals witnessed recently a very anxious rush of people desirous to hear the Rev. Phillips Brooks speak on the subject of the Ministry as a Profession. Defining the ministry and its emphatic claims, Dr. Brooks directed his words especially to the students. He referred to the two attitudes prevalent among college students toward the ministry, a shrinking from it on account of a very exalted idea of its duties, and a depreciation of it, almost a contempt. He contended that any lack of enthusiasm about the matter showed a lack of intellect. He thought that in college, attention to studies grouped under that head, "the humanities," might prove helpful in fitting for the profession of the ministry. This calling has not been very popular at Harvard, but Phillips Brooks is popular there, and a few words on this subject blown through the silvery trumpet of the rector of Trinity Church, may have reached docile ears. Another late memorable affair in the neighborhood of Harvard Square, and already noticed in your columns, has been the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the old church on Harvard Square. Planted by Congregationalists, the old trunk of late years has been overshadowed by growth from a Unitarian graft. Dr. McKenzie's church, occupying the fine stone edifice near the famous Washington Elm, separated from the old parish at the time of the Unitarian controversy. At this recent anniversary, the two churches united in its celebration. Indeed, there is a kind of union drift in ecclesiastical circles tending to bring together two very dissimilar bodies. One illustration of this is the fact that the Congregationalists and Free Baptists are making very friendly speeches to one another. There is no formal taking down of denominational fences, but leaders on both sides are busy pulling off slats and reaching through for a handshake. Since Free Baptists are Arminian in theology—as a rule—and as to the mode and subjects of baptism are Baptists, one might raise the question whether the above union was feasible. Stranger things, though, have happened. President Cheney, of Bates' College, on the other hand, is arguing for the union of all Baptists, and the confluence of such water-drops seems to be a more natural process. An illustration of this is a late convention in the Shawmut Avenue Free Baptist Church, attended by ministers of the Free Baptist and Christian denominations. "Union," one flag, was the subject for discussion, and a committee was appointed to investigate the subject and report a basis of union.

The Methodists may be getting ready some time to talk union with somebody, but just now they are developing the strength of their own forces. A place of recent, earnest discussion was the Bromfield Street Methodist Church. A Laymen's Institute, held under the auspices of the Boston Methodist Social Union, covered an entire day with discussions. These were some of the targets at which the speakers aimed their words: "Home Religion, its Relation to the Church;" "Relation of Methodism to Education;" "Aggressive Work in the Local Churches;" "Revivals;" "Fidelity to Doctrines and Usages of the Church;" "Divine Call to the Laity." Many laymen participated, Bishop Foster and other clergymen aiding.

As one goes up Tremont street from Berkeley, he sees on the left hand side a large brick church with a very prominent tower, a campanile that shows high up to a lagging pedestrian its warning dial. This is the Shawmut Congregational Church, whose pastor, it is understood, will be Dr. Griffis. It is one of the leading Congregational churches in the city. It has over six hundred communicants and over seven hundred scholars in the Sunday-school department. It is advantageously posted for its work, on a leading street, in the midst of many homes. Dr. Griffis will find it a very promising field, and he will be warmly welcomed to this city not only by the Shawmut congregation, but by many who esteem him for his thorough, scholarly work as an author, and in this appreciative circle is Neponset.

Temperance.—We call attention to the action of the last General Synod on this subject:

Resolved, That in the judgment of this Synod, it is the duty of all who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and their fellowmen, to use every endeavor to resist the progress of intemperance, to prevent men from being ensnared by this dreadful evil, and to deliver those who are under its power.

Resolved, That we deem it utterly inconsistent with the character and profession of the members of the Church of Christ, to encourage the traffic in intoxicating liquors, by renting for the purpose of such traffic any property which they own, or which is under their control; by signing the applications of those who apply for licenses to sell intoxicating liquor; by becoming sureties for those who make application for such licenses, or in any other manner whatsoever.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“SERMONS AND ADDRESSES IN AMERICA.” By Frederick W. Farrar, D.D., F.R.S., Archdeacon and Canon of Westminster. Canon Farrar, when last year he came among us as a visitor, was welcomed less as a stranger than an old acquaintance. His “Life of Christ,” so fascinating in style and graphic in portraiture, had already introduced and commended him to a very wide circle, and his sermons on the “Future Life,” preaching, as Phillips Brooks in the introduction to this volume pithily puts it, the doctrine of eternal hope, served, however much one might dissent from the views expressed, to awaken and increase an interest in the author.

His sojourn here was well nigh a continuous ovation, and it is fitting that sermons and addresses listened to with so great interest by multitudes of hearers should be gathered into a volume and sent forth to a still wider audience.

As a speaker, he exerted his power less by the graces of oratory and the magnetism of personality, than by the force, grace and thoughtfulness of what he said. In consequence, these sermons and addresses lose less than most in being read rather than heard. The volume embraces fourteen sermons, four addresses and two lectures.

Delicacy and tact are displayed in the adaptation of truth and its form to different places, occasions and audiences, and in avoidance of topics of a polemic nature. We think this especially noticeable in the peculiar appropriateness of Sermon XIII., from the text Heb. 11: 4, for a sermon addressed to the students of Harvard University. It is true, knowing the author's views on such subjects as Inspiration, Eschatology, etc., passages may be found that admit of interpretations adverse to strict orthodoxy, yet we question if the volume had been published anonymously whether the keenest heresy hunter would discover matter for comment. As was to be expected of the author, from his mental constitution, as well as his ecclesiastical position, emphasis is laid in all the discourses upon the practical rather than the theological aspects of truth.

We have found the sermons, each and all, strong, suggestive and stimulative,—a series which hold the interest of the reader with a peculiar power and charm. If we were to select for special remark any of these admirable discourses, it would be Sermon IX., on “Things which cannot be shaken,” for its adaptability in meeting the difficulties of honest doubt, or Sermon X., on “Keep the Commandments,” for its sound and practical counsels to the seeker after eternal life. But each sermon is eminently instructive, quickening, and graceful.

Of the remaining portion of the book,—the addresses and lectures,—the two of especial interest are, his address on “Temperance,” in which he gives the weight of his position, learning and eloquence in favor of the most radical total abstinence, and treats the subject with a seriousness and carefulness which prove it in his estimation the great question of the day, both for England and America; and his “Farewell thoughts on America,” in which he answers with rare good sense and taste the questions asked every stranger, “What do you think of our country?” and “What do you think of our institutions?” (E. P. Dutton & Co.)

....“THE GLASSE OF TIME.” By Thomas Peyton. This book is a reprint of the poem which is supposed to have inspired Milton's Paradise Lost. In a very entertaining introduction the author's life is briefly sketched, and a history given of his exceedingly unique work. It is in two volumes; the first volume was published in 1620, about fifty years before Paradise Lost, and the second, three years later. The first commences with man in his innocence and treats of his fall; the second follows his descendants to the time of Noah. Before the promised continuance of the work could be effected, the author died at the early age of thirty one, in the year 1626. No knowledge seems to have survived of his poem, and it only came to light about seventy years ago when Lord Bolland purchased the copy now in the British Museum at the sale of the late Mr. Brindley's library in 1816. “This poem is pointed out by Rev. Henry J. Todd, Archdeacon of Cleveland, in his life of Milton (Vol. I., p. 298), as one of those relating to the state of innocence which preceded Paradise Lost.” Quotations are given from each work, and by comparison it is not difficult to trace a similarity in some respects. An article on the poem, which appeared in the North American Review, October, 1860, is reproduced in the introduction, which speaks of it thus: “It is quaint, rough, sincere, and devotional, abounding in odd conceits and infelicitous expressions, yet sometimes rising into sublimer strains through the influence of its Divine subject. In its narrative its takes Milton's view of the origin of sin, the agency of Satan, the consequent depravity of the race, and the hope of the sinner through redemption....In every instance where the similarity of thought is remarkable, Milton towers loftily above his fellow, and transfigures all he appropriates. In the form of verse and choice of words also, Milton proves his superior taste and the purity of his genius.” (John B. Alden.)

....The Chamber of Commerce has published in a bound volume the addresses delivered by Mr. Samuel D. Babcock, acting Mayor Adolph L. Sanger, Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, Rev. Dr. Roswell D. Hitchcock, and Hon. A. D. Colquitt, of Georgia, at the unveiling of the statue in memory of the Hon. William E. Dodge. An engraving of the statue faces the title page. The volume is an elegant one.

A well printed pamphlet, issued under the same auspices, contains the “Tribute of the Chamber of Commerce to the Memory of H. B. Claflin. It is the report of a committee and is accompanied with the hearty tributes, offered when the paper was adopted, by Mr. C. N. Bliss, Mr. Chas. S. Smith, Mr. G. L. Colby and Mr. E. M. Ammidown. An outline of Rev. H. W. Beecher's address at the funeral of Mr. Claflin is added. The pamphlet has also a very good engraved likeness of the departed merchant and philanthropist.

....“WAR AND PEACE.” An Historical Novel. By Count Tolstoi. Two volumes. This is a translation by Clara Bell of a French version made from the original Russian, yet the ideas of the author do not seem to have suffered in the repeated transfusion. Characters are well drawn and the descriptions are lively, but there scarce seems to be a plot. One can hardly judge, because at the close of the second volume we read, “End of Part One,” and Part Two, of which there is no hint on the title page, may give completeness to the narrative. (W. S. Gottsberger.)

....“LEAVES FROM MAPLE LAWN.” By William White. The utmost delicacy of printing, paper and binding, distinguishes this pretty little volume of verse, which has the honor of an introduction by Richard H. Stoddard, who has written an essay well worth reading as the preface to his friend's book. Some of the poems included in the collection have appeared in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. They are characterized by devout feeling and a genuine love of nature, with a reverent acknowledgment of Nature's God. (White, Stokes & Allen.)

....“THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN” and “ISAAC WALTON'S COMPLETE ANGLER,” are the third and fourth volumes of “Cassell's National Library.” They need no commendation, but we may again call the attention of readers to this cheap, handy and well-printed series of first class English literature.

....In “SIX LECTURES UPON THE DOCTRINES OF THE NEW CHURCH,” the Rev. John Worcester, of Newtonville, Mass., has presented a brief and clear resumé of the Swedenborgian faith respecting Creation, Revelation, Redemption, The Future Life, The Divine Providence, and the Second Coming of the Lord. (Massachusetts New Church Union.)

....A CORRECTION.—Errors are human and cannot be wholly avoided. Usually we leave them unnoticed, but to-day we wish to say that the illustrations in “Oceana” are from drawings by Mr. Froude and by Lord Elphinstone, and not by “Mrs. Froude and by Lord E.,” as we were made to say on March 10th. Of course we wished to say also, “a confederation of the entire British Empire,” and not “a confederation with,” etc....The types also made us say in the seventh line of the first column on the second page, “Mr. Spurgeon” instead of Mr. Spencer.

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Methodist Review for March has a fitting notice of Dean Latimer, a just statement of the Apologetic Value of Miracles, a very full and clear account of Madagascar, Prof. Long's view of the Fourth Crusade, and two philosophical articles with a very full Editorial Miscellany, reflecting the insight and largeness of view of the Editor, Dr. Curry.

....The Forum for March.—This is the first number of a new candidate for public favor, intended for all classes of intelligent people. It contains articles by Parton, Whipple, Hammond, and such a mixture of clerical names as Prof. Winchell, Bishop Coxe, Heber Newton, Dr. Crosby, E. E. Hale, and Mr. Savage—a happy family such as Barnum used to have on exhibition. The scope of the new monthly will be broad enough to take in all comers. For ourselves we prefer periodicals which have convictions and maintain them, giving no currency to opposing views except for confutation. But the latitudinarian plan seems to be the only popular one now a days, and so doubtless the Forum will secure a large following. Of the two autobiographic articles in this number, Dr. Hale's “How I was Educated” is most interesting and suggestive, while Mr. Savage's “Religious Experience” is superficial and worthless.

....The Monthly Interpreter, January and February.—These issues continue to show the merits characteristic of this excellent periodical. Prebendary Gibson gives another instalment of his vigorous statement of the Groundwork of the Apocalypse, and Prof. Milligan of his profound discussion of the Resurrection, and Prof. Bruce of his fresh consideration of the Kingdom of God. Prof. Forbes furnishes a new study of the Eighth Psalm, and Prof. Redford throws light upon the prophecy of Joel. The other articles vary in merit, but there is hardly one that can be called poor.

....In the March Century an excellent frontispiece portrait of Emilio Castelar, the Spanish orator, of whom pleasant reminiscences are given, is followed by a well written and illustrated article on “Italy from a Tricycle;” another entertaining paper, also handsomely illustrated, on “Recent Architecture in America,” by Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer and “Mountaineering in Persia,” by S. G. W. Benjamin. “Shiloh Reviewed” is the title of the War Series paper contributed by General Don Carlos Buell. Under “Memoranda on the Civil War,” many interesting and important facts are given by Col. S. H. Lockett, Lieut.-Col. Alexander R. Chisolm and Major William H. Powell. All departments are fully occupied with engaging reading.

....In the Homiletic Review for March eight subjects of deep interest are ably discussed under “Review Section,” seven under “Sermonic Section,” five under “Miscellaneous Section,” and three under “Editorial.” It is up in all respects to any number heretofore issued.

....The Pulpit Treasury for March has a frontispiece portrait of the Rev. Charles S. Robinson, D.D., with a sermon of his on “The First Contribution Box,” a picture of his church—the Presbyterian Memorial of this city—and an interesting sketch of his life. There are other excellent sermons in full and in part, sprightly editorials, and much good reading beside.

....The March American Agriculturist is a very superior number. The articles are fresh, timely and appropriate. The illustrations are profuse and show fine artistic execution. It is superb all the way through, from the first cover, which has a beautiful season design, to the last.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Harper & Brothers: Manual Training. The Solution of Social and Industrial Problems. By Charles H. Ham. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 403. $1.50; also,

In the Golden Days. By Edna Lyall. 16mo, pp. 207. 75 cents; also,

Lives of Greek Statesmen. Second Series. Ephialtes—Hermokrates. By the Rev. Sir George W. Cox, Bart., M.A. 16mo, pp. 266. 75 cents; also,

Eventful Nights in Bible History. By Alfred Lee, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Delaware. 12mo, pp. 423. $1.50; also,

Index to Harper's New Monthly Magazine. Alphabetical, Analytical and Classified. Volumes I. to LXX., inclusive. From June, 1850, to June, 1885. Compiled by Charles A. Durfee. 8vo, pp. 783. Cloth, $4; half calf, $6.25.

Robert Carter & Brothers: Pictures of St. Paul. Drawn in an English Home. By A. L. O. E. With many Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 352. $1.50; also, Richard and Robin. By Mattie B. Banks, author of the “Children's Summer.” Illustrated by Rose Mueller. 12mo, pp. 408. $1.25.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: The Story of Chaldea. From the Earliest Times to the Rise of Assyria. By Zénaïde A. Ragouzin. (The Story of the Nations' Series.) 12mo, pp. 381. $1.50; also,

The World and the Logos. By Hugh Miller Thompson, S.T.D., LL.D. Small quarto, pp. 91. $1.

Roberts Brothers: Atalanta in the South. A Romance. By Maud Howe. 12mo, pp. 345. $1.25.

John Wiley & Sons: How We Got Our Bible. An Answer to Questions Suggested by the New Revision. By J. Paterson Smyth, A.B., LL.B. 12mo, pp. 127.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co: Backlog Studies. By Charles Dudley Warner. (The Riverside Aldine Series.) 16mo, pp. 232. $1.

Cassell & Co.: The Vicar's People. A Story of a Stain. By George Manville Fenn. 12mo, pp. 345. $1; also,

Sermons on the Card, and Other Discourses. By Hugh Latimer, Sometime Bishop of Worcester, Martyr, 1555. (Vol. I., No. 7, Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Hurrish. A Study. By the Hon. Emily Lawless. (No. 61, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 208. 25 cents; also,

Irish History for English Readers. From the Earliest Times to the Close of the Year 1885. By Wm. Stephenson Gregg. (No. 62, same.) 16mo, pp. 217. 25 cents; also, Griselda. A Novel. By the author of “The Garden of Eden,” etc. (No. 515, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 52. 20 cents.

The Brooklyn Daily Eagle Almanac, 1886. Compiled by William Herries. 8vo, pp. 232. 25 cents.

First Report of the Art Students' League of New York. By Frank Waller. 8vo, pp. 55.

Pocket Lesson Notes on the Writings of John. By Rev. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts. Funk & Wagnalls.

Dutch Village Communities on the Hudson River. By Irving Elting, A.B. (Fourth Series. I., Johns Hopkins University Studies in Historical and Political Science. Herbert B. Adams, editor.) 8vo, pp. 68. 50 cents; also,

Town Government in Rhode Island. By William E. Foster. (II., same.); also,

The Narragansett Planters. By Edward Channing. (III., same.) 8vo, pp. 23. 50 cents.

PERIODICALS.

March.—The Musical Herald, The Expositor, The Old Testament Student, The Targum, The Gospel in All Lands, The Phrenological Journal, The International Record of Charities and Correction.

April.—The Quiver.

The Rev. Sam Jones.

THIS man is gaining such a notoriety as a preacher, by his wonderful work in Cincinnati, and now by the great audiences which he addresses every day and night in Chicago, that the following description of his person, and manner of preaching, by the Examiner, will be read with no little interest:

"On Sunday, February 28th, Sam Jones began his Chicago 'Mission,' preaching in the morning at the Chicago Avenue Church, and in the afternoon at the Casino Rink. Since then he has spoken every afternoon and evening, and has given, in addition, two or three morning talks. The announcement that Jones is to preach crowds the house, and many are turned away from the noon meeting at Farwell Hall. The First Baptist Church is densely filled every afternoon, and the evening audience at the Rink does not number less than 6,000. The newspapers, of course, give full reports of the meetings, some caricaturing, others photographing them. But there is something in Sam Jones's preaching that eludes the most faithful report. He differs, somehow, from everyone's expectation, and almost everyone yields easily to a charm which disarms prejudice, and sets at naught the most unbiassed criticism.

"Look in at the afternoon meeting. Dr. Barrows and Dr. Henson are on the platform. A hymn is sung, prayers are offered, another hymn and the collection follow, and then a tall, lean, dark man, with thick black hair and moustache, and shrewd but kindly black eyes, comes forward, and lounges with one elbow upon the pulpit desk, and the other hand in his trouser's pocket. From this unconventional attitude, he rouses himself to glance at the opened Bible or to deliver some weighty sentiment with angular but emphatic gestures. But usually he converses with his audience in a low, slightly nasal tone, and with a deliberation that is at times almost a drawl. Now and then his speech stops while one could count ten, and he stands with his eyes fixed pensively on the floor, passing his hands slowly the while over his face, or through his hair, and then the discourse is resumed with 'Let me tell you another thing.' 'Another thing' is usually a humorous illustration or story, and a ripple of laughter runs over the house. The laughter, however, hardly lessens the seriousness of the hour, for Sam Jones's illustrations, familiar and grotesque though they may be, always illustrate something. To use his own account of them, they are like the headlight of a locomotive, illumining the track. Even while you laugh, you see that he is on the track of some truth, appealing to the heart or the conscience. It is difficult to say whether the quaint Southern provincialisms into which he falls so readily are used from force of habit, or with deliberate art. They are effective, however, and need not offend the most fastidious ear.

"In a word, Sam Jones is neither an ignorant ranter, nor a blasphemous mountebank. He preaches the Gospel, plainly, forcibly, seriously, often indeed with great tenderness and pathos. It is not with this aspect of his preaching that the great public who know him only through newspaper stories, is best acquainted. As might be expected, attention has been turned almost exclusively to his vigorous and unsparing assaults upon inconsistent and worldly-minded Christians; and these assaults, it must be confessed, are sometimes as undiscriminating as they are unsparing. Still, it is true that denunciation and satire are the incidents, rather than the end and aim of his sermons. He impresses his hearers as one who is striving with all his heart to win men to the obedience of Christ."

NEW SERIAL STORIES
BY THE FOLLOWING POPULAR AUTHORS

I.
CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER,

II.
R. D. BLACKMORE,

III.
THE AUTHOR OF
"JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN,"

BEGIN IN

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE

(No. 431)

FOR APRIL, 1886.

FULL LIST OF CONTENTS:

The opening chapters of THREE SERIALS:

Their Pilgrimage.

A story of American society at our most popular pleasure resorts. By CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER. Illustrated by CHARLES S. REINHART;

Springhaven.

A story of English rural life in the stirring times of Lord Nelson. By R. D. BLACKMORE, Author of "Lorna Doone," &c. Illustrated by ALFRED PARSONS and FREDERICK BARNARD;

King Arthur:

Not a Love Story. A New Novel by the Author of "John Halifax, Gentleman." To be published in THREE PARTS, each occupying over twenty-five pages of the Magazine;

Plebeian and Aristocratic Pigeons.

By F. SATTERTHWAITE. Illustrated by W. H. GIBSON;

Going Down to the Sea in Ships.

By PHIL ROBINSON. Illustrated;

Neapolitan Sketches.

By MARY E. VANDYNE. Illustrated;

She Stoops to Conquer.

End of Act IV. Eight Illustrations by E. A. ABBEY;

The Home Acre. Part II.

(Selection and Culture of Fruit Trees.) By E. P. ROE;

East Angels. Part XVI.

By CONSTANCE FENIMORE WOOLSON;

Little Bel's Supplement. A Story.

By HELEN HUNT JACKSON ("H. H.");

Cattle-raising on the Plains.

By FRANK WILKESON;

A Postmaster's Experience of Civil-Service Reform.

A Birthday.

A Poem. By JENNY POULTNEY BIGELOW;

Editor's Easy Chair.

By GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

Court Dress.—Good Manners at the Opera.—A Kindergarten for the Blind.—Mr. Gilbert on his Pedestal.—A Veteran's Comments on the Modern Stage.—One of the Trials of Authors.

Editor's Study.

By WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

Old Symbols for New Thought: John Fiske's "Destiny of Man," and Count Leo Tolstoi's "My Religion."—"Anna Karenine:" a Russian Love Story.—Literary Truth in Russian Fiction.—Some Recent American Fiction Suggesting this Quality: "Margaret Kent."—A Delightful New Spanish Novel: "Marta y Maria."—Some Recent Noteworthy Books.

Monthly Record of Current Events.

Editor's Drawer.

Conducted by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE..... $4 00
HARPER'S WEEKLY..... 4 00
HARPER'S BAZAR..... 4 00
HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE..... 2 00
HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY (One Number a week for 52 weeks)..... 10 00
HARPER'S HANDY SERIES. (One Number a week for 52 weeks)..... 15 00

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States or Canada.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

When no time is specified, subscriptions will be begun with the current number.

☞ HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents.

Published by HARPER & BROTHERS, N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for PLATFORM ECHOES
OR LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,
By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

RECENT ISSUES
BY THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.60.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

New Sunday School Music Books.
Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Jewels of Praise. { $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gem of Gems. { $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gospel Praise Book. { $40 per hundred. Specimen copy 50c.

NEW EASTER MUSIC.
OUR RISEN LORD, SERVICE. 5 cts. $4 per hund.
HULL'S EASTER ANNUAL. 5 cts. $2 per hund.
Address ASA HULL,
150 Nassau St., New York City.

STANDARD MUSIC BOOKS.

For Quartet Choirs.
DOW'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 80 cts.
STRACHAUER'S CHURCH MUSIC. $1.00.
SHEPARD CHURCH COLLECTION. $1.00.
BAUMBACH'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.
BAUMBACH'S NEW COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S 2D MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
EMERSON'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.
These are all collections of the best and most refined Sacred Music.

For Choruses.
EMERSON'S CONCERT SELECTIONS. In 6 numbers, each 25 cts. Complete $1.00.
Admirable Selections, Sacred and Secular. Ditson & Co. also call attention to the exceedingly rich treasury of the best sacred music contained in the more than 100 Masses (by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and other masters) which they publish. No Choral Society or Choir should be without them. Latin and English words. Send for lists, Average price 75 cts.

For the Home.
CHOICE VOCAL DUETS. $1.00.
HALFDAN KJERULF'S ALBUM OF SONGS. $1.50. Very superior collections.
LEAVES OF SHAMROCK. $1.00. 100 Irish Melodies, arranged for piano.

For Music Students.
RITTER'S STUDENTS' HISTORY OF MUSIC. $2.50. The most condensed and practical history extant.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC
THE RISEN CHRIST.
AN EASTER EXERCISE,
By J. E. HALL.
This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.
16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES, 1886.
WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)
A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."
Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.
PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.
JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.
1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.
 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

"A Capital Book for Social Meetings and Sunday Schools."

SELECT SONGS.
Compiled by F. N. PELOUBET, D.D.
344 Hymns and Tunes, admirably chosen for use where only one book is desired for the Devotional Meetings and the Sunday School. All who have used Select Songs speak of it in the highest terms.
Firmly bound in Cloth, $40 per 100 Copies.
Ready March 10.
An edition of words only, $10 per 100 Copies.
BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

NEW BOOKS.
Twelve Hours with Young People. $1.00.
"Strong Plain Talks."—Independent.
Pulpit Themes. 12mo. 500 pages. $1.50.
Helps for Pulpit. 500 pages. $1.50.
New editions of these helpful books for ministers.
N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St., New York.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

The GREAT CHURCH LIGHT
FRINK'S Patent Reflectors for Gas or Oil, give the most powerful, softest cheapest & Best light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Banks, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A Liberal discount to churches and the trade. Don't be deceived by cheap imitations.
I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., N. Y.

POPULAR LECTURES.
SUBJECTS
1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events
Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK
Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

BARLOW'S INDICO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. G. WILTBERGER, Prop., 233 N. Second St., Phila., Pa.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Queen Regnant or Queen Dowager?

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

TOO many women there comes a period when the reins of home management are apparently ready to slip from their hands into those of another. They may not be desired in set terms to abdicate, yet nevertheless, with grown daughters whose advanced ideas are not quite the same as those entertained by their mothers, with health somewhat uncertain and tempers a little strained, the authority formerly theirs is no longer what it once was. Dominant indeed in the kitchen, and lady paramount in the general drudgery, it is still evident that the time of sovereignty is on the wane. When the children were yet in the nursery, and mother decreed absolutely with relation to their diet, dress, and behavior, when the husband had only his wife to please and consult, and the social interests were administered solely by the heads of the household, everything was different from what it has become. Just how the change happened, just when, the most acute observer would be puzzled to tell. Who can indicate the precise moment at which the bud slips the sheath and becomes the flower? Which of us is not aware of a certain incredulous surprise when our Julie or Fan, a baby yesterday, a growing girl to be trained and moulded but an hour ago, is all at once a young woman, with suitors at her feet, swaying the gracious sceptre of maidenhood, not the least obedient and devoted of her subjects her own papa, who defers to her wishes and acquiesces in her opinions with complacent admiration.

It is not that there is a pronounced antagonism, or even a defined opposition between mother and her girls. Far from it. Both parties would repudiate the bare suspicion of such an attitude. Still, it often is true that deep down in the corner of her loyal heart there is a hidden ache, which mother proudly declines to acknowledge even to herself, calling it by any other name than the right one in the privacy of her own thoughts, and as she finds her ways gently and sweetly put aside, and her views received with toleration, while plainly her daughters and her daughters' guests have no need of her, she goes to the Lord and pleads for more humility and a lovelier spirit of self-forgetfulness.

In which plea, poor soul, she is quite mistaken. There are hours when common sense is more to be desired for the practical uses of life than the sincerest piety. There are prayers which should rise to the throne for a larger measure of self-esteem, a more dignified notion of one's appointed prerogative, rather than for a greater capacity for self-abnegation. The self-denial of some amiable mothers feeds the selfishness of some thoughtless daughters. I think of homes in which, inch by inch, the rightful mistress has been crowded from her supremacy, until her queenship is a fiction and her place in the house is that of a mere housekeeper. Her own fault? Very likely. A sign of her weakness? I am not so sure.

Love makes cowards and paupers of some of us as well as kings and priests. There are natures which find it easy to resign, resign, resign; which are not naturally self assertive, which have a positive talent for suffering and enduring in silence. Quite apart from suffering, however, it is clear to me that the mistress of a household is the person who should receive consideration as well as eternally give it; that she should have some place to call her own other than the kitchen, her dining room, and very probably a stuffy back chamber, her own pretty room having been given up to the eldest daughter, or, doubtful arrangement, to the son's wife.

The mistake made by mothers is often found to begin in the days when, charmed with the dawning grace and beauty of the daughter, and taking a pardonable vicarious pride in her sweetness, mamma enters upon a process of doing without, which is simply absurd, and which extends into the smallest as well as the largest affairs of the home. Is there a journey to be taken? Mother is the one to work herself almost ill that she may get the others ready. She will stay and look after the house while they are enjoying change of scene. She prefers it, they all say, as they give her the rapturous good-by kisses, drive off in a whirl of delicious excitement, and leave her to the confusion of the empty rooms and the prosaic work of picking up and putting things straight after their departure.

A new outfit is wanted for somebody. Shall mother have it, or shall Felicie? Felicie's rose-bloom, blue eyes, and wavy hair really need little adventitious aid by way of decoration, but never mind, she shall have the beautiful new costume, in the beautiful fashionable color, made by the dressmaker whose touch confers the indefinable unknown quality which we denominate style. Mother, (who really goes out so little,) will have a seamstress in the house for a day or two, and what with sponging off, pressing and ironing, turning inside out and upside down, adding a little new trimming, and etc., chiefly etcetera, mother will manage to make the old suit answer for another season. "It does not matter about me," she says meekly. And the family tacitly consent.

Friends and sisters, economy is praiseworthy, self-denial the most exalted of the virtues, but neither economy nor self-denial should be on one side only. If a virtue is virtuous in mamma, it is equally estimable in mamma's children. If self sacrifice be noble, let its nobility be appreciated in exercise by the young people of the family as well as by their elders. It is not worth while to let the parents have a monopoly of everything which is excellent and of good report.

It is sometime very lovely and natural as the outcome of necessity that the queen dowager should succeed the queen regnant, as in one sweet home to which I turn, a bit of Arcadia, which often opens its hospitable doors to kindred and friends, and gives them the most cordial of welcomes.

There sits the mother, serene in the beauty of old age, her hair still dark and abundant, her eyes bright, and her face fine and tinted like delicate porcelain, though nearly eighty winters have gone over her head. It is little to say that she is the centre and the star of the home. She is everybody's darling. Children and grandchildren vie with each other to do her honor and to minister to her wants. She takes no active share in the home ordering; all care has been assumed by the gracious-mannered, low-voiced daughter, whose middle age is a link between youthful admirers on the one, and elderly friends on the other hand. But the mother is queen dowager, and has earned the title because she was always queen regnant.

I have seen, I blush to admit it, a far different state of things. Daughters deprecating, apologetic, the least in the world ashamed of her whose arms cradled their infancy; daughters despotic, arrogant, destitute of tenderness toward her who bore with their waywardness only too gently in their childish days. And, pity the unfortuate mothers as I have, I have still felt that part of the blame was to be laid upon themselves. A mother should not be weak, for though we pity weakness, we seldom respect it. In her own home, with her grown children around her, just as truly as when they were small and dependent, she should bear the keys of office. This crown should none take from her.

Separation of interests in the household is always an error. The friend of one should be the acquaintance of all. My daughter should present her young companions to me, I should enjoy with her their brightness and beauty, and sympathize with their pursuits and endeavors. She should be no stranger to the men and women who are the associates of her parents. It should be her pride and delight to be her mother's premier, and under her mother's wise tutelage she should prepare for the day when she shall reign in her own household, its mistress and queen, as her right will be.

Saturday Evening in Winter.

GRAY is the landscape and gray is the sky,
Gray the expanse of the flat river-bed,
Rimmed with the snow, where its tufted banks lie;
Gray stretch the meadow-lands, shrouded and dead.

Gray, the clouds meet the horizon's gray edge;
Gray, the woods cover the grayer hill-side;
Gray is the cornfield, and gray is the sedge;
Gray the far slope where once greenness spread wide.

Traceries fine on this background of gray,
Drawn by the tree-tops with exquisite art,
Blend with the low monochord of a day
Gray and more gray as its moments depart.

Down by the river, long rows of dull light
Gleam where the weavers weave on at the loom.
Lights of the mill, gray world and gray night
Speak of earth's weariness, labor and gloom.

Saturday night, in a gray, hoary world,
Grown gray and numb in the night-fall of Time.
Gray is man's life as 'tis shuttle-wise whirled
With the woof of his toil through the warp of his crime.

. . . . . .

Earth's week of Time swiftly wears to its close,
Purple-gray twilight still darkening to-night.
Break, Sabbath dawn, with thy joy and repose,
Break, Day of God, with millennial light!

M. C. G.

A Letter from a Hampton Boy.

THE boys and girls who read this paper have all, no doubt, heard of Hampton Institute; possibly some of them have seen a number of its Indian pupils as they make their annual trip North, where they obtain homes and employment during the summer months. It may be, also, our little readers have seen a paper entitled The Southern Workman, edited by the teachers in that school and printed by its pupils, and have learned from its columns that the object of that institution is to give the opportunity for education to the Negro and Indian races, and especially to train teachers from among them in such a manner that they return to their people intelligent Christian workers.

It is not of Hampton I purpose to tell you, but of a manly negro boy there, who wrote us such a pleasing letter that I felt at once like showing it to all the boys and girls I might be able to reach. He would better tell you his own story, though I am sure when he wrote this letter he had no idea it would have so many readers. He says: "I was born and always lived in Winchester, in the northern part of this State (Virginia). I am fifteen years old but not very large. My father and mother have lived there ever since their marriage, twenty years ago. They have a large family, but gave all of us the advantage of the school at home. Both of my parents were slaves. The public school at home is very good and is taught by a Hampton graduate. My home is in a very healthy place, but poor pay is given there for work, so one has to work very hard to get along at all. I had to work hard to buy my books and help clothe myself, but I went to school regularly and worked after school in the evenings and on holidays.

"I sometimes hauled wood-ashes and fixed them up in a hopper to run down the lye, and after that made soft-soap. Then I would take it to the woollen mill, where it was used for cleansing wool, and it would be taken in exchange for cloth. This is how I bought some of my clothes. In summer, I gathered sumac, which grows in large quantities around in the country, which I dried and sold. In harvest time I picked up sheaves after the reapers and bound, for which I got a dollar a day about two weeks in the year. Last summer I got a place at Rockmore Springs, about seventeen miles above my home. There I saved the money which is paying my board here, though I worked out more than half of my board. The reason I came here is, a boy can work out his expenses if he is not afraid of work, and then one can get such a good, practical education here. When I was very little my mother gave me a saving's bank, in which she told me to put all my pennies, as I would need them to help educate myself. I did as she told me, and the little I saved is a help to me now. I came here from Washington on the 29th of September, and the next day was examined and admitted to the B section of the middle class. I wait in the teachers' dining room every day, and on my work days work in the kitchen. I have to drill once a week in my company and in the whole battalion on Friday. The boys march to every meal and fall in for inspection every morning at half past eight. I take great pleasure in drilling, but I haven't any uniform except a cap as yet. I expect to get one soon, and then I shall enjoy it yet more."

Here is a poor colored lad showing a spirit that should rebuke some of the boys and girls in our homes who have so many opportunities for improvement, and who do not appear to appreciate what has been given them. Could I believe all I hear uttered sometimes by two or three of these individuals who happen to live near me, I might regard their teacher as a very exacting task master and sympathize with these dear persecuted children in their desire to be freed from such bondage, but I observe that complaints are generally made after some delinquency on their own part, or when something on the outside has assumed in their estimation a value above that which the schoolroom requires. I have read John Brown's letter to them and hope it may do them good.

Cousin Irene.

MANY good people think that they ought to guard the Gospel; but it is never so safe as when it stands out in its own native majesty. It wants no covering from us. When we protect it with provisos, and guard it with exceptions, and qualify it with observations, it is like David in Saul's armor; it is hampered and hindered, and you may even hear it cry, "I cannot go with these."—Spurgeon.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Grandma's Story.

ONE afternoon last winter Dick and Dorry Brown, or "Brown Dick and Dorry," as they were usually called, were sitting in the loft of Grandpa Brown's large, old-fashioned barn, munching apples and talking about the fair to be held in their church that afternoon, for grandpa had promised they might attend. It had been snowing quite hard for the past two days, and they were to go in the big sleigh, for the church was three miles away.

Presently they heard a voice: "Dick, Dick, Dorry, where are you?" They jumped up from their seats and ran into the house, Dick calling as they went, "We're here, grandma, and we'll be ready in just about fifty-'leven seconds," but grandma stopped them. "Children, come in here for a moment. One of the horses slipped and fell on the ice this morn ing, and cannot possibly go out. So grandpa will take the cutter, and Kate must go with him, as she is to be one of the waitresses. They can tuck one of you in between them, but not both."

Dick exclaimed, "I won't go without Dorry," and Dorry said, "I won't go without Dick," so the matter was settled, grandpa and sister Kate going alone.

That evening after tea, Dick and Dorry took their two little chairs, seated themselves one on each side of grandma, and begged for a story.

And this is the story she told:

"One wintry Sunday in the year 1780, a little girl, Dorothy Richards, was sitting by her mother's bedside. She was the only child of the minister, and he had already gone to church, leaving her at home to look after the mother, who was an invalid.

"It was only about fifteen minutes after Mr. Richards had left, and while Dorothy was outside fastening the shutters which were rather noisy, when she saw a man riding toward the cottage. When he saw her and knew that she saw him, he held a small piece of paper up in his hand, gave it a toss toward her, and rode away. It fell on the snow, but Dorothy ran after it just as she was, for she was afraid it might be blown away."

"Didn't she get her feet all wet?" queried Dorry.

"No, dear, for children in those days wore sensible shoes, not like the flimsy paper things we have now-a days."

"I don't think mine are papery one bit, now grandma," expostulated Dick, looking with satisfaction at his stout shoes. "No, nor Dorry's either."

"No, dears, I did not mean yours. You know you are my two old-fashioned children."

"Grandma, do you s'pose that when Cousin Angie said last summer that I was 'old-fashioned,' she just meant to call me sensible? I was real mad, 'cause I didn't think she meant anything nice, but I'm sorry now. But please go on and tell what the piece of paper had on it."

"Well, Dorothy picked it up and read: 'The British will be here in two hours and are especially anxious to take Mr. Richards prisoner. Have him hide underneath my barn. ABRAM THOMPSON.'

"Mr. Thompson's barn was very near the church, and would make a good hiding place. Dorothy knew everything would be all right if she only could go to the church and tell her father without having her mother know why she went. She ran upstairs to her little room, knelt at the side of her bed and said: 'Dear Lord Jesus, wilt Thou plea e show me how to let papa know the British are coming, without letting mother know about it,' and then she went downstairs, feeling much happier.

"The first thing her mother said was, 'Dorothy, dear, I am afraid you must go to church, as your father has forgotten the article on the Catechism he promised to read to the Bible-class. I am sorry, but there is no one else, and you see he must have it. Well, I'm glad you take it so easily,' for Dorothy looked very happy. 'I was afraid you would not want to go out in the cold.'

So Dorothy went to her room and wrapped herself up as warmly as possible, not forgetting to thank her heavenly Father for making it so easy for her to go to the church. She took the piece of paper which Mr. Thompson had given to her, and writing underneath, 'Meet me at the barn—Dorothy,' she addressed it to the Rev. James Richards, and put it in her pocket. After taking the article on the Catechism and putting that also in her pocket, she started off."

"How old was she, grandma?" interrupted Dorry, and Dick added, "Oh, she must have been awful good, and smart, too; almost smart enough for a boy."

Grandma smiled and answered: "She was twelve then, just a year older than you two, but very nice in her ways, for those were hard times in some things, and she had a good deal of care for a little girl.

"When Dorothy reached the church the service had not commenced, but 'Parson Richards' was in the pulpit. She gave the letter to the sexton and asked him to give it to her father immediately. So when Mr. Richards rose and went forward, instead of the usual form for opening service, he said: 'My friends, I have just learned that the British are coming to attack this church, so we must not stay. But before we separate let us all unite in the Lord's Prayer,' and then the entire congregation repeated it with him.

"In the meantime Dorothy had gone to the barn, and was waiting there for her father. After a few minutes Mr. Richards appeared, and then he and Dorothy climbed down a ladder into a small room under the barn which Mr. Thompson used as a store-room. It looked as if it had just been swept, and there was a large box of provisions in one corner. Dorothy promised to let her father know when the enemy had gone, and then asked him to write a little note to Mrs. Richards, saying he could not be home for a few days, but not telling the reason. After she had gone up her father pulled down the ladder, and Dorothy softly closed the trap-door.

"She then started out, going very slowly so that she might reach home the time she ordinarily did after service. Her mother was perfectly satisfied with the note from her father, for he had been suddenly called away two or three times before, and as she saw no one beside Dorothy, did not suspect anything was wrong.

"The British stayed in the village two days hunting for Mr. Richards, but early Wednesday morning they left, having given up the search in despair. It had been very hard for Dorothy to wait patiently those long days, but she felt rewarded when her father led her into her mother's room and introduced her as 'the little girl who had saved his life.' And then the whole story came out. But I think it is time you kittens went to bed."

"Yes, grandma, but just tell me this first. Who was she? was she a 'really' person?" asked inquisitive Dick.

"She was your great-grandmother, and you two were named after her."

"Oh, yes, I'm her first name, and Dick, you're the second without the s. Well, I'm sure we're much obliged, grandma, only I wish she had not been quite so good, for we can never be like her."

"Never mind that, but do your very best, and remember who it was that helped Dorothy," answered grandma, kissing them good-night.

The Blue Jay.

THE blue jay is one of the few birds that brave our cold and rigid winter. When the earth is covered with snow, his striking dress of blue gives variety to the cheerless landscape, as he darts here and there among the leafless trees, while his piercing cry is carried for a long distance on the clear, frosty air. Vigilant and thievish, when the snow deepens he becomes quite social, and diligently seeks about the farmer's outbuildings for his scanty fare, spying, eat ing, and disappearing on a moment's warning. They often visit the corn crib, and from between the slats make a hasty meal.

The jays are fond of nuts, and a keen observer will notice the frequent trips they make to the neighboring chestnut trees, probably bearing the nuts aloft, and storing them away in a hole of a partially de cayed tree against the time of need. Who has not heard a troop of jays in the corner of the woods make the air ring with their cries? and one can very seldom discover what it is all about.

In the summer we see the jay under less favorable conditions. Then he moves in and out noiselessly among the robins and song birds, breaking up their nests and destroying the eggs. The robins raise the alarm, and it is not an uncommon sight to see a jay put completely to flight by a mother-bird. The owls and the jays are always at odds. When the jay has discovered the owl's daylight retreat in an old hollow tree, he cries out wildly, and all the neighboring jays gather to help with the fun. With taunts they surround the owl, and the latter, horror-stricken, retreats to the farthest corner of his hiding-place. The jay, when disturbed by the crows in nesting, has been known to build within fifteen feet of human habitations. How wisely he knows the crows will not follow him there.

The jay builds a nest of brush and fine twigs about ten feet from the ground, at the intersection of the trunk and branches. The close-sitting mother, with her head nearly perpendicularly elevated, covers five eggs of ashen gray mottled with brown. The trips to and from the nest are models of secrecy. Woe unto any bird that ventures near the jay's tree during her reign! Two or three woolly fledgelings are the usual result of all this care and attention. And the mother-bird continues to cover and protect them till they are able to fly. Then some balmy evening the young ones will hop up on one of the nesting branches, and while dreamily watching the summer sun sink behind the western hills, will ponder on the new world that they will launch forth into on the morrow. The young jays usually flock with their parents until the following spring.—N. Y. Evangelist.

The Little Hero.

ONE of the pathetic little stories which John B. Gough used to tell with thrilling effect should teach happy, well cared-for little children to be grateful for all the good things God gives them. The orator went one day with a friend away up to a small garret room.

A feeble voice said, "Come in," and they went in.

There was no light, but as soon as their eyes were dilated to the gloom, they saw, lying on a heap of chips and shavings, a boy about ten years of age, pale, but with a singularly sweet face.

They asked the boy, "What are you doing there?"

"Hush, hush! I am hiding."

"Hiding? what for?"

The child showed his white delicate arms covered with bruises, and swollen.

"Who was it beat you like that?"

"Hush! don't tell him; my father did it."

"What for?"

"Poor father got drunk and beat me because I wouldn't steal."

"Did you ever steal?"

"Yes, sir, I was a thief once."

"Then why don't you steal now?"

"Because I went to the ragged school, and they taught me, 'Thou shalt not steal,' and told me about God in heaven. I will not steal, sir, if my father kills me."

Mr. Gough's friend said, "I don't know what to do with you. Here is a shilling. I will see what I can do for you."

The boy looked at it a moment, and then said:

"But, please, sir, wouldn't you like to hear my little hymn?"

They thought it strange that, lying there without food, without fire, bruised and beaten, he could sing a hymn. How could he sing the Lord's song in a strange land? But they said, "Yes, we will hear you."

And then, in a sweet, low voice, the child sang:

Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,
Look upon a little child;
Pity my infirmity,
Suffer me to come to Thee.

Fain would I to Thee be brought,
Gentle Lord, forbid it not;
In the kingdom of Thy grace
Give a little child a place.

"That's my little hymn; good-by!"

The gentleman went again in the morning, mounted the stairs, knocked at the door—no answer; opened it, and went in.

The shilling lay on the floor, and there, too, lay the boy, with a brave smile on his face, as if to make the best of it; and so he had—for he was dead.

In the night he had gone home.

An Explanation.

WHEN you see the baby walk
Step by step, and stumble,
Just remember, now he's here,
Both his wings are gone. Oh, dear!
Catch him, or he'll tumble.

When you hear the baby talk
Bit by bit, all broken,
Only think how he forgets
All his angel-words, and lets
Wonders go unspoken! —St. Nicholas.

Little Heads Together.

WORDS WITHIN WORDS.

Example: A way, in insensibility. A-path-y.

1. To stagger, in independently.
2. An animal, in earthenware.
3. A girl's name, in the High Priest of the Persians.
4. To wander in the mind, in small stones.
5. A frame on which to weave, in moody.
6. A measure, in barbarously.
7. A small animal, in a basket of wicker-work.
8. An opening, in anger. EDW.

PI.

Lttwgihi nda gfrhtliei,
Asdhosw meco dan og,
Rryem miech fo lshgie llsbe
Klinnigi hhrtgou het wsno. JOSEPH.

RIDDLE.

That my whole is ever on the move
All astronomers clearly prove.
The word curtailed, beyond dispute,
A joiner's tool will constitute.
Curtailed again and then, I ween,
A scheme or model will be seen.
S. H. JACKSON.

Answers to Puzzles of February 24th.

1. Arm. 2. Branch. 3. Bow. 4. Candle. 5. Cross. 6. Crown. 7. Darkness. 8. Dew. 9. Eye. 10. Flood. 11. Gold. 12. Girdle. 13. Harvest. 14. Incense. 15. Jewels. 16. Key. 17. Milk. 18. Night. 19. Oil. 20. Paradise. 21. Rock. 22. Sheep. 23. Tree. 24. Vine. 25. Water.

Correct answers from E. M. Clark, Rappie Bowne.

COUSIN LOIS requests original puzzles from the "Little Heads" and their friends.

Samuel Oakley Vander Poel, M.D., LL.D.

BORN AT KINDERHOOK, N. Y., FEB 22D, 1824.
DIED AT WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 12TH, 1886.

IN the death of Dr. Vander Poel the State has lost an honored citizen, the medical profession a distinguished member, and the Reformed Dutch Church a friend whose worth cannot be measured by ordinary standards.

The secular newspapers have told in outline the story of his public and professional life of service, but from the very nature of the man have omitted any reference to his religious character. Yet those who knew him well realized that he was essentially a religious man. They saw exemplified in him those principles which are the basis of Christianity. He was a noble type of self-contained manhood.

God had richly endowed him with power, and in the knowledge of this he stood up before all the world to do his appointed work. No matter how great the task might be, if it came within the bounds of his duty it was carried through. He never drew back because of grave responsibilities and possible failure. He lived up to the principle that

"because right is right to follow right
Were wisdom, in the scorn of consequence."

This sense of endowment from God, and its correlative of responsibility to God, seemed paramount in Dr. Vander Poel. Smaller men would have become proportionately egotistical, but this very self-containment made him supremely unselfish.

His acceptance of high and difficult positions from the government was based on this principle, and his successful conduct of every office of trust was largely due to it. An illustration of this was shown in his election to the position of President of the N. Y. Medical Society a few years ago. He accepted the office because it involved a principle. For the issue was an important one, and he was recognized as the one in whom it centred. On his election depended the repeal of an unrighteous law. The members of the society, which meant all the old school practitioners, were bound by oath to have no professional intercourse with physicians who differed from them. If a man were apparently dying, and his homœopathic attendant felt that the only hope for life lay in the possible treatment a physician of the old school might suggest, that physician, without violating his pledge, could not consult with the other as to the case. Nor were such contingencies unusual. Dr. Vander Poel not only saw the wrong in this restriction, but felt called upon to remove it. On this issue he fought his way against powerful and deep-rooted prejudice to office. Others in such a contest would have grown bitter, he never changed his kind feelings toward his antagonistic brethren.

His sense of duty in small things as well as great was remarkable. I visited at his home on Staten Island when he was Health Officer of the Port of New York. He invited me to go with him by boat to the fever hospital, a long distance away on the lower bay. The day was damp and raw and the doctor was suffering from a throat trouble. He had been there the day before, and, learning that there was no special call for him, I asked whether under the circumstances his assistant ought not to take his place. The sense of his reply was, "I am responsible for the well being of those people and this visit is in the line of duty." I doubt if he ever failed to respond cheerfully to any professional call. As a family physician he never spared himself.

And his benevolence was equally unselfish. His generous gifts to the Church and her educational interests tell to us all a lesson of stewardship. But I am sure that they are but a small proportion of the wealth he gave and the help he afforded to causes that represent Christ in the world.

It was largely through his gifts and efforts that the Charity Organization Society of New York was established and maintained, and it is but one of many of the mediums for doing good he supported.

More than once have I taken him at his word and asked him to visit poor sick folk, which he not only did, but also supplied the means for obtaining necessities that they lacked. He brought to bear in their behalf just as much skill and patience as though the sufferers were millionaires. I do not know his Albany record, and it was there the greater portion of his life was spent, but doubt not that if the history of the professional life of Dr. Vander Poel is ever written its longest and brightest page will tell of service rendered to those of whom the Great Physician spoke when He said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

Such a man is a gentleman, and Dr. Vander Poel was this through and through. He came of an honored line and was reasonably proud of his good old Dutch name and pure descent. The aristocracy of intellect, of heart, and of blood, all found in him a true type. This very union of traits made him an unassuming man. Not only so, it led to that fine courtesy shown to everyone, however circumstanced. To see the life of Dr. Vander Poel was to understand the meaning of noblesse oblige. The greatness of his gentleness made him very lovable. Men, women and children as they met him were drawn to him. The instinct of my little girl made her run to him as soon as he came within the room. In no man I have ever known has this characteristic shone out more brightly. Only those privileged to enter his home realized the strength and beauty of his influence there.

Let me name one other trait that marked Dr. Vander Poel. He was pre-eminently a reverent man. The Fifth Commandment in all its wide scope was a law of his life. Drs. Clark and Coe, his pastors in Albany and New York, must have valued the power of his example as a worshipper of God in the Church. And he honored God in every phase of life. I have seen him under different circumstances, but in every place could say "that man honors God." And because of their office, as well as for their manhood, he honored clergymen. He said to me once, "You have a high position to fill as a minister of Christ." His filial reverence for his mother is for me a cherished memory. As I recall her she was a beautiful old lady, dwelling under her son's roof. His deference, his constant anticipation of her wishes and needs, made her seem like a very queen in that home. After her death he said to me, "Was she not a beautiful type of a gentlewoman?" So she had in him a true mother's reward. I believe they now walk together in the light of God.

We will see him no more here. My own home seems very lonely as I try to realize it. But thinking of him and his completed service say,

"On God and godlike men we build our trust."

J. R. D.

Astronomical Notes.

ONCE in eight years Venus is visible to the eye at midday. Such an event occurred in February, 1878, and should be enjoyed again this month. The only possible hindrance, besides clouds and mists, is the low southern declination of the planet.

On the 26th Venus will again be at her greatest brilliancy, will precede the sun about two hours in time, and will be about eleven degrees south of the sun. This distance can be readily reckoned by any one who will measure with his eye the line subtended by the three stars in the belt of Orion, now so conspicuous during the evening. Those three stars subtend about three degrees. Now it is quite probable that one who finds the brilliant planet in the early morning of the 26th, an hour before sunrise, will be able to follow it with his eye all the day. Indeed, it is not unlikely that this will be possible on the 25th, 26th and 27th. It is an advantage, in endeavoring to find the planet after the sun is up, to stand on the west side of a tall building at about half past ten o'clock in the morning and look directly south at a point about eleven degrees lower than the sun. Between about ten and twelve o'clock Venus will pass over Broadway, the buildings on the east side afford shade for the eyes, and that side of the street is about as good a lookout as can be found.

Professor Peters, of Kiel, has been making some interesting computations in regard to the star 61 Cygni, which is regarded as nearer to the earth than any other star in the northern stellar hemisphere. For some time the parallax of this star has been reckoned at from one-half to one-third of a second. A second of parallax means 200,000 radii of the earth's orbit, that is, 200,000 times about 93,000,000 of miles. One-third of a second, being a smaller angle, is three times that distance, and a half a second double the distance. If the mean is taken 61 Cygni is about 45,000,000,000,000 of miles from the earth. It is a double star in the telescope, the components being close together. Prof. Peters finds by careful reckoning that these stars revolve around each other once in 523 years; that the sum of the mass of the two is equal to about one-half of the mass of the sun; and that the distance between them is about 6,500,000,000 of miles. From such a reckoning one obtains a fair idea of the vastness of the inter-stellar spaces. The two stars of 61 Cygni are one to the eye, are very near each other in the telescope, and yet six thousand millions of miles separate them. And our admiration of the refined methods of astronomy is heightened when we find a reckoner weighing two bodies so far away and telling us that together they are equal to about one-half the weight of our sun.

Both Mars and Jupiter are in opposition this month, that is, the earth passes between them and the sun. They are, therefore, just now at their greatest apparent size and lustre. Mars is well up in the eastern sky early in the evening and Jupiter appears a short distance below it. The view of Mars is fairly good but not of the best. Jupiter is much inferior to what it has been during recent years, and as it falls to a lower southern declination after this year will not be seen to as much advantage as at present for some time to come. F.

The General Outlook.

....The American McAll Association, which recently held its anniversary in Philadelphia, reports $7,122 as its receipts during the three last months of 1885. The McAll Mission is doing in Paris a work that no other agency can do. It is twelve years since Mr. McAll went to Paris and his heart was touched, and by a way he knew not he was led into this blessed work. To-day there are thirty mission stations, filled every night in the week with intent listeners. These stations are not in the back streets, but in the avenues and on the boulevards. Many conversions take place, and the influence is slowly spreading throughout France.

....A deputation of Presbyterians presented to Earl Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant, an address of welcome on behalf of the General Assembly. The address assures the Government of the unswerving loyalty of the Assembly, insists that the maintenance of the Union in its fullest integrity is essential to the peace of Ireland, and declares half a million Irish Presbyterians will oppose to the utmost any attempt to sever the Union.

....A revival in the Congregational church in Williamstown, Mass., has brought in more than ninety converts.

....At Tabor College, Iowa, there has been a revival in which almost all the students have been brought to Christ.

....In the Roman Catholic parish of St. John the Evangelist, at Syracuse, N. Y., 100 have organized the Society of the Holy Name, the object of which is the extirpation of blasphemy.

....The late John B. Gough leaves $1,000 each to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, American Home Missionary Society of New York, American Seamen's Friend Society of New York, Children's Friend Society of Worcester, and National Temperance Publication Society of New York. He spent liberally for benevolent purposes while living; was constantly giving away money, and hence did not leave a large estate.

....Four young men of Jewish extraction, and members of the Hebrew Christian Church of this city, have entered theological seminaries.

....This year Easter day falls on the 25th of April. Not once during the past century has it occurred at so late a date; it is the latest date on which it can occur.

....Twenty Methodist missions have been planted in Chicago, Ill., within two years.

....During the last ten years colored Methodists in sixteen Southern Conferences have contributed $86,775 for missions.

....A lady in France has bequeathed 300,000 francs (£52,000) to the Caisse de Retraite, a retiring fund for superannuated Protestant pastors.

....John Smith, a Scotch boy, born in Brechin, which he left 70 years ago for this country, landed in Boston, Mass., with an English shilling and a Bible. The shilling grew, and the Congregationalist tells what he did in the years which closed last month. "In company with his partners he built 'Brechin Hall' (the library at Andover), in honor of his birthplace; the 'Tenement Schools' on 'Andover Hill,' in Brechin, in honor of his American home; and 'Memorial Hall,' in Andover, in honor of those who gave their lives in defending our national flag. Such other gifts as $10,000 to Phillips Academy, $4,000 to Abbot Academy, $5,000 to Oberlin College, illustrate his large and wise way of giving."

....A committee of the temperance party in the House of Commons has prepared two memorials to the Government, one demanding that the Government support the Sunday Closing bill and the other favoring local option, under Mr. Chamberlain's County Government bill. The memorials are receiving many signatures. It is expected that 320 members of Parliament will sign the local option memorial.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The depositors in the broken Dime Savings Bank of New Brunswick expect to get about fifty per cent of their deposits....Alderman Jaehne was shown in Broadway investigation to be a receiver of stolen goods.....A number of the strikers on the Missouri Pacific were pursued and captured; a train was run over the track....Henry J. Hall committed suicide at the Fifth Avenue Hotel; he was probably insane....Dr. S. O. Vanderpoel, a well-known physician and surgeon, died suddenly in Washington....Chief Mahedy, of the fire department of New York, was run over and killed by a fire engine.

MONDAY, 15.—Placards have been issued in Lyons, France, calling on the people to massacre the bourgeoise ...Large meetings of unemployed workmen were held in London and Manchester, England....The Mexican Government is investigating the killing of Captain Crawford....Mr. Gladstone's plan for home rule for Ireland is said to be disapproved by his Cabinet ...Subscriptions for a Pasteur Institute have reached the amount of 250,000 francs....Thirty rebels were killed in a skirmish near Suakim.....An immense socialistic meeting was held in Glasgow....The funeral of Senator J. F. Miller was held in the Senate Chamber Saturday ...Ten strikers were arrested in St. Louis and freight trains are moving on the Texas & Pacific Railroad.....Strenuous efforts are being made to effect a compromise between the employers and the strikers in the bituminous coal region....The steamship "Oregon" was sunk in a collision with a schooner. No lives lost....A conversation by telephone was held with parties at Washington and New York....The House of Refuge in Toledo, Ohio, was burned by incendiaries....Dr. Austin Flint died in New York on Saturday.

TUESDAY, 16.—Mr. Gladstone occupied his usual place in the House of Commons yesterday....Earthquake shocks were felt in Spain and Germany....Thirteen Russian mujiks arrived in Paris to be treated by Pasteur for wolf bites....The Hon. Michael Hahn, Republican member of Congress from Louisiana, was found dead in his room at Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C. On the announcement of his death both Houses adjourned....A man was assaulted by railroad strikers in St. Louis. ..Strikers in the soft coal region are increasing....Commissioner Peck reports on the grievances of street railroad workmen....Detailed accounts are given of the sinking of the "Oregon"....The Morgan sale ended yesterday.

FINANCIAL.—Imports of merchandise at this port last week were $8,897,357, and exports $6,254,223 The Associated Banks for the week ending last Saturday report loans $358 888 500; specie $87,263,000; legal tenders $32,194,700; deposits $395,374,600; circulation $7-690,500; surplus of reserve $20,614 055 Money on call 2 to 2½ per cent. Foreign exchange is quiet at $4 87 1 2 for 60 day bills and $4 89 for demand.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, March 13, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 16,619 pks.; exports 1,041 pks.

Here is a market carried clear through the year with practically no export trade (not one average month's shipments for the whole twelve), and yet the product is going out all taken, and with clean floors for the new make. So bare are the interior markets that butter has been sold here, although at moderate prices, (mostly at 15a16c.), to go to Rome, Utica, Watertown and Albany, and prices for old N. Y. State butter are no higher than three or four weeks ago. The clearing up of odds and ends N. Y. State dairy has been made at from 11a14a15c. Eighty odd good dairy firkins were offered to-day at 18c. A line of 40 firkins choice Delaware County creamery was sold this week at 22c. Old low-priced Western butter is mostly taken. Fresh Western comes scantily, and fine new butter coming in now is all quick sale at good prices. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery.—	@35
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery...33	@35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh. 28	@30
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire ...24	@25
Fair to good dairies.....16	@22
Fine summer firkins 20	@23
Fresh Western imitation creamery... ....—	@23
Western store-packed butter.....7	@10
Winter make, common roll butter.....9	@13
Grease.....4	@5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 14,420 boxes; exports 26,679 boxes.

There have been sales here this week of say 27,000 boxes of cheese for export. This is a grateful relief to the market at this time, and encourages firmness among holders who are asking a fractional advance in price. The Marshfield October make were offered on 'Change at 10¼c., and had 10c. bid. Fancy white cheese were offered at 10⅜c., and had 9½c. bid. The market is in light stock, but it has flashed up and flashed out so often before that holders feel wary of it. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese.....	9½@10
" " white "	9½@ 9¾
Good early useful cheese.....	8 @ 9
Skimmed cheese	2 @ 5

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 21,141 bbls. and 21,098 boxes.

Sales on the Exchange this day were 25 cases Indiana, cases to be returned, at 14¼c.; 3 more 25's followed this sale, making 100 cases altogether at 14¼c. 25, 50 or 100 bbls. Iowa firsts were offered at 14½c., and had 14¼c. bid. State limed firsts were offered at 13c., and had 10c. bid. 10 bbls. Ohio firsts sold at 14¼c , then followed 7 several sales of Western eggs in 10 bbl. lots at 14¼c. 50 bbls. M'd firsts were offered, to be delivered free from dock, at 14½c., and had 14¼c. bid. Lots of 25 and 50 cases from Kansas, Illinois and Ohio were offered at 14¼c., and had 14c. bid. Seller next week had 13½c. bid. Seller all the year was offered at 12¼c. At the close 50 cases Mo. firsts were offered at 14c. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz..... 14	@15
Southern and Western, per doz. 13¾	@14½

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

A VIOLENT COUGH CONTINUED through the winter often brings Consumption in the spring. Soothe and tone the irritated and weakened lungs with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and the Cough yields and the danger disappears. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

100 Doses One Dollar is inseparably connected with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and is true of no other medicine. A bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses, and will last a month, while others will average to last not over a week. Use only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

All the elements which nature requires, to make the hair beautiful and abundant, are supplied in Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation keeps the scalp free from dandruff, prevents the hair from becoming dry and harsh, and makes it flexible and glossy.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

MARRIAGES.

THORP—ABELL.—March 10, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. B. C. Lippincott, Chester Thorp, of Sleightburgh, N. Y., to Linda, daughter of Edward S. Abell, of Port Ewen, N. Y.

WOODWARD—EAGLESTON.—March 10, by the Rev. S. W. Roe, S.T.D., A. Henry Woodward, of Newark, N. J , and Miss Jennie Eagleston, youngest daughter of Lewis Eagleston, Esq., of Cairo, N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

LIVINGSTON.—At her late residence in Livingston, Columbia Co , March 12, Cornelia H. Livingston, aged 72 years.

MEYERS.—Rev. Abraham H. Meyers, one of the oldest ministers of our Reformed Church, died at Port Ewen, N. Y., March 2, 1886, in the 85th year of his age. He was born at Westerlo, N. Y , July 4, 1801; was graduated from Union College in 1827, and New Brunswick Theological Seminary in 1830.

He ministered to thirteen different churches, including Port Ewen and the adjoining Church of Esopus. His last charge was at Linlithgo, which he resigned in 1878, and was declared emeritus. His ministry covered a period of 48 years.

The Master gave him precious seals to his ministry, during which he received 507 members, 408 on confession and 99 by certificate. Two gracious seasons of revival were enjoyed by him—one in his early pastorate at Beaverdam, where 84 were added to the church on confession at one time, and the other in his later years at Germantown, where 47 were admitted to membership. Mr. Meyers was a guileless man; humble, retiring, and intent only on preaching Christ and Him crucified.

In the words of one who knew him well, "he was a Christful man, in whom the truth was the staple of life and the sum of its teachings. It pervaded his sermons like an incarnation. It was the web and woof of all his public ministrations."

The peculiar and keen trials through which he passed seemed to mellow his Christian character. He never uttered a word of complaint, but was always cheerful, trusting with childlike confidence in the promises of his Covenant God and Father. His piety encircled him as a halo.

His Master called him very suddenly. Stricken with paralysis, he was never conscious, but quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

His funeral took place in the Port Ewen Church, and was largely attended. Revs. J. N. Voorhis, Dr. J. G. Van Slyke, N. F. Chapman and J. M. Compton conducted the devotional exercises. Addresses were delivered by Revs. Dr. Van Santvoord, S. T. Cole and B. C. Lippincott.

His mortal remains were buried in the cemetery at Port Ewen. B. C. L.

VAN ZANDT.—At Wallkill, N. Y., March 8, after a week's illness, of pneumonia, in the hope of a blessed immortality, Mrs. Elizabeth Platt, widow of Rev. A. B. Van Zandt, D.D., and daughter of Israel Platt, of Hudson, N. Y., aged 64. Her funeral services were held on 10th inst., at the Brick Church at Montgomery of which her husband was for fourteen years the pastor, conducted by the pastor, Rev. F. S. Schenck, Rev. Dr. Schoonmaker, Rev. R. De Witt and Rev. Dr. Mills, the latter preaching the sermon. Her remains were laid to rest by the side of those of her husband in the new cemetery near by.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA will meet in regular spring session in the Reformed Church of Syracuse, N. Y., on Tuesday, April 6th, at 7.30 P.M. Consistorial records should be presented.

C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ILLINOIS will meet in regular session in the Church of Irving Park, on the second Tuesday (13th) of April, at 2 P.M. Classical dues to be paid. J. S. JORALMON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in stated session on the first Tuesday (6th) of April in the Reformed Church of Boardville, at 10.30 A.M. Rev. J. Russell Verbrycke is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days before the meeting.

S. T. SEARLE, S. C.

THE Hudson River Ministerial Association will meet in the First Reformed Church of Kingston on Monday, March 22d, at 3 P.M. Exegesis of Isa. 53:8, by Rev. C. H. Polhemus; sermon by Rev. E. N. Sebring; essay by Rev. John Forsyth, D D., on "The Primitive Puritans." Members expecting to attend please send postals to Rev. J. G. Van Slyke, D.D., Kingston, N. Y. J. B. DRURY, Sec.

PASTORS' ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.—Following is the list of subjects to be discussed at the meetings of the Pastors' Association, Monday mornings at 10 o'clock, at the rooms, 34 Vesey street, from March 15 to Sept. 28, 1886: March 15, "Relative Place of Preaching and Pastoral Work in Ministerial Effort," Rev. E. G. Read; March 22, "Typology," Rev. J. F. Riggs; March 29, "Feasibility of an Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System," Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor; April 5, "A Study of Gibbon's Five Causes," Rev. D. Van Pelt; April 12, "Vacant Pulpits and Unemployed Ministers," Rev. E. J. Runk; April 19, "Rights of Property," Mr. Henry George; April 26, "The Resurrection," Rev. A. V. V. Raymond; May 3, "Baptism for the Dead," exegesis of 1 Cor. 15:29, Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers; May 10, "Progressive Orthodoxy," Rev. Dr. A. G. Vermilye; May 17, "Evangelistic Work," Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton; May 24, "Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic," Rev. Dr. J. M. Dickson; May 31, "Dr. Shedd's Doctrine of Eternal Punishment," Rev. Dr. G. S. Bishop; June 7, "The Work of the Holy Spirit," Rev. Dr. G. H. Smyth; June 14, "Reminiscences of the General Synod," discussion; June 21 "Is Ordination Necessary to the Constitution of a Minister?" Rev. Dr. H. C. Berg; Sept. 13, "Vacation Experiences," discussion; Sept 20, "Paul a Castaway," exegesis of 1 Cor. 9:27, Rev. Dr. D. Cole; Sept. 27, "Liturgical Position of the Reformed Church," Rev. Dr. E. A. Reed.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. William D. Perry at No. 95 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR FEBRUARY, 1886.

From Church, Acquackanonck, N.J., $36; Mina, N.Y., 1.37; Flatbush, L.I., 60.57; Flatbush, Jno. Antonides, 200; Park, Jersey City, N.J., 15.23; Alton, Iowa, 20; Zeeland, Mich., 22.30; 1st Athens, N.Y., 10; Nassau, N.Y., 8; Clarkstown, N.Y., 13.38; Mount Vernon, N.Y., 32.56; Schoharie, N.Y., 13.86; Rev. J. H. Van Doren, Gallupville, N.Y., 5; Individual, 1st Hackensack, N.J., 12.50; North Church, West Troy, N.Y., 17.28; Church-on-Heights, Brooklyn, N.Y., 132.79; S. S., Evan. St. Peter's Church, Williamsburgh, L.I., 1; Ladies' Society, Evan. St. Peter's Church, Williamsburgh, L.I., 17; Belleville, N.J., 12.15; Wawarsing, N.Y., 4.87; Clover Hill, N.J., 3.81; Oyster Bay, L.I., 7.28; Holmdel, N.J., 28: Warwick, N.Y., 37.11; Paramus, N.J., 19.56; Deer Park, Port Jervis, N.Y., 19; Millbrook, N.Y., 5.15; 1st New Brunswick, N.J., 60.18; Twelfth Street, Brooklyn, L.I., 35; Pottersville, N.J., 2.03; Collegiate Church, New York, 417.12; Collegiate Church, S. B. Schieffelin, 50; 3d Raritan, N.J., 25.70; 1st Claverack, N.Y., 9.25. Total, $1,375.05.

SPECIAL FUNDS.—From John Lefferts, Esq., for Northwestern Academy, $50; "Beta," Brooklyn, N.Y., for Northwestern Academy, 75; P. N. Schoonmaker, Esq., for Northwestern Academy, 200; "H," for Student, 10. Total, $335.

F. J. HOSFORD, Treasurer,
34 Vesey Street, N. Y.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith is its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

JAMES PYLE'S
O. K. TRADE MARK
PEARLINE
The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS,
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
To Consumptives.—Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime has now been before the public twenty years, and has steadily grown in favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphate of Lime with pure Cod-Liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. This article can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the disgusting nausea which is such an objection to the Cod-Liver Oil when taken without Lime. It is prescribed by the regular faculty. Sold by the proprietor, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, and by all druggists.

SCROFULA

Humors,

Erysipelas,

Canker, and

Catarrh,

Can be cured by purifying the blood with

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofulous Humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lindale, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 909 Albany st., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt-Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Millie Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. BOX 1916 Boston, Mass

CURE FOR THE DEAF
Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums
PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.

The Church.

As I Came Down from Lebanon.

AS I came down from Lebanon,
Came winding, wandering slowly down
Through mountain passes bleak and brown,
The cloudless day was well nigh done.
The city, like an opal set
In emerald, showed each minaret
Afire with radiant beams of sun,
And glistened orange, fig, and lime,
Where song-birds made melodious chime,
As I came down from Lebanon.

As I came down from Lebanon,
Like lava, in the dying glow,
Through olive orchards far below,
I saw the murmuring river run;
And 'neath the wall, within the sand,
Swart sheiks from distant Samarcand,
With precious spices they had won,
Lay long and languidly in wait
Till they might pass the guarded gate,
As I came down from Lebanon.

As I came down from Lebanon,
I saw strange men from lands afar,
In mosque and square and gay bazaar,—
The Magi that the Moslem shun,
And grave effendi from Stamboul
Who sherbet sipped in corners cool;
And from the balconies o'errun
With roses gleamed the eyes of those
Who dwell in still seraglios,
As I came down from Lebanon.

As I came down from Lebanon,
The flaming flower of daytime died,
And Night, arrayed as is a bride
Of some great king in garments spun
Of purple and the finest gold,
Outbloomed in glories manifold,
Until the moon, above the dun
And darkening desert, void of shade,
Shone like a keen Damascus blade,
As I came down from Lebanon.

—Clinton Scollard, in Lippincott's Magazine.

The Congo Mission.

WE find in the National Baptist the report of some remarks upon this subject recently made in a conversational address by Dr. A. Sims, who for three years and a half has been associated with the Livingstone Inland Mission. The matter is not only interesting in itself but also important, as shedding light upon a point much controverted in some quarters just now as to the feasibility of conducting missions successfully in a region so full of malaria and usually so costly in the life of European or American laborers. Dr. Sims spoke substantially as follows:

"The Congo Free State is an irregular quadrilateral, say 900 miles square. The King of Belgium is the ruler of the State. The revenue is to be derived from a tax on exports. The exports now amount to about £2,500,000.

"The Congo region may be divided into the Upper Congo and the Lower Congo. The inhabitants of these two regions differ widely. Upon the Lower Congo, the natives are not cannibals, though a man may sometimes eat a bit of flesh from the body of an enemy. But on the Upper Congo, cannibalism is a very common practice. They make wars for the purpose of taking captives whom they may eat. They are much more savage than the people of the Lower Congo. When a king dies, they kill, perhaps, ten people in the most savage manner. Their houses are adorned with skulls; you may see one in the middle of the roof-tree, and one at each end. The streets are sometimes paved with skulls.

"Upon the Lower Congo, there is rarely murder except when the people are crazed with rum.

"They believe in fetiches. A man will hang up in his cornfield a fetich; and if any one injures the field it is believed that the fetich will kill him. They believe in witchcraft. If a man dies, it is believed that some one bewitched him; and they try to find out who it was, that they may put him to death. And sometimes they try to find who bewitched the second man so as to make him bewitch the first man, so that two are killed in consequence of the death of the first. But to some extent this is passing away. They are coming to believe that when a man dies, it was God who did it.

"The country along the Upper Congo is ravaged by Arabs, in pursuit of slaves. These Arabs were sent by the Sultan of Zanzibar to conquer the country. They are certainly the most wicked people on the face of the earth. In travelling along the Upper Congo, one may see villages that once contained 5,000 or 6,000 people, now desolate. The Arabs surrounded the village and burned it, and either killed or carried off the people. Sometimes they capture the women and children, and then send word to the men who have escaped alive to the woods, 'If you send us so much ivory, you can have back your wives and children.' Then they carry off the ivory, and are not bothered with the slaves. The authorities of the Free State are not yet strong enough to prevent these slave hunts; but they are gradually gathering strength.

"From the mouth of the Congo to the beginning of the Falls, or rapids, is about 125 miles. This part of the river can be traversed by the largest vessels. Then come the falls, which extend about 180 miles. The descent is 900 feet. Up this ascent, everything must be carried by natives on their heads. The steamer 'Henry Reed' was taken to pieces, 600 in all, and one piece was given to each native. With it, was given to him a paper describing his load. In five days they had reached the half-way town; then in as much longer they reached the end of the carry. They came into the yard of the missionary, and said, 'Master, here is my load; look at the paper; see, it is all right, now please give me my pay, and I will go home.' And not a single rivet was lacking.

"Above the falls a steamer can go 1,200 miles on the main stream, or 3,000 miles on the stream and its branches.

"The Upper Congo is more healthful than the Lower. And it is much more healthful than formerly. The worst of the work in building houses is done. And the missionaries build much better houses than at first. The houses that are being built now, cost say £300 each, and will last for 30 years, with an occasional repairing of the roof, which is made of grass.

"A man who goes out as a missionary to the Congo must be not less than 25 years old, of good health, of sound judgment, careful about adapting himself to the climate, as to eating, drinking and exercise. One man came out and insisted on eating bacon, and such things. In a few months he was on his way back with his liver out of order. Total abstinence is one of the absolute conditions of health. A man must learn what not to do. A young man came out and insisted on walking 18 miles a day for two days. In a short time he was dead.

"And a man must not be frightened. There were three men who came out from England, and on the way out the people on board frightened them, telling them that they would die. The men made their wills and expected to die. Shortly after landing, they were taken with fever; they gave right up; the other missionaries tried to arouse them; but they sank down and died.

"What has been done in the way of missions? We have about twenty converts. The people come to hear us. When I went to Palaballa, I could only speak to the king and a wife or two and one or two servants. Now we have 125 to hear us. At Banza Mantika, a man gave up a lucrative trade as a fetich doctor and became a convert. At the same place we have a convert who distinctly helps us spiritually by his prayers and by his life. We do not believe in working chiefly for the children. We have now seven stations and 15 European missionaries. Some of the missionaries who desire to be economical subsist on three pence a day for food.

"At Stanley Pool, large numbers come in for trade, as many as 200 a day. The Upper Congo is full of ivory; there are also rubber forests; there is red-wood, worth £30 a ton in England.

"The Free State prepared the way for the mission, opening roads, making bridges, etc."

Dr. Sims is exceedingly clear in his descriptions, and speaks with charming simplicity and naturalness. He is an enthusiast in reference to the field. He will probably shortly visit one or two of the Southern institutions for the purpose of interesting the colored young men and women in the African Mission.

NEGATIVE goodness! Positive righteousness! I say, brethren, when I am right, let me be right and right all over. I say I despise all sin, but brother, we need another touch of Divine power, and that's the desire to pitch in, roll up your sleeves and go to work for God as if you were hired by the day, and work for heaven. That's the kind of Christianity to take this world.—Rev. Sam. Jones.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

M. 2 Kings 23: 1-13; Jer. 8: 20-9: 16.
T. Jer. 25: 1-19; 2 Kings 25: 1-12.
W. Dan. 1: 1-21; 3: 16-28.
T. Dan. 5: 1-28; Ezra 1: 1-4; 3: 8-13.
F. Neh. 1: 1-2: 20.
S. Neh. 8: 1-18.
S. Esther 4: 1-5: 3.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

March 28th.—Review.

Golden Text.—"Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses. Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men."—Ps. 107: 6 8.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"For I know that the LORD is great, and that our LORD is above all gods."—Ps. 135: 5.

INTRODUCTION.

THE lessons for this quarter have been occupied with events scattered through a period of about 400 years. It has been impossible to even touch upon all the points of interest, but those that have been dwelt upon may be regarded as giving the key to the understanding of the rest. This period was one of great changes in the world, and of preparation for still greater changes to come. The star of empire which, up to this time, had been steadily travelling eastward, was soon to pursue her westward course, which she has ever since been following. The student of universal history may find much of instruction in the inspired pages which record the remote beginnings of those influences, which have changed the face of the earth and have made history what it is. Two thoughts run through all these lessons, as indeed through all the Bible, viz., God's wrath against sin, and His gracious dealings with those who have deserved the outpourings of His anger. We shall arrange the lessons for review in three groups, following the natural divisions of the history itself.

I. BEFORE THE CAPTIVITY.—LESSONS 1–4.

LESSON FIRST.—JOSIAH AND THE BOOK OF THE LAW.—2 KINGS 22: 1-13.

"He did that which was right in the sight of the LORD."—2 Kings 22: 2.

The reign of the boy king Josiah was full of promise for a reform in Israel. The king was zealous, and had earnest co-workers, but he could not overcome the downward tendency which had become fixed. The sentence had already been passed, "Ephraim is joined to idols, let him alone." Josiah's effort was the last attempt made to save the nation from its threatened destruction.

LESSON SECOND.—JEREMIAH PREDICTING THE CAPTIVITY.—JER. 8: 20; 9: 16.

"The harvest is passed, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."—Jer. 8: 20.

Jeremiah's great work was to show the people their sins, warn them of the coming wrath, and prepare them to profit by the chastening which could no longer be averted. He met with little appreciation, and was counted as an enemy by the people fascinated by their sins.

LESSON THIRD.—THE FAITHFUL RECHABITES.—JER. 35: 12-19.

"For unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment."—Jer. 35: 18.

In striking contrast with the rebelliousness of Israel is placed the steadfastness of these children of the desert. They honored Jonadab as though he were God; the Jews disregarded Jehovah as though He were man. It is the spirit of their obedience rather than its mode that is praised and rewarded by Jehovah.

LESSON FOURTH.—THE CAPTIVITY OF JUDAH.—2 KINGS 25: 1-12.

"By the rivers of Babylon there we sat down, yea we wept when we remembered Zion."—Ps. 137: 1.

The two great sieges of Jerusalem form almost the saddest pictures that history presents. The sufferings and desperation of the people are scarcely conceivable. Jeremiah might well say, in anticipation of these miseries, "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people."

II.—IN CAPTIVITY.—LESSONS 5, 6, 7, 11.

LESSON FIFTH.—DANIEL IN BABYLON.—DAN. 1: 8-21.

"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word."—Ps. 119: 9.

Adversity brings out the wonders of God's grace in giving strength and comfort to the afflicted. Daniel and his three friends were made conspicuous illustrations of the sufficiency of Divine grace. With God on their side, they fought against the world, and conquered.

LESSON SIXTH.—THE FIERY FURNACE.—DAN. 3: 16-28.

"Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace."—Dan. 3: 17.

The enmity of the world against the faithful Hebrews found its fullest expression in the attempt to coerce them into conformity to its own ungodliness. Death itself had no terrors to frighten these brave souls from duty. They feared nothing but sin. The presence of one like unto the Son of God was their safety, as it is ours.

LESSON SEVENTH.—THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.—DAN. 5: 1-12; 25-28.

"Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting."—Dan. 5: 17.

God did not confine Himself to interposing for the deliverance of His servants in time of peril. He showed Himself to Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar as the Judge of the whole earth. The king's daring profanity met with sudden and well-merited requital. His careless ease led to utter ruin.

LESSON ELEVENTH.—ESTHER'S PETITION.—ESTH. 4: 10–17; 5: 1–3.

"So I will go in unto the king, which is not according to the law, and if I perish, I perish."—Esth. 4: 16.

During the captivity, and while the great tyrant Xerxes was upon the throne, the Jews were placed in great danger. A decree had been issued commanding their extermination on a certain day. God had in His Providence raised Esther to the throne for just this emergency, and her pleading with God availed to secure for her a successful hearing from the king. The feast of Purim is observed in commemoration of their deliverance from the hands of the wicked.

III. AFTER THE RETURN.—LESSONS 8, 9, 10, 12.

LESSON EIGHTH.—THE SECOND TEMPLE.—EZEK. 1: 1–4; 3: 8–13.

"They praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid."—Ezek. 3: 11.

When the LORD had raised up Cyrus and brought him to His foot, the way was opened for the return of the remnant of Israel to the land of their fathers. The proclamation of the king giving permission to return was welcomed by a large party, who returned under the lead of Ezra the scribe. In the midst of weakness, sin, and discouragement, they began the work of rebuilding the temple. The tears and hosannas of the people were mingled on the day when the foundation was laid.

LESSON NINTH.—NEHEMIAH'S PRAYER. NEH. 1: 1–11.

"Give us help from trouble, for vain is the help of man."—Ps. 108: 12.

Nehemiah was among the number of those who remained in the East at the time of the return. He was not destitute of sympathy with his countrymen who had undertaken the great work of rebuilding the city of Jerusalem. Moved by the story of their sad plight, he sought help of God, and gave himself to the work of rebuilding the walls of the city and of reforming the people.

LESSON TENTH.—READING THE LAW.—NEH. 8: 1–12.

"So they read in the book, in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading."—Neh. 8: 8.

The people at large were in dense ignorance of the law, and this public reading seemed to be the best and quickest way of making them familiar with its teachings. Ezra was zealous, not only upon this occasion, but throughout his career, for the Word of the LORD, and it is probable that we owe the present form of most of the Old Testament Scriptures to him as compiler or editor.

LESSON TWELFTH. — MESSIAH'S MESSENGER.—MAL. 3: 1–6; 4: 1–6.

"Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me."—Mal. 3: 1.

The closing words of the Old Testament are mingled tones of promise and threatening. The coming Messiah is revealed as purifier and judge, as well as deliverer. "Who may abide the day of His coming?"

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. "The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul."—Ps. 19: 7.

2. "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart."—Ps. 95: 7, 8.

3. "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee."—Ex. 20: 12.

4. "The wages of sin is death."—Rom. 6: 23.

5. "Them that honor me I will honor."—2 Sam. 2: 30.

6. "The righteous are delivered out of trouble."—Prov. 11: 8.

7. "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ."—2 Cor. 5: 10.

8. "Neither count I my life dear unto myself."—Acts 20: 24.

9. "The glory of the later house shall be greater than the former, saith the LORD of hosts, and in this place will I give peace."—Hag. 2: 9.

10. "Cast thy burden on the LORD, and he shall sustain thee."—Ps. 55: 22.

11. "The entrance of thy words giveth light."—Ps. 119: 130.

12. "Surely I come quickly."—Rev. 22: 20.

The Worth of Purpose.

NOT only shall we think wiser and grander purposes when we mature them in advance, there is also a solidifying and invigorating power in a long purpose, clearly defined. You can generally tell from a man's gait whether he has a purpose. Plan intensifies. Pursuance of a purpose makes our work solid and consecutive. Plan concentrates energies as a burning-glass does sunbeams. Shiftlessness is mostly only another name for aimlessness. Purpose directs energy, and purpose makes energy. When we see the target, we stretch the bow. Light in the eye is tension in the arm. We can, because we think we can. Power is with a good deal of accuracy measured by purpose. A man may draw inspiration from the grandeur of his own aims, as a firefly shapes its flight by its own flashes. To-morrow will depend upon to-day, yet at the same time to day in a sense depends upon to-morrow. What to-morrow is in my purpose, to-day will, to some extent, be in my act. In architecture, the spire is anticipated in the foundation, and so determines the foundation. It is very slovenly living that is not controlled by anticipation as well as by memory. We cannot do to morrow's work to-day, but we can have to day's work shaped and buttressed by what we are intending to do to-morrow. In a life which has meaning in it, past and future sustain each other. In an arch, the stones on this side are kept in place by the stones on the other. When we step upon a bridge, we are upheld as well by the abutment at the farther end as by that at the hither end. We have to acknowledge that our plans do often get thwarted; but, if you will interpret the words carefully, there is not so much hazard in framing long purposes as short ones. The longer will be less endangered by opposing circumstances. It is something in this respect as it is with a long keel at sea, which will easily cut the waves by which a shorter craft would be foundered.—Dr. Parkhurst.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,
A Good Thing.

Dr. ADAM MILLER, Chicago, Ill., says: "It is one of the very few really valuable preparations now offered to the afflicted. In a practice of thirty-five years, I have found a few good things, and this is one of them."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a manner peculiar to itself, the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. You will find this wonderful remedy effective where other medicines have failed. Try it now. It will purify your blood, regulate the digestion, and give new life and vigor to the entire body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me great good. I was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

"I suffered three years from blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

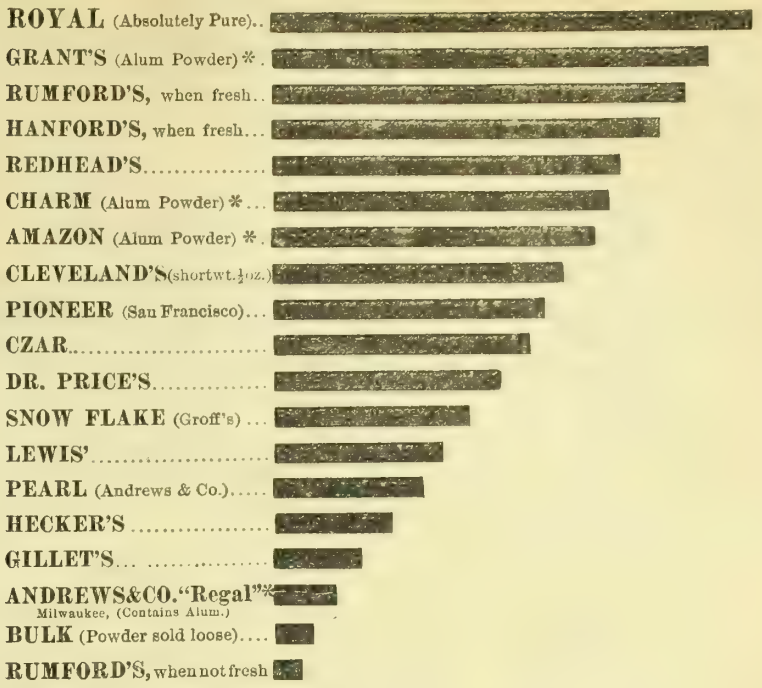
Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. "H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair-minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength are to be avoided as dangerous.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% | 7% | 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c. Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 1500 TESTIMONIALS
BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

MEMORIAL TABLETS.
MEMORIAL WINDOWS,
CHURCH FURNITURE,
INTERIOR DECORATIONS.
J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE!
So great is our faith that we can cure you, dear sufferer, that we will mail enough to convince you, FREE. Send 10 2c stamps to cover expense & postage. B.S. LAUDERBACH & CO., Newark, N.J.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

There is no class of persons who should pay more attention to the quality of the soap used upon their clothing than salaried men or persons of limited income. Three dollars per year saved in the cost of soap is more than likely to result in fifty dollars worth of damage to the articles it is used upon. Professor Cornwall, of Princeton College, says, "The "Ivory Soap is of "great purity and "more than average "cleansing power." A word to the wise is sufficient.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

FOR A FEW DAYS ONLY.

Moquette Carpets

AT

$1.15 per yard.

NUMEROUS PATTERNS, SUITABLE FOR ALL KINDS OF FURNISHING, TO SELECT FROM.

JOHN & JAMES DOBSON,

40 and 42 West 14th St.,

New York.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 180 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred,

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, 83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

For Crazy Quilts and Patchwork.

WASTE EMBROIDERY SILK

About a dozen beautiful colors, making a one ounce package, with designs for 100 styles of crazy stitches, all for 40 cents, by mail. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 10 cents.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,

469 Broadway, New York.

621 Market Street, Phila.

TRAIN UP A CHILD

To wear the perfect-fitting

GOOD SENSE CORDED CORSET WAIST

and when she becomes

A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

enjoying good health, she will then be sure to wear them.

FITS ALL AGES—Infants to Adults.

☞ Every one recommends them.

FOR SALE BY LEADING RETAILERS

Be sure your corset is stamped "GOOD SENSE." Take no other

Send for descriptive circular.

FERRIS BROS.

Manufacturers,

81 White Street, NEW YORK.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

ORGANS The most beautiful and finest toned in the world. Low prices, easy payment. Send for Catalogue. Address

Weaver Organ & Piano Co., YORK, PA.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.

CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

THE

SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

AGENTS with small capital. We have something new, no risk, large profits, special 30 day offer, write at once. EMPIRE CO., 331 Canal St., N. Y.

FAIR AND SQUARE DEALING.

Believing that if a man has dealt squarely with his fellowmen his patrons are his best advertisers, I invite all to make inquiry of the character of my seeds among over a million of Farmers, Gardeners and Planters who have used them during the past thirty years. Raising a large portion of the seed sold, (few seedsmen raise the seed they sell) I was the first seedsman in the United States to warrant (as per catalogue) their purity and freshness. My new Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1886 will be sent FREE to all who write for it. Among an immense variety, my friends will find in it (and in none other) a new drumhead Cabbage, just about as early as Henderson's, but nearly twice as large!

James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

Arnold, Constable & Co

FINE CARPETS AND ORIENTAL RUGS.

Our spring stock, embracing

AXMINSTERS, WILTONS,
VELVETS, MOQUETTES,
BRUSSELS, TAPESTRIES,
And INGRAINS,

IS NOW COMPLETE.

Parties intending to furnish will find an early inspection profitable.

A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF MATTINGS AND RUGS

JUST OPENED.

Broadway & 19th st

NEW YORK.

James M'Creery & Co.

ARE OFFERING VERY LARGE ASSORTMENTS OF THE LATEST COLORS IN THE FOLLOWING QUALITIES OF

RICH COLORED DRESS SILKS:

GROS GRAINS, 20-INCH WIDE, at $1.00
SATIN MERVEILLEUX,
21-inches wide, at 1.25
SATIN RHADAMES, 21-inches " 1.25
FAILLE FRANCAISE, " " 1.50

SATIN DUCHESSE, FAILLE FRANCAISE, AND OTHER NEW WEAVES, AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

A PERSONAL EXAMINATION OR BY SAMPLE IS SOLICITED.

Broadway & 11th St., New York.

IF YOU WANT CLOTHING FOR BOYS, GIRLS or BABIES—or anything for Complete Outfits from Hats to Shoes you will find the largest assortment, the best styles and the lowest prices, at the

Illustrated Catalogue, containing latest styles, sent free on application.

BEST & CO.,

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.
Murdock's Liquid Food	14.10	1 97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's	Not any	54.87	52.16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28 67	22.62	11.09
Johnston's	do.	20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's	do.	56.13	60.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent.

It contains 0.42 of Ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent. Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 12. WHOLE No. 2904. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE SABBATH SCHOOL UNION of the Classis of New York suspended its monthly meetings while the special services were in progress in the churches, and now resumes them. A meeting is appointed for Tuesday evening, March 30th, at 8 o'clock, in the lecture room of the Collegiate Church on Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street. Rev. W. W. Clark, of Brighton Heights, Staten Island, will give his opinion in regard to "Sunday-school Work: What to Do and How to Do It," and the Rev. G. H. Smyth will speak on the "Conversion of Children." There will be afterward the customary open discussion if time will allow it, and the hour for social intercourse. These meetings have been much enjoyed, have brought the churches of the city and vicinity into closer relations, and have supplied those engaged in Sabbath-school work with much information and many valuable suggestions, and have cheered and encouraged those engaged in various forms of Christian activity.

STRANGE.—A rationalistic divine who began life as an evangelical preacher makes this remark: "All my life it has seemed strange to me that Christians could work, and play, and travel, and associate year by year with persons they believed to be 'going down to death,' and never say a word to them on the subject." And it is strange. Such persons, if asked the reason of their reticence, would probably say that they are diffident, or fear to give offence, or apprehend that an unsuitable reminder might do harm by changing indifference into hostility. And there is some weight in such considerations. A word in season, how good it is! And alas, also, a word out of season, how evil it is! Tact is required in dealing with souls as much as in any other dealing. Yet, after making every allowance for timidity and awkwardness and conscious insufficiency, it is strange that so many Christians live on year after year without ever making any effort to win souls. And the more that in a Gospel land, all that is usually needed is a reminder, brief, gentle, slight, just enough to show one's own interest in the person addressed or one's own sense of the importance of the subject. Here applies the well worn proverb, "A word to the wise," etc. Many and many a time a heart has been effectually touched by a very short remark.

MR. FROUDE starts a very interesting speculation in his "Oceana," recently published, which may prove for various reasons the book of the season. He discusses the formation of a confederacy of all the colonies of Great Britain with the mother country,—a confederacy for mutual support and to secure harmonious action. Such a union is possible and the publication of Mr. Froude's conferences with representative men may lead to finding out the way in which it can be formed. We are familiar with the power and resources of Canada and Newfoundland. Australia it seems can support a population of fifty millions, New Zealand of perhaps fifteen millions. The possible development at the Cape of Good Hope is incalculable. The Dutch are in the majority there, but Mr. Froude thinks that a just and kind policy would make them loyal subjects of the Queen, and, harmony being established between the Dutchmen and Englishmen, the colony would attract immigrants and would be extended almost indefinitely into the interior. The native races also would no doubt appreciate a strong and stable government, affording protection to life and property and maintaining peace, and would supply a body of laborers of great value. A confederacy extending around the world and holding points of commanding commercial importance might prove irresistibly attractive to the native races of India. The friendship of the United States would not be withheld; perhaps an alliance between the Republic and the consolidated Empire would be brought about or rather come about naturally. Not many months ago, when England was perplexed with her troubles in Ireland and Egypt, the Spectator on several occasions talked about the United States as the natural ally of Britain, and was certain that Americans would not suffer Old England to be pushed to the wall. We certainly could not regard with indifference or animosity such a confederacy as the English journals are now discussing. The possibility of a league of all English-speaking men opens a captivating field of conjecture. It would become the mightiest power the world has known and the most beneficent. It would be an alliance of men controlled by the precepts of the Word of God. The confederacy, therefore, is as interesting a subject of contemplation to the Christian as to the politician and political economist. It is not impossible that in his old age Mr. Froude has written the most influential book of his life; certainly nothing he has written surpasses it in interest. It is not often that such a man writes a book of travel, and describes the incidents of long ocean journeys, and the countries he saw and the people he talked with, and when the discussion of a great theme is united with such descriptions, the gratification of the reader is complete.

SEE HOW people differ! A lady, renewing her subscription, writes that she and her father are Presbyterians, that her mother was a member of a Reformed Church, but that since her mother's death, "we have felt that we needed the weekly visits of the INTELLIGENCER, although it sometimes touches us sorely, we being strong Republicans." This correspondent evidently does not believe that we have favored the Republicans, as W. H. V. thinks we have in his letter on another page.

Again, the following was received a few days ago, from one of the strongest temperance men amongst our acquaintances:

"I want to thank you very heartily for your editorial on Judge Allen's article and for the article itself in last week's INTELLIGENCER.

"The cause of temperance in I—— and your correspondent suffered miserably from the same cause. The third party put the jugular vein of the temperance party in I—— under the iron heel of the rum power, and I, for opposing the third party, was visited as malevolently and lyingly as possible by the organ here of the rum power."

In this case a good man was assailed by the acknowledged advocate of the liquor traffic for opposing the third party, and he adds that it was only by being "very careful and wise" that he avoided being mobbed.

We leave political matters alone altogether. They are well attended to in the party organs. We favor the utmost possible restriction of the liquor traffic in this and the adjoining States. Temperance men are not of one mind in this and the neighboring States in regard to the action to be adopted. We favor a union for what can be obtained, and regret a division for the sake of striving for what it seems to us at present cannot be obtained. A great many sincere temperance men believe that prohibition in this and the adjoining States is impossible. They are ready to favor high license, local option, or an earnest campaign for the election of the right men as Excise Commissioners, as a preparation for prohibition. Besides, they would like to see a show of strength in order to find out what can be relied on. They would, therefore, like to see a vote on such a question as this: "Shall the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors be prohibited by law?" The nomination of third party candidates does not bring out a show of strength.

OUR COUNTRY abounds in resources. It has vast fertile plains and valleys, rich mines of coal, of metals of every kind, immense deposits of oil and reservoirs of natural gas. It is clothed with noble forests of valuable and useful woods. The people are abundantly supplied with the best mechanical appliances to increase the ability to produce necessary and useful articles, to add to the comforts and conveniences of life. The nation has an abundance of property and money, has become the richest nation in the world. Yet the people to-day are not prosperous and for some time have not been. The general complaint is of dulness in trade; workingmen of all grades are discontented, because their earnings are so small and afford so narrow a living for their families; strikes multiply in all parts of the land. Now and again it is announced that trade is reviving, that an era of prosperity has begun; but the improvement is only temporary and soon dulness prevails again. We are also a free people, ourselves making the laws and selecting those who shall execute them, yet are unable to devise legal remedies for the existing state of affairs. Being free we are also inventive, enterprising, adventurous, rather hopeful than otherwise, and confident. Notwithstanding, we are not getting on comfortably. The friction of life is great. Prosperity and enjoyment have diminished. Somehow our hands are tied. It is possible that the present condition of affairs is due to the fact that God is not with us. We have become a Sabbath breaking people to a large extent. God assures us that He will withhold His presence from and that He will punish with temporal disasters a people which does not regard His Sabbaths. Are we suffering because God is leaving us to ourselves? The history of godless humanity is a history of human folly. A great many foolish acts have been done in our political and financial affairs. A number of foolish schemes are in operation now. A man abandoned of God is a poor creature, weak, foolish, prone to evil, blind, rash and selfish. Sabbath breaking men are without God in the world. The number of those who disobey God's law of the Sabbath is increasing among us, and the acts of the Sabbath breakers are becoming more offensive. A fortnight ago a company of men who have money contributed fifteen hundred dollars as a prize to the one who should win in a slugging match. The fight was appointed for the Sabbath on a spot near this city. The contestants were fearfully beaten. One man's face, the other man's body was pounded almost to a jelly. The spectacle was brutal and sickening. Last Sabbath evening a "Grand Testimonial Benefit" was given in the Academy of Music of this city, in which star actors and musicians and almost entire theatrical companies engaged. A multitude of people encourage these profanations of the Lord's day. The Sunday newspapers are doing what they can to destroy every distinction between the Lord's day and other days. The times have changed and for the worse. Is God leaving us to ourselves, because we are making a holiday of His holy day? Is the present decline of temporal prosperity due to this fact?

"Old Colony" Papers.

Fata Morgana:

OR, MY VISIT TO THE "MORGAN COLLECTION."

II.

WE come now to what is the supreme feature of the collection,—the pottery, and especially the vases. I suppose there is no private collection in this country like it, and yet in the most extensive and expensive departments Mrs. Morgan is said to have "only made a beginning." There are several hundred vases alone, varying in size from 51x16 inches to little things which you could almost slip into your vest pocket,—besides a wilderness of jars, bottles, beakers, cups, bowls, plates, teapots, tankards, trays, "vessels," boxes, burners, plaques, etc. These are classed as "old Chinese" porcelains and enamels and cabinet objects, Japanese objects and carvings; European ceramics, Royal Worcester, Royal Vienna, Sévres porcelain, Minton faience, and other famous styles. The collection of plates is a museum by itself. If one wants to get an idea of the elegance and luxury of court life in the Grand Monarque days, let him examine this dozen of Sèvres plates decorated with the portraits of Diane de Poitiers, Gabrielle d'Estrées, Marie Stuart, Marie de Medicis, Duchesse de Pompadour, Madame Dubarry and other Court beauties, and valued at the trifling sum of $4,000. Others are decorated with portraits of Louis himself, of Henry VIII., Peter the Great and various monarchs, besides Scriptural, mythological and classical designs. Many of these are exquisite paintings,—in fact, the fame of the decorator being a chief element in the valuation. The antiquity, history, rarity, and the fineness of the ware and execution, are also important factors; and fashion, of course, is the final dictator. There is likewise a fine collection of framed plaques, some of them nearly two feet in diameter.

It is perfectly bewildering to move through the fairy palace of such treasures as the cameo and cut glass ware; the specimens of jade, agate and crystal; the bronzes, ivory carvings, gold lacquer, and multitudinous cabinet objects; the collection of books, sumptuously bound and illustrated in the highest style of art, and some of them rare and old editions. Above all, is one dazzled and amazed at the amount of silver wrought up into forms of beauty by art and man's device. It was here, more than anywhere else, that a sense of the Arabian Nights overcame me. Besides table sets and toilet sets, trays and tankards and flagons, comprising many hundreds of pieces, there are lamps and candlesticks and candelabra, and vases and plaques, and great centre pieces, and groups of statuary. These are largely of hammered silver, hand-chased, and gold-lined. The designs represent all manner of beasts, birds, fishes and insects, plants, vines, flowers and minerals, besides human figures and elaborate biblical, classical, Indian, Japanese and other subjects. One pair of immense candelabra is ornamented with scenes illustrating the habits of the North American Indian, carefully studied from Catlin's Portfolio, and modelled by St. Gaudens. The towering feature of this collection, however, is a pair of candelabra nearly six feet high and two wide, for twenty lights each, exquisitely ornamented throughout, and surpassing anything I have seen or dreamed of in the silversmith's art. It made me realize what a glory of the Jewish Temple must have been the golden candlestick of "beaten work," five feet high without the pedestal, adorned with flowers and "knops," and containing a talent of gold. If I were a "silver king," I should buy these for my argent palace. But whether the Lord is likely to be found "walking amid" such, any more than the tin candlesticks in the hut of Lazarus, may well be questioned.

After such an embarras and monotony of riches, it was a relief to come upon the collection of Japanese carvings in ivory, many of them exceedingly grotesque and amusing; better yet, the set of old Dutch Toys, about sixty dainty little objects, fit for the little princes and princesses of his Silver Majesty already alluded to. Just think of it,—sofas, chairs, tables, tea service, candlesticks, and even kitchen utensils, all of silver! Besides these are a sleigh and coach, a gondola, a dog-house; and, being Dutch, there are of course windmills, a peaked lantern, a spinning-wheel, a tea canister, a pair of bellows, and a treasure chest. The Fairy Godmother herself could not do a handsomer thing by her young favorites than this.

People seemed to find a relief to their dazzled eyes and strained æsthetic capacity in a couple of extremely homely and lean but realistic cats in porcelain, looking exactly as if they had just escaped from a watery grave. Very curious, too, was Mrs. Morgan's taste for snuff bottles, of which there are no less than 220 specimens, of all shapes and materials. Here and elsewhere in the collection one may inform himself to satiety and stupefaction concerning the modern craze for jade, that pale, sickly member of the sisterhood of precious stones, whose value seems to consist in its toughness and rarity.

But, after all, one goes back to the vases as the supreme and peculiar objects of interest in this Aladdin's palace of art. I should have liked to study for a whole day at least this vast and varied collection, especially the old Chinese porcelains, so quaint and fantastic and varied, and some of them very beautiful in deft and harmonious coloring. Among these, few interested me less (the cost excepted) than the "peach-blow," or (as they are more accurately described) "crushed strawberry" vases. The peculiar tint which constitutes their chief value seems to have arisen from an accident of firing, and to our eye not a specially happy accident either. And yet one newspaper critic actually had the mingled idiocy and irreverence to say, that if a vase should fall from heaven, we might expect it to be something like this $15,000 peach-blow. Diana of the Ephesians! what will not men apply the epithet "heavenly" to, if by that craft they get their gain?

I can well understand, however, that there may be vases in heaven, as well as vials. There are few things on earth into which so many qualities of beauty may enter, or which must combine so many elements of art, as a perfect vase. It must have fineness both of mechanical and artistic execution, of texture and glaze, of tone and tint, of form and symmetry, of design, and of harmony of all these with one another. What endless variety may it exhibit, of shape and proportion, of curve and contour, of body and neck and base, covers and handles, of panels and flutings and crests and raised ornamentation. Why, here is scope for the best work of the artist in designing, in color and in drawing; of the sculptor in modelling, in moulding and in carving; of the potter, in casting and in firing; of the chemist, and of the mathematician.

The history of the vase is the history of the world. The primeval savage shaped his clumsy vessel out of clay and sand, and his habitat is traced by the sherds of his rude pottery. The tombs of Egypt, thirty-five centuries old, reveal the vase in great perfection of form and decoration. Phœnician vases connect us with an equally distant past. The Chinese and Japanese vase, dating from an unknown antiquity, is the symbol of a long inurned and yet imperishable civilization. We mark the periods of European history and the traits of national character by the vases of Sévres, of Worcester and Staffordshire, of Vienna and Berlin and Dresden. The story of Palissy is the romance and heroism and martyrdom of art. Keats found in the Greek vase the emblem and embodiment of a race, who carried the ideas alike of intellectual and sensuous beauty to their highest development.

> "O attic shape! Fair attitude! with brede
> Of marble men and maidens overwrought,
> With forest branches and the trodden weed!
> Thou, silent form! dost tease us out of thought,
> As doth eternity. . . .
> Sylvan historian, who can'st thus express
> A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme!
> What leaf-fringed legend haunts about thy shape
> Of deities or mortals, or of both,
> In Tempe or the dales of Arcady?"

Alas! that poor Keats was so much and so merely a Greek as to read only the legend:

> "Beauty is truth, truth beauty,—that is all > Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

What a singular and subtle thing is this which we call beauty! It seems almost like some divine essence, now crystallizing into form, and now voicing itself in sound, and now revealing itself in color like a heavenly shadow cast upon earthly objects, and anon stealing upon us through combinations and effects we cannot analyze. And happy he, who has been so constituted by the Former of the eye and ear and brain as to perceive these sensuous and æsthetic manifestations. And still happier they, to whom He has given it to be creators together with Him of this beauty,—or rather, has put into their hands the rod of power which shall evoke His beauty. And better than all to see the supreme beauty of holiness now, and to know that when the sights and sounds of this dim world shall fade, our eyes shall behold the King Himself in His beauty in the land which is very far off.

F. N. Zabriskie.

March 1st, 1886.

A SPECIAL PROVIDENCE.—Mr. and Mrs. A., Americans, were in Switzerland, and were joined by Mr. and Mrs. B., also Americans, and made excursions in company through a part of that picturesque country. After a few days Mr. and Mrs. A. left for Italy, informing their newly made friends of the route they intended to take. After they had gone Mr. B. was dominated with a conviction that he ought to follow his friends into Italy. He felt that there was something for him to do there, that for some reason his presence there would be necessary. This conviction troubled and burdened him for two or three days. But go into Italy he could not, for his means would not allow it. While perplexed a bill of exchange, entirely unexpected, was received from a friend in America—a bill he had no reason to expect. It was sufficient to enable him to make the trip into Italy. He explained to his wife that by travelling rapidly they could overtake the A.'s at a certain place. They started at once. On reaching the city decided on, they found that Mr. and Mrs. A. had just left. They took the next train for the next city generally visited by tourists, and, looking around in the station as they alighted, spied the A.'s about to enter a train for a point farther south. Arrangements were at once made to go on together. While at Rome the air became chilly and the A.'s had a fire made in the evening in the stove in their room. According to the Italian custom the fire was of charcoal. During the night Mrs. A. aroused her husband, saying, that she felt very much oppressed, felt very strangely, and urged him to rise and give her a portion of a remedy they carried in their luggage. Mr. A. found it difficult to raise himself; his limbs refused to obey his will, but by a great effort succeeded in getting upon his feet and across the floor to strike a light, when he fell and became unconscious. Mrs. A., also by a great effort, rose and made her way to her husband, and finding him fallen and, as she feared, dead, as rapidly as possible walked to the door and as she passed into the hall cried out, "Oh! my husband, my poor husband," and fell almost unconscious. Mr. B., in the next room, had been restless and unable to sleep, and heard the cry. He sprang from his bed and, after dressing hastily, entered the hall, where he found Mrs. A. lying, but evidently alive, and passed on to find Mr. A. Reaching him he found that his pulse was barely perceptible, and, divining the cause of the disaster, threw up the windows. After using restoratives Mr. A. gradually recovered consciousness, and Mrs. A. also revived. Mr. A. had been within about five minutes of death. These were all Christian people. We have given the facts without coloring. They all believe that the life of Mr. A., and probably that of his wife also, was saved by a special Providence. It was ascertained that the flue in the chimney was choked and the deadly carbonic acid gas from the charcoal fire gradually filled the room. It is odorless and tasteless, and is detected only by its suffocating and paralysing effect. These American travellers based their belief in a special Providential intervention on these points: the conviction, which Mr. B. could not shake off, that he ought to go to Italy, that there was something there for him to do; the unexpected delivery of a draft which made the journey possible; the wakefulness of Mr. B. on that fateful night, and his immediate apprehension of the cause of the prostration of his friends. Why should he, a man who all his life long had had nothing to do with charcoal fires, divine at once that his fellow travellers were almost suffocated by charcoal gas? We have the account directly from one of the company.

The Northern Spring.

No violet odors in the air,
No thrushes singing by the mill,
No play of wavelets on the stream,
Or lambs upon the hill,
Nor swelling bud nor blade of grass
The coming of the spring doth show;
The cloud holds yet its wintry gray,
The earth its wintry snow.

But well I know beyond my sight
Is set the season's golden sign,
That guides, in northward-faring flight,
The wild fowl's wavering line.
And nearer, swifter, o'er the hills,
With burst of song and flash of wings,
The vernal pageant hastening on,
A new creation brings.

So, be my world as winter cold,
And be my gardens piled with snow,
I know that brighter skies will shine,
And softer winds will blow.
There shall be blossoms in the field;
There shall be singing in the wood;
And all the evil of my lot
Shall surely turn to good.

—Prof. Huntington, in Minneapolis Tribune.

The Sabbath Home and the Soul's Home.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D.

"THE sparrow hath found her an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young—even Thine altars, oh Lord of hosts." This picturesque utterance of the Psalmist, who was homesick for God's house, often occurs to me on Sabbath mornings, as I see the pedestrians trooping along in their Sabbath attire. They do not saunter aimlessly, ready to turn in at the first church-door that stands open. Each one has his or her destination; the sparrows are flying to their own nest. There are indeed some ecclesiastical tramps who wander about from church to church, sampling the preaching and the music, with about the same spirit that they go to a lecture-hall or a concert. Such vagrants are the rolling stones which gather no moss. They take root nowhere, and of course can have no healthy growth. Occasionally there may be a case of awakening and conversion among these wandering auditors; but when that takes place, a genuine convert will seek for a Sabbath home.

This is indispensable to a wholesome religious life. How absurd it would be for the thousands who cross yonder Brooklyn Bridge every evening to halt at any house they might fancy and turn in there for the night. Instead of that each sparrow seeks his own domestic nest, where wife and children wait to welcome father or brother after the day's work is over. Healthy domestic love is anchored to a place, and to those who cluster in it. I always recommend to young married folk to secure a home for themselves as soon as possible, even though it be furnished with a pine-table and a camp-chair. Gregarious life suits sheep and cattle, but not human souls. But a domestic home is not more needful than a spiritual home. To the loyal child of God, the sanctuary becomes his feeding-place, his soul's pasturage, his place of meeting with the brotherhood of Christ, and with that blessed spot all the sweetest, tenderest associations of his Christian life are linked. As years roll on the spot becomes dearer; after a long sickness, or a far-off journey, how delightful to be in the old family pew again and to see the domine's familiar face in the pulpit. There is a prodigious meaning in that Bible-phrase, "help from the sanctuary." A day of soul-feeding there helps us wondrously to stand the wear and the tear and the temptations of the following week. The steadfast church goer and the steadfast worshipper of Jehovah is the most likely to be the steadfast man of business, or the thrifty housekeeper and trainer of the children.

This word children suggests a most important thought. The "swallow has a nest for herself where she may lay (or place) her young;" and the house of God is the proper nestling-spot and nursery for our children. A Sabbath home is just as vitally essential to them as a domestic home through the week. We cannot rear our sons and daughters in Christian nurture and train them for Christ if we deny them what is indispensable to our own growth. If we need the worship, the instruction, the inspiration, and the priceless blessings of God's house, so do they. Every minister should earnestly strive to attract the young, to interest them and to present the Gospel so simply and winsomely that an average child of ten or twelve years should be glad to listen to him. If he cannot do that, he lacks a prime qualification for the ministry. The children are the most important part of our congregations.

But "do they not have the Sunday-school?" Yes; and a well-equipped, and Christ-presenting Sunday-school is the right arm of a church. But a right arm is not the main body—and an arm dissevered from the body is a bloodless and impotent thing. All honor to the zealous, devoted Sunday-school teacher! He or she is often an actual pastor or shepherd to guide to Jesus those who have no spiritual guidance at home. But the Sunday-school never was ordained to be and never can be a substitute for the regular services of the sanctuary. Bring your children with you to church, dear friends! It is their nestling-place as well as yours. Are you quite certain as to what your young swallows and sparrows may be about while you are sitting in your pews? How do they spend the Lord's day at home? If you commit the sin of beginning the day with your Sunday Times or Tribune or Herald, you may be quite sure that the boys and girls will be deep in the police reports and fashion gossip and wretched scandals of those Sabbath-breakers while you are listening to the sermon. Then keep the secular desecrators of holy time out of your doors, and take all your "bairns" with you to the place where their young hearts may be led heavenward. Expect their early conversion to Christ. Pray for this; and while you are leading them to the "altars of the God of hosts," do not cease to labor and to hope that their souls may find a home there also.

The very core-idea of all true worship and all true service of Christ is that the soul is housed and homed in Him. Our hearts are very much like the birds. We fly hither and thither seeking some limb to light on that will give us rest. But the limbs break, or the tree in which we build our nests for selfish enjoyments is hewn down. Like Noah's dove, we find no rest; and God never intended that we should find anything solid, and safe and satisfactory to our immortal souls outside of Jesus Christ. Continually we hear the snapping off of some perch, or the fall of some bough on which poor uneasy hearts were trying to find peace and enduring happiness. Only in one spot is the soul's deep hunger fed, only on one strong support does it find rest. Reader! you will be a homeless, hungry, sin-tortured bird of passage, until you set your face towards Jesus. You need not create the home; you have only to find it. My blessed, loving, all-powerful Saviour opens His Divine heart to you and cries out: "Come unto ME and ye shall find rest for your soul." Through an everlasting Sabbath He will be an ever-joyful Home.

John B. Gough.

[By Joseph Cook. Prelude to Monday Lecture, Boston, February 22d.]

TWO nations, now the foremost on the earth, mourn a fiery man of Kent. Humanity mourns; for this man had fire in his emotions, in his imagination, in his intellect, in his will, and in his conscience; he was himself a pillar of fire, through which God looked in the morning watch of a great reform, and troubled the hosts of its enemies and took off their chariot wheels. He who has addressed more than eight million, five hundred thousand hearers, he who has spoken to more than eight thousand five hundred audiences, and travelled more miles on his lecture tours than would reach twenty times round the globe, lies at rest in his own library yonder at Hillside.

John Gough, as the English love to call him, and as he often called himself—John Bartholomew Gough is the full name—came into this world in the seaside town of Sandgate, in the county of Kent, August 22d, 1817. He had a surly welcome to the shores of England. Poverty rocked his cradle, but genius, also; for his mother was a woman of bright intellect and of most admirable balance of character. She had for twenty years been a school teacher in the hamlet of Sandgate. His father was a stern, good man, who had brought six medals out of the Peninsula War.

The little boy and his sister, with the mother, were obliged to glean in the harvest fields, and were often glad to take home what few fallen heads of wheat they could find, and thresh them out on the floor of the schoolhouse. At twelve years of age, in 1829, the boy was sent out from his mother's house in a most venturesome way. He was put into the hands of a family emigrating to America. His passage was paid for. His mother came out and stood behind a wall to catch, unobserved, a last glimpse of her boy.

He went to a farm in central New York, and, after two years' experience, finding that he was not being sent to school, either on week days or Sundays, resolved to learn some other business than that of the farm. From his tenth year onward, he was never in any school as a pupil. He sold his pocket knife to pay postage on a letter to his father, and asked his permission to go to New York to learn a trade. The permission came, and the boy at last, when about fourteen years of age, obtained a position in New York as an assistant in a bookbindery at $2 25 a week. He was obliged to pay $2 a week for his board. After a considerable period of suffering, he earned $3 a week, and invited his mother and sister to come to him in this country. They hired two rooms, and were happy.

In the dull season in the winter the boy and his sister lost their positions. The familiar tale of the poor in periods of business depression has to be recited concerning these children and their mother. They went into a garret. They had no food or fuel on many days. The boy would go beyond the municipal boundaries, and beyond the suburbs, to pick up billets of wood at the side of the country roads, and would drag them back to his garret. His mother grew ill. One day, when there was absolutely nothing in the house that she could eat, he rushed out, pawned his coat, and bought a little meat and broth for his mother. When bread failed wholly, on another day, he went sobbing down the street, and a kind-hearted man asked him what the matter was. "I am hungry, and my mother is hungry," said the boy. "Very well," said the stranger, "I can't do much, but I will do something." And he gave the boy a three-penny loaf. He took it to his mother, and before it was eaten the family Bible was placed on the rickety pine table, and thanks were offered to God for His deliverance.

The boy and the girl lived through this winter. The mother hardly survived it. When the fierce suns of the next August beat on the low garret roof, the heat became intolerable. One day, preparing John's simple supper of rice and milk, she fell, by an apoplectic fit or paralytic stroke, much like that which occurred in the career of the son last week in Philadelphia. John sat all night by the side of his mother, holding her hand after her death. The sister could not stay in the garret. For three days after the death the boy and the girl did not taste food. The body was put into a simple pine coffin, without shroud, and carried on a cart to the potter's field. The two children walked behind, hand in hand.

Later, evil companionship caused Mr. Gough, when about twenty years of age, to fall into habits of intemperance. He sank, with remarkable swiftness, to delirium tremens. His temperament was intense, and he ran through the terrible gamut of nervous exhaustion with extreme rapidity.

After these horrors, what happened? You all know the story of Joel Stratton, who, in Worcester yonder, touched the despairing mechanic on his shoulder, told him he was a man, could yet reform if he would sign the pledge, and so brought to bear upon him personal solicitation and sympathy, that he induced him to attend a temperance meeting, and to sign the pledge. He broke it twice, once voluntarily, and once under influence of drugs administered by an enemy, but after 1845 he kept it.

Mary Whitcombe married John Gough before he had taken the pledge for the last and successful time, and when he owned only one suit of clothes and ten silver dollars. She knew there was genius in him and conscience, and her faith in her husband is a supreme proof that she herself possessed elevation of character and moral genius. How far they have walked together! And how long will they walk together yet, before the great white throne.

I have thrown this dark picture of John Gough's earlier career before you in order that I might thank God for overruling all this evil so as to educe from it abundant good. Without this baptism in the fires of poverty and of delirum tremens, we should never have had the full force of his intense sympathy applied to the work of rescuing the drunkard from ruin. We never should have had in its full power his supreme and most contagious confidence that the most degraded man may be lifted out of the slums. We should never have had in him, even with all his genius as an orator, the inspired earnestness which is the key to all hearts.—Report in The Advance.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Dr. Bishop's Vedder Lectures.

IN sending Dr. Bishop to deliver the Vedder Lectures at New Brunswick, the General Synod of our Church sent a man of convictions, who had a message to deliver and who has delivered it clearly and fearlessly.

The Vedder foundation was established to meet and oppose the unbelief of our time. The lecturer of this year holds, as he stated in his first lecture, that the best way to oppose unbelief is by strengthening and deepening belief. There is no cure for scepticism except faith. There is no so sure way of opposing sceptical tendencies as by clearly setting forth those points in the Divine economy of grace which are the eternally settled landmarks, the well planted cornerstones of that scheme which was devised and is revealed to us by eternal wisdom.

From the beginning to the end of the course, then, Dr. Bishop has clearly affirmed the supernatural. His defense of truth has not been of the kind that goes on with the opponent of truth in apparent consent and agreement so far along erroneous paths that the listener becomes charmed with the surroundings, and when the would be champion of truth at last begins with a feeble "Well, but—" to try to get back to the right road, the listener in confusion and doubt is on the whole rather inclined to remain at the point to which the two have conducted him, than at the call of one to go back over the ground he has traversed. The Vedder lectures of Dr. Bishop have not left possible any such doubt as to where he parted company with the opponents of truth. At the very first step his challenge, "Whither goest thou?" is clear; and equally clear his answer, "we go this way, for we believe, for these reasons, that this is the revealed way of the Lord."

At a time when so many ministers are unconsciously "giving away" the central truths of the religion of Christ, at a time when so many young men are blindly following the "talk of the newspapers," and the ignorant scepticism of so called "scientific" reviews, whose writers have never had the plan of salvation clearly and intelligently set before them, it is a most valuable work for the Church thus to set forth the essential truths of the Reformed belief, in sharp contrast with the tendencies of the time. And if we may judge from what many of our most intelligent laymen, as well as professors and ministers at New Brunswick say, while not all have agreed with the lecturer on all minute details or in all of certain sweeping assertions, all have agreed that it has been a wholesome and a blessed experience to hear Reformation theology thus clearly and fearlessly set forth.

The lecturer has shown a thorough mastery of his subject from the theological side. If he has refused to speak as flatteringly of natural science as do most writers and speakers of our day, if he has declined to assume a perfect familiarity with the atheistic and the agnostic literature of our day, he has anchored his refusal to read exhaustively along these lines in principles which are so well taken and so clearly held that his position is strong.

To speak for a moment of particular points in the lectures:

The fine emphasis placed upon the value, in this life as well as for the life to come, of faith, and its essential reasonableness; the passage in the beginning of the lecture upon "Creation," in which the great bell of sovereignty was tolled again and again in eloquent and solemn sentences, each beginning with the words, "In the beginning, God;" the strong defense of verbal inspiration of the original manuscripts, as written by holy men θεόπνευστοι, breathed through by God—a defence which put down as its extreme point the inspiration of the Hebrew vowel points, and challenged controversy—a defence of verbal inspiration which will leave every young man who heard it better able to defend the thesis, "The Bible is above Nature;" and the closing lecture, upon the Atonement—these are points and passages in the Vedder Lectures which cannot be forgotten by those who heard them.

On the whole, the effect of these lectures has been to make all devout Christians thankful that they have once more heard the central truths of the Bible so clearly and strongly defended by one whose earnestness and zeal, supplemented by and growing out of earnest study in this country and in Europe on Reformation ground, peculiarly qualify him to defend the Reformation theology as Vedder lecturer in one of its strongholds in America.

An outline of the reasoning of the lectures is in preparation for the paper of next week. That made for this week's paper proved faulty.

....A Meeting of the Sunday School Union of the Classis of New York will be held in the lecture room of the Twenty ninth street and Fifth avenue church on Tuesday evening, March 30th, at 8 o'clock. Addresses by Rev. William Walton Clark on "Sunday-School Work: What to Do and How to Do It;" and by Rev. George H. Smyth on the "Conversion of Children." Choice selections of music by the Collegiate Church choir.

Pastors, consistories, teachers and friends are cordially invited to attend. Sec.

....Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, N. J.—The eighth address in the course was delivered before the Society of Inquiry by J. Chamberlain, M.D., D.D., of India. His subject was, "Coöperation in Mission Work." In his unique, earnest, enthusiastic and comprehensive way he presented the condition of things in India at the present time and the imperative need of a change. He pointed out the existing evils which result from the plans now pursued in mission work. Each denomination is endeavoring to build up a church of its own peculiar shade and color. Instead of presenting a solid, aggressive, moving front to heathendom, the army of Christ is sometimes so divided that one part makes war upon another. The different denominations often see their own flag and fail to see the banner of Jesus Christ.

The address was timely. Dr. Chamberlain has awakened considerable thought on this subject, and again called the attention of the churches in this country to it, and it is hoped that the agitation will not stop here. One need of India is a confederation of the different church bodies now at work there into one organization—the Church of Jesus Christ in India. It is a pity, if not a positive evil, to transplant our divisions at home to the foreign field and thus cause disputes among believers there which have little or no significance to them.

The address was deeply interesting. The points made were well taken; the arguments used were forcible and reënforced by strong illustrations drawn from a rich field of experience.

The Doctor has a peculiar way of illustrating. He follows in this the methods of the learned men of the Orient. Instead of stating the point and then illustrating it, the order is reversed. The story is told, and then, by way of climax, the truth it illustrates. Several times during the address this method was pursued with great effect. The students feel greatly indebted for what they heard. Their attention has been called to a great and important subject, and coming years will undoubtedly bear the fruit of the seed which is now sown. B.

....Grand Rapids, Mich.—Rev. Jno. H. Wyckoff, whom we had the pleasure of entertaining at the parsonage, addressed the First Church on Sabbath morning, March 14th. In the afternoon he spoke at the Third Church, and in the evening at the Second, to a union meeting of the Second, Fourth and Fifth churches. He favored the Sunday-school of the First Church with a short talk, in which, as in all the services of the day, he was exceedingly interesting and instructive. We have no doubt our esteemed brother, whom all were happy to see and hear, awakened an increased interest in the cause of missions.

The Fifth Church have extended a unanimous call to Rev. R. H. Joldersma, of Spring Lake, Mich., which he will probably accept.

The Liberal Holland Church have formed a publishing company, with their pastor as editor. The first number of Stemmenuit de Vrye Gemeente ("Voices from the Liberal Church") has appeared. Its aim, and that of other publications, will be to propagate liberal views. In their "Regulations" governing the congregation it is declared that baptism is not essential to membership, and that the Lord's Supper shall be observed in the evening of Good Friday, and no one shall be excluded from participation.

Rev. William H. Hoffman, formerly pastor of the Reformed Church of Pottersville, N. J., has for nearly a year past been the pastor of the Mission Wood Presbyterian Church of this city. Mrs. Dr. Garretson is at home with Mrs. Hoffman, her daughter.

Brother S. H. Cobb is prospering. Unfortunately the acoustic properties of his new church are very defective, and remedies are sought. The "Dutch" pastor uses the Liturgy of the Reformed Church on all sacramental occasions, with the consent of the Session and to the great edification of his people!

Rev. Isaac Collier will soon close his labors in the Congregational Church of Lamont, Mich., and desires to return to the ministry of the Reformed Church. He resides here. P. M.

....The Classis of Saratoga, at a special meeting on March 15th, received the Rev. Edward A. McCullom from the Classis of Schenectady, and made arrangements for his installation at Schuylerville on April 7th.

A call from the church at Reynolds (old Schaghticoke), upon Rev. Theo. Shafer, was approved.

S. C.

....The Rev. Abraham H. Myers, who died on the second day of this month, had attained the great age of nearly 85 years. He had been a minister over half a century, having graduated from the Seminary at New Brunswick in 1830. He was one of the few surviving original subscribers to The Christian Intelligencer, his first subscription being made previous to the publication of the first number, in order to assist and encourage the new enterprise. The notice of his life was received too late last week to be put under the news of the Church, and we repeat some of the facts it contained. Mr. Myers became an emeritus pastor in 1878, so that his active ministry fell short of half a century by only two years. In the forty-eight years of his activity he had the pleasure of welcoming 408 persons to church fellowship on confession of their faith. Two revivals of marked power and large results occurred under his ministry. His simple, undoubting faith in Christ and His cheerful acquiescence in the will of God were characteristics which impressed every one who knew him well. That confidence was honored by God. God satisfied him with long life and a life of usefulness, gave him hundreds of souls as his hire, and gave him to see those he had counselled and befriended rise to eminent usefulness. Many remember him to-day with devout thankfulness, and many regard the world as poorer by the loss of a genuine Christian nature, of one who in deed and in truth was a temple of the Holy Spirit.

....Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Second Reformed Church, having outgrown the hall in which they held worship from the time of their organization, (the 30th of last June), have now rented the Unitarian Church edifice on Park street. This place seats 300, is filled every Sabbath morning, and is already too small to accommodate the evening congregations.

Last Sabbath eighteen were publicly received into the communion of the church, ten on confession and eight on certificate. An adult Bible-class was formed numbering thirty five members. A beautiful silver-plated communion service of six pieces was presented to the church by the Reformed Church of New Paltz, N. Y., as a token of their continued interest in the work of their former pastor, Rev. A. Vennema.

A suitable and commodious church building is not only a desideratum, but an absolute necessity. Observer.

Kalamazoo, March 20th.

....Orange City, Iowa.—I make these extracts from a few preliminary remarks to Rev. J. A. De Spelder's discourse, delivered on the first Sunday in this month:

"It is just one year ago that our morning services were instituted. It is a time for retrospection and thanksgiving.

"Almost at once there grew out of it a Sunday school, which has proved a source of profit to its own members, and has voted to support a converted Hindoo now studying in the Chittoor Seminary.

"Soon after there grew out of it the organization of a church whose Christian work and benevolence give occasion for thanksgiving to Him 'who worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure.' Since the organization, April 27th, three members have been received on profession of faith, seven by letter, making the total membership thirty-one.

"There has grown out of it, also, a Ladies' Aid Society, which has been engaged in raising funds in behalf of local religious needs, but hopes in future to become an auxiliary in missionary work.

"There have grown out of it, moreover, a prayer and praise service, which has been conducted without intermission during the year; a Sunday-school teachers' meeting, and recently the organization of two catechetical classes for the religious instruction of children and youth. In view of these facts our hearts should glow with gratitude to day"

So they should, but that very evening some had to return home for want of room in our present place of meeting. Others stay away because it is impossible to ventilate that room properly when it is full of people. When warm weather comes we cannot meet there at all. V. Z.

....The Classis of Paramus held a special meeting at the Synod's Rooms, on Monday, April 22d, when a joint application from the Consistory of the Church of Nyack, N.Y., and Dr. Wm. H. Clark for the dissolution of the pastoral relation was presented and granted. Dr. Clark was dismissed to the Classis of Philadelphia. Dr. Clark resigned the offices of Stated Clerk and Treasurer, and Rev. John C. Van Deventer was elected to fill the vacancy. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation of Dr. Clark's faithful and efficient services as the Stated Clerk and Treasurer of this Classis for nearly thirteen years; our utmost confidence in him as a Christian man and minister, and deep affection for him, and that our prayers follow him to his new field of labor. S. C.

....HOPE COLLEGE.—The Secretary of the Board of Education, Dr. Mandeville, has asked for the speedy forwarding to said Board of any moneys designed for Hope College. The undersigned would earnestly repeat the above request, and give some reasons for so doing.

The College is being carried on with undisputed progress and success. During the current year 151 students are in attendance, the course of instruction is fully and efficiently accomplished; and the Christian status of the Institution is indeed gratifying. There is no difficulty or discouragement in view, except the want of funds and the danger of a deficit for the current fiscal year, which closes in April, 1886.

The Board of Education has not been able to make appropriations to the College since Sept. last. The churches in the West are generally engaged in making collections for the Theological School; no appeal has been made to the churches in the East, and but few special donations have come from the East during the current year. Hence we fear and deplore the necessity of a deficit or debt and wish to avoid it.

May I not, then, expect personal friends and churches to make such offerings as they deem practicable at once, and forward to Rev. G. H. Mandeville, D.D., No. 34 Vesey street, N. Y. CHAS. SCOTT, Pres.

....JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The pastor and members of the Free Reformed Church rejoiced together on last Sabbath in the reception of 17 new members by confession into fellowship of the church. Of this number six are heads of families, eleven are from the Sabbath-school, and eight from the pastor's class. This class, of 50 different Sabbath-school scholars, has, in three years yielded 37 church members, three officers and twelve teachers for the Sabbath-school.

....FORT MILLER, N. Y.—The annual festival held March 12th was noted for its large attendance and increased friendliness. After the company had been most delightfully entertained with singing and recitations, supper was served, and as usual with this church many basketfuls remained. On this occasion there was sufficient for an after-social at the house of one of the members. The church has awakened to a new life and give a cordial reception to their new pastor, Rev. E. A. McCullum, who has recently come among them.

....PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The anniversary of the Sabbath-school of the Fourth Church, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, was celebrated on Sunday evening, March 14th. A large audience crowded the church. The exercises were in charge of the superintendent, Mr. A. W. Givin, who has served in that office for twenty-five years, and who in his annual report stated that there were 449 names on the roll, an increase of 27 over last report; the average attendance being 276. Ten scholars had joined the church during the year. The school had contributed $221.19 for missions. The treasurer had received altogether $1,236.39; of this amount $845.16 was for the debt on their building. The report had other items of interest.

The pastor congratulated the school on the encouraging nature of the report, and in the course of his remarks said that he could not forget that this was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Givin's superintendency, and he also offered his congratulations on that account. In the quarter century which had passed great changes had taken place. Much had been done, and much had been projected for the future. When Mr. Givin took hold they met in a small room and had but a small attendance; now they have a large, handsome room, nearly filled in every part. He was sure that their superintendent had the hearty thanks of parents and children, and he himself thanked God for Mr. Givin's fidelity and overflowing geniality, hoping that he may be long spared to them. He had felt, as they had felt, that some visible token of their appreciation would be in order, and he had much pleasure, therefore, in handing to Mr. Givin a gold watch in testimony of that appreciation, accompanied by their earnest prayers for his welfare.

Mr. Givin was taken by surprise, and quite overcome by this handsome token of esteem, and returned his thanks in a few well-chosen words, spoken with deep emotion. The singing, conducted by Mr. W. F. Givin, the chorister of the school, was heartily engaged in, and added much to the interest of the occasion.

....THE REV. WM. W. CLARK, whose Bible Readings have been heard with so much satisfaction and profit during the past winter by churches in this city and vicinity, has been conducting Union Gospel Meetings at Lakewood, N. J., for two weeks. The Times and Journal of that town on the 20th said:

"The meetings have been very largely attended every evening. The most careful attention was given to the Word so earnestly and eloquently presented. Some thirty arose for prayer and quite a number gave evidence of having been hopefully converted, while many others have been led to consecrate themselves anew to the service of the Lord. These meetings under the leadership of Mr. Clark have been a great blessing to our community. The Bible Readings every afternoon have been especially instructive and helpful to Christians to a clearer understanding and a more perfect knowledge of the Scriptures. Mr. Clark by his kind Christian spirit and manner won the hearts of all, and the only regret is that he could not have remained longer."

Later information is that thirty hopeful conversions have occurred, while over fifty have arisen for prayer, that the revival is still advancing and larger results confidently expected.

At present Mr. Clark is supplying Rev. Dr. Pierson's church in Philadelphia, while the pastor is in Florida seeking rest.

....ALBANY, N. Y.—On Sabbath morning the 14th, the Rev. Edwin F. See, of the Third Church, much to the surprise and regret of the congregation, announced his resignation of the pastorate in order to accept the position of Secretary to the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association. The departure of Mr. See will be regretted by all the Reformed Churches of the city and Classis of Albany and by a large number of Christians of all denominations with whom he has coöperated intelligently and with spirit in the various union evangelical efforts in that city. The Argus says with truth that "his success in Albany has been of the most flattering nature." The church three years ago, when Mr. See assumed the pastorate, had lost some of its strength, was regarded as being in an out-of-the-way and rather undesirable location. Since that time, as the Argus reports, it "has steadily increased in influence and membership, until now it is in a flourishing condition. One hundred and seven persons have been added to the membership, the pew rents have nearly quadrupled, and about $3,000 has been accumulated as a fund for the building of a chapel." Outside of his church Mr. See has been constantly in demand as a lecturer on temperance and kindred topics before Young Men's Associations and other organizations. He is to be congratulated on the selection by the Christian young men of Brooklyn to fill a position of so much honor and responsibility. The Association there has recently entered its new building on Fulton avenue, admirably furnished for its special work, which has cost about $300,000, is endowed with $150,000, and is the religious home of over 2 000 young men. The field is a noble one and we wish Mr. See a great success, while we participate in the general regret that for a time at least he will not be the pastor of one of our churches.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The Rev. Wm. H. Gleason, D.D., has had the satisfaction on the very threshold of his ministry in the First Church of Hudson, N. Y., of welcoming into communion twenty seven new members.

....The children of the Sabbath-school of the First Church of Somerville, N. J., realized from a fair recently held the sum of $150, which was added to the debt fund.

....A pleasant sociable was held by the congregation at Chatham, N. Y., the net proceeds being about $60.

The General Outlook.

....The new burgomaster of Prague, in Bohemia, is the first Protestant who has held that office in 200 years.

...The Society for Improving Workingmen's Homes, of the city of New York, supplied over 84,000 lodgings and 415,000 meals at its three houses last year.

....At the recent meeting of the New York City (Methodist) Church Extension and Missionary Society, it was stated that during the past twenty years the number of churches and missions in the city has increased from ten to twenty, and the Sunday school scholars from 1,862 to 6,679.

....Mr. E. C. Richardson prints an interesting report on the libraries of our Theological Seminaries. By denominations the totals are, first Presbyterian, fourteen, with 203,000 books; then Catholic, eighteen, with 186,000; Congregational, ten, with 128 986; Baptist, fourteen, with 105,000; Episcopal, twelve, with 86,000; Lutheran, thirteen, with 52,000; Reformed (Dutch) one, with 37,000; Methodist six, with 28,000.

....In the State of Wisconsin the Lutheran Church numbers more members than all the other Protestant churches combined. The Synod of Wisconsin has 115 pastors, 195 congregations and 40,000 communicants. The Wisconsin District of the Missouri Synod numbers 79 pastors, 155 congregations and 28,500 communicants; the Iowa Synod has there 20 pastors and at least 25 congregations; about 100 congregations and 25,000 communicants belong to other Synods. Wisconsin therefore has about 300 Lutheran pastors, 470 congregations and upwards of 90,000 communicants.—The Lutheran.

....The number of the communicants in the Episcopal Church in the last twenty years has grown from 161,224 to 398,098, and the number of dioceses and jurisdictions from 34 to 65; but there has been no corresponding increase in the number of candidates for orders. If there had been the present 272 would be more than 600.

....The Rev. W. C. Roberts, D.D., of the Presbyterian Home Mission Board, says: "The Board has 1,435 ministers, who started last year 195 churches and received into church fellowship 16,000 persons, 9,000 on profession of faith. They also started 380 Sunday-schools, nearly all of which will become churches in a short time. The Board had a debt of $139 000 last May, which has been reduced $28,000. In the meantime the work has not stopped but because of this debt no advances could be made. We are obliged to refuse many pressing appeals for ministers and teachers because we lack the money to send them."

....Cardinal Manning, who is much interested in the cause of temperance, has lately opened in London a Home for Inebriates.

...As a result of the revival at Drury, Springfield, Mo., every college student save one, every girl in Fairbanks' Hall, and even the servants, have all become Christians.

...The Examiner reports religious interest in most of the Baptist schools for colored people. In Richmond Theological Seminary a number of students are planning to go to Africa as missionaries. At Hartshorn Memorial College in Richmond the students have given $80 for African missions. At the Atlanta Seminary 125 young men are enrolled, nearly half of whom are ordained, licensed, or have the ministry in view.

....The First Baptist church at St. Joseph, Mo., under the impulse of its 200 recent additions, have sought out an accessible field and colonized a church, having previously bought the lot and built a commodious house.

. ..The Germans will not admit the Jesuits into their colonies. Any other form of priest may come, but not the Jesuit. Bismarck may flatter the Pope, and be complacent to the cardinals, but the sons of Loyola, the servants of the "black Pope," he will not abide. Their missions are prohibited in all German colonies.—The Presbyterian.

....In what is called "Inner London," since 1851, the Episcopal Church has increased its accommodation at the rate of 65 per cent; the Roman Catholics are said to have increased at the rate of 135 per cent; the Congregationalists, 60 per cent; the Presbyterians, 73 per cent; the other Methodist bodies, 196 per cent; and the Wesleyan Methodists, 118 per cent.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17.—Chamberlain and Trevelyan threaten to resign from Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet....Six new cardinals to be created by the Pope....2,500 copies of Beaconsfield's "Endymion," published by Harper & Brothers, of New York, and sent into Canada for sale, have been seized by the Dominion customs authorities at Ottawa. The books will be destroyed to-morrow. A Montreal firm has the copyright of the work. ....The schooner that struck the "Oregon" has not been identified. It is thought the Cunard Company will compromise with the passengers ...The body of L. G. Dewitt, who fell from the ice mound at Niagara Falls two weeks ago, was rescued yesterday, after cutting several days through the ice. ....A suspected man was hanged three times in Indianapolis, and then lashed forty times....Messenger boys in Boston are on a strike....Henry Long, one of the victims of the "Idlewild," was buried yesterday... Vice-President Hoxie, of the Missouri Pacific, having refused to treat with the Knights of Labor, several passenger and freight trains were side-tracked; a sheriff's posse fired on a mob who were obstructing the way....The terms of agreement between Jacob Sharp and his employés were signed yesterday....The New York Aldermen have been enjoined by the Court from granting cable road franchises in New York city.

THURSDAY, 18.—Mr. Gladstone's plan for Ireland is said to be to buy out the great landlords for $600,000,000. Mr. Chamberlain is reported to be opposed to it....The Scotch Church is not to be reorganized, as Parliament opposed....Moonlight outrages continue to be reported in the south of Ireland....The treaty of peace between Servia and Bulgaria has been ratified by the interested powers....Thirteen prisoners were shot down in cold blood at Carrolton, Miss. The victims were colored and were under arrest....Governor Murray, of Utah, has tendered his resignation to the President, much to the regret of the Americans in the Territory....The trouble caused by the strike in the Southwest still continues.... W. S. Warner has been ordered by the referee to refund over a million of dollars to the receiver of Grant & Ward. ..The bill in opposition to the Staten Island bridge was vetoed by Governor Abbott....The passengers of the "Oregon" are laying claim for the loss of baggage and jewelry. It is feared that the mail that went down with the steamer will be lost.

FRIDAY, 19.—It is very probable that Mr. Chamberlain will withdraw from the Cabinet, as neither he nor Mr. Gladstone is willing to yield....An international religious convention under the auspices of the Salvation Army is to be held in London.... The hanging of Riel is being discussed vigorously in the House of Commons, Canada. ....Disorders among the unemployed classes of Manchester are being confirmed.... Bishop Harrington's murder by the King of Mombassa is confirmed....The investigation before the committee in the Pan-electric scandal is being continued....An agreement has been reached as to the trouble on the Texas & Pacific Railroad. Hopes are now held that the strike in the Southwest is over....Alderman Jaehne was arrested for bribery. Inspector Byrnes says Jaehne confessed that he received $30,000 for voting for the Broadway Railroad franchise....Sheriff Grant seized the house and furniture of W. S. Warner in New York on account of Grant & Ward....Sixty three bags of mail were picked up by a pilot-boat from the late steamship "Oregon."....Miss Abigail Bates, well known as one of the two heroines who frightened away the British in the War of 1812, by sounding the fife and drum, died in Scituate, Mass., yesterday, aged 89 years. She and her sister were left in charge of the lighthouse. A British man-of-war appeared. The two girls, seizing a fife and drum, entered a grove of trees and made all the noise they could. The British feared the presence of an American force and sailed away. The town of Scituate was saved and two cargoes of flour lying in the harbor.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Praises in the Dark.

Acts 16: 26, 27.

BY SARAH GOULD.

HARK! what sound in prison walls
On the ear so sweetly falls!
Music from the living tomb
Scatters all the midnight gloom.

Paul and Silas, in their chains,
Sing, forgetful of their pains;
Notes of praise in accents clear,
Greet the waken'd prisoners' ear.

Suddenly, with arm of might,
Comes an angel on that night;
Chains are loos'd, the prison shakes,
Freedom on the captives breaks.

Like those captives let us raise,
When 'tis darkest, songs of praise;
He who broke the prisoners' chain
Sends us joy to soothe our pain.

Infidelity in Japan.

BY A. MIYAKE.

II.

LET us ask upon whom the responsibility to lead Japan, in a right way to true civilization, rests? What will be the destiny of Japan, if we trust her to the hands of atheists? The ship of Japan, under the mismanagement of her mates, is sure to stray from the true line of navigation and miss the harbor of civilization. The dashing waves and hidden rocks will strike her till they finally break her up into a wretched state. France has given us a good example, at the time of the first revolution, when, according to the description of Burk, "Men hated God with all their hearts, with all their mind, with all their soul, with all their strength." Of course, they could not strike the sun out of the heavens, but they were able to raise a dense smoke that obscured it from their own eyes. Not being able to revenge themselves on God, they took a delight in viciously defacing, degrading, torturing and tearing to pieces His image in men. What was the effect? We do not expect that Japan will follow the footstep of France. But alas! she is going that way and if we leave her to continue in the present condition, she will be lost. Then what shall we do to save them, and through them, our Japan?

There are three ways, I think, neither of which can be neglected: I. The organization of Christian institutions for the education of the young men. There are the national university and the colleges, where infidel principles are governing all, both professors and students. The graduates carry with them this spirit wherever they go and in whatever work they undertake. Therefore it is very necessary to organize thoroughly equipped colleges in which mathematics, the natural sciences, philosophy, history and political science should be well taught, under Christian principles, and thus to produce Christian educators, Christian philosophers, Christian statesmen and Christian scientists, their supreme object being one—the glory of God and salvation of their fellowmen.

II. The publication of the Christian works; that is, to translate the works of the best foreign authors on Christianity into Japanese, or to publish originally for the cause of Christianity. Many works of atheists, of German philosophers and of British thinkers are already translated, and many scholars are pub lishing the philosophical works which have great influence among the young people. But no works of Christian theologians and philosophers are translated nor originated yet. It is of great importance to fight with atheists and materialists in the field of books.

III. The educated ministry. This is of greater necessity and importance than the other two. This is the pressing want. I dare to say that Christianity is not yet preached to the highly educated, that hardly can a minister preach effectually the doctrine of Christianity without being well educated in every department of knowledge. It is true that the most important part of the preparation of the minister consists in heart culture, in getting more faith and more love. This gained, we still feel the importance of a sound education for them. They are attacked from outside, and looked to as guides by their congregations in time of difficulty. They ought to be able to speak upon all those views of science which touch upon religion, and, if necessary, to confute the arguments of the atheists. Some foolish ministers may proudly say that we entirely trust to God and we can tell the people of the love of God; we do not need scientific knowledge; faith! faith! faith will overcome the world. Such ministers forget the warning of our Lord; such ministers see no effect, under the present circumstances of Japan. Atheistic men are formidable giants, and the ministers should meet them like David, leaving the issue in the hand of God. They must remember that even David chose five smooth stones. They should pick up not only one stone, but five stones, and these five stones should be as smooth as possible. God will help, but only those who help themselves. The enemies are preparing their weapons, and it is foolishness to go into the battle field with bodies naked and exposed on all sides. By all means, be furnished with weapons which, if not shining more than those of the enemies, should be at least as sharp and as powerful.

These needs having been supplied, there is great Christian work yet to be done. The signs of the time show that there lies hid a tremendous power in our Christian work, which will not take a long time to show itself in its fullest activity. When that time comes, we will be independent. We, Christians, are still weak in our means and many things necessary are left untouched, and some though touched are left incomplete. We appeal to your sympathy. And the time will come soon when there will be a feast of plenteous harvest before God and "we shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the Lord our God, that hath dealt wondrously with us."

Phebe and the Prayer-Meeting.

BY MARY E. BRUSH.

PART II.

IN a few minutes the two girls were hurrying down the quiet street leading to the church. The bell was still ringing—slowly, irregularly, in a half discouraged way. The evening air was mellow with the warmth of spring and fragrant with early flowers and faint earthy smells. There was the delicate, misty green of unfolding buds among the interlaced boughs and twigs of the maples overhead. Westward, lines of red and gold barred out the setting sun. In the deep purple of the eastern sky a few stars were beginning to slip out, one by one. There was a peacefulness about the scene which gradually pervaded the hearts of the young girls, and, when they reached the little brown building in the rear of the church, both were in that calm, restful state of mind so conducive to true worship.

As to the meeting itself, it was pretty much as Cara had described. The attendants were the persons she had mentioned, together with perhaps a dozen others. Good Mr. Perry rose and, with the customary expression of patient resignation on his face, opened the meeting by prayer and a reading of Scripture. Being somewhat nearsighted, he did not notice the presence of the two new comers, especially as both were screened by the broad, military back of Miss Serepta Peabody. But when the singing began, something occurred that quite electrified him. It so happened on this particular evening, that good Miss Janie Bell was not there to "jump up and strike the key on the organ," and poor Mr. Perry was wondering despairingly, what could be done, when Cara Lindsay, who, in former meetings had kept silent simply because, like many others, she could better lead than follow, now, in response to an entreating glance from Phebe, started the tune in her clear, well-trained voice, Phebe joining in with her low, rich alto.

There was a faint ruffle of surprise; Mr. Perry looked greatly relieved and full of gratitude, and it was with more than usual fire and earnestness that he began expounding the passage of Scripture he had selected. What he said was good and scholarly, though perhaps partaking too much of pulpit oratory. A little plain, practical talk might have been better suited to the place and people, but dear Mr. Perry believed in following the method suggested by a certain well known bishop—"When you preach, preach as to archangels!"

But many a minister has found out that this won't do when talking to plain, unlearned John Smith or Mary Brown. Sermons must be served according to the mental digestive apparatus of the hearer. But to go back to this particular meeting. There was a certain dreary solemnity about it not entirely broken by unwonted earnestness in preaching or melody in singing. Phebe could not help contrasting it with the lively meetings held in her school town.

"Things must be changed here," she pondered to herself. "No wonder that there is no more interest in the church and that spirituality is at low ebb. A healthy prayer-meeting is the heart of all true religious advancement. I wonder if I can do anything! I wonder if Mr. Perry would think me officious or be angry with me if I made any suggestions!"

Certainly the reverend gentleman did not look as though he would scorn any help, as he came towards her after the meeting had ended and the people were passing out.

"I am heartily glad to see you here, Miss Phebe. And you, too, Miss Lindsay," he said with a cordial grasp of the hand. "It does me good to see new faces. I'm tired of preaching to empty benches," with a smile that ended in a sigh, for Mr. Perry, who was a most faithful and conscientious minister, felt a keen regret at seeing no good result from his efforts.

"Well," said Phebe, boldly plunging in, "it really seems to me that we ought to have this small room filled every prayer-meeting night! There are plenty of people, I'm sure—enough, even of our own church members."

"I know it—I know it, my dear young lady! If one could only gather them in! I've done my best, but I am painfully aware of the fact that our meetings are dull. It is the same in the church—a lack of interest. Some have suggested that the matter might be improved by social gatherings—'flap jack suppers' and 'maple sugar festivals and the like'"—with a little grimace. "But we've tried these. They are very good in their place, bringing the young people together in a friendly way, but I fail to see that our prayer-meetings or church services are any better attended afterwards. Now Miss Phebe, and you, too, Miss Lindsay, I frankly ask your aid. Can you make any suggestions?"

"Well, I'll agree to come and help with the singing," said Cara, who was touched by the tired discouraged face of her pastor.

"And that will go much toward making the prayer-meetings attractive," Phebe broke in earnestly. "Now at our meetings in C——, we had a great deal of singing. Whenever Mr. Pendergast thought things were getting a little dull, he just called on somebody to select a hymn—he rarely gave one out himself. It gave a chance to different ones to have their favorite songs sung and so added an individual interest."

"Now that's an idea," said Mr. Perry briskly. "It has always puzzled me to select suitable hymns—hymns that would be enjoyable to each and all. I'll make a note of that, Miss Phebe, and now can't you tell me a little more about the order of your meetings?"

"Well," said Phebe a little hesitatingly, "We all took part in it. Sometimes the talk was on 'favorite texts.' Different members of the congregation were called on to give passages of Scripture that they particularly liked, or, perhaps, concerning which they were sometimes puzzled. Then Mr. Pendergast would point out the peculiar beauties or significance of these verses. Questions and answers went back from people to minister and minister to people. It was delightfully informal and friendly. There was nothing stiff nor conventional about it. We all came together for mutual help. It was both social and spiritual."

"That is just what I want here," said Mr. Perry earnestly. "I have prayed long and fervently that some showers of the revival spirit might bless us, and I have become more and more convinced that it must begin in our prayer-meeting. I feel thankful to you both to-night—to you, Miss Cara, for your help in singing, and to you, Phebe, for your practical suggestions. I trust I may rely on your aid in the future?"

"As I said, I will do what I can," and there was a look of earnestness in Cara's dark eyes.

"And I," said Phebe, and she added mentally, "I thought my work lay in foreign lands, but I find it right here in my prayer-meeting. Well, God knows best, and He will help me."

And God did help Phebe, as He always helps those who ask Him for strength to battle in a good cause. And I wish that all of you might visit Phebe's prayer-meeting now! You would find neither empty benches nor lack of interest!

And if any who read this little sketch are accustomed to attend a meeting that is dull and unattractive, let them be certain that God has work for them in that very meeting—that with them, individually, lies its success. In some way or other, they can add to its improvement. If they cannot sing, they can pray; if they cannot pray aloud, they can repeat some helpful, comforting verse. At all events they can be prompt in attendance, they can show an interest in what their leader says. And, most practical of all, there are few who are so friendless as to be unable to invite some one to go to the meeting with them. Ask a relative, a neighbor, a servant even—be sure that God will bless your efforts—and it may be that you will win a new jewel for your crown!

$100,000 for Foreign Missions.

SHALL THEY HAVE IT?

TWO consecutive General Synods and two General Conferences have pronounced in favor of it,—representative bodies, all of them, in the truest sense. This is their estimate of the value of our Missions to the life of the Church and as the expression of that life; their judgment of what they need and ought to have for their successful prosecution. There is only one way in which that estimate and judgment could be more distinctly and explicitly pronounced, and that is by the gift, on the part of the churches, of the full amount thus named.

This they have failed, so far, not only to do, but to give any sign or promise of doing, before the year is done. The reports of receipts into the treasury from month to month, and the statements with which they are accompanied, would seem to indicate that, despite the utterances of Synods and Conferences, the churches have either forgotten or rejected the idea.

Has anything appeared or occurred, meanwhile, to invalidate this judgment?—to make this appear too high an estimate, improper to ask and too large to give? We believe there is nothing, absolutely nothing.

The need of such a sum, if not greater, is more evident than it was two years or a year ago, or even last November, when the Conference met at Fonda. No thoughtful Christian can read the papers there presented and now published by the Board—(and it would be a happy thing if every member of the Reformed Church would read them and pray over them, and ask, in view of them, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?")—and not feel that, if the estimate errs at all, it is too low rather than too high. When, from all our Mission fields, there comes the cry for men, and, from men enough to meet the want, comes the response, "Here are we; send us!"—when brethren devoted to their work and their Lord, but overwhelmed by labors and responsibilities they are unable to discharge or perform, unanimously ask to have their supplies increased or their field reduced,—there surely can be no question as to need.

Nor, as to worthiness and success, has anything occurred to invalidate the judgment in favor of so large a sum. The General Synod, in Syracuse, last year, deeply impressed with the evidences of God's blessing resting on the labors of our missionaries, testified its gratitude and uttered its devout thanksgiving therefor. No tidings of losses or disaster have since come to cause discouragement. The fields from which reports of last year's work have been received,—Japan and India,—show the Divine blessing as great as before,—in Japan greater and more wonderful than ever. There is no reason to think that the report yet to be received from China will show the tokens of God's favor to be less.

If we look back further than the year,—say for twenty years,—the evidence of growth to the Divine blessing is simply marvellous. Within that period the number of missionaries has increased but five, but that of stations and out-stations from 19 to 141, or seven times and a half; of native, ordained pastors, from 3 to 19, or more than six-fold; of all native helpers, from 43 to 206, or five times nearly; of churches, from 10 to 41, and of communicants, from 576 to 3,196, or five times and a half.

Is it any wonder, then,—should it be matter for surprise or question, that an increase so great, with all the increasing labors and opportunities it involves, should call for a corresponding increase in the gifts and efforts of the Church? Could we reasonably expect anything else? Could we worthily or honorably offer less?

Is it too late, even now, to take this matter seriously in hand, and, by earnest and united effort, accomplish it? To do it could not be otherwise than honorable to us as a Church, nor could it fail to bring relief to our Missions and glory to our Lord. This $100,000 raised would swallow up all debts, and settle the questions that now are so perplexing, as to the immediate future of certain portions of our work. It would answer No! to Dr. Chamberlain's inquiry, and say to him, "We do not mean to let you give up the Telugu field, nor let others reap the harvest." It would give the same reply in regard to other objects whose future is in uncertainty.

We have received this work as distinctly and directly from the Lord, in the working of His Providence, as though His own hand had pointed out to us the fields and His own voice from heaven had summoned us to enter them. The work is His. The growth that makes it great, and that creates its large demands, is the evidence of His blessing on it. The demands themselves are His demands upon our faith and love. "It can be done," writes one who has given life long and abundant proof of his devotion—"It can be done, if each true man will mark for himself, after thinking, for just one absorbing moment, of Him who loved him and gave Himself for him. Do ask them to try that, even if some should be thinking they have done enough. What is enough to do for Him?"

If we all honestly "try that," it will be done.

The Revision Must Be Revised.

A DECLARATION of "one of the ablest American scholars," quoted in one of your recent issues, brings to mind the concluding sentences of an earnest advocate of the new Revision in a letter recently received from him. The Alleghany professor "declares that the Revised Version is deformed by many faults that could have been avoided." The friend whose name, if mentioned, would have great weight with the readers of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, writes: "There are blemishes in the Revision. They ought to be removed." The correctness of the first of these short sentences will not be disputed by any. The reasonableness of the second is also indisputable. But it is more than reasonable. For as an "ought to," that is within reach, always means "must," with a correct moral agent; and as this matter of revising the Revision is now within reach, and the class of people interested in it are correct moral agents, that only can legitimately follow which is stated at the head of this article.

The Revision must be revised. And is not this what was expected at the beginning? Did the New Testament Revisers intend their work to be adopted as they presented it to the people, and as we now have it? If they did they were, however many their other excellent qualities, certainly very unpractical gentlemen. For if they did intend this, did they not then practically declare themselves as follows? "We hereby present to you, the millions of English readers who do not understand Greek, the result of our labors in revising the New Testament, in the form we expect you to adopt it. But we have added an appendix to notify you that according to the judgment of the entire American Committee of Revisers, there are 854 errors in our work, 498 of which you will find we have pointed out in 'Classes of passages,' and the other 356 in numbers varying from 1 to 40, in all the New Testament books except Philemon." But whatever their intentions in the matter, they certainly created a moral necessity for revising this Revision.

The Revision must be revised; for, leaving that appendix out of the future editions, could not mend the matter. Scripta litera manet. That appendix has woven a wire club of 854 strands, which will always remain in existence for infidelity and Satan to wield against the Church of God and the consciences of men with tremendous force, until it is untwined and the separate strands are either woven into the Revision or thrown aside by those invested with authority in the matter.

But the authoritative committee inventory of 854 errors by no means presents all "the many faults" by which, according to Prof. Warfield, "the Revised Version is deformed," and "that could have been avoided." The difference between the work of individual translators is even more serious. In your issue of July 6th, 1881, it was shown in an article on "One Verse from the New Version," that in John 6: 27, "nine out of ten of the alterations made in this one verse of the new translation, are nullified by the discrepancies among the different portions of the translators' work." And if an ordinary "pastor" could prove this in regard to one verse, how great must be the need of revising the whole Revision.

A practical plan was then suggested for this re-revision, which may not be the best now. But LET SOME PLACE BE DEVISED for a revised revision and be PUT IN PRACTICE. For the Old Testament Revision, which is proved by one of the most earnest advocates of the New Revision to be marred by a list of "English cockneyisms," and of which Prof. Denio, quoted February 10th, like many other learned men, "by no means approves of everything," cannot annihilate the errors of the New Testament Revision.

And how wise it would be, in revising the Revision, to expend the infinitessimal labor necessary to correct the few mistakes in the division of chapters, etc., and thus avoid throwing on the Church the herculean labor of producing a popular substitute. "There are blemishes in the Revision. They ought to be removed." PASTOR.

The Third Party.

DEAR CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Presuming upon our long acquaintance, I am moved to address you in a very direct manner. The occasion is the appalling muddle into which you seem to have fallen, as indicated by your utterances of the last few weeks on Prohibition.

I am sure your editors have not deliberately landed you there, for I know them as men of far-sightedness, given to looking all around a subject. Some wicked imp has mixed things up. We have always regarded you as one of God's witnesses, and have loved you for your good testimony. We do not wish you to be political in a partisan sense—to advocate a third party or any other party. But what does this mean? "The third party, as a rule, secures only the defeat of Republican candidates." What a slap at the Prohibitionists! What a delicate caress of the Republicans! and so slyly, so cunningly done, under the pretext of a defence of your religious and non-political character, that the political wire-puller could scarcely excel it.

In your last issue you seem to go out of your way to tell the world that John B. Gough "never engaged actively, you believe, in any political measures to advance the temperance cause." Inasmuch as Mr. Gough's public support of the Prohibition party ticket in 1884 was one of the striking features of that contest, and his subsequent warm adherence to that party till his death well known, we are at a loss under what head or classification your statement should be ranked. Whether the result of a want of information or not, its needless introduction carries a suspicion again of a partisan design.

But our greatest surprise is that you should hold that a great moral question, always yours, falls out of your domain by becoming political. On that principle the Church itself which you claim for your main issue, would be lost to you, should the politician begin to make an issue of it. It is true, you say you have no intention of excluding the subject, but in explanation declare that it is your policy to "say a word considerately now and then in favor of restricting (sic?) the liquor traffic."

Alas, has it come to that! Know you not that the issue is not the restriction of the traffic, but its destruction? Cannot the INTELLIGENCER come out of this muddle and "speak a word now and then" for the destruction of this greatest enemy of man, and of the Church, without offensiveness toward any party and especially without nursing the wounds of its sore partisan contributors to the disgust of all the rest. There are many churches in this land standing silent as the grave because of the liquor traffic, and, I believe, there is scarcely one out of ten the land over which dares to bear witness to the whole truth concerning this power, which is undermining the strength and sapping the life out of them all. God, I feel assured, is raising up a standard against it, and if the INTELLIGENCER cannot come to the standard, it can at least forbear trying to kick it down. If it can't speak a word for the cause, it can at least say in its heart, God bless it. W. H. V.

An Unusual Discovery.

THE Athenæum of Feb. 13th has the following: The Turkestan Messenger publishes a letter stating that two ancient Christian sepulchres have just been discovered in the plain of Tchouia, in the district of Tokmak. One near Tokmak itself was discovered by Dr. Poiarkoff, and the other in the environs of Pishpek was brought to light during the operations of the topographical survey. The cemetery in the environs of Pishpek extends over rather more than thirty square yards, and its surface is covered with a quantity of gravestones bearing angular inscriptions surmounted by a cross. Dr. Poiarkoff has requested permission to carry out some excavations in the cemetery at his own expense, and it is hoped that no inconsiderable scientific results will be obtained by his researches.

MISS KIN KATO, a graduate of the Normal School in Tokio and for a time a teacher in the kindergarten of the Normal School of Japan, is attending the Normal School of Salem, Mass. She has come to the United States by the appointment and at the expense of the Japanese Government, to study our systems of education so that she may be prepared to assume the superintendence of the normal schools of Japan. She is the first lady sent abroad by the government to complete her education, and expects to remain in this country three years. She is not a Christian, but has no prejudice against Christianity.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“A HISTORY OF GERMAN LITERATURE.” By W. Scherer. 2 Vols. Professor Scherer has composed not only a very satisfactory account of the beginning and progress of German literature, but also a very interesting one. The translation, by Mrs. F. C. Conybeare, seems to be cleverly made; it is certainly graceful and spirited. The fact that the work has reached a third edition in Germany, is proof enough that those most competent to decide upon its merits have given it their approbation. The record is carried to the death of Goethe in 1832, but advances to a short description of the work of Jacob Grimm in 1835, and follows one department of literature down to 1841. At the end is a valuable Chronological Table and an important Bibliographical Appendix, followed by a full Index.

The golden thread running through the literature of Germany consists of the old Heroic Songs, long preserved by tradition, and at last in good part collected in the immortal Niebelungen. Of the early written forms only a fragment remains. Prof. Scherer compares the Niebelungen with the Iliad and Odyssey, and claims for it an equal rank in some of its parts. These songs have moulded German character and given it some of its noblest traits. It is very interesting to follow their varying fortune, now supreme, now neglected; but sure to assert their superiority and to win back the love of the people after every period of neglect. At last Schiller and Goethe embodied them in classical forms, but unfortunately, so far as the latter is considered, added a sensuousness which has tended to degrade German character.

This literature, while losing nothing of its virility, received a Christian religious cast from Ulfila's Gothic Scriptures and from the missionary efforts of the Irish Columbanus—St. Columba, as we have been wont to call him. It was also modified by the literature of France, but maintained its distinct German character. What it borrowed was made to serve, and not allowed to rule. We follow Prof. Scherer's record of this development with real pleasure. The story is a charming one.

Not less engaging is the history of the rise of the High German form of this literature, made national by the poets who were the annalists, almost the journalists, of their time. They were the favorites of the princes and were attached to their courts. A line of remarkable men is described in an uncommonly interesting chapter. Luther's translation of the Bible and the tracts of the Reformation established the High German as the national literature, made the Germans one people, and prepared the way for the empire achieved by Prince Bismarck. Indeed, the great Chancellor simply accomplished a national desire, and that desire had been awakened and fostered by the High German poets and authors.

Prof. Scherer does not consider the moral influence of the works of Goethe. He speaks of the many noble sentiments to be found in his writings, but fails to notice the paganism and impurity which pollute nearly everyone except Hermann and Dorothea. Indeed, our author is generally content to describe without criticism. In our judgment Goethe, while a most fascinating writer, has degraded the German nature by leading it into scepticism and voluptuousness. A large part of the second volume is devoted to Lessing, Goethe and Schiller. A period of comparative barrenness follows them, and, as it seems to us, as the natural result of the sensuousness and paganism introduced by Goethe. Some day Germany will throw off this spell and return to a Christian faith and the heroic virtues of former days.

Is it necessary to say that we have read these volumes with great and profitable enjoyment, and that we heartily commend them to those fond of history, and especially the history of intellectual development? (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“THE WORLD AND THE LOGOS,” by the Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, S.T.D., LL.D., Assistant Bishop of Mississippi, is the title of the Bedell Lectures, 1885. With remarkable learning, skill and eloquence, the author of these two lectures, delivered at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, discusses the doctrine of Evolution and kindred phases of the questions between Science and Religion. Taking St. John's Account of the Beginning in its relations to the Eternal Word, Bishop Thompson shows that the godless science of the times is as completely hostile to the Johannean Cosmogony as to that of Moses, and, while speaking with the utmost respect of the eminent abilities and learning and services of Darwin, Spencer, Huxley and their peers in the realm of the modern sciences, he also keenly sees their errors and dissects their theories and disputes their arguments and conclusions. His style is vigorous, racy, pungent and elegant, and it carries the reader swiftly along the deep channels of his clear, strong thought. We quote a characteristic passage from the conclusion of the first lecture:

“‘Survival of the fittest,’ is it? Who are the fittest? What does nature know about it, or ‘natural selection,’ when it comes to man? He shall decide, I say. His hunch-back child shall survive as Alexander Pope, to write Dunciads and Essays on Man. His poor, puny offspring shall survive, as Isaac Newton, to tell the world how its Maker hangs the stars in order and rolls the systems in harmony. His purblind, scrofulous son shall be Dr. Samuel Johnson. His blind men shall see Iliads and Odyssies arise from the many sounding sea, or their sightless eyes shall pierce the heavens with Milton and scan the secrets of the abyss. His weakling, doomed to perish by your blind law of survival, shall stand upon the quarter deck of the ‘Victory’ and guide the thunders of Trafalgar. Man shall measure, by his own judgment of fitness, his own children; and the weakest of them, physically, shall be his heroes and leaders, his lords of men and shakers of the world.” (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

....“SYNOPTICAL LECTURES ON THE BOOKS OF HOLY SCRIPTURE.” By Donald Fraser, D.D. Two volumes. Fourth Edition. The idea of this work is admirable. A general view of the contents of Scripture is what all Christians ought to have, but which very few do actually possess. Their reading is partial, limited and fragmentary, and of much of the Bible they know nothing. To counteract this error or rather meet this deficiency, lectures such as are stated in the title of these volumes are well adapted. The treatment, indeed, is not ideally perfect. Other writers might make a better selection of the points to be treated, and perhaps communicate more information in the same space. Still the work is good, and may be cordially recommended to those who would enlarge and clarify their acquaintance with the substance of Divine revelation. Only let them beware of substituting this for the Bible itself. It serves its true office when it induces and fits men to read understandingly the whole Book of books. (Carters.)

....“COMMENTARY ON THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.” By F. Godet. Vol. I. Translated and edited by Timothy Dwight, of Yale College. The publication of Prof. Godet's Commentary upon the Gospel of Luke a few years ago, has made many American Bible students acquainted with the author, and prepared the way for a cordial reception of this, his masterpiece of exegesis. The volume already issued contains a valuable introduction and the comments on chapters I.–V. The work is scholarly, but at the same time adapted to popular use; exhaustive, without being tedious. We do not know of any other single work that gives so clear and impressive an idea of the Gospel and of the discussions that have arisen concerning it. Prof. Dwight, the American editor, has added his notes at the close of the volume, thus securing continuity of treatment both for the author and himself.

Sabbath school workers will find in this work a great deal of information and suggestion that cannot fail to be helpful to them in teaching the lessons selected from this grandest of the Gospels. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....In “THE FIGHT FOR MISSOURI, from the Election of Lincoln to the Death of Lyon,” who was one of the earliest victims of the Civil War, Thomas L Snead, who was Chief of Staff of the Confederate Army of the West, and a Member of the Confederate Congress, gives a succinct history of the struggle for that great border State. His narrative covers only the period of the nine months which elapsed from the Presidential Election of 1860 to the battle of Wilson's Creek, which secured Missouri to the Union. Its value consists largely in personal reminiscences of events of which the author is the only prominent surviving witness; and in his comparison of the Confederate with the Union accounts of that momentous crisis. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“JEWELS OF PRAISE,” by Asa Hull, is a Collection of Choice Original Hymns and Tunes, suitable for Sunday-schools, Bible Classes and the Home Circle. Of the 192 pages, 157 are filled with copyright, original hymns and tunes, and the remainder with “Familiar Hymns,” which everybody knows. There are thirteen Christmas carols, four for Easter, four for missionary meetings, seven for anniversaries. The music is easy, lively and pleasing to the popular ear, and the collection is apparently free from the jingle jangle that has lowered the standard of much of the Sunday school song of the times. (Asa Hull.)

....“THE MAN OF FEELING,” by Henry Mackensie, and the two comedies of Sheridan, “THE RIVALS AND SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL,” form the fifth and sixth volumes of “Cassell's National Library.” The first is one of the most sentimental sketches which the last century produced, with so many “tears” and “chokings” that the editor puts them in an index. Still it is better than Sterne's famous “Sentimental Journey,” in being free from a positively vicious tendency. The comedies of the second volume are so well known that we need only refer to them as being given in this cheap and handy form. (Cassell & Co.)

....“RELIGION IN A COLLEGE,” by Rev. Dr. McCosh, noticed on the first page last week, is published by Messrs. A. C. Armstrong & Son.

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....Mr. Curtis, in the April Harper, discusses, not from a Puritan point of view, nor indeed from a very profound view of any kind, the modern stage. In fact, his pleasant gossip is apt at times to sound almost like persiflage. But it is charming, nevertheless, and often has a deeper and more earnest meaning than appears upon the surface. Mr. Howells, in his “Editor's Study,” touches a profounder chord in his comments on John Fiske's late books, and on Count Tolstoi's “My Religion,” and his reflections are as charmingly expressed. Mr. Warner, besides his usual “Drawer,” appears in the first part of a serial novel of description and travel, and of course abounding in his characteristic felicities of characterization. The beginning of a new novel by Blackmore is a literary event of no small interest, especially as it deals with the times of Lord Nelson and introduces the old hero himself. Besides these, there is a short story by Helen Hunt Jackson, and some pleasant “Neapolitan Sketches,” articles on Pigeons, and on “Cattle-raising on the Plains.” Phil Robinson's “Going down to the Sea in Ships” is a delightful mingling of history, travel, and fancy. The veteran authoress of “John Halifax” begins a serial novel, and “A Postmaster” has some suggestive statements about Civil Service Reform. The illustrations of Harper were never finer than this month.

....The Musical Herald for March contains an extended account of the opening of the new music hall in connection with the New England Conservatory, which is named after its donor, “Sleeper Hall.” The report embraces a fine Dedicatory Ode by Louis C. Elson and an address by Dr. Duryea.

....The Musical Visitor for March gives several good selections of Easter music which will be appreciated by choirs and choristers. It contains also organ voluntaries by Cramer and Beethoven, and a pleasing variety of reading matter.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Lee & Shepard: Young People's History of England. By George Makepeace Towle. 12mo, pp. 388. $1.50; also,

Danger Signals. The Enemies of Youth. From the Business Man's Standpoint. (Containing Advice to the Young on the Evils of the Day from Many Merchants of Boston.) By Rev. F. E. Clark. 12mo. pp. 192. $1; also,

Haphazard Personalities; Chiefly of Noted Americans. By Charles Lanman. 12mo, pp. 387. $1.50; also,

Hints on Language in Connection with Sight-Reading and Writing in Primary and Intermediate Schools. By S. Arthur Bent, A.M. 16mo, pp. 73. 50 cents; also,

The Message of the Bluebird. Told to Me to Tell to Others. By Irene E. Jerome. 4to. 8 full-page illustrations. Cover “Imperial Antique,” knotted with silk floss. $1.

Ticknor & Company: Light on the Hidden Way. With an Introduction by James Freeman Clarke. 16mo, pp. 133. $1.

Fords, Howard & Hulbert: Reason and Revelation, Hand in Hand. By Thomas Martin McWhinney, D.D. Crown 8vo, pp. 594. Cloth, $1 50.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: The Mosaic Origin of the Pentateuchal Codes. By Geerhardus Vos. With an Introduction by Professor William Henry Green. 12mo, pp. 263. $1 50.

Funk & Wagnalls: Helen; or, Will She Save Him? By Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins. 12mo, pp. 138. 75 cents.

United Brethren Publishing House, Dayton, Ohio: Notes of Triumph: For the Sunday-school. By Rev. E. S. Lorenz and Rev. I. Baltzell. Square 12mo. 268 Tunes and Hymns. Board, 35 cents.

Macmillan & Co.: A Tale of a Lonely Parish. By F. Marion Crawford. 12mo, pp. 380. $1.50; also,

The Bostonians. A Novel. By Henry James. 12mo, pp. 449. $2.

Robert Carter & Brothers: Dick: The Captain of the Family Ship. By the author of the “Win and Wear” Series. (The Gillettes.) 12mo, pp. 194. 75 cents; also,

Nan, the Missionary. By the author of the “Win and Wear” Series. (The Gillettes.) 12mo, pp. 194. 75 cents; also,

The Parables of Christ. By A. L. O. E. 12mo, pp. 285. $1.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Good News. A Collection of Sermons by Sam Jones and Sam Small. First Series. A second series under the title, “Joyful Tidings,” will soon be issued. J. S. Ogilvie & Co.

Popular Family Atlas of the World. J. B. Lippincott Company.

Lorenz Alma Tadema. His Life and Works. By Georg Ebers. From the German by Mary J. Safford. With Thirteen Illustrations. 16mo, pp. 12. 40 cents. William S. Gottsberger.

Our Sensation Novel. Edited by Justin H. McCarthy, M.P. (No. 63, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 152. 25 cents; also, Lord Vanecourt's Daughter. A Novel. By Mabel Collins. (No. 516, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 66. 20 cents.

The Two Advents Contrasted. Four Advent Sermons. By Rev. John W. Beardslee, D.D. 4to, pp. 56.

Plutarch's Lives of Alexander the Great and Julius Cæsar. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I., No. 8.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

Must the Chinese Go? An Examination of the Chinese Question. By Mrs. S. L. Baldwin, Eighteen Years a Missionary in China. 8vo, pp. 48. 20 cents. Phillips & Hunt.

PERIODICALS.

March.—The English Illustrated Magazine, The American Journal of Philology.

April.—The Magazine of Art, Harpers, Cassell's Family Magazine, The Home Missionary, The Atlantic Monthly, American Agriculturist, Wide Awake.

NEW BOOKS.

The Late Mrs. Null. By FRANK R. STOCKTON, author of "Rudder Grange," "The Lady, or the Tiger?" etc., etc. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.50.

Mr. Stockton's first novel is certain of an enthusiastic welcome from the thousands of readers of his short stories. He was not only written a very characteristic novel, but a great deal more; a powerful sustained story, in which all his best traits are put into a fitting form and a permanent piece of literature.

American Diplomacy: And the Furtherance of Commerce. By Hon. EUGENE SCHUYLER author of "Peter the Great," etc., etc. 1 vol., 8vo, $2.50.

The author's exceptional experience has admirably fitted him for the preparation of this volume, which for the first time adequately sets forth the workings of this important department of our government.

Oceana: or, England and Her Colonies. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, M.A. Illustrated. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $2.50.

Letters to Dead Authors. By ANDREW LANG. 1 vol. Elzevir 12mo, gilt top, $1.

The History of German Literature. By Professor WILLIAM SCHERER. Translated under the supervision of Prof. Max Müller. 2 vols. 12mo. $3.50.

What Does History Teach? By JOHN STUART BLACKIE. 1 vol. 16mo, cloth, 75 cents.

"A bright, brave, inspiring book, we heartily commend it to our readers.—[Hartford Courant.

The Fight for Missouri in 1861. From the Inauguration of Jackson to the Death of Lyon. By Colonel THOMAS L. SNEAD. 1 vol., 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Domesticus. A Tale of the Imperial City. By WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Author of "Nothing to Wear." 1 vol., 12mo, $1.25.

Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "The New Arabian Nights," "Treasure Island," etc. Library Edition, $1: paper, 25 cents.

"A work of incontestable genius.... What is worth mentioning, because otherwise many people will miss it, is that a noble moral underlies the marvelous tale."—[James Payn in the Independent.

How To Be Happy Though Married. Being a Handbook to Marriage. By a Graduate in the University of Matrimony. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.25.

"One of the brightest, wittiest, most sensible, and wholesome books on the subject of matrimony that we have seen."—[New York Observer.

Messrs. Scribner beg to announce a reissue of the famous Bible Commentary (known also as the Speaker's Commentary) in a new edition at greatly reduced price. The first two volumes of the new edition are now ready. Cloth, $3 each, net. Readers are invited to send for circular note giving all the details of the republication.

* These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by*

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.00.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

CARMINA SANCTORUM

SELECTION OF HYMNS & SONGS OF PRAISE WITH TUNES

HITCHCOCK. EDDY. MUDGE.

746 Hymns, with Tunes. 450 Pages. 8vo, Cloth. Price, $1.25.
(Hymns, 35c.—60c. Chapel Hymns and Tunes, 75c.)

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

It satisfies me beyond any work of the kind I have ever seen.—[Rev. THOS. B McLEOD, Brooklyn, N.Y.
It contains the best hymns of all the ages, and nothing but the best —[Rev. FRITZ W. BALDWIN, Chelsea, Mass.
I am inclined to rank it first among hymn and tune books —[M. M. G. DANA, St. Paul, Minn.
The book must approve itself to the churches —[Rev. FRANKS CHILDS, Conn.
The book is, on the whole, the best one out.—[CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.
We give a most hearty welcome to this book. We are pleased with it even beyond expectation.
—[ILLUS. CHRISTIAN WEEKLY.
This is a noble collection, skillfully arranged, beautifully printed, and set to fitting music.
—[THE WITNESS, Halifax.

* A sample copy will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, subject to return if not adopted. Specimen pages free.*

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers, New York and Chicago.

"An essay in the highest intellectual morality."

ANNA KARENINA.

By COUNT LEO TOLSTOI. Translated from the Russian by Nathan Haskell Dole. Royal 12mo, 750 pages, $1.75.

"Anna Karénina" is one of the great novels of the world. It deals with questions which appeal to every man and woman. The young and beautiful wife of an influential official in St. Petersburg suddenly wakes to the fact that she passionately loves a young officer, and that her life with her husband whom she married as a matter of convenience has been a long lie. She struggles against the temptation, but at last she yields and goes away with her lover. Not even George Eliot paints with greater power the inexorableness of law. The happiness of the lovers at first is complete, but Anna is jealous and exacting from the very reason of the unstableness of her position, and the downward path is sure and terrible.

For a more complete analysis of this remarkable book see Mr. Howells' notice in Harper's Monthly for April, page 809.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,
13 Astor Place, New York.

EASTER MUSIC.

"CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE." A new arrangement of Scripture Selections for Easter Tide, interspersed with appropriate hymns, set to original music, the whole Service being eminently fitted for use on Easter Sunday for young and old. 16 pp. By Rev. ROBERT LOWRY.
Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"EASTER ANNUAL NO. 10."—Issued this season. Contains new and original songs by popular composers, furnishing an abundant variety of appropriate material for Sunday School Easter Festivals. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"FESTIVAL ANTHEMS." 64 large octave page Anthems, for Easter and other joyous occasions. Price, $3.60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.

A complete Catalogue of Easter Music, Services, Carols, Anthems, etc., sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

New Sunday School Music Books.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Jewels of Praise.	$30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gem of Gems.	$30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gospel Praise Book.	$40 per hundred. Specimen copy 50c.

NEW EASTER MUSIC.

OUR RISEN LORD, SERVICE. 5 cts. $4 per hund.
HULL'S EASTER ANNUAL. 5 cts. $2 per hund.
Address ASA HULL,
150 Nassau St., New York City.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

JUST PUBLISHED AND FOR SALE

BY MORRIS COSTER,
1166 Broadway, New York,
NO. 7 OF THE
THIRD VOLUME
OF THE

New Amsterdam Gazette,

With a view of the oldest Gate at Delft and one of the prison at the Hague, Holland, and contributions of Rev. Charles H. Hall, D.D., Rev. Wm. Hall, New York, James W. Gerard, Esq. Speech of Hon. Chauncey Depew, and other articles all treating on Dutch topics, and news from Holland and the Dutch settlements in the United States.

Subscriptions at $1.50 per volume, of 12 numbers, all illustrated, also taken at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The Best Instruction Books.

Richardson's New Method for the Pianoforte

The fame and sale of this celebrated instruction book promise to be permanent. Having the field to itself, as the only first-class method, for its first few years, it has not suffered from the publication of other and really good instructors, but continues to sell very largely.

It is the most correct book of its class, having been many times revised. It has also been repeatedly enlarged, and is used by a multitude of teachers in all parts of the country. Price $3 00.

Send for Ditson & Co.'s large list of Easter Music: Carols, Anthems, Quartets, &c.

Clarke's New Method for Reed Organ, ($2.50) continues to be a well approved and favorite method, and contains good instructions, and much fine music. Other, cheaper and smaller, but reliable methods are, Johnson's Parlor Organ Instruction Book [$1.50]; Bellak's Method for Organ [$1] and Winner's Ideal Method for Cabinet Organ [75 cts.]

LAKME, the new, brilliant and popular opera, mailed for $1.60 paper, or $2.00 cloth.

Remember our popular books, MINSTREL SONGS [$2], WAR SONGS [50 cts.] and COLLEGE SONGS [50 cts.] They sell everywhere, and please everybody.

Remember that any book will be mailed, postfree, for Retail Price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE.
By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.

16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY

of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

* Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc,
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

NEW A. L. O. E. BOOKS.

Pictures of St. Paul, Drawn in an English Home by A. L. O. E. 16 full-page illustrations. $1.50.

A most interesting and instructive story combined with a vivid delineation of the great Apostle's life. The very thing for reading aloud on Sabbath Evenings.

The Parables of Christ, by A. L. O. E. 12 illustrations. 16mo, $1.00.

A very profitable and pleasant little book for readers old or young.

The A. L. O. E. Library, 50 Vols. 16mo in Scarlet Cloth, and in a neat case. $28 00.

The Little Library, by A. L. O. E., contained in the above but put up separately for younger readers. 20 Vols. 16mo, $6.50.

OTHER NEW BOOKS.

Richard & Robin, by Mattie B. Banks, Author of the "Children's Summer." 16mo, $1 25.

A very bright pretty book for the Younger Children and full of capital lessons too.

The Gilletes, by the author of "Win and Wear."

1. DICK, THE CAPTAIN, - 16mo, 75 cts.
2. NAN, THE MISSIONARY, 16mo, 75 cts.

The first two volumes of an admirable series of six little books illustrating various virtues such as Integrity, Unselfishness, Perseverance, Enterprise, Faithfulness and Honesty. They are alike entertaining and instructive.

Synoptical Lectures on the Books of Holy Scripture, by Donald Fraser, D.D. In two vols. New edition carefully revised throughout. $4.50.

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,
530 Broadway, New York.

* Any of the above (except the A. L. O. E. Libraries) sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL

Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 68
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85

Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886. $5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement,
Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,611,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., Ass't Sec's.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. S. WILSBERGER, Prop., 23 N. Second St., Phila., Pa.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

Home.

THE little word, so familiar and so expressive, is perhaps the sweetest in our English tongue. It gathers up in itself a thousand tender associations; it possesses the fragrance of the dearest recollections; it is hallowed by all that is pure and of good report. A man goes from home to the world with its attritions and cares; he returns to its peace and shelter as to a refuge. A woman abides in her home as in a centre of influence and a temple of prayer, herself the priestess at its most sacred shrine and the maker of its laws. In the humblest home, wherever four walls give the privacy which sets a family apart from other families in a place by itself, the mother in right of her office is queen. "The many make the household, but only one the home," sings the poet, divinely taught, for home without the mother's or the wife's guiding hand is an anomaly.

Men, all by themselves, may order an establishment creditably, be well fed, well housed, and maintain a certain degree of comfort, rough or polished, according to their social requirements or their measure of culture. But at their best they may attain to the freedom and perhaps to the conveniences of a club; not to the serenity and peace of a home. In ordinary cases, a home in which no woman presides, is like a harp out of tune, like a book with the pages torn in the middle, like a song which has lost its melody.

Sentimentalize as we may, however, there are homes and homes. There is no magic in the word itself, no subtle witchery which compels us to admire a home simply because there father, mother and the children live together. Which of us has not seen children brought up in what to the outside world appears to be the pattern home, the place of places for the development of strong, noble and symmetrical character, and still those very children have not turned out well, have made shipwreck of principle, and drifted, forlorn and dismasted, on the sea of life? While from another home, less apparently perfect in its ordering and wholesome in its atmosphere, the sons and daughters have been graduated into honor and usefulness, to the puzzling of wise and thoughtful people.

Home should make its inmates happy, contented and at ease. It should be a training school, not a prison. It is quite possible for the children at home to be governed so much that they never learn self-government; to be kept in leading-strings till they absolutely cannot walk alone. In all good and successfully administered homes there is liberty for the individual as well as law for the whole. That is the happiest home in which each person finds his or her tastes considered, while there is no selfish pressure exerted and where there is no constant irritation because of conflict and contention.

We spend a great deal of time and thought upon the decoration of our houses, longing to have them beautiful and attractive. It is well to do so. But better the plainest home with white walls and undraped mantels, and nothing about it to please a fastidious taste, if therein be mutual deference and courtesy, gentle and considerate care for others, than the most elegant and palatial residence without love.

By love we mean not only the sentiment of affection, but that practical kindliness which makes little sacrifices easy, and blossoms in daily politeness and in gentle words and acts.

Consecration.

THE inquiry which "A Mother" makes in regard to the subject of "Consecration" in a recent INTELLIGENCER, has interested me very much, inasmuch as it has long been a subject of deep interest to me, and not until the past few years have I found any satisfactory solution of this vital and every way important personal subject, and that was given in a paper written by Mrs. Herrick Johnson and read by her at a meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Societies, held during General Assembly at Springfield in 1882. From this exceedingly instructive paper I send a few extracts which I think will interest and throw some light on an often discussed subject. She says, "Consecration! What is that? Do we know?" "Oh, yes; that is, set apart for the service and worship of God—that is great piety, great zeal, great devotion!" Is it? Well, perhaps so; but I apprehend it as a type of piety and zeal and devotion very different from what some imagine. It falls glibly sometimes from Christian lips, and somehow we do associate with it a great apparent devotion.

Dear friends, be assured consecration means something far beyond and above all this. In its best and truest sense it means—and I use this phrase in a most reverent way, and only because it exactly expresses the thought—it means unconditional surrender. Lay all the stress and all the weight you will on both those words, you cannot make them too strong. Unconditional surrender in our minds that we are not our own, that we belong to God and all that we possess, and then, and only then, if called to suffer we can

> "In the hottest fire hold still
> And yet whisper 'As God will.'"

It seems to me that, as soon as one has attained to this state of religious experience, it will not be necessary for us to ask the question which the mother asks, but that the path of duty will be made clear and plain to us through the teaching and leading of the blessed Holy Spirit, and the perplexing questions which so often arise as to which, this or that, is right or not, God will make plain to us as He has promised, "I will guide thee by mine eye."

What is that? It is Livingston dead on his knees with that beautiful pledge fulfilled, "My own Jesus, I have given my whole self to Thee." It is the sainted Duff, fainting with excess of longing and emotion. "If the fathers and mothers of Scotland have no soul for India, I will go back and show them there is one old man who can die for them." It is Bushnell, weak, worn, ready to die, turning his steps back to Africa because he could find no strong young Christian to take his place. It is you and I, just so soon as we have the spirit that makes our wills one with God's; that makes us content to be just where God has placed us, and that makes us work just the same, in or out of sight; and to do just what He has given us to do.

Then again, this surrender means that nothing of all our possessions—time, talents, influence, money, children—nothing is too good or too precious to devote to Christ and His cause.

And the writer of this article would add this, which has been wrought out in her own experience. That this consecration which Mrs. Johnson speaks of cannot be made once and for all, but it must be a repeated act. Each day we must surrender all that is dearest and most precious in God's hands. And we not must be surprised or startled if God takes us at our word sooner than we expected, or in a different way from what we ever anticipated. We must have it a fixed and settled matter. A. E. K.

For Little Brains and Fingers.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: As you have invited the daughters as well as the mothers to write to you on that much perplexing Sunday question as viewed from their standpoint, I think you may be interested to hear about two practical ways of amusing children and keeping them quiet, both of which have been tried successfully in my own home.

For the first, a number of slips of paper are necessary, upon which the oldest must write questions from Bible history, making them easy or difficult according to the ages and acquirements of the little ones. Let me suppose that the oldest one, A., has written fifty slips, and that she has four children, B., C., D., and E., to amuse. Commencing at B., she asks the first question which comes to hand. That being correctly answered, A. continues until, perhaps, the fifth, which B. cannot answer, but as C. can, A. passes on from B., first giving to him—or her—the number of slips which correspond to the questions answered. And so on until the slips are exhausted, when the children count the number each has, and A. gives a card to the one who has the most.

But now we are all engaged in publishing a paper, actually a "Sunday newspaper!" But it does not partake of the character of most of those, inasmuch as each article has a moral. Of our paper, which comes out twice a month, we have only one number, as all the articles must be copied by hand from the various MSS. The two children, eight and ten, write very creditable little stories, and they are always careful to make them suitable for the day on which they are written. We have serials as well as the shorter stories, and sometimes questions on the Sunday-school lessons for the two Sundays which intervene between each edition of our little paper.

A "DAUGHTER."

Flowers from Seed.

THE following directions were given to me by a friend who is very successful in raising flowering plants from seed:

It is very essential that the soil should be quite rich and not too sandy.

It should be pulverized or rubbed fine with the hands and made entirely smooth and even.

Take a piece of board and press the ground as hard as possible, then sprinkle the seeds over the surface, after which take a handful of prepared soil and cover the seeds to the depth of an eighth of an inch, if small, and deeper if large. Then take the board as before and press the seeds and soil down firmly.

Seeds should not be planted too deep nor kept too wet.

They should be sprinkled carefully with the hand or a fine spray.

It is a good plan to cover them with a board, as the ground retains the heat and moisture better. They should not be allowed to grow under the board, but only to sprout, when the board can be taken off.

Seeds should not be started too early, as they will grow more thriftily if transplanted when small. L.

NISKAYUNA, N. Y.

Old Maids' Children.

A CHILD'S truest and best happiness does not consist in making his individual well-being the pivot upon which the whole household machinery turns. He will be the better, not worse, for a little judicious letting alone occasionally, and for being taught that there are other people to be considered before himself. While a mother should always have quick and hearty sympathy for all juvenile trials and perplexities, she should at the same time exact from the child a corresponding consideration for her own occupations and annoyances. The sympathies, like every other spiritual development, require diligent cultivation.

In the minor moralities the principle of careful early training holds good. The politeness that is now significantly styled old-fashioned might be reintroduced with benefit to those who practised it and to those who are favored in receiving it. The graceful deference to elders and to women is something that is rarely acquired in mature years. A boy of five is none too young to be taught to pull off his cap when he meets an acquaintance, to remain uncovered in the presence of ladies, to step aside to allow them to enter or leave a room first, and to remain standing until they are seated. There is an ease of bearing gained by early drilling in these regards that makes unmistakable the difference between the man whose courtesy is ingrain and the one with whom it is a veneering, no matter how skilfully the latter may have been applied.

The table manners of children cannot receive too close attention, and yet they seldom have adequate care bestowed upon them. The constant reproof and admonition required seems but a thankless task for many years. Boys and girls manifest a terrible ingenuity in acquiring awkward habits and unpleasant tricks and an equal slowness in overcoming them. Perpetual "nagging" is always painful, both to the giver and the object, but the recompense of grateful appreciation comes surely, though slowly. Some parents weary of waiting for it and abandon the efforts at training. To men nothing can make up for the lack of this early discipline. Women, more imitative and less transparent in imitation, may tutor themselves into a fair pretence of ease, but a man rarely sufficiently overcomes his self-consciousness to feel otherwise than miserable in a circle where he knows his habits and manner mark him as of less outward refinement than his associates. Once in a great while the wife of a man may succeed in imparting a polish that transforms the rough article into a tolerable counterfeit of the fine one, but it is at the price of long struggles and bitter mortifications alike to husband and wife. It is in the mother's hand that the power is laid, and with her rests the responsibility if she fails to exercise it aright.—Christine Terhune Herrick, in Brooklyn Daily Times.

New Books.

....."ADAM HEPBURN'S VOW," by Annie S. Swan, is a thrilling tale of one of Scotland's most heroic and stirring periods. It opens with the great national convocation at Edinburgh in February, 1638, when the Solemn League and Covenant was entered into. And the narrative carries us through the long agony of struggle and persecution and martyrdom, which only ended one hundred and fifty years later, when the last Stuart was driven from his throne. It is full of adventures, escapes and hidings, and at the same time gives pleasing and touching pictures of the simple and pious Covenanters. As a study of Scottish history, and as a stimulus to religious steadfastness and a hatred and horror of religious oppression, this book is to be highly commended for the reading of the young people of this agnostic generation. (Cassell & Co.)

...."In the Golden Days." By Edna Lyall. Since the time of Walter Scott there have been few good works of fiction taking up English scenes in the seventeenth century. "Lorna Doone" is one exception, but is intensely local in its tone. The story before us is a capital attempt to sketch the growth of character in the last years of Charles the Second. The names of Algernon Sydney, John Evelyn, and others occur frequently, and in spite of the author's disclaimer the historical coloring of the book gives it as much interest as the romance which forms its basis. We commend it heartily to all seeking for good reading. (Harper & Brothers.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Nellie Graham's Mistake.

BY LIZZIE C. CRANE.

"WHAT are you thinking about, my little girl?" asked mamma in a pleasant voice, as she looked up from the book upon which her eyes had been resting for the last few minutes, while her attention had in reality been fixed upon the little figure at her side. Nellie seldom remained silent for so many moments at a time. Something must surely be troubling her, thought mamma.

"What is it, dear?" she repeated, seeing that Nellie found it hard to speak her thoughts, and hoping to inspire confidence by the gentleness of her tone. "Oh, nothing," replied the little girl with a sigh, "I was only thinking."

Mamma looked grieved. "Nellie always used to ask my help in these childish difficulties," she thought regretfully. Then concluding that to press things farther would be only an attempt at forcing confidence, she went back to her book, and Nellie, who had apparently decided firmly upon something, rose and left the room.

"I wish I could be a missionary," she murmured, as she walked slowly through the hall and up into her little bedroom on the floor above. "If I could only do something big in the way of giving! I am just tired and sick of handing out the regulation dime that I get from papa on Sunday morning, and then pass over to the boxes at church and Sunday-school during the day.

"I don't call that really giving. I never know exactly where the money goes, or what good it does. I am determined to do some charity work all by myself and in my own way this week, while papa and mamma are away at grandma's. This giving to Bible and tract societies is such stupid work, and I don't believe in them anyway."

"Why do you make your plans for a time when mamma is not at home?" whispered conscience. "Will it not be deceitful or disobedient to venture so far without permission?"

"No," answered the self-will that had begun to assert itself in Nellie's heart. "I'll only give away what is my very own." After this the matter rested for several days.

Then came dear Aunt Lucy to stay and keep house during mamma's absence.

Nellie was delighted to have Aunt Lucy all to herself. Now she should have lots and lots of stories told her, and a fine time generally; and yes, she would be a good girl and mind every word that Aunt Lucy spoke. Mamma smiled at this promise, yet she felt that she could trust her little girl.

"Take Aunt Lucy into your confidence in everything, just as though she were your mother, dear, while I am gone," she whispered as she kissed Nellie good-by. Nellie nodded in token of assent, but after she had waved papa and mamma out of sight and was turning away from the window, the thought of the missionary project came back vividly to her mind. Could such a promise be kept? Had she not determined that no one should know of this plan? Yes, not even dear, good Aunt Lucy. "She might have different ideas about giving," thought Nellie, "and that would spoil all my work."

"Now that mamma is away, you must be my little right-hand man, dear," said Aunt Lucy, coming up toward Nellie and kissing her affectionately. "I have some shopping to do this morning," she added, "wouldn't you like to come with me?"

"Mayn't I stay at home, please? I don't like shopping, and I'll promise to be good and quiet while you are gone."

"Certainly, dear, if you are quite sure you will not be lonely. I will not be gone longer than an hour, and perhaps you will enjoy yourself better at home." Nellie followed Aunt Lucy to the door, then went upstairs to perfect and carry out the plans for her missionary work. Now was her time. She must hurry and have it well over with before Aunt Lucy returned. First, what should she give? The most precious thing that she possessed. The watch that grandma had given her, and that mamma had laid away until she (Nellie) should grow to be wise and old enough to wear it. This was the most valuable of all her possessions, and doing no one any good in mamma's drawer. Was it really hers yet? Yes, grandma had said, "This is for you, Nellie. It is a namesake gift, and is to be your very own." Then, too, was not her name engraved on the case in token of her full right of ownership?

Nellie walked over towards the bureau. Was it a guilty feeling that made her hands tremble so? "What a baby I am!" she said half aloud. "Now the next question is, to whom shall I give it? I think it had better be sold. Money is a more appropriate gift to the poor than jewelry. Perhaps I can pawn it." Here, for a moment, Nellie stopped to look about her in a frightened way. Her very limbs were beginning to tremble at the bold phase that her project was beginning to assume. Then she remembered a story book about a little girl who had been far braver than this, and who had received commendation for her perseverance. This remembrance nerved her to go on with her foolish plan. Five minutes afterward, if you had looked out of the window of Nellie's house, you might have seen that little girl travelling rapidly down the street toward a poor part of the city not far off.

Two blocks toward the river brought our little heroine into the very midst of poverty and misery. But how was she to begin her work? This was the puzzling question. Nellie hesitated and looked up the street. A little girl of about her own age was advancing toward her. She was scantily clad and looked sick and weary. A gift to this little wretch would end the mission of which Nellie was beginning to be tired. With the impulsiveness of childhood, mingled with its diffidence, Nellie thrust the watch into the poor child's hand, and then with the air of a thief, rather than that of a cheerful giver, she was off and away. She did not even stop to see how her precious gift had been received.

(To be concluded.)

The Opinion of Twelve Presidents.

THE Buffalo Courier is authority for the following statement, to which we are glad to give a place. If our boys and girls will all adopt the opinion of the Presidents named, they will escape a great deal of sorrow.

The Hon. E. C. Delavan secured the signatures of a number of the Presidents of the United States to a declaration against ardent spirits as a drink. In 1862 Mr. Delavan wrote as follows: "The certificate of twelve Presidents I deem interesting as well as instructive. When I obtained the signatures of the first three, about thirty years ago, by a personal visit to each, the movement against alcohol as a beverage was confined to distilled spirits; then the impression was general that fermented drinks were safe in moderation, but science has since settled the question that alcohol is exactly the same poison in what are termed fermented drinks as in distilled; that, indeed, in both it is formed by fermentation, and that there would be no impropriety in calling all kinds of intoxicating drinks ardent spirits. Pure brandy is distilled from wine, and should be called distilled wine." The following is the declaration, with the signatures:

Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirit, as a drink, is not only needless, but hurtful, and that the entire disuse of it would tend to promote the health, the virtue, and the happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction that should the citizens of the United States, and especially the young men, discontinue entirely the use of it they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and the world.

James Madison,	Z. Taylor,
Andrew Jackson,	Millard Fillmore,
John Quincy Adams,	James K. Polk,
M. Van Buren,	James Buchanan,
John Tyler,	Abraham Lincoln,
Franklin Pierce,	Andrew Johnson.

A Jewish Legend.

WHEN the first passover drew near,
Which darkened Egypt's land with fear,
A young and gentle Hebrew maid
Was on a bed of sickness laid
And to her hot and fevered brain,
An anxious thought gave added pain.

And oft in restless tones she cried,
"O, father, is the blood applied
Upon the door and lintel high,
That bids the angel pass us by?
I am the eldest born, you know;
On me would fall the fatal blow."

They tried to soothe her troubled thought,
With the assurance that she sought;
And strove with every tender art,
To calm and ease her frightened heart,
But still her cry came like a prayer,
"Say, are you sure the blood is there?"

Her father lifted her at last,
And o'er the threshold with her passed,
That she herself, the door might view;
No blood was there! Her fears were true!
The midnight hour was passing by,
And death's stern messenger drew nigh.

"Bring me the blood!" the sick girl said.
Her childish voice rang sharp with dread.
They brought it at her quick command,
She dipped it in her thin white hand,
And stroked the lintel and the door,
Just as the angel passed before.

A moment there in doubt he stood,
And looked upon the undried blood,
Then passed along his death-marked way,
While safe, though weak, the maiden lay,
Held closely to her father's breast,
And smiled her thanks for peace and rest.

O, careless children of to-day!
How many of you all can say,
You know the saving blood is there?
How many strive in anxious prayer,
Till doubt and fear and deep distress
Give place to peace and blessedness.

—Congregationalist.

"Jesus Does Love Me So!"

REV. MARK GUY PEARSE tells a story of a little girl who once went to him and said, with tears in her eyes, "Please, sir, it's a dreadful thing, but I don't love Jesus."

"And how are you going to love Him?" he replied.

"I don't know; please, sir, I want you to tell me." She spoke so sadly, as if it were something she could never do.

"Well," he said, "the disciple John, who loved Jesus almost more, perhaps, than any one else ever did, says that 'we love him because he first loved us.' Now if you go home to-night saying in your heart, 'Jesus loves me,' I am sure that to-morrow you will say, 'I love Jesus.'"

She looked up through her tears and said very softly, "Jesus loves me." She began to think about it, as well as to say it—about His life and His death on the Cross—and began to feel it too.

The next evening she came to Mr. Pearse again, and, with a bright, happy face, said, "Oh, please, sir, I do love Jesus to-night, for He does love me so!"

Young reader, can you say the same?

Little Heads Together.

ENIGMA (for R. B.)

A proverb of 27 letters meaning "dress according to your work and station."

1, 3, 5, only leaves.
4, 2, 11, 15, 23, 10, 16, 6, 13, a pleasant drink.
6, 11, 24, 5, 17, 23, a love apple.
20, 9, 9, 14, good for breakfast.
7, 26, 3, cold comfort.
12, 20, 8, 25, 14, 11, 22, game.
18, 19, 3, 27, 21, 13 a kind of bait.
19, 16, 24, "always smoke this kind."
21, 5, 10, 7, a preservative. K. M. S.

DIAMOND.

1. In divided. 2. Part of an intransitive verb. 3. An ancient hero. 4. A metal. 5. In domination. V.

DECAPITATIONS.

1. Behead ready money and leave a tree.
2. Behead a summons and leave every one.
3. Behead to entreat and leave a fish.
4. Behead a stratagem and leave to knock. Edw.

Answers to Puzzles of March 3d.

Bible Questions.—There are several instances in which the words occur. Among them are the following: 1. Jonah 4:6. 2. 2 Samuel 17:13. 3. 2 Kings 25:14. 4. 1 Chronicles 20:3. 5. Nehemiah 4:13. 6. Psalms 35:13. 7. Proverbs 3:28. 8. Isaiah 1:31. 9. Jeremiah 43:10.

Diamond.—

U
A N D
U N D E R
D E N
R

Enigma.—Half a loaf is better than no bread.

Correct answers from Carrie Karsten, E. M. Clark, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh, L. P. C., Rappie Bowne.

The "Little Heads" are invited to send puzzles and answers to Cousin Lois, at this office.

A Scottish Heroine.

THE daily journals gave a fortnight ago a brief account of the drifting of a lone sick woman on a sailing packet from the coast of Scotland to that of Norway. The following detailed record of the woman and her remarkable experience is furnished by the Christian World of London:

"That Elizabeth Maud Mouat, who was recently blown from Shetland to the coast of Norway, in the 'Columbine,' should have lived to tell the story of her extraordinary adventure is little short of the miraculous. In this heroine of real life, fiction is again outdone by fact; and for years to come the rising generations of Shetlanders will thrill with the recital of her marvellous voyage. Elizabeth Mouat is unmarried and has resided for years in a miserable hut, where the peat fire burns in the middle of the mud floor, the smoke finding an uneasy exit through the holes in the roof. In this dismal abode away in the hills she is said to have maintained a lofty independence, being just able to provide her 'puckle meal' by knitting Shetland wool shawls. Her one book was the Bible, and she was conscious of only one presence—that of the Lord's. Though living in obscurity, notoriety has been thrust upon her by repeated misfortunes. Some years since a cart ran over the poor woman's foot, rendering her a life-long cripple. On another occasion she was well-nigh drowned. Yet again, her head just appearing above the rising ground, she was taken for a rabbit and fired at by a sportsman, the shots being still in her head. From these hair-breadth escapes she came to be known as the Witch of Dunrossness, there being a prevailing superstition that 'she could na be kilt.' A mon h since, at the age of sixty, this frail woman—for she was an invalid—embarked in the 'Columbine,' intending to visit her niece at Lerwick. She was the only passenger, and, being seasick, remained in the cabin. Hearing a noise overhead, and finding the vessel stop, she imagined they had struck a rock, being ignorant of the fact that the captain had been washed overboard and that the two men forming the crew had set out in a boat to rescue him. She heard the men row off, and thinking they had deserted the wreck, and abandoned the solitary passenger to her fate, she made for the deck. In her hurry, however, the ladder fell, and she was unable to replace it. The wind blew up, driving the 'Columbine' before it, leaving the two men to make for the shore, four miles distant. The poor woman was able to raise her head above the open hatchway of the cabin. The first night was a terrible one, the vessel rolling heavily. It was very dark and bitterly cold, with the sea washing down the hatchway and keeping her drenched to the skin. The only provisions she carried were two biscuits and a bottle of milk, and though a week's rations were in the forecastle she was unable to leave her prison chamber to avail herself of it. When morning broke no land was to be seen, and not even a distant sail. The sea was still rough, but the poor woman's hope began to revive, seeing that the vessel had survived that fearful night. From this time, she tells us, she never despaired, but put her trust in God, fully assured that He would rescue her. For seven days and nights she never slept, ever and anon standing up and peering out of the opening to see if succor was at hand. Her two biscuits and bottle of milk were made to eke out as long as possible, but the last four days she was entirely without food. She appears to have suffered more from the wet and thirst than from hunger. Her thirst she slaked in a measure by licking the drops which condensed on the windows. She became very weak and her legs swelled, which rendered it difficult for her to stand up and keep a lookout. With extraordinary presence of mind and indomitable perseverance she lashed herself up close to the open hatchway. After drifting in various directions for nine days and nights the vessel, in the darkness, grounded on the Norwegian coast. When daylight returned she called to some fisher lads on the shore, and one of them waded through the boiling surf, fastened a rope round the half insensible woman, and she was hauled to land. Borne to a house, she was well cared for. When sufficiently recovered she was removed to the abode of an Englishman; and in the course of a few days, unless a brighter future awaits her, thanks to Christian charity, she will return to her miserable hut away among the Shet land hills. Letters written from Norway state that the 'Columbine,' to reach the shore, had to thread its way through a network of rocks which no helmsman, ever so familiar with the locality, could have succeeded in doing in the darkness. What is still more marvellous, the frail vessel seems to have picked out the only place on which she could have beached, and only held together just long enough for Elizabeth Mouat to be brought away."

White Cross Army.

THE anniversary of the White Cross Army will be held next Friday evening, March 26th, at 8 o'clock, in Association Hall on Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue. Among the speakers will be Judge Kilbreth, Lieut. Hale, U. S. Army, and W. H. Sage, Jr., Esq. The report of the work since its organization, one year ago, will be read. The movement is for the promotion of personal purity among young men, and the approaching meeting is for men only. SEC.

Respect to the Memory of Dr. S. O. Vander Poel.

THE Charity Organization Society held a special meeting Monday morning, March 15th, and adopted the following minute and resolution:

In common with the community this Society has sustained a severe loss in the sudden death of its first president, Dr. S. O. Vander Poel, which took place in Washington on the 12th inst. He was one of the citizens selected by the State Board of Charities to assist in organizing this Society, in formulating its constitution and laws, and in initiating its work.

His interest in the principles of the Society was deep and intelligent, and he has been ever ready to promote its success and extension as far as his means and time and strength would permit. He was its active President for the first three years of the Society's history, and until, with failing health, he found it necessary to relinquish the responsibilities of the office, remaining, however, upon its Central Council, and acting as its Vice-President during the present year up to the time of his death. His mature judgment, his varied experience, his conscientious performance of duty and his unvarying courtesy, rendered him a valuable counsellor to this Council, the members of which will long and deeply feel his loss. In view of this sad occurrence be it

Resolved, That the above minute be entered upon the records of the Society; that a copy of it, with the earnest sympathy of the members of the Central Council, be communicated to the family of Dr. Vander Poel; and that, as a further mark of respect, a committee be appointed by the President to attend his funeral. SEC.

FINANCIAL.—Tuesday, March 23d.—Imports of merchandise at this port last week $9,596,390, and exports $5,419,846. Imports since January 1st have been 10 millions more and the exports nearly 10 millions less than in the corresponding part of last year. The exports of specie last week amounted to $4 947 662, and since January 1st to $19,030,682. It is ascertained that a considerable amount of gold comes in the course of the year to San Francisco from Australia, British Columbia and other States on the Pacific, on English account, is transported to this city and shipped from here to Great Britain. Sterling exchange sold yesterday at $4 87 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4.89 1-2 for demand....The Associated Banks increased loans last week $796,800, lost in specie $3,093,900, in legal tenders $1,091,700, and in deposits $3 937,400, and increased circulation $125,600. The surplus of reserve was reduced $3 201,250, and became $17,412,800. Money loaned at the Stock Exchange at 1 1-2 to 4 per cent; the rate yesterday was 1 1-2 to 2 per cent. The best commercial paper was quoted at 3 to 4 1-2 per cent.... At the Stock Exchange good investment bonds remain strong. The general list is weak. The strikes, the disagreements between the railroads, the slow progress or want of progress in reorganizing unproductive roads, the exports of gold, the uncertainty in regard to silver coinage and the tariff, combine to prevent activity and buoyancy. The unwise action of Western Union in declaring a scrip dividend, thereby increasing its obligations at a time when its earnings are reduced and at the end of an unusually expensive quarter, had a decidedly depressing effect....The quotations for April grain yesterday were: Wheat here 92 1-2, nominal, unsettled, heavy selling, in Chicago 76 under large sales; corn here 46 3 8, in Chicago 35 1-8; oats here 36, in Chicago 26 1-2 nominal. Mess pork yesterday $11 for new, lard quiet but steady at $6.27 1-2 to $6.30. Foreign markets dull all around on grain and provisions. The closing quotations for cotton were: March 9.05-07; April 9 09-10; May 9.21-22; June 9.31-32.... General trade fairly active.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

SATURDAY, 20.—Radical defection is said to be increasing in the Parliament; several well-known Liberals are said to be ready to join Mr. Chamberlain....The Prince Alexander claims a life title to the Governorship of Roumelia, and the Russians object and are massing a large force in Bessarabia....An attempt was made by brigands in Sicily to capture Admiral Nelson's grandson....A riotous mob of socialists in Belgium had to be dispersed by force after doing a great deal of damage....Two ferryboats on the North river collided and three or four passengers were seriously injured ...Vice-President Hoxie, of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, has replied to the Master Workmen of the Knights of Labor, refusing an interview. The business men in Texas are bitterly opposed to the strike. A non-union man was shot in the strike....Miners are returning to work on Broad Top mountain, Penn....A number of armed ruffians boarded a train near Binghamton, N. Y., and created serious disturbance....The City Hall at Fall River was burned....An indictment is being prepared against Alderman Jaehne....More mail has been received from the wreck of the "Oregon." Divers have been unable to go down to the hull. The wreck is dangerous, being in the track of vessels, and the masts reaching above the water. Everybody seems to be shirking the responsibility of removing the wreck.

MONDAY, 22.—Mr. Bright is mediating between the disaffected members of the British Cabinet and Mr. Gladstone on Home Rule....Mr. Chamberlain still stands firm in his opposition to Mr. Gladstone, and he and Mr. Trevelyan will probably soon resign. ....Germans not naturalized are being expelled from Poland. The longest time for leaving is given to the manufacturers, who have nine months to leave the country.... Rioting has been again renewed in Belgium and a good deal of damage to property and injury to persons has been done....Governors Marmaduke of Missouri and Martin of Kansas were appointed a committee to arbitrate between the strikers and the railroad companies in the Southwest. They urge the strikers to accept the terms of the company....Business is greatly depressed by the strike in the soft coal region....Strong efforts are being made to put out the flames of natural gas at Murraysville, Penn.... Alderman Jaehne has been surrendered by his bondsmen, who were afraid he would escape, and he is now in jail....Valuable property, consisting of a number of business houses and dwellings in Helena, Ark., was destroyed by fire ...A murderer near Oakland, Col., succeeded in killing several of his pursuers and entrenched himself in a barn.

TUESDAY, 23.—Mr. Gladstone's plan is that Ireland shall pay for the land in fifty years....Riots in Belgium between the army and workingmen continue....Emperor William, of Germany, congratulated by all European sovereigns and by thousands of individuals yesterday, on attaining his 89th year. He is in good health....Petroleum discovered in Upper Egypt....Gen. Prendergast defeats insurgents in Burmah... Alderman Jaehne in the tombs, bail fixed $25,000....Strikers on Southwestern railroads refuse proposals of Receiver Hoxie,—no prospect of settlement ..Ice gorges and floods at Troy, N. Y., Chicago, Ill., Sioux City, Iowa....Gale yesterday near Fort Wayne, Ind., destroys two churches ... Strikes extending among miners in the West....The total received from the sale of the entire Morgan collection is $1,205,090 42. This amount is divided as follows: Paintings sold March 3, 4, and 5, $885,300; Old Chinese porcelain, etc., March 8 $60,370; Old Chinese porcelain, etc., March 9, $43 417 50; Sterling silver, etc., March 10, $39 462.50; Books, March 10 and 11 $9,811.67; European ceramics, etc., March 11, $62,761; Webb cameo glass, etc., March 12, $44,976; Plates, bronzes, sculpture, etc., March 13, $33,071; Engraving and etchings, March 15, $25,919.75.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, March 20, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 16,208 pks.; exports 1,000 pks.

Old stock is quite clean taken and fresh butter comes on to clean floors and sells well. Fresh new milchs Remsen tubs selling at 28a33c., fresh Elgin creamery 32a33c., and a few of the fancies 35c. There is quite a bit of butter coming to this market from New England. New fresh make selling at say 30a32c., Western gathered butter, fresh, 25a27c., Western factory extras 23a26c. Fresh butter sells quick and the supply is scarcely up to the demand. We quote:

Old butter, good to fine	18	@24
do fair to good	13	@15
do common to fair	8	@12
New butter, fancy creamery	33	@35
do do dairy	28	@30
do ordinary dairy	20	@25
do poor to common	12	@18

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 11,795 boxes; exports 19,514 boxes.

On 'Change 10½c. was bid for fancies, and 10c. for fine Septembers. The market seems to be getting in good shape, and the outlook now is that there will be no surplus and that the old will be gotten well out of the way of new make. There have been heavy sales through the week of September and October cheese in the neighborhood of 10c., with holders asking 10¼a10½c. at the close. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	10	@10¼
" white "	10	@ 0¼
Good early useful cheese	8	@ 9½
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 4

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 17,939 bbls. and 15,556 boxes.

There seems to be a great many eggs all over. Local supplies through the East are about sufficient for their wants. Sales on 'Change this morning were 34 cases Michigan firsts at 12½c., 25 bbls. Kentucky at 12c., 50 cases Indiana (cases thrown in) at 12½c., also three more sales, 25 cases each, at same price. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz.	12½	@13
Southern and Western, per doz.	11	@12

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Publisher's Department.

A VIOLENT COUGH CONTINUED through the winter often brings Consumption in the spring. Soothe and tone the irritated and weakened lungs with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and the Cough yields and the danger disappears. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

The following list of good piano and vocal music comes from the firm of Oliver Ditson & Co., whose publications seem to improve in quality as in quantity from year to year.

"Old Folks at Home," (35 cts.) arranged as a Quartet for Ladies' Voices.

Mikado Waltz, (75 cts.) by Bucalosi. Has an elegant title page, with a Japanese picture.

Exhibition Polka, (30 cts.) by C. Moser.

Polka-Mazurka, (35 cts.) by Francois Behr, which is one of a series of six pretty dances without octaves, for little hands.

Ce qu'on souffre en vous aimant, Or What I suffer in loving thee, (35 cts.) A French, Italian and English song by Tagliafico.

Where are the Swallows fled, (30 cts.) Ballad by S. A. Sargent.

When Love is warm and true, (35 cts.) Waltz-Song by J. W. Turner.

Love's old sweet Song, (35 cts.) by Molloy.

"PASSAIC CITY, NEW JERSEY, and its advantages as a Place of Residence and as a Manufacturing Centre," is the title of a very finely illustrated and interesting Hand-book issued by the Citizens' Improvement Association, consisting of gentlemen residing in that thriving city. It contains about thirty engravings and maps, showing buildings, a plan of the city, views, etc.

Very full information, which would be sought by families desiring a suburban residence, or capitalists seeking locations for manufacturing purposes, is given. The city has now about 10,000 inhabitants, forty minutes from New York, by three lines of railroad, on the picturesque highlands at the head of tide-water and navigation on the Passaic river. It will be sent free to those interested who will address Box 137, Passaic, N. J.

Take it This Month.

Spring rapidly approaches, and it is important that every one should be prepared for the depressing effects of the changing season. This is the time to purify the blood and strengthen the system, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which stands unequalled as a spring medicine, and has endorsements of a character seldom given any proprietary medicine. A book containing statements of the many wonderful cures it has accomplished, will be sent upon application to C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral possesses powerful healing qualities, which manifest themselves whenever this remedy is employed in colds, coughs, throat or lung troubles. Its anodyne and expectorant effects are promptly realized. It is a chemical success and a medical triumph.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

Sick Headache. Thousands who have suffered intensely with sick headache say that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured them. One gentleman thus relieved, writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." Sold by all druggists. 100 doses $1.

MARRIAGES.

CLARK—DELANO.—In the Clinton Avenue Reformed Church, Newark, N. J., on Tuesday, March 16, by the Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D., assisted by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D., Samuel Clark to Jennie Findlay, only daughter of Albert Delano, all of Newark.

KUHLMANN—PALMER.—At Grove Church, New Durham, N. J., on March 18, by the Rev. I. W. Gowen, Henry Kuhlmann and Julia Palmer.

MOREAU—JONES.—At Freehold, N. J., March 17, by Rev. I. P. Brokaw, Miss Lizzie G. Jones and Mr. William M. Moreau.

ROMEYN—DAVIDSON.—In New York, on March 18, Mr. James Woodruff Romeyn, of Detroit, Mich., to Mrs. Harriette Standish Davidson, of Fordham, N. Y.

WYCKOFF—SPADER.—March 18, at the First Reformed Church, Jamaica, L. I., by Rev. Wm. H. DeHart, John L. Wyckoff, of Woodhaven, to Jennie H., daughter of the late Stephen L. Spader, of Jamaica, N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

BAKER.—At his residence in this city, March 7, 188-, Josiah W. Baker, in the 83d year of his age. The funeral service was held on the 9th inst., and was largely attended by his old business associates, his fellow-laborers in various benevolent societies, and the former members of the Washington Square Reformed Dutch Church (Rev. Dr. Hutton's), of whose consistory he was for many years a member, and whose Sabbath-school for a time he superintended.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

CUYLER.—At her home in Philadelphia, on the 27th day of January, 1886, Eleanor De Graff, widow of the late Rev. Dr. Cornelius C. Cuyler, aged 96 years.

Mrs. Cuyler was born in Schenectady, N. Y., in the year 1790, and was descended from that fine Holland stock which found homes in the New World in the region of Albany. She was married in early life to Dr. Cuyler, when he was pastor of the First Reformed Church in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where she passed the first years of her womanhood in pleasant and useful work. In 1834, when her husband became pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, she came gladly to her new home, and for more than half a century dwelt here, first in the midst of the activities of a pastor's household and then in the seclusion of years of widowhood.

Her love for the Church of God grew more intense as the days passed on, and in her quiet room she became an intercessor for her kindred and friends, and especially for the ministers of Christ, bearing their names and work before the Lord continually. In spirit she dwelt every Sabbath in the sanctuary. In this happy service she found a constant joy, and her love for Zion was, by her prayers, so fixed in her heart that those who watched by her during her last night on earth heard her faintly murmuring of those "courts of the Lord's house," in which she had found her chief joy. She went down slowly to the grave, spared mercifully from great pain or continued sickness, even to the close. Then her children and children's children came together to look upon her face, so sweet and calm in death, and thank God for the life thus closed.—Presbyterian.

SHEAR.—In Livingston, March 9th, Sarah Cole, wife of Henry Shear.

TREMPER.—At Kingston, N. Y., March 13, 1886, Catharine Louisa Hardenbergh, wife of Capt. J. H. Tremper, in the 75th year of her age.

Mrs. Tremper in her plain ways, domestic habits and strong character represented the old-times' people of Ulster County. She was eminently a home-keeper. For upwards of forty years she was an exemplary member of the First Reformed Church of Kingston; a firm friend, a true wife and an affectionate mother. Two sons survive her, Hon. T. H. Tremper and J. H. Tremper, Jr. Her health had been feeble for the last ten years; and after a few hours' illness her Lord put her gently to sleep.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M., in the Second Church of Hudson City. The yearly reports of the churches are to be sent to Rev. W. R. Duryee, 239 Pacific avenue, Jersey City.

WM RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA will meet in regular spring session in the Reformed Church of Syracuse, N. Y., on Tuesday, April 6th, at 7.30 P.M. Consistorial records should be presented.

C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Reformed Church of Leeds on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Public services at 2 o'clock P.M. Consistorial records must be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting, and the annual reports of the churches sent to Rev. E. N. Sebring ten days previous to the meeting. B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ILLINOIS will meet in regular session in the Church of Irving Park, on the second Tuesday (13th) of April, at 2 P.M. Classical dues to be paid. J. S. JORALMON, S. C.

THE regular spring meeting of the Classis of Michigan will be held April 13th, in South Bend, Ind., commencing at 7 P.M. Church records and Classical dues will be called for at this session.

A. PAIGE PEEKE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY will meet in ordinary session in the Reformed Church of St. Johnsville, on Monday evening, April 19th, at 7.30 o'clock. Reports of consistories are to be sent to Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., at least ten days before the meeting. A. J. HAGEMAN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in stated session on the first Tuesday (6th) of April in the Reformed Church of Boardville, at 10.30 A.M. Rev. J. Russell Verbrycke is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days before the meeting.

S. T. SEARLE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Poughkeepsie on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. J. E. Lyall, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, at least two weeks before the meeting. A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will meet in stated spring session on the second Tuesday, the 13th of April, 1886, in the Reformed Church of North Branch, at 10.30 A.M. Statistical reports will be sent to Rev. Marion T. Conklin, White House, ten days before. Consistorial records will be laid before Classis, and Classical dues will be paid.

JOHN. F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA has made the following arrangements for the installation of Rev. Edward A. McCullom, at Schuylerville, on April 7th: Sermon, Rev. J. Webster Bailey, sec., Rev. Geo. I. Taylor; charge to pastor, Rev. Dr. Beardslee, sec., Rev. J. L. Southard; charge to people, Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman (by special request), sec, Rev. Theo. Shafer. J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in stated session on the second Tuesday (13th) of April at 11 o'clock A.M., in the Reformed Church of Plattekill. Rev. W. A. Wurts is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom Consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days previous to the meeting. Consistorial minutes are to be presented at this meeting. J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

PASTORS' ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.—Following is the list of subjects to be discussed at the meetings of the Pastors' Association, Monday mornings at 10 o'clock, at the rooms, 34 Vesey street, from March 29 to Sept. 28, 1886: March 29, "Feasibility of an Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System," Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor; April 5, "A Study of Gibbon's Five Causes," Rev. D. Van Pelt; April 12, "Vacant Pulpits and Unemployed Ministers," Rev. E. J. Ruok; April 19, "Rights of Property," Mr. Henry George; April 26, "The Resurrection," Rev. R. Terry, D.D.; May 3, "Baptism for the Dead," exegesis of 1 Cor. 15:29, Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers; May 10, "Progressive Orthodoxy," Rev. Dr. A. G. Vermilye; May 17, "Evangelistic Work," Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton; May 24, "Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic," Rev. Dr. J. M. Dickson; May 31, "Dr. Shedd's Doctrine of Eternal Punishment," Rev. Dr. G. S. Bishop; June 7, "The Work of the Holy Spirit," Rev. Dr. G. H. Smyth; June 14, "Reminiscences of the General Synod," discussion; June 21 "Is Ordination Necessary to the Constitution of a Minister?" Rev. Dr. H. C. Berg; Sept. 13, "Vacation Experiences," discussion; Sept. 20, "Paul a Castaway," exegesis of 1 Cor. 9:27, Rev. Dr. D. Cole; Sept. 27, "Liturgical Position of the Reformed Church," Rev. Dr. E. A. Reed.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

A Common Cold

Is often the beginning of serious affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold or Cough.

Last January I was attacked with a severe Cold, which, by neglect and frequent exposures, became worse, finally settling on my lungs. A terrible cough soon followed, accompanied by pains in the chest, from which I suffered intensely. After trying various remedies, without obtaining relief, I commenced taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was Speedily Cured.

I am satisfied that this remedy saved my life.—Jno. Webster, Pawtucket, R. I.

I contracted a severe cold, which suddenly developed into Pneumonia, presenting dangerous and obstinate symptoms. My physician at once ordered the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. His instructions were followed, and the result was a rapid and permanent cure.—H. E. Simpson, Rogers Prairie, Texas.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Cold which settled on my Lungs. I consulted various physicians, and took the medicines they prescribed, but received only temporary relief. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking two bottles of this medicine I was cured. Since then I have given the Pectoral to my children, and consider it for Colds, Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, ever used in my family.—Robert Vanderpool, Meadville, Pa.

The Best Remedy

Some time ago I took a slight Cold, which, being neglected, grew worse, and settled on my lungs. I had a hacking cough, and was very weak. Those who knew me best considered my life to be in great danger. I continued to suffer until I commenced using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Less than one bottle of this valuable medicine cured me, and I feel that I owe the preservation of my life to its curative powers.—Mrs. Ann Lockwood, Akron, New York.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is considered, here, the one great remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs, and is more in demand than any other medicine of its class.—J. F. Roberts, Magnolia, Ark.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.
Murdock's Liquid Food	14.10	1.97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's	Not any	54.87	5[illegible].16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28.67	22.62	11.09
Johnston's	do.	20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's	do.	56.13	10.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent

It contains 0.42 of ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3.30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

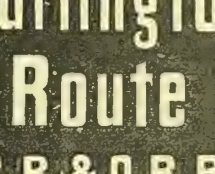
Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.



PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route

C.B.& Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from

CHICAGO TO DENVER,

Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.

It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,

For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points Interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address

T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO.

CURE for the DEAF [illegible]

Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proof FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, [illegible] Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

The Church.

Installation Hymn.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

[Written for Installation of Rev. W. H. Gleason, D.D., at Hudson, N. Y., March 10th, 1886.]

THE tribute of our grateful praise
O Son of God, we bring,
To honor Thee, through endless days,
Our Prophet, Priest and King.

In all we do, in all we say,
Be no unhallowed fire;
Thy glory on this happy day,
Be our supreme desire.

Abide with this Thy chosen flock,
Abide with him whose care,
Shall lead them by the riven Rock
To pastures green and fair.

Still, as he breaks the bread of life,
Wilt Thou Thyself impart
In joy for grief, in peace for strife,
To every trusting heart!

On pastor and on people shed
The fulness of Thy grace,
Till time and sense and trial fled,
They see Thee face to face.

The Church and its Converts.

NO topic is of more importance than the obligation of a church to its converts. The future church depends upon the character of her present converts, just as the future family depends upon the children growing within our doors. That future is determined not by birth, but by the care and training that goes on within the home. Here are the three things which a church must do for the convert:

1. The church must give the convert sympathy. What sorry children we should have if we should say: "Now you have life you must look out for yourself." No; each child is king or queen of the household; the best we have is given to it, simply because love is born there with it, and the child needs it. Is it not true of every convert, they are babes in Christ? The church must be as the Christian home where love reigns, and the most strength is given to the weakest. And as the child convert grows into the consciousness of its life, it feels that it has come to live with those who care for it, and have common natures and aspirations and hopes! The great deep want of our natures is sympathy. Many a man has been saved because another man has made him feel the thrill of a brother heart.

Now what can be done? Mr. Spurgeon has a plan by which all the members of his church are cared for by a board of twelve elders. Each one of the twelve is made responsible for a knowledge of the life of one-twelfth of that church. The Methodist system of class-meetings has done much to help young converts. In every church there can be formed a committee on young Christians—a large judicious committee of the best Christian men and women in the church; and as fast as converts are multiplied, they can take their names, and look after their welfare; see that they are made acquainted, and have all the sympathy and care that they ought to have.

2. The church must nourish the converts. The babes must have the sincere milk of the Word that they may grow thereby. After Christ's first question to Peter concerning his love for Him, and Peter's affectionate response, came Christ's first charge: "Feed my lambs," as if the little ones of the flock were His first care. They should be our first care who are overseers of the flock. It is not enough to say: There is life in the soul, and it will grow. There is life in a seed, but it must have nutriment, earth and air, moisture and sunshine, or it will not develop into a plant. The convert's life must be fed. The life may have been started in the emotional atmosphere of a revival meeting; they cannot continue to live upon that. They must be brought into personal contact with the Word of God. Preaching once or twice on a Sunday is not enough; it is but little that the untrained mind carries away of sermons. The Word must be brought closer to them. In some way catechetical instruction should be reached. Systematic truth should be put into their minds, if we would have them intelligent Christians. They need indoctrination for strength of life. Besides this, they need to be taught the practical application of each doctrine to daily life, to ordinary experience, so that they may be doers of the Word, and not hearers only. A New England pastor says: "Intelligent piety is the great want of the times, and the best way to secure it is to show men in the beginning that belief and life are inseparable." Practically to get at this instruction see that every convert is in the Bible school under a proper teacher. A pastor in Massachusetts has a class for converts in connection with the Sunday school, and teaches them in the doctrines. Hold once a week a conversational meeting for these young Christians, wherein the pastor or some competent leader answers questions that may have arisen in their minds; and wherein the evidences of Christianity may be taught. We know of such a meeting which has been held for years—the Socratic method has given it interest—and it has proved to be of inestimable value to the church.

3. The church must train the converts for service. All the principles of Christianity are active. There are no dead things in the living way. Christ's words begin with the utterance, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business!" Untiring action was His; not hurried, spasmodic effort. We complain that a few in our churches are doing all the work and bearing the responsibility; it is because the converts have not been given anything to do. People with special talents are brought forward and used over and over again, while those with ordinary talents are neglected. It was the man with one talent who was condemned. It is therefore the man with one talent whom you need specially to help to take that out of the napkin—or do not let him get it folded up. The politicians in a political campaign teach us a lesson; everyone who can be laid hold of to do anything is made to do it; if they are not old enough to be voters, they can march in a line and carry a torch. They grow into a feeling that they are of some value, and have some responsibility; they come thus to the consciousness of the greatness of citizenship. We must cultivate our powers of invention; study the converts; see what they can do; keep them busy.—Rev. R. G. Seymour, D.D., in The Examiner.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 1, SECOND QUARTER.

M. The Word Made Flesh.....John 1: 1-18.
T. The Birth of Christ.....Luke 2: 8-24.
W. The Word of God.....Rev. 19: 11-21.
T. Made in the Likeness of Men.....Phil. 2: 1-16.
F. Maker of All.....Col. 1: 12-23.
S. Taking our Nature.....Heb. 2: 1-18.
S. John the Forerunner.....Matt. 3: 1-12.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

April 4th.—"The Word Made Flesh."—John 1: 1-18.

Golden Text.—"The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us."—JNO. 1: 14.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."—HEB. 13: 8.

INTRODUCTION.

DURING the remainder of this year we shall be occupied with lessons from the writings of "the disciple whom Jesus loved." This apostle has given us the most profound and interesting books in the Bible, and the lessons selected from these books give us samples by which to judge of the whole. John wrote differently from the other evangelists because he had entered more deeply into the spirit of his Master, and we shall be able to understand and appreciate his writings in proportion as we live near to Christ. The study of these portions ought to tend to increase our faith in Christ and love for Him. May the Holy Spirit help us, as we study, to lean on the very bosom of our Divine teacher.

The passage chosen for our first lesson is one of the most profound compositions that literature, sacred or profane, can furnish. It will be impossible for us to set its fulness of meaning forth in a limited space, not only is each verse a text for a discourse, but almost every word has its peculiar and important meaning. Our view must therefore be a bird's eye glance at the truths taught. We may regard this opening section as John's genealogy of Jesus. Matthew traces His lineage back to Abraham, who had received the promise of the Redeemer; Luke takes us back to the beginning, to Adam the son of God, but John goes still further back and reveals the life of the Son as it was hid in God before time began.

THE LESSON.

I. THE WORD.—VS. 1-4.

V. 1.—"In the beginning was the Word." A great deal has been written about the meaning of "the Word." The simplest explanation is the best and probably the most truthful, viz., that as thought becomes known to others only by words uttered or written, so God is made known to us only by the revelation of His Son. The beginning referred to is probably the same as that in Gen. 1: 1, that is, the beginning of time, but by using the word "was" John carries us still further back, and says that when time began the Word already was; so that we cannot conceive a time when the Son was not. "And the Word was with God." Not only nearness but intimate association; we might substitute, "in the bosom of the Father." "And the Word was God." Not godlike, but very God. The true divinity of our Lord is taught most clearly and emphatically throughout this entire Gospel.

V. 2.—"The same was in the beginning with God." This verse repeats the truths of the preceding verse in order to emphasize the eternity of existence which the Son possessed.

V. 3.—"All things were made by Him." The will of God in creation as well as in redemption is expressed by "the Word." When the works of God declare His character and glory, this silent revelation is made to us through "the Word." These truths furnish the ground for Christ's claim to universal dominion.

II. THE LIGHT.—VS. 4-13.

V. 4.—"In Him was life." Not only spiritual but physical; not only life for men but the life of all creatures. In Him we live. "The life was the light of men." Christ as our Creator has given us he power to know God, and as revealer has furnished us with the information necessary for such knowledge.

V. 5.—"The light shineth in the darkness." The Son of God had been teaching all men by intuitions, heart yearnings and providences. He did not confine His work to the Jews. "The darkness apprehended it not." The nations of the world speedily overlaid the teachings of God with their own idle imaginings, and so "their foolish heart was darkened."

V. 6.—"There was a man sent from God." The Jews were to have a new and fuller manifestation of the Light, and, in order that they might not reject it through ignorance, a messenger was sent to announce His coming.

V. 7.—"The same came for a witness." The Jews heard John gladly on his own account, but refused him when he spake of the true light.

V. 9.—"There was the true light....coming into the world." By omitting the connecting clause we see what is probably the true relation of the beginning and end of this verse. While John was preaching repentance Jesus was coming, that is, was getting ready for His manifesting unto Israel. "Which lighteth every man." As all life is from Him, so all knowledge is His gift. Whatever heights the wise men of the world have attained has been by means of His indirect teaching and unacknowledged blessing.

V. 10.—"He was in the world." This refers to His unseen presence before the incarnation. As truly present in the world, ruling and overruling as after His birth at Bethlehem. "The world knew him not." The highest and noblest cry of the heathen soul was for more light.

V. 11.—"He came unto his own," both before and after the incarnation. His messengers had been rejected; His prophets had been slain; the Old Testament is the story of the rejection of the Word as much as the New. "His own received him not." Those best prepared to appreciate the Gospel have always been the slowest to accept it.

V. 12.—"As many as received him." His rejection was not universal. There was a remnant in every age who followed the light. When Scribes and Pharisees refused to listen, the common people heard Him gladly; when the Jews judged themselves unworthy of eternal life, the Gentiles besought that the Word might be preached to them. "To them gave he power to become the sons of God." This word power means both ability and privilege. Jesus found men with neither right nor power to approach God, and by His atonement purchased both for us.

V. 13.—"Which were born not....nor....nor....but of God." There is a climax in the first part of the verse which emphasizes the helpless state of man by nature. There is no possible remedy for sin in the sinner himself. This verse anticipates the declaration to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again."

III. THE LIFE.—VS. 14-18.

The closing verses of this section represent to us the fact of the incarnation in reference to the gift of life to those who receive from Christ the power to become the sons of God.

V. 14.—"The Word became flesh." The true humanity of Jesus is set forth as a truth complementary to His divinity. He did not assume flesh, He became flesh. "And dwelt among us." This expression evidently is intended to refer to the presence of Jehovah in the Shechinah in the tabernacle. As that bright cloud indicated God's presence with His people, and as He made known His will from it, so Christ in the flesh is Emmanuel, God with us, and teaches all things necessary for us to know, in order that we may serve God. "Glory as of the only begotten." John had especial opportunities for seeing the Divine nature shine forth through the human, especially on the Mount of Transfiguration. "Full of grace and truth." We may regard grace here in both its significations, as attractiveness and helpfulness.

V. 15.—"John beareth witness of Him." John gave his testimony on several different occasions. Before Christ's baptism, he spoke in general terms of the coming one. After the baptism, he referred to the former occasion and repeated his witness with fresh emphasis. "Is preferred before me, for He was before me." John preceded Jesus in his ministry, but Jesus exceeded John in his dignity, and this not by appointment but by right.

V. 16.—It is hard to determine whether what follows was spoken by the Baptist or recorded by the Apostle as his thought. In either case, the meaning will be the same. "Of His fulness have all we received." The supplies of Divine grace come from a full storehouse. In Christ "dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." There is no possibility of incompleteness or failure in His work. "Grace for grace." Grace in exchange for grace. From one degree of blessedness to another until we shall be complete in Him.

V. 17. In this verse the contrast seems to be between the subordinate position of Moses in reference to the law, and the supremacy of Jesus as Himself the bestower of grace.

V. 18.—"No man hath seen God at any time." The manifestations of Jehovah in the Old Testament were only partial revelations of Himself, and these showed only His "back parts." His glory was hidden, but His goodness was revealed. "The only begotten Son." This expression separates Jesus from His people in their relation to the Father. He was begotten; we are adopted. He is a Son in His own right; we through His gracious interposition. "He hath declared Him." Whatever men have learned of God they have been taught, directly or indirectly, by the Son of God.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Our Redeemer is Eternal.
2. Our Redeemer is Divine.
3. Our Redeemer is our Creator.
4. Our Redeemer is our Teacher.
5. Our Redeemer is our Life.
6. Our Redeemer is our Master.
7. Our Redeemer is our All-in-all.
8. Our Redeemer waits your acceptance.

Sunday-School Helps.

....We have received from the publishers, W. A. Wilde & Company, their SUNDAY-SCHOOL QUARTERLIES for the second quarter of the current year. The CHILDREN'S, by Mrs. M. G. Kennedy, is a dainty pamphlet, with the lessons attractively illustrated and admirably adapted to little folks The INTERMEDIATE and the still higher grade for Bible Classes, by Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D.D., show painstaking and skill in preparation and seem quite complete as aids to the study of the lessons. These Quarterlies compare favorably with any published. Their extensive use is their sufficient recommendation.

....The "POCKET LESSON NOTES," prepared by the Rev. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts, for the quarter beginning with April, are ready for purchasers. It is not necessary to record a word of recommendation of Mr. Crafts as unusually qualified to prepare such a help in the study of the lessons. He is famous among us for clear condensation. Mrs. Crafts adds a pleasant explanation and application of each lesson for the smaller children of the schools. The book is truly a pocket-book, the shape and flexibility making it an unusually convenient article. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

..."CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE, for Easter-Tide," edited by Rev. Robert Lowry, contains a Service of Scripture and Song especially for the use of Sabbath-schools on Easter Sunday, but suitable for congregations or a general religious gathering. There are Responsive Readings, Hymns to be sung to familiar tunes and original hymns and music, making a pamphlet of 16 octavo pages. 5 cents each by mail; $4 per 100. (Biglow & Main.)

....The same publishers issue also their "Easter Annual, No. 10," which contains seven new hymns and tunes, by Mrs. R. N. Turner, Fanny J. Crosby, Grace J. Frances, Rose Atherton, etc., and such composers as George F. Bristow, Rev. Robert Lowry and Fred Schilling. An excellent collection.

...."THE HELPER EASTER SERVICE" has been arranged by the Rev. J. F. Ohl, and can be used as a whole or in part by the Church or Sabbath-school separately or in a united service. Would it not be pleasant if the Sabbath-school and the Church should together hold the Easter service? The service contains hymns, responses, Scripture readings, and a place for an address or discourse. A Carol for the Infant School is a pleasing feature. A separate pamphlet contains the music. Every part of this service is appropriate, devout, elevated and attractive. For the Service $2 per 100 copies; the music 10 cents a copy, or $6 per 100. (Lutheran Book Store, Philadelphia.)

THE GREAT BIRD-CATCHING SPIDER.—The giant among the spiders is the Great Bird-catching Spider (Mygale avicularia), of Surinam and Cayenne. There are other species, but none of them equal this in size. Its body is two inches long, and when its legs are spread it measures eight inches across. This, and related species, form the group of Bird, Bush or Strangler Spiders, so called because they destroy small birds; though some, on negative evidence, deny that they capture birds, the evidence of several observers establishes it as undeniable fact. Bates found one of these spiders engaged at this occupation. Over a deep crack in the bark of a large tree, he saw a solid white web, in which two small birds (linnets) were caught. One was dead, the other, immediately under the spider, nearly so. After driving the spider off he found the dying bird covered with a dirty liquid, that had been exuded by the monster. But Mr. Bates states that his observations were new to the inhabitants of Brazil, who call these and similar, somewhat common spiders, "Crab spiders." Only a few of the species live on trees or bushes, but in holes in the walls, under eaves of houses, and they are sometimes seen on the walls of buildings, under stones, and in subterranean burrows.

A BIRD STORY.—Last spring one of the old birds in Dr. Prime's collection—a gray sparrow—became blind. Straightway a little dark brown and white bird, known as a Japanese nun, and named Dick, became the sparrow's friend. The sparrow's home had a round hole as a doorway. Little Dick would sit on a perch opposite the hole and chirp. The blind bird would come out, and guided by Dick's chirps would leap to the perch, and so on to the seed-cup and water-bottle. But the most curious part of the performance was when the blind sparrow would try to get back into the house. Dick would place the sparrow exactly opposite the hole by shoving him along the perch. When opposite Dick would chirp, and the blind bird would leap in, never failing.—Golden Days.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

For Overworked Professional Men.

Dr. CHAS. T. MITCHELL, Canandaigua, N. Y., says: "I think it a grand restorer of brain force or nervous energy."

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security of first mortgage loans. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans,
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

To the Consumptive.—Wilbor's Compound OF COD-LIVER OIL AND LIME, without possessing the very nauseating flavor of the article as heretofore used, is endowed by the Phosphate of Lime with a healing property which renders the Oil doubly efficacious. Remarkable testimonials of its efficacy can be shown to those who desire to see them. Sold by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION, Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT TRADE MARK REGISTERED

With the Flowers that Bloom in the Spring come Spring and Bilious Fevers, with symptoms of Lassitude, Furred Tongue, Mawkish Taste in the mouth, Eructations, Nausea and Loss of Appetite. These should be at once combated by liberal doses of

TARRANT'S
Effervescent Seltzer Aperient,

Which will thoroughly evacuate the bowels, restore tone to the stomach, oxygenate the blood, expel all morbid humors and enable the system to endure the Changes of Spring and Heat of Summer. Sold by druggists everywhere.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away.

The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, many of them handsomely illustrated, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth-bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.

1. The Widow Bedott Papers. This is the book over which your grandmothers laughed till they cried, and it is just as funny to-day as it ever was.
2. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
3. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories ever published. The children will be delighted with them.
4. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott none is more beautiful than this.
5. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
6. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
7. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home; illustrated.
8. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
9. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
10. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedy.
11. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries; illustrated.
12. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
13. The Budget, of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes that have been written for some years; illustrated.
14. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects; illustrated.
15. Called Back. A Novel, By Hugh Conway, author of "Dark Days," etc.
16. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
17. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
18. Dark Days. A Novel. By Hugh Conway, author of "Called Back," etc.
19. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
20. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread-and-Cheese-and-Kisses," etc.
21. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
22. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
23. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
24. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the Author of "Dora Thorne."
25. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils," etc.
26. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
27. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
28. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
29. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
30. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
31. David Hunt. A Novel. By Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, author of "Fashion and Famine," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. Esmen; OR THE MYSTERY OF THE HEADLANDS. A Novel. By Etta W. Pierce, author of "The Birth Mark," etc.
35. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
36. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
37. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
38. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
39. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
40. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER!

We will send any four of these books and our catalogue, containing prices of all leading papers and books for 12 cts. in stamps. Any 8 books 20 cts. the whole 40 for $1.00. Send P. O. Note, Registered Letter, or Money Order, and address FRANKLIN NEWS CO., Phila., Pa.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%.

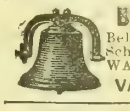
The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md



BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS, CHURCH FURNITURE INTERIOR DECORATIONS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE!

So great is our faith that we can cure you, dear sufferer, that we will mail enough to convince you, FREE. Send 10 2c. stamps to cover expense & postage. B.S. LAUDERBACH & CO., Newark, N.J.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 850 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is entirely shaped with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

Our advice to consumers of Ivory Soap is, buy a dozen cakes at a time, take off the wrappers, and stand each cake on end in a dry place, for unlike many other soaps, the Ivory improves by age. Test this advice and you will find the twelve cakes will last as long as thirteen cakes bought singly. This advice may appear to you as being given against our own interests; on the contrary, our interest and desire is, that the patrons of Ivory Soap shall find it the most desirable and economical soap they can use. Respectfully,

PROCTER & GAMBLE,
Cincinnati, O.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET
NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN

UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,
ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

TABLE DAMASKS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO. OFFER FOR SALE THIS WEEK AN ASSORTMENT OF EXTRA HEAVY DOUBLE DAMASKS, 68, 70, AND 72 INCHES WIDE, at 65 CENTS, 75 CENTS, 85 CENTS, AND $1 PER YARD, BEING A REDUCTION OF 25 TO 50 CENTS PER YARD LESS THAN FORMER RATES. ONE LOT, 80 INCHES WIDE, AT $1.25 PER YARD, GOOD VALUE FOR $2.

HOUSEKEEPERS WHO APPRECIATE VALUE SHOULD ORDER AT ONCE, AS STOCK WHEN SOLD, CANNOT BE DUPLICATED AT PRICES QUOTED.

Broadway & 11th St.,
New York.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. M'f'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

W. & J. SLOANE

Are Now Showing All the Latest NOVELTIES in

CARPETINGS

AND

Upholstery Goods

For the SPRING TRADE.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts
NEW YORK.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)

Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000.

7% WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES 7%

In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.

First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St, Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kendall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Craufurd, Norwalk, Ct.

NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St.
BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. OFFICES. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. 7% INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800
Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.
☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜
Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,
Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

SEEDS Peter Henderson's PLANTS

EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

NEW TOMATO! THE LATEST AND BEST

Direct from the originator of "The Acme," "The Paragon" and "The Favorite," which we sell at 5c. per packet, or 20c. per oz. They are grown by Livingston. By having our Seeds grown by those who make a specialty of one kind only, we have the finest and purest stocks, which cannot be maintained by those who grow all kinds of seeds on the same farm. Get our Catalogue, and see what the Market Gardeners of Philada. have to say about the "Purity of our Seeds."

You need Extra Early Peas, Beets, Radishes, Onion Sets, and Potatoes, to be ready for first good weather to plant.

Start your Hot-bed at once, if not done, if you want Early Lettuce, Tomatoes, Radishes, &c.

Do not forget your LAWN.—The sooner you get your Grass Seed sown the more beautiful it will be.

Asparagus Roots are now ready.

NEW FLOWER SEEDS
from the finest growers of America, England, France, and Germany.

☞ All who want GOOD SEEDS at popular prices, should call at the Reliable Seed Store of

Z. DE FOREST ELY & CO.
1122 Market Street,
ROBERTS STEVENSON

Price 25c. per packet. 5 packets for $1.00.
Z. DE FOREST ELY (Late of firm of Buist).

Arnold, Constable & Co

PARIS GARMENTS, ETC.

We are exhibiting a very choice selection of Fine Paris Novelties in Spring and Summer Costumes, Suits, Wraps, Jackets, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

Arnold, Constable & Co

UPHOLSTERY DEP'T.

We have now open complete lines of Spring Novelties in Fine Furniture Coverings, Upholstery Materials, Madras and Lace Draperies, etc.

An early inspection desirable.

Broadway & 19th st

NEW YORK.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,
469 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

SEEDS! SEEDS!

My Annual Priced Catalogue is now ready, and will be mailed free to all applicants. It contains all the leading and most popular sorts of

Vegetables, Farm & Flower Seeds,

Besides all the desirable novelties of last season, and nearly everything else in my line of business.

ALFRED BRIDGEMAN,
37 East 19th Street, New York City.

THE

SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 13. WHOLE No. 2905. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE VOICE, a third party and prohibition journal, in an editorial of March 4th, entirely misapprehends and therefore misrepresents the position of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER in relation to the temperance movement. It makes statements and virtually accusations which are entirely without warrant, but does that through a misapprehension of our position. What we object to is not the advocacy of the utmost attainable restriction of the liquor traffic, for that we have done frequently and expect to continue to do, but the advocacy of the third party. That we have not done and shall not do, for the movement does not commend itself to our judgment. When the Voice more than suggests that we are acting from mercenary motives it makes a great blunder.

WE HAVE seen a copy of a circular addressed by one of the daily papers to clergymen, asking for the subject of their next discourse, etc., to be inserted free of charge in the Sunday issue. It is to be hoped that no minister who has any self-respect will accede to such a request. The Sunday edition of any daily journal is merely a secular newspaper with a thin varnish of religious items on one page or column, and its influence as a whole is deplorably bad. It tends to break down the sacredness of the day and weaken the tenure by which the great boon to humanity of one rest day after six working days, is held. No friend of the Lord's day should give any sort of aid or encouragement to these subtle enemies of man's true interests.

UNWISDOM.—Competition is said to be the life of business. And so it is. Yet it is generally agreed that it may be pushed too far. When railways or steamships carry freight or passengers below cost, the final result is injurious to the public as well as to the carriers. In Philadelphia there is an unusually good religious weekly called the National Baptist. Now it is proposed to issue another weekly paper in the interest of the same denomination. This seems to us very unwise. The field is not large enough for two journals, and the result must be that diminished resources will lead to diminished force, and the denomination will be less well served by the two than it now is by one. This observation will apply in other cases besides that which has called it forth.

SPURIOUS BENEVOLENCE.—Three facts have recently come to our knowledge, showing to what extent the Church is being effected by the contagion of raising funds for benevolent objects by methods for which there is no warrant in the Word of God. The facts are these: first, a popular entertainment was given by a certain church, to which an admission fee was charged with the understanding that the proceeds would be applied to the cause of Foreign Missions; second, the pastor of another church delivered a popular lecture to secure funds for the same cause; and third, a religious paper seriously proposes that, in order to increase the plate collections in churches, a picture be donated to every person as he passes out from the service, who may have contributed five or ten cents.

All this and, perhaps, much more like it than is suspected, is registered in the annual reports under the head of benevolence. It is difficult to perceive where benevolence comes in. We maintain that this quid pro quo practice is subversive of the plain teaching of the Scriptures, and contrary to the true spirit of benevolence. This idea of getting in return an immediate and tangible equivalent for money expended at lectures, entertainments and fairs held in behalf of some specified benevolence and charity, is a purely commercial transaction, and smacks more of the spirit of trade than anything else. The motive is radically wrong. Where recourse is had to these extraneous methods to obtain funds for missions or benevolent institutions, the tendency is to pervert the principle of right giving and to stifle the spirit of genuine benevolence. We refer any who may be tempted to err after this manner to 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2, to say nothing about other texts equally explicit: "Now concerning the collection for saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." That is pure benevolence which flows forth spontaneously and cheerfully in response to appeals from the needy.

A JOURNAL which has "Christian" in its title says that if the rigidity of interpretation used in regard to the Fourth Commandment to make it require the closing of the Metropolitan Museum on Sunday were applied to the second command, it would abolish all museums at once. This is very absurd. It is simply impossible that the second command was intended to forbid all pictorial or carved delineations, for there were such in the very construction of the veils and hangings and mercy seat of the tabernacle, and Moses must have had sense enough not to violate the decalogue in arranging the Tent of Meeting and its furniture. The words of the statute have been occasionally perverted in the past, as they are by our contemporary, but always by fanatics. The design of the enactment is not to forbid the plastic art in any of its forms, but to forbid its use and exercise for purposes of worship.

THE STRIKES are a revolt against the oppressive conditions under which workingmen are compelled to labor and live. Those conditions are in some, if not many instances, artificial and produced by the cupidity of certain capitalists. The revolt which has chiefly attracted attention is that on the Southwestern railroads. It is said to have been unwise and without cause; that men on the Missouri Pacific and its branches have abandoned work because of action under a Receiver on the Texas Pacific. The men, however, maintain that the engagements made with them have not been observed. It is not pleasant to say it, but the community is learning to believe that the statements of the employés are often more accurate than those of the directors or managers of a corporation. At what amount have these roads been capitalized? Does the capital honestly represent the cost of the roads or does it exceed it by some millions of dollars? Have certain men in the management, at only the expense of printing, issued securities much in excess of actual outlay, sold them to innocent parties, put the money in their pockets, and by the operation accrued comfortable fortunes? In order to earn enough to prevent foreclosure has it been necessary to reduce the pay of employés to such a degree that in desperation they have ventured upon a strike? What has been the pay of these strikers during the past winter? Answers to such questions are desirable before forming an opinion upon the contest which has arrested trade and inflicted much pecuniary loss.

The Commissioner of Massachusetts reports that the average earnings in that State of a workingman who has a family amount to $558.68 a year, and that the average cost of living is $754.42, so that the mother and children are compelled to earn as they can nearly 32 1–2 per cent of their living in order to keep out of debt. We find by such enquiry as we have had opportunity to make that a large part of the workingmen in this city and its vicinity earn on an average $10 a week or $520 a year. What a narrow living that is for a man with a family! What reason is there to wonder at strikes! Is it not time to "put a tariff on Castle Garden," for many reasons, and to put an end to some of the methods adopted by men of capital?

THE REVIVAL.—What we hear from various localities warrants the belief that the revival is not at an end. Religious susceptibility in an unusual degree still exists. Notwithstanding the continued assaults upon the truth, the irreverence of some daily journals, the open and defiant desecration of the Lord's day, this work of Divine grace has progressed. Remarkable conversions have occurred—conversions of men who not long ago ridiculed and sneered at the truth. God is vindicating and glorifying His Word, is bearing irresistible testimony to it by the Holy Spirit. The time is momentous, solemn, and abounds in reasons for thankfulness. It brings grave responsibility, but as well facts to strengthen our faith and encourage our endeavors. Prayer and effort ought not to cease. No Christian man or woman must allow himself to think that the revival is over. There are many reasons for not thinking so. What is yet to come only God knows. But there are men of experience and sound judgment among us who would not be surprised if a gracious work should soon begin such as the Church has never before witnessed, and if it should extend to every land. The time seems to call especially for a wise, earnest and confident declaration of the vital truths of Revelation. God gives wisdom to those who ask Him.

Those who are putting away from them and in a degree resisting the gracious influences around them are in great peril. We do not speak of those animated by hostility and animosity, but of those who are neglecting the present opportunity without bitterness and because they have a feeling that it is not altogether seemly for them to be carried away by sympathy or an enthusiasm that may prove temporary. Dear friend, Jesus of Nazareth is passing by. Rise, He calleth thee. There is danger in refusal. Many in the past who have done as you are now doing have become permanently indifferent, have undesignedly formed a habit of refusing the solicitations of the Spirit of God, have hardened against the truth, and some have become errorists and bitter infidels. The most bitter infidel we ever knew began his course of unbelief in resisting the influence of a revival. His hostility to the truth became such that he would be beside himself with rage when he heard the truth of God earnestly presented. You may go on from your present attitude to such unbelief as you now consider yourself incapable of, to accept errors you now have no sympathy with. You are mistaken in your estimate of the religious influence at present investing you. There is no excitement, men are not carried along by their sympathies or by the enthusiasm of others. The work is a remarkably quiet one. Seldom has the presence of the Spirit of God been attended with so little outward demonstration. Put aside your prejudices, mild as they are, and go and look upon the meetings with clear and sensible eyes. Experience says that your present position is perilous.

"Old Colony" Papers.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY OF "PROGRESS."

I.

HAVING had occasion lately to take a backward glance, I have thought that perhaps it might interest my readers to be reminded of the changes which have taken place during a single quarter of a century.

Twenty-five years ago to-day (March 4th) Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated President of the United States. I need not recapitulate the story of the succeeding years. Suffice it to say that we are in many important respects a new nation,—at least, have entered upon an era of national life and progress to which the period before the war seems slow and rudimentary. We are at last one people. And, the vulture which preyed upon the vitals of the South having been put to flight, that section has started forward upon a career of industry, civilization and improvement of every kind, even producing more cotton and getting more and better labor from the blacks than under the old régime. The assessed value of property at the South has increased $1,000,000,000, and nearly 12,000 miles of railroad have been built in the Southern States since 1880. They have resumed their places in the Federal government, and are not distinguishable in patriotism and peaceful disposition from their Northern and Western fellow-citizens.

The population of our country has risen from thirty-five to over fifty millions. Five new States have been admitted to the Union, and six new territories formed, of which Alaska was acquired from Russia to complete our control of the Pacific border. Four through lines of railroad to the Pacific have been completed. Railways in this country, as well as in Great Britain and the most of Europe, have increased in mileage threefold, if not fourfold. The estimated value of property in the United States is nearly $50,000,000,000 and the transactions of the New York Stock Exchange for 1884 represented over 10,000 millions. We have resumed specie payments, reduced our national debt nearly one-third in amount, and nearly one-half in interest. We have established the civil service of the country largely on a business basis, scotched the head of the spoils serpent, and greatly elevated the popular ideal of political character and responsibility. Besides all the perils and problems of Reconstruction, we have passed safely through four political crises, two of them being the assassinations of our Presidents and two disputed Presidential elections, which severely tested and attested the strength of the Republic as well as the self-control and subservience to law of our people. We have weathered successfully the commercial and financial crises which were the inevitable reaction from the waste and inflation of war times. We have celebrated the centenary of our Independence, have reduced postage from three cents a single letter to two cents a double letter, brought down newspaper postage to a still lower point, introduced postal cards and money orders, have enlarged our harbors by such works of science and enterprise as the jetties of Capt. Eads at the mouths of the Mississippi and the removal of the Hell-gate obstructions at New York, and have begun to grapple effectually with the Mormon and the Indian questions.

There are still political, economical and moral obstructions to be removed, to which those sand bars and snags and hell-gate rocks are as nothing, —such as the claims and clamor of labor, the rapid tendency of capital to accumulate in the hands of a few and especially of great corporations, the threatening growth of Socialism, the Chinese problem, how to deal with the sale of liquor, how to arrest the desecration of the Lord's day. But let us believe that He who has enabled us to answer all the questions and cut the gordian knots of the past, will give us the light, the leadership, the unity, the courage, and the self-denial to solve the problems of the future.

I cannot even outline the history of other nations. Great Britain in the quarter-century has extended her sway or virtual control over wide regions, and her arms and commerce have alike been triumphant all over the world. Better yet, she has practically given the suffrage to all her people, adopted a common school system, taken a long step towards the separation of Church and State, the abolition of the House of Lords, and the curse of land monopoly and entailed estates, and has been brought to the point of doing justice to Ireland. France has cast out her last Bonaparte, has accepted the humiliation of her vainglory and military pride, and seems on her way to the security of Republican institutions. Germany, from slightly related and discordant States, has become a compact and world dominating power. Italy has also become a united and prosperous monarchy, and taken its place as the sixth of the Great Powers of Europe. The feud between Austria and Hungary has been healed, and the latter race is now dominant in the Empire.

The Turk is being steadily driven out of Europe, and the Balkan provinces are growing into powerful kingdoms. Russia has extended her conquests into the very centre of Asia, and unquestionably for the better as regards the well-being of those peoples. Africa has been explored in every direction, and opened to civilization, commerce and Christianity. A great International Free State has been founded in the heart of the continent, along its main water-way. Japan has gone at a stride from barbaric seclusion to a position as a modern, civilized, and soon to be Christian nation. China has at last broken over her wall and begun to follow in her neighbor's wake. And Corea is likely to outstrip her. Burmah is a British dependency. Australia is a great Colonial Empire. Mexico has been opened to travel and commerce, and seems to be learning at last the meaning of Republican institutions. Brazil has shaken off the incubus of slavery, and with Chili is taking a foremost place in commercial prosperity. The British possessions in America have been united under one Dominion, and developed greatly in power and resources. The whole world has got into the habit of coming together in Industrial Exhibitions, and by commercial and extradition treaties; and the diplomacy of nations is far more straightforward, business-like, and honorable.

The progress of scientific research and discovery, and the application of science to the uses of life, have been as great during the last quarter of a century as in any similar period, unless perhaps the one immediately preceding it. Up to March, 1861, thirty-one thousand patents had been issued in this country from the beginning. Now more than half as many are issued in a year. Steam has been applied successfully alike to the peaceful instruments of agriculture and to the destructive enginery of war. In every department of manufacturing, it has greatly enlarged the scope and lessened the labor of production, notably in the case of the printing press and the steam hammer. In ocean navigation, it has almost superseded the use of sails.

The discovery of a way to make steel cheaply and in large masses is producing results hardly less extensive and valuable than did the invention of the cotton-gin. In the perfecting of iron and steel plating for vessels and forts, and the consequent duel which is proceeding between the capacities of defensive and offensive armor, as well as in the tremendous factor of steam rams and torpedoes, we begin to see the day when war will have destroyed itself, and nations will give it up as impracticable. Nitro-glycerine, whose sole use twenty-five years ago was as a homœopathic remedy for headaches, has been developed in its various forms into a portable earthquake, and by its agency man laughs at obstacles; every isthmus can be pierced as Suez has been, and every mountain can be tunneled or brought low.

The practical potencies of Electricity have been vastly augmented. The submarine cable has been made a success within the period, and a message can be sent around the world in ten minutes. An almost indefinite number of dispatches can be sent simultaneously over the same telegraph wire, and we can even transmit messages on a rapidly moving railroad train,—which is, by the way, only one of the many means by which the safety and convenience of railway travel have been amazingly increased of late years. The signal service has imparted new elements of safety to commerce, agriculture, and personal health and comfort. The telephone has brought us all into speaking distance, and saved us infinite weary steps,—in fact, is making the world one great whispering gallery. The electric light has come into invaluable use, in the arts as well as for illuminating purposes.

The little microscope has opened to us new universes; and its wonders, and still better its utilities, transcend the wildest legends of magic. By it we are tracing disease to its germs, and revolutionizing the modes of cure. By the electric light and various improved inventions, the precise condition of the eye and ear and other organs is discoverable, and occult diseases have been brought to view. New and perfected anæsthetic agents are taking the terror from surgical operations, and putting pain in great measure under control. Sanitary reform has made prodigious progress, till many diseases and most epidemics have become needless and inexcusable. Medical science has become more scientific and less empirical, as well as broader and more liberal; the good elements of all systems are recognized, and women are honored members of the profession. In Chemistry and Astronomy we have the brilliant revelations of the spectrum analysis and know what stars are made of; have photographed the very features of the Man in the Moon, and receive reports of every celestial event from every terrestrial point of view. Exploration has left no more terra incognita. Geology has swung round completely to the confirmation of the Scripture record. All sciences are becoming the handmaids of religion.

F. N. Zabriskie.

Princeton, N. J., March 4th, 1886.

In the "Old Colony" Paper of March 17th, the peach-blow vase was described as "8 feet by 3." It was, of course, a slip of the pen for 8 inches by 3.

ROMAJI-KAI, Roman letter Society, is the name of the association of Japanese gentlemen which desires to have the language of their country written and printed in Roman letters. The annual meeting was held on the 23d of last January in a hall of the Imperial Engineering College, Tokio. Mr. Hatoyama, a graduate of Yale college, presided. It was announced that the Society now numbers over 6,000 members. Professor Yatabe, of the Imperial University, the Secretary, exhibited a chart of fifty sounds of the Japanese language and the equivalent Roman letters. A discussion followed. The chief debate was around the objection that the systems proposed showed too much conformity to one language, the English, while the German, Dutch, French and Italian might justly advocate more consideration for their tongues. But the final vote favored conformity to English. The Treasurer's report showed receipts of 6,000 yen, which had been expended chiefly upon the journal published by the Society. His Excellency, Count Inouye, expressed his sympathy with the purpose of the organization, reviewed the changes wrought since the visit of Commodore Perry, and urged the proposed change in the language as necessary under the new conditions. The attendance was large of members and spectators. The meeting was conducted with marked dignity. The speeches, chiefly by young men, showed readiness for debate and public speaking. The most of the speakers referred to the great services rendered by Dr. Hepburn, of the Presbyterian Mission, by his philological labors. The movement is wise and deserves success. The sooner Chinese symbols disappear from among men the better for almost every national interest.

"Killed!"

"KILLED at ——." What matters where?
He is dead, and that is enough!
"Killed!" It is written there
In letters that stare and stare!
What though the telling be rough?
He is dead, and that is enough!

"Died with his face to the foe,
Trying another to save!"
How else, how else should he die?
I could not have loved him so
If he had not been bravest of brave!

Dead, and no word of good-by!
No whisper of love from afar!
O star! star! star!
I looked in your eyes last night,
And I saw his eyes in your light;
And I knew, I knew he would die,
For that was his last good-by!

Get you gone! Get you gone from my sight!
Why do you stand and stare?
He is dead! It is written there!
And it's late—so late to-night!

There! there! forgive me, but go!
You mean to be kind, I know,
But leave me to God and to him!
"Killed, with his face to the foe!"
The light—is—getting—dim!—
Leave me—to God—and—to him!

—George Weatherly, in Cassell's Family Magazine for April.

Recollections of Early New York.

BY CAPTAIN WALTER BICKER.

(The following paper and another to be given next week were drawn out by a letter congratulating Captain Bicker on reaching his ninetieth birthday on February 28th. Until two years ago he was able to take walks of six to eight miles daily, sometimes extending the excursions to nine and ten miles. Then neuralgia and rheumatism seized upon him, and for about seven months past he has been confined to his room. In a letter written in January he says, "My sight, and indeed all my faculties are in as good condition now as they were fifty years ago." Captain Bicker is believed to be the last surviving commissioned officer of the War of 1812. He remained in the army for years. In 1817 he was stationed at Fort Niagara and in 1819 at Sackett's Harbor.

It will interest some of the readers of the Intelligencer to know that on the third Tuesday of October, 1817, Captain Bicker, Isaac Ferris—afterwards Chancellor Ferris—and half a dozen others met the Consistory of the Franklin Street Dutch Church of this city for examination for admission into church fellowship and to the communion on the next Sabbath. In 1819, at the wedding of Captain Bicker, Isaac Ferris was one of the two groomsmen, the Rev. Christian Bork performing the ceremony.)

Your congratulations upon my reaching the completion of the ninetieth year of my age "with sight and hearing so little impaired, and so much physical health, notwithstanding the neuralgia which has reduced your strength," together with other flattering and favorably expressed considerations, are duly appreciated, and call for my grateful acknowledgments.

You remarks as to what a period I am able to recall, with your ideas respecting it, are very just. Sometimes in speaking of some striking incident that has occurred in my early life, my friends have said to me, "You ought to write out those events, they would bear reading." I made the attempt once, but found the labor too much; for, amidst my business avocations and the many interruptions, it became anything but a pleasure, so I gave it up.

Many events of the most startling magnitude have occurred within the history of the time you speak of, and of the most lasting and essential benefit to mankind. All these within the brief period of my individual life; for what are ninety years compared with those "before the flood," when men lived nine hundred years! Yet in any one of those long lives of nine hundred years, no greater events happened than have occurred within the ninety years of my life. Witness the introduction of the propulsion of vessels upon the rivers or the mighty ocean by steam, or the running of immense trains of cars by the same propelling power, or the telephone, or the telegraph, by which a person, standing on the shore of the Atlantic ocean in America, can hold converse with another on the opposite shore in Europe, by means of a little wire stretched from shore to shore, lying upon the bottom of the ocean, three thousand miles distant, with but a few minutes' time for the words to make their swift passage from and to each other. And various other sources of discovery of things useful to mankind as accessories to his comfort in this world. Witness the boring of artesian wells a thousand feet deep, and bringing to the surface, by spontaneous rising, an everlasting flood of water of the purest kind. Or the unlocking of coal beds of the best fuel for all purposes for which fuel is used; or the opening up of the gold fields of California or silver mines of Colorado, or the oil beds of Pennsylvania and other regions for lighting our homes, making them as bright by night as by day. All these things have become available within the period of my own life, and many of them within half of that time.

Then there are those events of a moral character which have multiplied themselves in a most rapid degree, such as the widespread and wonderful increase of the population of our extensive country, and the enormous extent of that country in territory, of which the religious community is availing itself by the building of churches and colleges and seminaries, as well as the more humble school house, in every corner of our land.

It is, indeed, "a great source of enjoyment to remember these days and years of the right hand of the Most High, and to recall the men so full of the Spirit of our Lord." I think I could almost fill this page by putting the names of those most familiar to me, in double columns. I will mention a few. My earliest recollections go back to the days of childhood, when my parents or my sisters led me by the hand to the house of God, the Middle Dutch Church, (lately the Post office of New York,) where that venerable father of the Church, Rev. John H. Livingston, with his associates was wont to minister. Full well I remember his saintly appearance as his majestic form ascended the pulpit stairs, and his gown of black silk with "cheverons" of bands of black velvet upon the sleeves. Then there were his coadjutors, Drs. Abeel and Kuypers. These were particularly of our own Church. Then there were such men as Dr. I. M. Matthews, Dr. Marcellus, our good old domine "Christian Bork," Dr. Brownlee; and in the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Rodgers, Dr. Spring, and he whose name you bear, Rev. John Mason. Of the Episcopal Church, of those whom I was accustomed to see, (I was educated in "The Episcopal Academy," Rev. Edmund D. Barry, principal,) Right Rev. Bishop Provost, Bishop Moore, Dr. Lyell, Dr. Hobart, and many others. These all used to attend our annual examinations. I have seen personally every bishop the diocese of New York has had from Bishop Provost to the present incumbent.

There were also Dr. Cuyler, (not that excellent Dr. Cuyler of Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn,) Dr. Proudfit, (the elder,) Dr. Strong, of Flatbush, so long the Clerk of General Synod, Dr. Milledoler and Dr. Laidlie. But enough; there were a great many others whose names you will readily recall, as many of them have left their names upon record for faithfulness in their holy office, "all of whom now inherit the promises," or rather the fulfilment of them; and "they being dead yet speak."

It is very true, as you remark, that persons who can go back in memory not more than fifty years, can hardly conceive what was the undeveloped condition of our country about that time. Let me state a few things that I have seen. I was born (as you know) on the 29th of February, 1796,—that was only twenty years after the Declaration of Independence. On the 25th of November, 1783, the last vestige of British rule left our shores. My birth occurred about thirteen years after that glorious event. Of course, very little time had been left to our fathers to clear away the rubbish and get things "to rights," and they left something to be done after I came on the scene of action. The following are some of the things I saw after I began to look about the city in my early boyhood and forward.

Before recording them I will say a few words about my parentage and myself. My father was born in New Brunswick, N. J., of direct Holland parents, in 1747. My mother was born in Amsterdam, Holland, in 1752, and came to this country in 1755 with Nicholas Welp, whose daughter she was. Hence I am his grandson. He died in 1771, after about seventeen years' service as principal of the parochial school, dying while in office. His history you may be familiar with from publications relating to him by the present incumbent, Mr. Dunshee. It appears from the proceedings of the Consistory of the Collegiate churches that my grandfather was a man of some prominence, at least in educational matters, before coming to this country, as his testimonials also testify. He was received upon his arrival in New York with considerable demonstrations of respect, and though meeting with opposition from parties wishing his position as principal of the school, and who had raised false reports about him, as was proven at the time, the authorities of the Church sustained him, and he finished his course with a good Christian character and quite satisfactory to the consistory and the Church at large. He had a large family, and I believe all came with him to this country; one or two of them returned to Holland before his death. My father and mother were married by Dr. Laidlie in 1772.

Far Rockaway, L. I., March 15th.

Sunday Rum and Foreigners.

SOME time ago, the following press dispatch from Chicago appeared in the papers. It speaks for itself:

The Chicago saloon-keepers are exercised over the crusade against what they consider their rights in the matter of Sunday selling. They claim that the strict enforcement of the law compelling the closing of saloons on the Sabbath day would be a great injustice to the general population of the city. They have prepared statistics from the school census of 1884 to support this argument. The table shows that in 1884 there were 174,000 people in Chicago having English and American characteristics and presumably in favor of Sunday observance. On the other hand there were 144 000 Irish, 210,000 Germans, 48 000 Scandinavians, 28,000 Bohemians, 24,000 Poles, 8,000 French, 4,000 Italians, 8,000 Africans, 24,000 Swedes, 18,000 Norwegians and 6,000 Danes, and other minor nationalities, making a total of nearly 500,000 foreigners. It is claimed that a large majority of these foreigners are in favor of open saloons and amusements on the Sabbath, and on this ground the liquor dealers, at a future meeting, will demand a cessation of hostilities, and will take steps to secure a modification of the laws now existing against the so called freedom of the Sabbath.

Here the liberty to profane the Christian Sabbath by liquor selling in violation of the law, is demanded by foreigners, because "a large majority of them are in favor of open saloons and amusements on the Sabbath."

Now it is a principle of the American government and of our free institutions, that foreigners who come to this country and become citizens shall enjoy the same rights and privileges under our laws which native Americans enjoy. But when foreigners, as in the case above cited, combine to subvert one of the most important and precious institutions of our country, and demand immunity in trampling upon our laws, and in promoting vice, immorality and crime for the sake of gain and amusement, the question naturally arises whether better safeguards against foreign interference with our institutions and better conditions of naturalization should not be imposed?

It is the conviction of some of the most enlightened and patriotic statesmen of our country that American citizenship is too cheap—too easy of attainment by foreigners, who are ignorant of the genius of our institutions, unfitted to exercise the right of suffrage—and that a longer term of residence and other more stringent qualifications than at present should be required for naturalization, before the full privileges of citizenship are conferred. This conviction is derived from many significant and alarming facts respecting foreigners in America, of which the following may be cited as illustrations:

Nearly all the saloon keepers and liquor sellers in the country who wish to destroy the Sabbath are foreigners; nearly all socialists, communists, anarchists, and other outlaws and enemies of order, morality and religion, are foreigners; nearly all strikes attended with violence and outrage are instigated, directed and carried on largely by foreigners; nearly all riots and election frauds in our cities have been committed by and through foreigners; most of the oath-bound organizations for the commission of murder and other crimes, like the Molly Maguires, Fenians and Mormon Danites, are composed of foreigners; every dynamite plot and other conspiracy to destroy property and life, has been gotten up by foreigners; and a large majority of gamblers, thieves, and criminals of all grades in our prisons are foreigners.

These significant facts furnish a subject for serious contemplation, and emphasize the lesson which they convey, that our institutions are in danger of subversion through the indiscriminate admission of all kinds of foreigners to our country and to the privileges of citizenship. Among the thousands of useful and industrial foreigners who come to our shores, multitudes of paupers, convicts, scoundrels and criminals of all classes find no difficulty in getting in, and they have become a dangerous element of demoralization and crime in our land.—Editorial in Lutheran Observer.

Once, a thin, little curate was examining the village school on the affections: "Now, my deah children," said he, "could you see my soul?" The chorus answered, "No." "Why, deah children, cannot you see my soul?" A little hand went up: "Wul, it no be too sma'!"

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

The Vedder Lectures.

BY PROF. S. M. WOODBRIDGE, D.D.

I AM glad to report that the audiences during this course have been larger than usual. They have been hitherto, in the main, painfully small. In fact, it must be confessed that the laity in general take little or no interest in modern Apologetics, some from indifference in religious matters, and some because, knowing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, they have no more interest in the rational proofs that He is than in the logical proofs that light really exists. Had they attended these lectures, they would have seen that Dr. Bishop has based his entire argument upon this true and only Christian foundation. From beginning to end he has set the self-witnessing God on the throne of the universe, and it has been positively refreshing for a few hours to get out of the dust-whirlwind of scientific and philosophic theories into the pure atmosphere of the heavenly places, to allow the old faith once more free exercise without regard to second causes, and come to the consciousness that if a Christian wants anything, he has only to ask his heavenly Father, and that in the answer God has not to touch an invisible lever, and a complicated machinery of so-called laws is put in operation until finally He is enabled to reach and help the suppliant.

In his first lecture the Doctor set Faith in its true position. Man is made to believe; the soul is as much created to believe in the self-witnessing God as the eye to see the light. The man who believes not is in an abnormal condition, he is a monster, he commits a crime against nature. Far enough this from the unscriptural and wicked theory that doubt is noble, the beginning of true wisdom. The very Persians say that doubt is born of the devil. Very different, too, is this from the theory of many apologetic writers, that Christianity cannot justly demand faith until it proves itself to be founded upon reason, thus justifying its rejection until reason is satisfied. Whereas, a faith which has only reason for its basis is worthless in the kingdom of God. The man who is saved believes God because He is God, whether His revelations conform to the puerile conceptions of man or not, and this is the only faith that will stand in the day of trial.

In his lecture on Inspiration the Doctor stood upon the same ground, and in his conservatism took positions which many of his audience would deem untenable, notably, in regard to the Hebrew points. And at first, I confess I deemed the opening of the old question unwise, but upon second thought I can see that good will come out of it. He called attention to the fact, that there can be language without vowel sounds, and here he had his audience with him, and also that before the Masoretes there must have been signs which expressed the sounds; but what changes were made in the signs can of course only be determined by historical investigation. The arguments for the antiquity of the present points Dr. B. gives in detail, and by this he has accomplished several good results; he administers a rebuke to the modern critics who push men like the Buxtorfs, father, son and grandson, out of the way, as if they were blind and superstitious fools. Scaliger said of the elder Buxtorf, not only is he a great scholar, but he is the only man of his times who is the complete master of the Hebrew language. In this connection we say Dr. B. has done service in calling attention to the great systems of Theology, etc., of the writers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, which have never been surpassed and rarely equalled by modern treatises but are now mainly laid upon the shelf. One is struck immediately in opening the old works to see how they are crowded with Scripture, and in opening the modern systems how they are filled with reasonings.

Without regard to special views, to which he has as much right as has Hengstenberg, or Delitzsch, or Kurtz, he has set the Bible in its right place, not admitting it, as do too many, to be the Word of God, but asserting it, and accepting all the tremendous consequences I cannot prolong these remarks. Dr. B. is conservative, as is well known, but he gives cogent reasons for his conservatism. He speaks as one possessed by his convictions. His utterances all tend to awaken reverence, so essential in all true religion, so desperately needed in our times, and also to call attention to the Criteria of our holy religion, which we are in danger of losing sight of, and the loss of which will be followed by apostasy.

New Brunswick, March 22d, 1886.

....Bergen, N. J.—The special services in this church were continued five weeks. The pastor was assisted by earnest workers, both pastors and laymen, and the members of the church sustained the effort with persevering zeal. Last week was "Harvest Time." The Elders held five meetings for the reception of those who were waiting to unite with the church. At a single session fifty names were added to the roll.

At the communion service, on the morning of the fourth Sabbath in March, fifty persons stood forth to make a public confession of faith, and thirteen were welcomed by letter from sister churches. The church was thronged, and the occasion one always to be remembered.

Of the fifty received on confession the majority are young people. Thirty-five are scholars in the Sunday-school and one is a teacher; fifteen were baptized. In four cases husband and wife came together; in two instances mother and daughter approached hand in hand; several groups of sisters were received; the youngest boy is still a member of the primary class.

The officers of the church take this method of returning hearty thanks to the brethren whose loving words of Gospel truth have assisted so many in the choice of Jesus as Lord and Redeemer. C. B.

....Pastors' Association.—The meeting last Monday morning was largely attended. Rev. George D. Hulst was invited to read a paper before the Association, April 12th, on the subject, "Can Our Church Standards be Amended?" Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor read a paper on "Feasibility of a Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System." The discussion in general, as well as the paper, favored such union. The Rev. James I. Good, of the Reformed Church in the United States (German), of Philadelphia, who had been invited to sit with the Association, spoke in behalf of union between his Church and the Reformed. The Association resolved to continue the discussion, with the same opener, next Monday morning, and requested Dr. Taylor to publish his paper in the Intelligencer.

....Western Items.—The First Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., has commenced the publication of a monthly paper, called the First Reformed Church Record. The chief feature is a record of the work of the church....The Church of Rotterdam, Kansas, has recently contributed $350 towards a new house of worship....President Scott, of Hope College, is visiting the Eastern churches in the interest of the College....Mr. G. Wilterdink, one of the oldest Dutch settlers in Michigan and for many years an elder of the Reformed church at Ebenezer, died a fortnight ago at the age of 81 years....The young people of the First Church of Grand Rapids have formed a Literary Society.

....Warwick, N. Y.—At the Reformed Church nine persons were received into the communion Sunday, March 7th. Seven came by profession of their faith, and two by letter from Presbyterian churches. This result can be traced only to the use of the ordinary means of grace in church and Sunday-school. It is felt that this encouragement is prophetic of an additional ingathering. C.

....Linlithgo, N. Y.—Seventeen members were received at the March communion by the Livingston Memorial Church on confession of faith and four by letter. The pastor, Rev. Geo. Le Fevre, held meetings for four weeks in the church, including the Week of Prayer, and for two weeks in a chapel at Burden Mines, where he preaches on Sunday afternoons. The interest has been remarkably good all the time, and still continues. Several more are under conviction of sin, and it is expected that another harvest will be gathered at next communion. Brethren, pray for us. G. L. F.

....The Hudson River Ministerial Association met in regular session on Monday, March 22d, 1886, at the First Reformed Church of Kingston. The attendance was somewhat less than usual, owing to several members being detained by sickness or funerals. The exegesis had to be omitted because the exegete was called to the bedside of his mother, who is seriously sick.

Beyond the usual devotional services and the very excellent sermon on "The Preciousness of Christ," by Rev. E. N. Sebring, the interest of the meeting centered in the admirable essay by Rev. Dr. J. Forsyth, on "The Primitive Puritans." It was a most interesting chapter of church history, seeking to show that scant justice has been done those who, from the second to the tenth centuries, strove, in opposition to sacerdotal and hierarchical tendencies, to preserve the truth and purity which were more and more endangered by laxity of discipline and formalism of worship. In estimating their character and work too little regard has been paid to the fact, that nearly all that we know respecting these early Protestants and Puritans has come to us from patristic sources, and is the testimony of their bitter and many times unscrupulous enemies. As respects them it is very much as it would be were there no sources of information respecting Luther and the Reformers except what the Papal Church would choose to transmit. D.

"Thee Kransje."

THE older scholars of the Sunday-school of the Collegiate Church corner 29th street and 5th avenue, who are banded together in a "Happy Hour Association," have just issued a most attractive invitation, which reads as follows:

Ye "Happy Hour Association" requests ye pleasure of your company at a "Thee Kransje," on Thursday afternoon and evening, Eighth April, 1886, in ye Sunday School Room of ye Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue, cor. 29th Street.

To raise Funds for Mission Work. Music at 8.30 P.M.

There is no charge for admission, but visitors may aid the association by purchasing the cup from which they drink their "Thee." We are told that the young ladies, the waiting maids, are to be attired in old Dutch costumes. The event is looked forward to with much interest by those who move in Dutch—excuse us, we mean in Reformed society. We advise all who can to go and get a cup of Dutch "Thee." Knickerbocker.

....Auxiliaries or individuals who wish their remittances to appear in the Annual Report of the Woman's Board for 1886, will please forward them to the Treasurer, Mrs. Peter Donald, 39 West Forty-sixth street, on or before April 10th, 1886.

....The First Church and the Classis of Schenectady express by formal action the deep regret with which they part with Rev. Dr. W. E. Griffis. The consistory of the church also records: "We feel it a pleasure to express our conviction that the Rev. Dr. Griffis has from the beginning of his ministry to the present time, discharged the duties of his sacred office as in the service and fear of the Master; we bear cheerful testimony to the great acceptance with which he has ministered to us in spiritual things; we feel that he has been the instrument of God by which our church has been blessed in spiritual and temporal growth and strength. We desire to submit with proper resignation to the Providence that separates us, and we invoke the blessing of Almighty God upon his life and labors until the end come."

The Classis enters upon its Minutes:

1. Our sense of the loss that will be sustained by the denomination, by this Classis and by the church, of which he has so long been an active and honored member and pastor;

2. Our appreciation of the Christian manhood, consistent character and genial courtesy, as well as the earnest devotion and loyalty to all the interests of our branch of the Church of Christ, which have marked the course of our brother while he has been among us;

3. Our recognition of the scholarly attainments and literary ability, which, while they have won for him a wide reputation, have yet been laid in humble consecration at the feet of the Master whom we love and whom we serve; and

4. Our earnest prayer that the best blessing of our Divine Lord may attend him in his new field of labor and give him even a larger measure of success than has marked his ministry here.

Besides, a meeting of the congregation, which crowded the lecture-room, has been held, where Dr. Griffis delivered a manly and tender farewell address, and where an equally hearty and kind response was made in behalf of the people and a resolution, closely akin to those printed above, was adopted. This meeting was not a formal one, was for a free and friendly interchange of affectionate regard, and was attended with genuine emotion.

....Flatbush, L. I.—Last Sabbath was one of the best days of the life of the venerable Reformed Church, which extends over nearly two and a half centuries. Seventeen persons were admitted to fellowship on confession of faith. As they stood before the pulpit to make a public declaration of their belief the sight was impressive and filled many hearts with thankfulness.

....Madison Avenue, N. Y.—On Monday, the 21st, the Rev. E. H. Reed, D.D., presented his resignation of the pastorate to the consistory, to take effect in July, and it was accepted. The event is sincerely regretted in all the Reformed churches of this vicinity. Dr. Reed has fairly won the confidence and love of many of the pastors and people.

....Holland, Mich.—A correspondent under date of March 25th, writes: "The visit of Rev. J. H. Wyckoff, of the Arcot Mission, to the churches of the West is very much appreciated and of great profit to the cause of missions. He spent last Sabbath in Holland, speaking at three different services, much to the information and interest of large audiences. I have no doubt that the influence of his visit will be lasting throughout our Western congregations."

How and What One Church Does.

DEAR DR. COBB: Inclosed you will find a check for $20. The money is intended for the debt of your Board. It was given to me by a lady member of our Church for this purpose. She was much pleased with the letter from a clergyman, contributing the same amount, which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER of March 10th. She sent me the money that I might do the same, at the same time suggesting that each church present their minister with $20 to do likewise. I think the suggestion is a happy one and ought to be acted upon.

I have just received the pamphlet containing the addresses and speeches delivered at the Conference at Fonda, N. Y., last fall. I have read with delight the thoughtful and stirring words contained therein. But what was my surprise when I learned the real state of things in regard to the financial condition of the Board. Such a conference and such a result! What is the trouble? It is my conviction after some observations that there is a lack of system in many of our churches.

There is a church in our town which numbers among its members many rich and well-to-do people. One of their number expressed the other day his surprise at the amount of money contributed by our Church, which consists largely of people of the poorer class. "How do you manage it," enquired our friend. "We, who have a better class of people, run behind all the time; now we are again in debt."

The secret of our prosperity as a Church is "system." All pay something and all receive credit for what they pay. The nickels and dimes and quarters make many a dollar. New members come in and, however poor, we teach them to pay something, and with very few exceptions we succeed. We now receive from quite a number of people four cents per week, together with their envelope-contributions,—two cents for Foreign Missions, one for Domestic Missions and one for Education. From this and the gifts of the few well-to-do among our number, we are able to meet our apportionments, which this year amount for the Mission Boards to more than $300.

The plan is simple but works well. It is our intention to give it a thorough trial. It requires some care and attention and that is just what proves beneficial to all the Church.

H.

(The church mentioned above has a few over 90 families and about 120 members, the majority being persons of moderate income.)

....MEMORIAL.—The death is reported of Rev. James B. Wilson, at Bloomingburgh, Sullivan County, N. Y., on Monday, March 22d, of inflamation of the brain. He graduated from Rutgers College, New Brunswick, in 1848, and from the Theological Seminary in 1851. The same year he accepted a call to the First Church of Long Branch, N. J., of which he continued the pastor until 1878, when he resigned to take charge of the Second Church of Long Branch, which had been recently organized. He remained for a short time with this church, when he received a call from the church at Bloomingburgh, N. Y., which he accepted, and here the last years of his earnest and fruitful ministry were spent.

By his death another name is erased from our roll of active pastors, the name of one who was faithful and whose labors have been attended with much success. During his ministry of more than twenty-seven years at Long Branch, the church became very prosperous, increasing in numbers and strength and influence and resulting in the formation of a Second Church and the erection of what is known as the "Seaside Chapel," largely through his instrumentality. Mr. Wilson was a man of positive convictions, much force of character, a zealous minister of the Gospel and an indefatigable worker.

....PERSONAL. — Rev. Philip Phelps, D.D., has begun his labors at North Blenheim and Breakabin, N. Y....The Rev. John G. Fagg has accepted a call from the churches of Lawyersville and Cobleskill, N. Y....The Rev. A. N. Wyckoff has accepted an invitation to supply temporarily the Second Church of Pella, Iowa He begins his labors there next Sabbath.

....NORTH AND SOUTHAMPTON, PA — Despite March weather and roads, some 125 of the good people recently visited their pastor, Rev. Samuel Streng, leaving him well provisioned and richer by a $40 purse

....MIDDLEBURGH, N. Y.—The Ladies' Missionary Society of this church lately sent a valuable box of clothing and other useful articles to one of our Western missionaries.

Farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Howland.

A FAREWELL missionary meeting will be held in the Hall of the Bible House, (Fourth avenue entrance,) Thursday, April 8th, at 10.30 A.M. Brief addresses will be made by Mrs. and Miss Howland and Miss Houston, who return to Ceylon, and Mrs. Pease, of Micronesia. The first hour will be for ladies; at the close, the Rev. Mr. Kincaid, Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M., will take charge, when Mr. Howland, Dr. Pease and Rev. Dr. Chambers, of New York, will speak.

Revivals.

EXCEPT in the Champlain valley no general religious interest is reported from the New England States. A small number comparatively of the churches have received unusual additions by conversions. From the Middle and Western States many churches report additions on confession of faith, since the Week of Prayer, of from twenty to fifty persons. In a number of localities remarkable impressibility has been exhibited and hundreds have taken a stand on the Lord's side. We notice a few of these instances. In Rochester, N. Y., in connection with the services in the First Baptist Church there have been, it is believed, between 100 and 200 conversions, a large proportion being of young men. By the services in the Brick, Central and First Presbyterian churches between 500 and 600 persons have taken decided steps in evidence of their purpose to lead a new life, many of them young men. The work is extending among business men and heads of families. In the Episcopal Church a missioner has been conducting a very successful series of meetings. The Presbyterian church at Rushville, Ill., has received nearly fifty on profession, a large proportion young men, and a number of others hope that they have become the children of God. Among the Methodist churches, Fisher, Ill., rejoices in 60 additions to the church; Clinton, Iowa, in 176; Mapleton, Iowa, in 75; Bagley, Iowa, in 95; Mineral Point, Wis., in nearly 150 converts. The Advance, Chicago, announces that it has received reports from Western Congregational churches of over 3,000 accessions on profession.

United Prayer for the Sabbath.

NEW YORK, March 25th, 1886.

THE New York Sabbath Committee joins with kindred associations in earnestly commending to American Christians the appeal of the Sabbath Prayer Union (an association of friends of the Lord's day in Great Britain and in other parts of the world) for special and united prayer for the better and universal observance of the Sabbath, during the week from April 4th to 11th.

The perilous tendency, which prevails all around us, toward the secularization of the Lord's day, even among those who profess and call themselves Christians, gives urgency to his appeal. What can withstand this tendency but the influence of the Holy Spirit, promised in answer to prayer?

Pastors of churches are respectfully asked to bring this matter to the attention of their congregations, and Christian people are invited to respond earnestly to this appeal, in their private and family devotions, and in meetings for social prayer. By order of the Committee, W. W. ATTERBURY, Sec.

The programme of special topics for prayer suggested by the Prayer Union, and referred to in the note from the Sabbath Committee, is as follows:

1. That there may be a great outpouring the Spirit on the masses throughout Evangelical Christendom who attend no place of worship on the Lord's day.

2. That railway, omnibus, tramway and post-office servants may have rest on the Lord's day.

3. That the sailing of vessels may be so arranged that the crews shall have Sabbath rest as far as possible; and that the loading and discharging of ships on the Lord's day may henceforth cease.

4. That all places of amusement and for secular studies, and that all shops, and especially those for the sale of intoxicating liquors, may be shut on the Lord's day; that the issuing and sale of Sabbath newspapers, an evil so widely prevalent, may cease; that the churches may be faithful in inculcating and maintaining Sabbath rest; that a rich blessing may be on all societies having for their object the holy keeping of the sacred day; that more prayer may continually ascend that the rest of this day may be devoted to the good of the soul and not to mere selfish indulgence; and that Sabbath keeping by professing Christians, in foreign lands, may be such as is fitted by Divine grace to attract the heathen to the Gospel of Christ.

The General Outlook.

....The death of Richard Chenevix Trench, D.D., late Archbishop of Dublin in the Irish Church, was announced on Sunday. He was born at Dublin in 1807, graduated at Cambridge, became Hulsean lecturer and special preacher there in 1845 and professor of theology in King's College, London, 1846, dean of Westminster in 1856, and archbishop in 1864—a position resigned two years ago. His Notes on the Parables, Notes on the Miracles, his books On the Study of Words, On the Lessons in Proverbs, the Synonyms of the New Testament, English Past and Present, won for him a great reputation and are still highly valued.

....The Rev. N. I. Rubinkam, recently of the Second Reformed Church of Philadelphia, has just received twenty-four on profession of faith into the membership of the First Presbyterian Church of Jamestown, N. Y., of which he is now the pastor.

...One hundred and four members were added, March 14th, on confession, to the Presbyterian Church of Lambertsville, N. J., of which the Rev. P. A. Studdiford, D.D., has been the pastor for twenty years. His father was pastor of this church for forty-five years.

....Cardinal Newman was eighty five years old Saturday, February 20th.

....For the first time, it is believed, in the Church of England on Saturday, February 20th, the Bishop of London ordained three ladies as deaconesses in St. Michael's Church, Paddington.

....The late Mrs. Elizabeth Ely Emerson, of Rochester, N. Y., wills to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church $20,000; to Home Missions $20,000, and to the Church Erection Fund $10,000.

....The entire income of the Trinity Church property of this city last year was $550,000.

....One hundred and sixty-five members have been received into the Methodist Episcopal Church of Everett, Pa., the result of a recent revival.

....The Rev. E. D. Huntley, Chaplain of the United States Senate, has been appointed pastor of the Madison Square Church, Baltimore, Md. This vacates the pulpit of the Metropolitan Church, Washington, D. C.

...By the solicitation of the congregation of the Madison Avenue Memorial Presbyterian Church, the pastor, the Rev. Charles S Robinson, D.D., has withdrawn his resignation, recently tendered by him.

....The Woman's Christian Temperance Union request that a sermon be preached in all churches on April 4th on the Duty of Keeping the Sabbath, and that the same topic be considered in the prayer meetings during the remainder of the week.

....A new religious movement is creating much excitement in Southern Russia. The "Stundists," who are members of a Lutheran body, now call themselves Evangelical Christians, and are making surprising progress among the peasants. In many villages the Orthodox Greek churches remain empty, while the meeting-houses of the Evangelical Christians are crowded.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24.—Nineteen Russians were bitten by mad wolves and placed under Pasteur's care for treatment. One Russian died in terrible agony with all the symptoms of hydrophobia after having been inoculated for some days with virus twice in every twenty-four hours....Mr. Bright said to approve Mr. Gladstone's Irish plans....The steamship "Rapidan," which left New York for Port Limon, Costa Rica, has been given up as lost with all on board. Twenty-four reported to have been on board. ....The Southwestern strike continues. A train wrecked and several men hurt The police called on for protection....Pamphlets were distributed by the Broadway Railroad Company in Albany opposing the anulment of its charter....Fifteen hundred morocco workers are on a strike in Wilmington, Del....Jaehne is still in the tombs and is disheartened because he cannot get bail....A fine seal was shot in the Hudson river opposite Barrytown, N. Y., and weighed sixty-five pounds and measured four feet in length....Women notaries public have been appointed by Governor Hill. ....After a Cabinet meeting, while ascending the steps leading to his office, Secretary Manning fell, under an attack resembling apoplexy, and became nearly unconscious. After being carried to his house his breathing continued stertorous through the night. He is seriously ill.

THURSDAY, 25.—While the Queen was riding in state to the laying of the foundation of the new Examination Hall of the College of Surgeons, a missile thought to be an explosive was thrown into her carriage. But on examination it was found to be an appeal from a discharged soldier who is regarded insane....The violence by strikers in Belgium is increasing. Brussels is said to be at the mercy of anarchists....Prince Alexander refuses to accede to Russian demands and declares himself appointed Governor for life....King John, of Abyssinia, sent troops to relieve Kassala and defeated the Arabs with great loss....United States Senate is still debating the suppressed papers....The strike on the Missouri Pacific shows no signs of abating....The switchman's strike at Kansas City is said to be settled....Ogilby, the defaulting cashier of the New Brunswick Dime Savings Bank, has been taken to the Trenton Insane Asylum....Jaehne has been released on $25,000 bail....Strenuous efforts are being made to prevent illegal dumping in New York harbor....A vicious attempt was made to murder the Mayor of Houston, Texas.

FRIDAY, 26.—Mr. Gladstone is quite ill, and was unable to attend the House of Commons, but announcement was made that his Irish scheme would be submitted on April 8th....The strike in Belgium is being used by the anarchists as a pretext for robbery. ....There is a serious quarrel between Lord Churchill and W. H. Smith, the Conservative leaders ...The Dominion Government of Canada is sustained in its action toward Riel....Serious disorders are reported among the Indians in the Northwest....In the Pan Electric investigation, K. C. Young furnished proofs of a conspiracy. ..The strike in the Southwest is becoming more serious. St. Louis is entirely isolated. A manifesto has been issued by the Knights of Labor, and proclamations by the Governors of Kansas and Missouri....A new underground railroad project for New York city is made known at Albany....The condition of Secretary Manning still continues to be serious....The trial of Jaehne will probably be held in April.

SATURDAY, 27.—Earl Grey has made an important statement in regard to the Whig position against Home Rule....There is probably a crisis in Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet. Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Trevelyan will probably resign....There was a mob in Cork between the Loyalists and the Parnellites....A body of strikers in Brussels marched to the palace of the king and sang the Marseillaise hymn. A firearms factory was pillaged and Brussels suffers from terrorism....Forty rebels were killed in Burmah ...Prisoners in Limerick attacked the police in court and were severely beaten.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Death and the Weaver.

TRANSLATED FROM GERMAN FOLK-LORE TALES BY S. R. DURYEE.

IN olden times there lived a weaver, who had six children, and was very poor. But his wife bore still another child, and he wondered whom he should ask to be godfather to the boy. "You must get a rich man," said his wife, "who can help the poor little thing, for the dear sun comes in our house sooner than any bread." "Yes," said her husband, "but rich men have hard hearts." However, he went to a wealthy farmer and made known his request. The latter treated him roughly and said he had enough godchildren, and did not want this child; —"he should go to his equals," and so pushed him away. Then the weaver went to a poor man. But he said that he could not find bread and clothes for his own family, much less a christening present for another man's child; "he must go to rich people;" and he also pushed him off.

Then the weaver was very sorrowful, and complained against God and man. In passing through a forest on his homeward way, he tore his hair in grief and cried out that he did not wish to live longer in such a hard world; would that Death might come and take him away! As he said this a man came up to him, wrapped in a long black mantle, and wherever he trod, the grass and flowers turned yellow and the leaves became withered and fell from the trees to the ground. This was Death. He placed himself before the weaver, saying, "You have called me. What is your wish?" The affrighted weaver pulled off his hat, bowed low and answered, "Yesterday my wife bore me a son and no one will be his godfather, neither rich nor poor; so I called upon you as the poor man's friend to stand godfather to my child." "Oh, I am willing," said Death; "to-morrow, after the evening bells, bring the boy to the church and I will be there to stand sponsor."

The weaver did as he was bidden, and, as they stood around the font, Death appeared, held the child during the baptism and gave him the name of Anastatius. He told the pastor that he was a travelling doctor, and had done this from special friendship to the poor man.

After coming from the church to the weaver's house, Death took the latter aside and said, "My good fellow, you are doubtless expecting a christening present, but I have neither gold nor silver, because men come to me, leaving everything behind, as poor and naked as they are born; however, I will teach you something of great value, by which you can make much money. The pastor thinks that I am a doctor; now you must tell everyone that I have instructed you in that art and given you a medicine of great power. Whenever you visit a patient, open your eyes and you will always see me sitting by the sick man, either at the head or foot of the bed. If I am sitting at his head, you are to say that all skill is in vain, his illness is mortal; and then go your way, for he will most surely die. But if I am sitting at his feet, then tell the patient you can certainly cure him, however dangerous his sickness may be. Give him anything you wish and your fame will be great, as he will live." With these words Death went his way.

The weaver was very well pleased and the next day he proclaimed himself a doctor; but the people only laughed and would not believe him.

Now it happened that the mayor of the village fell from a high tree and was brought home dangerously wounded. He suffered intensely, and, after a few days, the doctors declared the end to have come; he must die; and throughout the home there was great lamentation and weeping. The weaver, too, came into the house, and seeing his godfather sitting at the foot of the bed, cried out, "Why these doctors are fools; they do not know my remedy, and they are letting the man die miserably. What will you give me if I cure him?"

The mayor's wife promised him a great reward. Whereupon the weaver gave the sick man a little water to drink, in which he had squeezed some hurtle-berries; and the latter was cured beyond all expectation, and the weaver received his money. The same thing happened with other sick people, who all recovered.

Now the rich farmer who had refused to become the child's godfather was also indisposed; but because he did not think himself very ill and was also a miser, he would not have any doctor summoned, but sent after the weaver. When he appeared the farmer said to him, "You can easily make a masterstroke here, for there is nothing much the matter. We have been butchering and I have overeaten; but you might give me your little drink; if it is of no good, at least it will do no harm." But the weaver saw Death sitting at the head and answered, "My friend, no drink in the world can help you, or any remedy of mine; no herb grows to oppose Death. Put your house in order for you must die." The farmer laughed at this, sent for the doctors, who told him to be of good courage, in three days he would be like a fish in water. But on the third day he was buried. Then the weaver's fame as a miraculous doctor resounded throughout the whole country and in good time he was a rich man, built a new house and said to his wife, "Dear Elsie, I must become as wealthy as a count."

And now he was sent for by a rich lord who had a magnificent castle, beautiful fields and acres and many servants; but was nigh to death. The weaver came to him and immediately saw Death sitting at his head. "My noble lord," he said, "I cannot help you. You will have to go." Then the nobleman nodded to his treasurer, who brought in a whole bag full of gold and silver, and the lord said, "My dear friend, all this shall be yours if you do but help me." The weaver replied, "I cannot;" but as he gazed at the vast amount of gold and silver and reflected on the wealthy and happy life it would bring him, he thought, "why does the godfather want this rich man just now. Rich and poor are alike to Death. Truly he may get twenty peasants instead of my patient. If I should play Death a trick it would not hurt him, and I would be as rich as a count and Anastatius, his godchild, would be a count's child. I know what I will do." So he laid his plan and went out of the room.

In the courtyard he called four stout fellows to him and said, "Come up with me to your master's room and stand two at the head and two at the foot of the bed. When I cry 'up,' then quickly seize the bed, raise it up and around, so that my lord's feet may lie in the place of his head." They did so, and in a trice the godfather sat at the sick man's feet. His face grew furious as he noticed the trick and, shaking his fist at the weaver, he disappeared. The nobleman recovered, however, that very hour and was quite merry over the remedy. The weaver received the money and ate and drank and caroused with the lord until evening.

But as he came to the wood, on his homeward way, the air seemed changed to a heavy mist. He became terrified and fearful, and all at once the godfather stood in his path. The weaver greeted him and tried to push on, but the latter stepped forward, seized the horse's bridle and breathed upon him heavily, saying, "You false fellow, you have meddled with dangerous matter to-day, and now I will break your neck."

"Ah, dear godfather," said the weaver, "I beg for mercy. Once counts for nothing; it shall never happen again. I am deadly frightened and will fall from my horse. How much better for you to take me to your house and give me some restorative."

"Well, I am willing," snorted out Death; "fasten your horse and come on." Death led the way through the forest, the weaver following him, and at last they reached a black door over which hung a shield upon which was painted an hour-glass, and underneath the words, "At the End." This was the home of Death.

They entered the vestibule, in which hung a scythe, and then came into a very long hall in which many thousand candles were burning near each other and over each other. Some of these were quite long, others had half burned down, and there were some that were but little stumps and their light flickered up and down and nearly went out.

The weaver was very much astonished and said, "I always fancied that it would be very dark in your house. What do all these candles mean, and why are some long and others short?"

Death answered, "A candle is placed here for every man at his birth, and each of these lights denotes a human life. One is slowly consumed, another rapidly, and when the candle goes out the man's life is at an end. Those whose candles are still long have still many days before them, but those whose candles are burned down are about to die and would be wise to make themselves ready, for I must go to sit at their head."

The weaver was still more astonished, and after awhile he said, "Godfather, I would like very much to know how much longer I have to live? Can you not show me my candle, so that I can learn by it?" Death led the way, passed through the rows of candles and at last stood still, saying, "This is your candle, this belongs to your wife, this to Anastatius, and these to your other children."

The weaver grew pale; the other candles were burning away merrily and were all long,—Anastatius had the longest of all,—but his own candle was burned down to a tiny stump and the flame wavered here and there, as if under a strong wind and about to go out every moment. Then the weaver raised his hands to Death and said, "Ah, dear godfather, I am become a rich and happy man through your goodness. Now when I know better than others what it is to live, now must I go away, leaving everything behind! Think of my wife and children, what will become of a weak woman and poor little orphans, Anastatius among them, when their head and supporter is gone? I beseech you to have mercy!"

Tears nearly overflowed the eyes of kind Death at this speech, but he replied, "I cannot, for I am but the servant of one mightier than I and must do my duty." "Most certainly," begged the weaver, "but you need only put a fresh candle in the place of the little stump. Oh, dear godfather, pray, pray shew me this favor, but quickly, before it is too late."

"Well, I am willing," said Death. "I will do it for my godchild's sake;" and he took up a fresh candle to light it. But his hand proved too large and clumsy to remove the little stump, and in raising it he crushed it between his fingers. The tiny flame was extinguished and in the same instant the weaver sighed and fell lifeless to the ground.

. . . . . .

And so men say, "No contract can be made with Death," and, "One must die, though Death stand godfather." Therefore it is wise not to place one's whole heart upon life, but so to act that one need neither fear Death nor be ashamed longer to live.

Synopsis of the Vedder Lectures.

THE Vedder Lectures for 1886, which were finished by the delivery of the last one in the First Reformed Church of New Brunswick, have drawn attention and stimulated discussion by their presentation of truth from the extreme conservative standpoint. And yet the statements made have been so calm, so free from mere declamation and so strenuously defended by the massive backing of acknowledged authority that, in the language of one of our correspondents already quoted, "the effect of the lectures has been to make all devout Christians thankful that they have once more heard the central truths of the Bible so clearly and strongly defended by one whose earnestness and zeal, supplemented by and growing out of earnest study in this country and in Europe on Reformation ground, peculiarly qualify him to defend the Reformation theology as Vedder lecturer in one of its strongholds in America." The subjects of the lectures were announced as follows:

I. Introductory—Common Sense and Faith.
II. God above Nature.
III. Creation above Nature.
IV. The Bible above Nature.
V. Redemption above Nature.

I. The first lecture, delivered Sunday night, by courtesy of Dr. Hutton in his church, began with this prelude or

INTRODUCTION.

The root of infidelity, no doubt, lies in that "carnal mind" which "will not," that "enmity" deep in our nature which "cannot, please God." This root —while fallen nature remains what it is—will of course be unchangeable; not so, however, its fruitage, which constantly shifts, in all generations, both color and form. A course of Lectures, then, upon "The Cause and Cure of Modern Infidelity," assumes, obliges, preconsideration of the tendencies and perils of that special age in which we live—for which, we are responsible. No man can hope, within a circle wide or limited, to speak effectively to any age, who does not understand it.

The skeptical tendencies of the present day are working, as we fear, not toward the Church and upward from the masses, but from within the Church and, as in Germany, in Holland and in Scotland, and, even this side the Atlantic, from the pulpit down.

Rising and steadily above the narrower issues of mere doctrinal and creed discussion—rising even above those questions which concern the authorship and authenticity of Canonical Books, there whispers, back of these, the betrayal of a far more comprehensive and more sinister desire to merge the grand creative act of God, that which determines the whole moral system, in some necessary and unwilled expansion of His own Being and nature or of some other, even atomic, molecular being and nature; in one word, a desire to get rid of creation; and so—by filling in its awful bridgeless chasm—to get rid, beyond it, of confronting God,—of God, a Person, to whom I, a person am, from moment to moment and always, responsible.

The line of skeptical attack thus seen to be, from Doctrine to Inspiration; from Inspiration to the Instantaneousness of the Creative Act; and from Creation to the very existence of God, the lecturer deemed it not unwise to turn the current of the argument the other way and, facing Unbelief, from the Divine side, down. Consider, as preliminary,

COMMON SENSE AND FAITH.

Faith is the foundation principle of human nature. It makes and holds together society. It distinguishes man from the brutes. The difference between man and the brutes is not one of degrees of perfections, as if man were a developed chimpanzee as the chimpanzee is a developed ape. It is not a difference of degrees in perfections; but of the perfections themselves. Man has what animals have not and cannot have, even in rudiments, and that is Faith in God. He is therefore allied to the supernatural; can pass beyond the walls of the senses, mount up to God and hold communion with God. He dominates and controls nature. He rises to the full sublimest height when he expresses this. No brute can say "Credo in Deum!" (I believe in God.)

That it is a dictate of common sense to exercise faith, is evident

1. From the possession of the faculty. What is an eye for, but to see with? What is an ear for, but to hear with? Since the faculty has been given, why should it not be used? We cannot but believe more than we comprehend. We cannot but trust further than our senses. Unbelief is nature's moral vacuum and which it most abhors.

2. The instinctive judgments of men; the man on whom you cannot rely is branded as un-faithful—miscreant, i. e., mé-créant—unbeliever, and why? Because the link off from God, the link is off everywhere.

3. And in the third place, look at the matter in the light of observation and reflection. Everything around us appeals to faith. We cannot move a step without faith. A man without faith would be a monster, as truly as one without legs or arms. Faith, not doubt, is the law of nature. Doubt outrages nature. In Eden was no doubt. The thing most natural to Adam was to count on the order around him, and on the God of that order. To doubt was to break with the movement and rhythm of Providence—to cease to march along straight lines with God, was to betray a wrench, a serpent-twist, a fallen nature.

4. We argue, too, the nature of a principle from its working. Now doubt always works badly. Doubt causes perplexity, darkness, wandering, distress ever deepening; the doubter never gets beyond a simple perhaps.

Doubt leads to discouragement and despair, and its logical issue is suicide. It causes failure—it forfeited Canaan. It is the very zero of construction. It never moves forward, it begets no inspiration—it is purely negative. It has no tendency whatever to construction, but only to disintegration and destruction. Atheism has never accomplished anything good or great. It finds civilization and leaves demoralization. It drives society from its centres and reduces the Babel builder to the Bedouin, the cultured citizen to the Bohemian, vagabond, hottentot. It finds organic happiness and leaves sporadic madmen and interminable deserts. Faith moves forward in straight lines and accomplishes good with every movement. It brings joy to the soul and to the world. The songs of the ages have been the utterances of faith. The achievements of the world, its "Pillars of Hercules," have been reared up by Faith.

Faith is the making of manhood—it concentrates power. Failures in life are owing to a lack of belief in some great truth or principle. Firm conviction is necessary to and will bear one on to success. From such conviction springs originality. Faith is prehensile. It not only searches for truth, with Lessing, but it reaches truth and rests in its fruition.

This faculty God, in His plan of redemption, addresses. The highest thing in us—the loftiest Alp of our nature—He touches it first with His Sun. He quickens what is natural to the supernatural—the faculty to a new power and "gift." Down the dry channels of our glacial being He pours the light, the life-tide and power of His Spirit. For Faith is not so much our act as it is the mighty rush and volume of new life—the working of the Holy Ghost, and that, sovereignly, in us and through us. Faith, born of the Spirit, recognizes God's justice and man's guilt, and so leads to the reception of and reliance on Him who satisfies the justice of God and removes the guilt of the sinner. Unbelief has no sense of justice, and therefore none of guilt, none of atonement—none of salvation—no life and no power.

II. The Second Lecture went to show the Possibility, Probability, Necessity and Certainty of the Supernatural—of the miracle—of God above nature. God is the miracle in germ, the Miracle is God in expression. On the Miracle, Christianity is suspended, that is, Truth is backed by Omnipotence. Like a glass globe swung from a cord above a stone pavement, Christianity, alone of all systems, has said, "Cut the cord and you shatter my globe! Deny the Miracle and you destroy me."

The natural requires for its cause the miracle, and, when the natural has fallen and become the sub-natural, then that sub-natural calls for the supernatural, the Miracle again; just as much as an ass fallen into a pit calls for the help of a man.

III. Lecture third was a defence of that first great miracle which inaugurates and determines God's system, that is, instantaneous, absolute, perfect creation. From the words, "In the beginning God created the heavens," Dr. Bishop argued—God solitary—God creative—God creating HEAVENS FIRST—the most perfect first. Creation is not upward from below, but just the opposite, from up to down. God started with the seraphim and not with slime. He made angels before man, and the most perfect mere man, Adam, first. Adam was "the type of Him who was to come." The sort of an Adam we have will determine the character of our Christ. The same thing holds in New Creation; Christ, the most perfect, is first. In fine, the principle, the best specimen first, universally reigns. Not that there is not progress in God's action. There is progress, but not in uninterrupted ascension and by blind evolution; rather, it is in a succession of breaks, or of V's. First God creates and then puts to a test; and, when the creature has fallen, He reconstructs. In Gen. 1: 2 the angels are found fallen; and God reconstructs in six Genesis days. Then God creates Adam and Adam falls; and God, by intervention, type and prophecy reconstructs. Then God creates Christ who does not fall, and, in Him, the Church. Thus, that is last in execution which was first in thought; and the principle, the best specimen, in each class, first, universally reigns. Creationism, therefore, is our theology all the way through. Self-evolution is the blank denial of the Christian system. Never will orthodox men admit Development ante-vital. We take our stand on this, that life, the first fact, is a flash.

IV. The fourth lecture, "The Bible above Nature," was a defence of Divine inspiration. Inspiration lies in the writings. Men speak of inspired writers, the Scripture never. What is theopneustic is the manuscript and not the man. The writers were moved (pheromenoi), but the writings were God-breathed. On the original parchment every word, line, mark, point, penstroke, jot, tittle, was put there by God. The parchment decays, but the writing is indestructible. The plaster on the Babylonian palace may crumble, but "Mene! Mene! Tekel! Upharsin!" remain. Not one obliterated, lonely "THEOS" but is bound to come back; not one Calvinistic proof-text sponged out, but will have resurrection.

The lecture closed with fifteen arguments in favor of the inspiration of the Hebrew vowel-points and vindication of the integrity and sovereignty of the received Hebrew text.

V. The fifth lecture, "Redemption above Nature," went to show the identity of the Redeemer with the redeemed in nature, in sacrifice, in resurrection, in sacraments, and in the visible rule of His Church.

1. In nature. Christ did not assume humanity as such, "but the seed of Abraham." His union is not with the old Adam and the Adamic, but with His people. Redemption is exclusive in design and effect.

2. Identity in Sacrifice. The power of this lies in its infiniteness. An Infinite Being suffering infinitely is the descending and bottomless Sheol—is Hell. The plumb line drops down in the Cross-work, the swirl of the horror, the syncope of Christ's soul, till it strikes the "Forsaken!" There, there in that Sheol, that Hell; there, there is the link of our union.

3. Identity of the Redeemer with the redeemed in resurrection. A spiritual body—"spirit flesh" and "spirit-blood." This is a fact unique, most isolate; to the levels of history, Hecla above the Atlantic.

4. Identity in the Sacrament. The Supper not only commemorates a dead Christ; it communicates, to faith, a Christ living. This against the impossibility of the Mass and, on the other side, against the rationalism of Zwingli.

5. Identity of Christ with His people in the order and visible rule of His Church. Here followed eight arguments for the Divine right of the Reformed system as opposed to all alliances with the Trusteeships of the secular, the natural man. The lectures then closed with two pictures—the "The Siege of Rochelle," and the "Glorieuse Rentrês" of the Waldenses into their valleys, showing the power of God to preserve in face of all assaults, seductions and defections; and to recover from all worldliness and ruin the pure and Apostolic order of His Church.

Of course, the above is but the barest skeleton of the lectures, each of which required an hour for the delivery. The argument for the Inspiration of the Hebrew vowel-points we hope to give in full.

A Reply to Judge Allen.

BY REV. GEORGE LE FEVRE.

MR EDITOR: Since the Hon. H. P. Allen has written an article severely condemning the Prohibition party, which was published in your issue of March 31, I respectfully ask permission to reply to some of the statements there made by him. I do not wish to advance any arguments in favor of a third party, since those arguments can be found in the third party papers; but when a member of an opposing party attacks the Prohibition party, as he has done, it is time for somebody to come forward with a defence.

In the first place, he charges the third party Prohibitionists with "ignorance" and "credulity" in believing that "a party with one idea only, can or possibly could be successful." As to the charge of ignorance, we reply by pointing to such men as Joseph Cook, Talmage, Cuyler, Deems, Neal Dow, and many others equally intelligent, who are third party men.

And as to credulity; well, that depends on whether our faith in the success of the party is well founded or not. The Judge thinks it is not well founded, because "a party with one idea only cannot be successful." But he is mistaken as to his premise. If he will read the national platform of 1884 or the New York State platform of 1885, he will find that the Prohibition party has as many ideas as any other party, the only difference between it and the Judge's party being this: the one puts prohibition first on its platform, and gives it room enough to stand on; while the other puts it on last, after all the available space is taken up, so that it has to stand on the edge and take its chances of being shoved off.

With us prohibition is a sine qua non. With the Judge, and those whom he represents, it is a tertium quid. And just here is the point where we disagree. If he thought probibition an indispensable necessity, he would himself be a third party man; but since he thinks it is of only third rate importance, he will not make it a test of party fealty.

Our faith in the success of the third party is not founded on prohibition alone. There are other great objects to be gained, for example, the obliteration of sectional animosities between the North and the South, which can never be accomplished through either of the old parties. But, if the party had only one idea, viz., prohibition, we still believe it would succeed,

1st. Because prohibition is right, and right will prevail.

2d. Both the old parties are hopelessly divided on the liquor question.

3d. The Republican party came into power on a single issue, viz., the abolition of slavery. To use the Judge's figure, "it rode into power on a one-horse chaise," and we will add, that, like the celebrated deacon's vehicle, it is liable to go to smash all at once.

The Judge wants to know, "What warrant have they (prohibitionists) for taking the field as a purely political party, and bringing their politics into the pulpit and into the prayer-meeting, and seeking thus to advance their party interests?" We answer, because we think it is right and just and in accord with the will of God to do so. We believe God will bless the cause of prohibition, and will bless the Prohibition party for the sake of the cause. And here again we appeal to the precedent established by the Judge's own party. For the Republican party once organized itself as a purely political party, and at the same time went into the pulpit and into the prayer meetings, and sought thus to advance their party interests by praying God to help them to abolish slavery. We believe they had the very best kind of a warrant for doing as they did. And we have the same kind of a warrant now for doing as we are doing. If the Judge's political party had any issue for which Christian people were willing to pray, I do not believe he would object. If that party has no longer any distinctive issue worth praying for, he ought not to find fault with the Prohibition party because it has.

The limits of this article will only permit me to notice one more point. He says: "I venture to affirm that this party has set the cause of temperance back for at least twenty years." He does not define what he means by "the cause of temperance," but we infer that he means "high license," for he also says, "I am well convinced that the most effective way for the present at least, and probably for years to come, to lessen the great flood of intemperance, is to adopt the 'high license' system." If he means that we have set "high license" back twenty years, we agree with him, and are proud of it. And we mean to set it back twenty years more the first opportunity we get. For we believe with Dr. Talmage that high license is "a monopoly of abomination." Its moral effect on the community is worse than free whiskey.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“LORENZ ALMA TADEMA: His Life and Works.” By Georg Ebers. From the German by Mary J. Safford. Prof. Ebers, before his death, composed the present memoir, rejoicing as an Egyptologist in the great artist who had entered so fully into the every-day life of antiquity. The work is extremely eulogistic, but it presents Alma Tadema in the growth of his artistic ability as no other sketch has yet done it.

The artist was born in Dronrijp, Holland, in 1836, and was christened Lorenz, to which he himself added the “Alma” in after years. The family name has the accent on the first syllable, Tădema, not on the second as many pronounce it. He studied his art in Antwerp under Van Leys up to 1862, and then produced his first noble paintings, chiefly relating to the Merovingian era. In 1863 he visited Italy, and from that time turned his attention to scenes from the life of the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. He then fixed his studio in Brussels, but found his best efforts meeting with but little reward. In Holland for nearly twenty five years he did not obtain more than a thousand florins for any picture, nor could he gain the slightest recognition from any of the noble patrons of art. He lost his first wife and a child during this period. In 1871 he moved to London and became a naturalized Englishman, marrying Miss Laura Epps, who was herself distinguished as a painter. Since that day his career has been to the highest point of fame and wealth. He is not only recognized as the archæologist of artists, but unique and inimitable in his thorough sympathy with the scenes he presents.

Prof. Ebers has given an enthusiastic sketch of his friend, but the volume will be prized not only for its descriptive power of Tadema's development, but as a memento of the character of the writer who has so lately passed away. The book contains thirteen illustrations of some of the more famous pictures. (William S. Gottsberger.)

....“OUTLINES OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.” By George Park Fisher, D.D., LL.D., Professor in Yale College. The first impression from an examination of these Outlines is of great and continued labor wisely directed. The volume must be the result of years of application. In the endeavor to form a judgment on the outcome of this patient work one necessarily compares the Outlines with the Epitome of Ploetz, and finds that the volumes differ. The Outlines are much more comprehensive, the purpose of the two compilers has been different, in some records the Epitome is more particular. Those who can purchase both books will do well to do so. Those desiring such works as handy books of reference will need both. But the large number of families who can buy only one such volume, who are unable to supply themselves with separate histories, who desire one universal history and wish that to include the largest possible number of essential points and to include also a view of art, literature, philosophy, religion, customs, and to furnish brief biographical sketches, will receive the greatest satisfaction from Prof. Fisher's Outlines.

In early Ancient History Ploetz mentions a larger number of sovereigns, Dr. Fisher records only the more illustrious or those under whom important political or national movements occurred. This distinction continues in the early history of peoples still existing, but fades away as the record in the Outlines advances. Beyond this the comparison need not be carried.

Prof. Fisher writes as a Christian. His religious opinions are not offensively obtruded, but his view is that of a believer in revelation. He sees a design running through human history and that the design of God. One feels this throughout, though he does not find it expressed. He feels that in following the track of nations his hand is held by one who believes in the divine government and purpose as recorded in the Scriptures. This is a great advantage. True history cannot be written except by one having such a belief.

The Outlines are comprehensive. For example, beginning with the 35th page, a paragraph is given to Egyptian hieroglyphics, another a page or two farther on to the divinities, again one to embalming, another to the literature and science of ancient Egypt. Similar condensed statements are made of every period and nation, those in relation to Greece during the 5th century B C., being with respect to the Acropolis, Athens, religion, the tragic drama, comedy, Greek art; architecture, sculpture, painting; philosophy; Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, the cynics; historical writings. Such is the breadth of treatment throughout. By using smaller type these additions are kept distinct, and the eye helps the mind in receiving and retaining a separate and definite impression.

Besides helpful maps and genealogical tables are introduced where there is need, and at appropriate places lists of histories to be consulted by those wishing more particular knowledge will be found, while a serviceable index concludes the volume.

The Outlines impress the unity of history, show how nations have been mutually dependent, have learned from each other, and how the past lives in the present.

We wish the author had not virtually conceded a great antiquity to man and that man began his career an uncivilized or savage creature. We also wish that he had taken Homer as a fairly trustworthy authority for historical facts and incidents, as well as for tribal divisions and rulers, customs, arts and religion. The German theory in regard to Homer is inconsistent. False in one point, false in all, is a wise saying generally accepted. Incidents preserved in the heroic songs of nations are not generally without foundation.

Wherever possible Dr. Fisher has invested the recital of facts with the charm of a clear, vigorous and graceful style. In other sections he has relieved somewhat the inevitable hardness and dryness of a rapid enumeration of facts, but unavoidably the enjoyment of the reader will depend upon the keenness of his historical appetite.

For the use of schools the volume is a desirable text book. The typography is handsome and clear, even the smallest type being very distinct. (Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co.)

....A second series of the “LIVES OF GREEK STATESMEN” has been issued by Sir Geo. W. Cox, including Ephialtes, Kimon, Perikles (we used to call them Cymon and Pericles), Phormion, Archidamos, Kleon, Brasidas, Demosthenes, Nikias, and Hermokrates. These, it will be seen, cover the period mostly of the contest for hegemony between Athens and Sparta. A third volume will complete the series, which will then constitute a most vivid and interesting history of Greece itself, since all that is important in the political and military annals of that people clusters about the careers of their public men. It will be noticed that the names in this volume represent both Athens and Sparta. We have thus both sides of this conflict, and the internal condition and contrasts of these commonwealths, very fully and graphically presented. The historical style of the author is a model. (Harper & Brothers.)

....“AN APACHE CAMPAIGN IN THE SIERRA MADRE,” by Captain John G. Bourke, U. S. A, gives a soldier's account of the expedition led by General Crook to the Sierra Madre, Mexico, in 1883. It has a freshened interest in the fact that the same commander has been engaged in a similar expedition against the same Indian enemy and in the same region in 1885-6. The object of the writer is to exhibit some of the difficulties of the Indian question in the Southwest, and some of the methods of the campaigns against the hostile savages. This is done by reproducing his own journal of the expedition of 1883. His descriptions of the tribe and of the country and of the pursuit are vivid. He does not think favorably of the Indian Agents of our government, and believes thoroughly in turning the wild tribes over to the control of the army. The book, which is fully illustrated, is interesting and valuable. (Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

....“THE CHOICE OF BOOKS AND OTHER LITERARY PIECES.” By Frederick Harrison. The author of this volume is well known as the English defender and advocate of Positivism. This does not appear in the present collection of essays, all of which are, as the title says, literary pieces. They show wide reading, good sense, careful thought and a genial spirit. Mr. Harrison writes with ease and grace, and is not to be read without profit. The best things in the book are the first four essays on books and reading, which contain a deal of good suggestion deftly conveyed. The notices of Carlyle and of George Eliot are appreciative but discriminating. Mr. Harrison would call himself a Comtist, but this volume shows that he owes much more to the Bible than he does to Comte. (Macmillan & Co.)

....“BACKLOG STUDIES.” By Charles Dudley Warner. This is one of the handy and exquisitely printed “Riverside Aldine Series.” We should think it would gladden an author's soul to read his own works in such print and on such paper. We need not commend the “Studies,” as all who love bright and suggestive thought have long admired these American “friends in council.” The publishers only prove their excellent taste in choosing to surround the picture with such a charming frame. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The American Journal of Philology, last number of the sixth volume, has just appeared, full of rich matter appropriate to its character. The Reviews and Book Notices are exceedingly valuable, being marked with ability and fidelity and candor. The “Reports” of foreign periodicals of the same class are ably done and useful. This feature of the Journal, as well as its lists of recent publications, gives to the American student what he can get nowhere else.

...The March number of The English Pulpit of To Day contains several excellent discourses, notably those by Bishop Lightfoot, Dr. McLaren and Archbishop Parker.

...The best thing in the Expositor for March is Harnack's very clever review of Lightfoot's Ignatius. It is pleasant to see profoundly learned men so courteous in the statement of their differences. Prof. Kirkpatrick reviews the First Book of Samuel as given in the Revised English Bible. The chief fault he finds is the Revisers' unwillingness to pay much deference to the Septuagint. Dr. McLaren continues his admirable homiletic exposition of Colossians. But when he says “Christ's cross is the end of the law as moral rule,” he says what many have said before him, but what nevertheless is supreme absurdity. If God's law springs out of the relation of His creatures to Himself, and is the expression of His own moral excellence, how can it possibly die? Does God cease to be God, or does man cease to be under obligation to his Maker and Ruler and Judge?

....The Atlantic for April opens with a striking historical sketch of Gouverneur Morris, our Minister to France during the Reign of Terror. All parts of it are intensely interesting. The serial story, “In the Clouds,” by Miss Murfrees, almost reaches its climax and then disappoints the reader, while the “Princess Cassamassima” keeps on in a monotonous way. A capital article in the serio-comic vein is Charles H. Phelps' “Shylock vs. Antonio,” or a “Brief for Plaintiff on Appeal.” John G. Whittier contributes a poem on “Revelation,” in which his Quaker feeling is strongly shown. There are other articles of high merit and an unusually bright “Contributors' Club,” so that one feels that the number is even above the usual excellence of the Atlantic.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: Evolution of To-Day: A Summary of the Theory of Evolution as Held by Scientists at the Present Time, and an Account of the Progress Made by the Discussions and Investigations of a Quarter of a Century. By H. W. Conn, Ph.D. 8vo, pp. 342. $1.75.

Charles Scribner's Sons: The Late Mrs. Null. By Frank R. Stockton. 12mo, pp. 437. $1.50; also,

American Diplomacy and the Furtherance of Commerce. By Eugene Schuyler, Ph.D., LL D. 8vo, pp. 469. $2.50.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: Forewarned—Forearmed. By J. Thain Davidson, D.D. 12mo, pp. 286. $1.25.

Funk & Wagnalls: The Essentials of Elocution. By Alfred Ayres. 18mo, pp. 89. 60 cents; also,

Historical Lights. A Volume of Six Thousand Quotations from Standard Histories and Biographies; and Twenty Thousand Cross-References. With a General Index and Index of Personal Names. Compiled by Rev. Charles E. Little, author of “Biblical Lights and Side-Lights.” Royal 8vo, pp. 964. Cloth, $5; also,

Ashes of Hopes. A Novel. By Julia A. Flisch. 12mo, pp. 556. $1.50; also,

The People's Bible: Discourses upon Holy Scripture. By Joseph Parker, D.D. Vol. III. Leviticus—Numbers XXVI. 8vo, pp. 3.0. $1.50.

Roberts Brothers: Mercy Philbrick's Choice. By Helen Jackson (H. H.) 12mo, pp. 296; also, Hetty's Strange History. By Helen Jackson (H. H.) 12mo, pp. 291.

Cassell & Co.: No. XIII.; or, The Story of the Lost Vestal. By Emma Marshall. 12mo, pp. 250. $1; also,

Mrs. Peixada. By Sidney Luska, author of “As It Was Written,” etc. 12mo, pp. 317. $1.

Alfred E. Rose, Westfield, N. Y.: Thoughts for Thought. Discussions of Timely Topics. By William Frederic Faber. 12mo, pp. 155.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: A Harmony of the Four Gospels in English. According to the Common Version. Newly Arranged, with Explanatory Notes. By Edward Robinson, D.D., LL.D. Revised Edition, with Foot-Notes from the Revised Version of 1881, and Additional Notes by M. B. Riddle, D.D. 8vo, pp. 205. $1.50.

A. D. F. Randolph & Co.: A Characteristic of Modern Life. By the Author of “The Recreations of a Country Parson.” 16mo, pp. 74. 40 cents.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Physics and Metaphysics of Money. With a Sketch of Events Relating to Money in the Early History of California. By Rodmond Gibbons. (Questions of the Day, No. 33.) 12mo, pp. 34. 25 cents. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Our Sensation Novel. Edited by Justin Huntly McCarthy, M.P. (Cassell's Rainbow Series.) 12mo, pp. 181. 25 cents; also,

Old Fulkerson's Clerk. By Mrs. J. H. Walworth. (Same Series.) 12mo, pp. 171. 25 cents.

In Shallow Waters. A Novel. By Annie Armitt. (No. 64, Harper's Handy series.) 16mo, pp. 217. 25 cents; also,

The Strange Adventures of Captain Dangerous, who was a Soldier, a Pirate, a Merchant, a Spy, a Slave among the Moors, etc. A Narrative in Plain English, Attempted by George Augustus Sala, author of “Quite Alone,” etc. (No. 517, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp 28. 20 cents.

John B. Gough: His Anniversary Addresses before the National Temperance Society, and Sketches of His Life. By Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., and Rev. Joseph Cook. 12mo, pp. 48 10 cents; $1 per dozen. The National Temperance Society and Publishing House.

The Castle of Otranto. By Horace Walpole. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I, No. 9.) 16mo, pp. 191. 10 cents.

The University of the City of New York. Catalogue and Announcements. 1885-1886. 12mo, pp. 125.

Præterita. Outlines of Scenes and Thoughts Perhaps Worthy of Memory in My Past Life. By John Ruskin, LL.D. Chapter 8. Vesper, Camenae; 9 The Col de la Faucille; 10. Quem Tu, Melpomene. 8vo, pp. 245 to 344. 25 cents each. John Wiley & Sons.

PERIODICALS.

March.—The American Antiquarian and Oriental Review, The Targum.

March-April.—Christian Thought.

April.—The Art Journal, The New York Fashion Bazar, The Popular Science Monthly, St. Nicholas, Our Little Ones and the Nursery, The Domestic Monthly and Illustrated Magazine of Fashion The Forum, American Journal of Insanity, Magazine of American History, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine.

Financial.

TUESDAY, March 30th.

THE Associated Banks of the city reduced loans last week $3,626,700; lost in specie $5 084,600, in legal tenders $2,324,300, and in deposits $11 172,600, and increased circulation $173,500. The surplus of reserve was reduced $4,615,650, making it $12 797,150, against about $48,000,000 in 1885, $7 000 000 in 1884, a deficit of over $4 000,000 in 1883, and a surplus of $3,300,000 in 1882. The U. S. Treasury has increased its stock of gold and holds now 149 millions against 125 millions a year ago. The Treasury and the banks have only $1,700,000 less gold than they held a year ago, and in gold and legal tenders hold nearly 7 millions more than a year ago. The position is a strong one, notwithstanding a gold export of $1,034,890 last week, making the export since January 1st about $14,000 000. What speculators may do they keep secret. They may withdraw deposits or buy exchange and so send money to Europe, but if they attempt no such tricks there is no reason to fear a stringency in the money market at present. The Treasury has to pay 10 millions for bonds on April 1st and 10 millions on May 1st, has the money in hand, and after making these payments will probably have as much gold in hand as it had in May of last year. These statements are made in view of indications of an attempt to create an artificial stringency in order to affect the Stock Market. Money was loaned yesterday at the close of the Stock Board at 2 1–2 per cent on call. The general rate on good paper and on mortgage is 5 per cent, and has been for some time. The Bank of England rate remains at 2 per cent, but outside loans on demand are made at one per cent and less.

Imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $7,213 189. Exports improved and rose to $6,113,632. There was considerable buying of stocks on European account and foreign exchange declined. Sterling exchange sold yesterday at $4.86 3–4 for 60 day bills and $4 88 3-4 for demand.

The quotations for grain here yesterday afternoon were: Wheat 93 1–4, or more particularly, No. 1 red $1 02, No. 2 red 93 1–4 to 94 3–4, State white 96; corn 46 1–4; oats 36 1–2. Foreign markets reported firm for wheat and corn. The shipment of corn last week was one of the largest on record at this port. There was a decline in pork and lard after 3 o'clock yesterday. The cotton market was quiet and firm. Quotations: April 9.06–07; May 9.19–20; June 9.29–30; July 9.37–38; Aug. 9.45–46; Sept. 9.31–33. Hay is lower under a full supply and light demand. Choice timothy 90 cents, No. 1, 85 to 87 1–2. Long rye straw 90 cents, oat straw 40 to 50 cents.

The Stock Market was unsettled by the strikes and prices generally declined. Yesterday there was a sharp rise on leading securities. The coal companies are said to have come to an agreement. The Reading reorganization is in a much more promising condition.

Trade was somewhat arrested by the strikes.

Y^e Costumes of finest fabrick are Cleansed or Dyed without injury at

LEWANDO'S

FRENCH DYEING AND CLEANSING ESTABLISHMENT,

17 Temple Place, Boston, U. S. A. | Fifth Ave. cor. W. 14th St. New York.

Price List Sent Free.

POPULAR LECTURES.

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT, SING SING, N. Y

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, NEW YORK

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.

The merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. G. WILLIAMSON, Prop., 283 N. Second St., PHILA. PA.

THE APRIL "CENTURY"

Contains one of the most attractive features ever published in a magazine,—the story of the naval duel between the "Kearsarge" and the "Alabama," told in three narratives by participants, with numerous illustrations, as follows:

LIFE ON THE "ALABAMA,"
By One of her Crew.
A narrative of the two-years' cruise,—the character of the officers and men,—and a thrilling account of the sinking of the "Alabama."

COMBATS OF THE "ALABAMA,"
By her Executive Officer.
Life on the ship as viewed from the quarter-deck—meeting the "Kearsarge"—rescue of Captain Semmes by the yacht "Deerhound."

THE DUEL BETWEEN THE "KEARSARGE" AND "ALABAMA."
By the Surgeon of the "Kearsarge."
The challenge—the fight in circles—the destruction of the Confederate cruiser.

OTHER FEATURES
Of the April CENTURY, many of them illustrated, include: "Creole Slave Songs," by G. W. Cable; "Italy, from a Tricycle"; W. D. Howells's new novel, "The Minister's Charge"; short stories by Arlo Bates and Edward Eggleston; "Toy Dogs"; "Glimpses of Longfellow in Social Life"; "Christianity and Popular Education," by Washington Gladden; "Strikes, Lockouts, and Arbitration," etc.
Price 35 cents. Sold by all dealers.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION, Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

With the Flowers that Bloom in the Spring come Spring and Bilious Fevers, with symptoms of Lassitude, Furred Tongue, Mawkish Taste in the mouth, Eructations, Nausea and Loss of Appetite. These should be at once combated by liberal doses of TARRANT'S Effervescent Seltzer Aperient,

Which will thoroughly evacuate the bowels, restore tone to the stomach, oxygenate the blood, expel all morbid humors and enable the system to endure the Changes of Spring and Heat of Summer. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Sunday School Books!!!

BEST BOOKS. BEST TERMS.

Catalogues free.

N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St., New York.
N. B.—Fine Stock of Easter Goods.

"A Capital Book for Social Meetings and Sunday Schools."

SELECT SONGS.

Compiled by F. N. PELOUBET, D.D.

344 Hymns and Tunes, admirably chosen for use where only one book is desired for the Devotional Meetings and the Sunday School. All who have used Select Songs speak of it in the highest terms.

Firmly bound in Cloth, $40 per 100 Copies.
Ready March 10.
An edition of words only, $10 per 100 Copies.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

New Sunday School Music Books.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Jewels of Praise. { $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gem of Gems. { $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gospel Praise Book. { $40 per hundred. Specimen copy 50c.

NEW EASTER MUSIC.
OUR RISEN LORD, SERVICE. 5 cts. $4 per hund.
HULL'S EASTER ANNUAL. 5 cts. $2 per hund.
Address ASA HULL, 150 Nassau St., New York City.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N. Y.

JUST PUBLISHED.

By the Author of "As It Was Written."

Mrs. Peixada.

By Sidney Luska. 1 vol., 16mo. Price, $1.

"The story begins with the very first page, and there is no let up till the end is reached. Mr. Luska has the happy faculty of holding his readers' attention through every page of his books. The plot of Mrs. Peixada is most ingeniously worked out, and the end is a great surprise to the reader."

No. XIII: or, The Story of the Lost Vestal.

A tale of the early Christian days By Emma Marshall. Extra cloth. Price, $1.00.

"Emma Marshall counts her readers by the thousands. Ancient Rome is the scene of the story, and the ancient Romans are the dramatis personæ."

New Volumes in

Cassell's Rainbow Series.

Large 12mo. Illuminated Paper Covers.
PRICE, 25 CENTS PER VOLUME.

Our Sensation Novel

Edited by Justin H. McCarthy, M.P.

Old Fulkerson's Clerk.

By Mrs. J. H. Walworth, author of "The Bar Sinister," "Without Blemish," etc.

New Volumes in

Cassell's National Library.

PRICE, 10 CENTS PER VOLUME.
IN CLOTH, EXTRA, 25 CENTS.

No. 8. Plutarch's Lives of Alexander the Great and Julius Cæsar.

No. 9. The Castle of Otranto.

By Horace Walpole.

Complete Catalogue of Publications sent free to any address on application.

Cassell & Company, Limited,
739 and 741 Broadway, New York.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.60.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for PLATFORM ECHOES
or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,
By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts. IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916, Boston, Mass

JUST PUBLISHED.

A LIBRARY EDITION, IN TWO VOLUMES, OF

FISHER'S OUTLINES

—OF—

UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

BY GEORGE PARK FISHER, D.D., LL.D.,
OF YALE COLLEGE.

"It was a formidable task that the author undertook, and he has performed it in a manner worthy of all praise.... It will be found to contain a survey of the entire field of history admirable for its breadth and insight."—N. Y. NATION.

"..I am astonished that any one man should have been able to write such a work as the "Outlines of Universal History." No living man is more competent to do it than Dr. Fisher. I keep the book on my table for constant reference."—President JAS. McCOSH, LL.D., Princeton College.

2 Vols., 8vo, Cloth, Large Paper, Uncut, Gilt Top, in box, $5.00.

Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co.,
753 and 755 Broadway, New York.

A Harmony of the Four Gospels in English.

According to the Common Version. With Explanatory Notes by EDWARD ROBINSON, D.D. Revised Edition, with Foot Notes from the Revised Version of 1881, and Additional Notes by M. B. RIDDLE, D.D., Professor of New Testament Exegesis in Hartford Theological Seminary. Printed from entirely new plates. 1 vol., 8vo, $1.50 net.

Dr. Robinson's English Harmony, which has long been the standard work of its class, is now revised so as to include the results of the very fruitful studies of the Gospels in recent years. It is of the greatest value to Clergymen, Sunday School teachers and all students of the Gospels.

 For sale by all Booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers,

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,
11 EAST 17TH ST., NEW YORK.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance.....$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims..... 553,171 26
Capital paid in cash..... 1,000,000 00
Net surplus..... 1,358,879 85

Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886. $5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL.....$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund..... 3,711,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims.. 378,483 98
Net Surplus..... 1,227,995 10

Cash Assets.....$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks..... $245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate..... 897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value).....2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)..... 1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)..... 222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand..... 122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886. ..... 97,056 12
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents..... 358,290 30
Real Estate..... 1,272,633 77

Total.....$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., Ass't Sec's.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Modern Housekeeping.

A COMPARISON of views between a Siamese and an American lady might lead one to the conclusion that housekeeping in Siam is a much easier affair, to say the least, than it is in New York.

Take a Siamese kitchen. Setting aside the trifling inconvenience of doing without a chimney, in consequence of which the smoke finds its way out as best it can, the kitchen furniture is as primitive and simple as one can imagine. A little stool, a foot square and six inches high, answers the purpose of a table, and when the food has been prepared on this the family are summoned and arrange themselves on the floor around it, the bowl of rice from which each eats standing beside him on the floor, and being replenished at will from the rice-pot on the fire.

No elaborate dinner service, no napkins, no finger-bowls, no fragile glass, translucent porcelain or crystal, exquisite as a bubble or a breath! No need for the lady of the house to shiver with apprehension when careless hands drop her beloved china or dent her ancestral silver! A few baskets, a wooden platter or two, a kitchen floor with yawning cracks between its bamboo bars, a convenient arrangement for dropping débrts and scraps out of sight, and there you are! The men eat first, after which their wives and children satisfy the cravings of appetite, giving place in turn to the chickens and the dogs.

"There are no washing and ironing days. Many wear no upper garments, only a waist-cloth, which they keep on when they go to bathe, and when they come up out of the water they change it for a dry one. It is then rubbed a little in the water, wrung out and spread in the sun to dry. If it is not stolen they fold it up when it is dry and pat it with their hands, and that is all the ironing they do. The rooms are never cleared out, or swept, or scrubbed."

Housekeeping in Siam, you see, is particularly easy, and can require no great outlay in the way of strength or skill. But what with the dirt, the darkness, the cobwebs, the narrow bills of fare, the pestilential odors, the swarming vermin, and the general discomfort, perhaps we would all prefer the complications and encumbrances of our luxurious civilization.

There is no denying nor evading the fact, that our housekeeping is yearly growing more burdensome, notwithstanding our many labor-saving expedients and contrivances, which all imply a greater expenditure than formerly, of brain, if not of hand. So many dainty courses, served with care and with an eye to beautiful and harmonious effect; so many and such charming devices for pleasing the senses and delighting the taste, all add incomparably to the artistic appearance of the table, and increase, also, the toils and responsibilities of the housekeeper.

To wash the dishes needed imperatively in an ordinary home, at an ordinary meal, is no slight task, and when it is to be done three times a day, and twenty-one times a week, life is weighted rather heavily.

To step from the kitchen and dining room into the regions devoted to exclusively social uses, the reception room, the parlor, the drawing room, the library, (happy Siamese, they have none of these,) we find that the craze for household decoration has made them, as a writer in "Harper's Drawer" pertinently observes, almost "embarrassing to women. We are accumulating so much, our establishments are becoming so complicated, that daily life is an effort. There are too many 'things.' Our houses are getting to be museums. A house now is a library, an art gallery, a bric à brac shop, a furniture warehouse, a crockery store combined. It is a great establishment run for the benefit of servants, plumbers, furnacemen, grocers, tinkers. Regarded in one light it is a very interesting place; and in another it is an eleemosynary institution. We are accustomed to consider it a mark of high civilization, that is to say, the more complicated and overloaded we make our domestic lives, the more civilized we regard ourselves."

Granting that the writer does not exaggerate, admitting that he has stated the case very fairly, and looking by contrast to the sweet simplicity of Siam, still would we be willing to change, or to part with any portion of the beauty and luxury which costs us so much and which is so dear to every feminine soul? Not at all. Though the battle with dust must be waged without intermission, though only by eternal vigilance we keep intact our precious wares, still we willingly pay the price. The danger is, that we shall grow content to be only housekeepers, mere custodians and caretakers, when we ought to be something larger, more generous, more interesting than this. Still it is true while the ages pass that the life is more than meat, and the body than raiment, and that a man's life (and a woman's) consisteth not in the abundance of the things he or she possesseth.

Somewhere there must be a happy medium between New York and Siam; an Arcadian spot where, being in the precise middle of everything, there will be no gravitation downward and no exhausting weight to drain the nervous energy and deplete the vital force.

AUNT MARJORIE.

The Best Wine Last.

SO Cana said: but still the first was good,
For skilful Nature wrought her very best;
Turning the sunshine into hues of blood,
Bringing the ripened clusters to be pressed.

But this the Master brings: His silent eye
Flushes the sunshine of a loitering year;
Be still, O guests, for heaven is passing by!
Bow down, O Nature, for your God is here!

And it is always so. Earth's joys grow dim,
Like waning moons they slowly disappear;
Our heavenly joys fill up the widening brim,
Ever more deep and full, more sweet and clear.

Sweet were His words, when o'er the mountain slope
He breathed His benedictions on the air;
Waking the sleeping angels, Faith and Hope,
Bidding them sing away the grief and care.

And yet, methinks, He speaks in sweeter tones,
Out of the shadow of the nearing cross;
Telling of mansions and the heavenly thrones,
Which soon shall recompense for earthly loss.

The good, the better, and the last the best,
This is the order of the Master's wine;
More than the yesterdays to-days are blest,
And life's to-morrows may be more divine.

And what beyond? Ah! eye hath never seen,
Ear hath not heard the wonders that await;
Earth's lights are paling shadows to the sheen
Of untold glories just within the gate.

We "bid" thee, Master, come and be our guest!
Life's common things Thou turnest into wine;
Our cares, our woes, our bitter tears are blest
If only Thou dost "cause Thy face to shine."

—Henry Burton, in Good Words.

The Street Boys' Party.

NEVER mind where it was, save that it was in New York, and not in a fashionable neighborhood, for the boys came from the tenement houses on either side of the Mission House.

Our boys were naughty; we will not use a stronger term, for we want to be charitable. The fun of boys lies so much in the line of mischief that our boys, being real boys, never fell short in any particular of mischievousness. The door bell was rung, the ash-barrels upset, windows broken, the yard made a receptacle for all sorts of trash to be found in the streets, the girls teased, and a variety of little torments invented as occasion offered.

An interview was held with the ringleader—all boys have a leader, and these boys had one in red-headed, freckled-face Tim. Arrangements were made on the spot to give him and his friends a party, he to give the invitations. Count was made, and thirty boys, in ages ranging from seven to thirteen, were found in three tenement houses. The night came, and Tim was stationed at the door to pass in the invited guests and exclude all others.

It was soon found that Tim's pass-word, "Come on," was the only one by which they could enter. Well, they had a real party; and who could better describe it than one of the guests?

"We had coffee in purty gilt cups—and round balls what yer roll on the floor and pins what yer set up and hit down—and doughnuts—and a smashed up engine—and games what you play with buttons—and pictures and books. You bet, we had lots of things, we did—and we darst could play head over-heels in the kitchen jest as much as we had a mind to, and yer could black yer face if yer wanted to—lots of fellows did off the black inside the stove. An' when the time came for us to go, Tim tole us all to git, and we had to git; but the lady shook hands with us first at the top of the stairs."

It is all true, for, sure enough, some of the daring, restless spirits, stole into the kitchen, and, on its smooth, hard floor, had a regular rough-and-tumble game of heels-over-head, while some, with an eye to decoration, turned up the covers of the range and painted their faces with the soot. Then they had a sort of war-dance, accompanied with almost insane yells. This was the time that Tim had his orders to clear the house, which he did in a very speedy and effective manner.

Well, do you ask what was the result? Why, ash-barrels stand on thei proper ends, the door-bell and window-glass are safe; the yard they have actually swept and garnished of their own accord; the girls they have almost left in peace; and would you believe it?—on Thanksgiving day, who do you think came to the door, but red-headed Tim, in a gilt-banded hat, and in his hand a box containing a little album bound in green velvet, with gilt clasps, and this was a gift from the boys to the representative lady of the house. Wasn't that a triumph? Didn't every fibre of the velvet and grain of the gilt tell the story?

Everything is all right now. With a guard of thirty boys, who will dare to annoy?—From "Lend a Hand."

A Voodoo Queen.

FROM George W. Cable's article on Creole Slave Songs, in the April Century, illustrated by Kemble, we quote the following concerning the famous Marie Laveau: "The worship of Voodoo is paid to a snake kept in a box. The worshippers are not merely a sect, but in some rude, savage way also an order. A man and woman chosen from their own number to be the oracles of the serpent deity are called the king and queen. The queen is the more important of the two, and even in the present dilapidated state of the worship in Louisiana, where the king's office has almost or quite disappeared, the queen is still a person of great note.

"She reigns as long as she continues to live. She comes to power not by inheritance, but by election or its barbarous equivalent. Chosen for such qualities as would give her a natural supremacy, personal attractions among the rest, and ruling over superstitious fears and desires of every fierce and ignoble sort, she wields no trivial influence. I once saw, in her extreme old age, the famed Marie Laveau. Her dwelling was in the quadroon quarter of New Orleans, but a step or two from Congo Square, a small adobe cabin just off the sidewalk, scarcely higher than its close board fence, whose batten gate yielded to the touch and revealed the crazy doors and windows spread wide to the warm air, and one or two tawny faces within, whose expression was divided between a pretense of contemptuous inattention and a frowning resentment of the intrusion. In the centre of a small room whose ancient cypress floor was worn with scrubbing and sprinkled with crumbs of soft brick—a Creole affectation of superior cleanliness—sat, quaking with feebleness in an ill looking old rocking-chair, her body bowed, and her wild, gray witch's tresses hanging about her shriveled, yellow neck, the queen of the Voodoos. Three generations of her children were within the faint beckon of her helpless, waggling wrist and fingers. They said she was over a hundred years old, and there was nothing to cast doubt upon the statement. She had shrunken away from her skin; it was like a turtle's. Yet withal one could hardly help but see that the face, now so withered, had once been handsome and commanding. There was still a faint shadow of departed beauty on the forehead, the spark of an old fire in the sunken, glistening eyes, and a vestige of imperiousness in the fine, slightly aquiline nose, and even about her silent, woe-begone mouth. Her grandson stood by, an uninteresting quadroon between forty and fifty years old, looking strong, empty-minded, and trivial enough; but his mother, her daughter, was also present, a woman of some seventy years, and a most striking and majestic figure. In features, stature, and bearing she was regal. One had but to look on her, impute her brilliancies—too untamable and severe to be called charms or graces—to her mother, and remember what New Orleans was long years ago, to understand how the name of Marie Laveau should have driven itself inextricably into the traditions of the town and the times. Had this visit been postponed a few months it would have been too late. Marie Laveau is dead; Malvina Latour is queen. As she appeared presiding over a Voodoo ceremony on the night of the 23d of June, 1884, she is described as a bright mulattress of about forty-eight, of 'extremely handsome figure,' dignified bearing, and a face indicative of a comparatively high order of intelligence. She wore a neat blue, white-dotted calico gown, and a 'brilliant tignon (turban) gracefully tied.'"

"ATALANTA IN THE SOUTH." By Maud Howe. The scenes of modern life in New Orleans are here grouped around a love story which opens and closes with a tragedy. The book is bright in parts and rather strained in certain lines. It suffers by comparison with the works of Mr. Cable, but has, notwithstanding, a merit of its own in taking up the Creole city as the place of its chief incidents. (Roberts Bros.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

A Word about Words.

Ah me! these terrible tongues of ours!
Are we half aware of their mighty powers?
Do we ever trouble our heads at all
Where the jest may strike or the hint may fall?
The latest chirp of that "little bird,"
That spicy story "you must have heard"—
We jerk them away in our gossip rash,
And somebody's glass, of course, goes smash.
What fames have been blasted and broken,
What pestilent sinks been stirred,
By a word in lightness spoken,
By only an idle word!

A sneer—a shrug—a whisper low—
They are poisoned shafts from an ambushed bow!
Shot by the coward, the fool, the knave,
They pierce the mail of the great and brave,
Vain is the buckler of wisdom or pride
To turn the pitiless point aside;
The lip may curl with a careless smile,
But the heart drips blood—drips blood the while.
Ah me! what hearts have been broken;
What rivers of blood been stirred,
By a word in malice spoken,
By only a bitter word.

A kindly word and a tender tone—
To only God is their virtue known!
They can lift from the dust the abject head,
They can turn a foe to a friend instead;
The heart close-barred with passion and pride
Will fling at their knock its portal wide,
And the hate that blights and the scorn that sears
Will melt in the fountain of childlike tears.
What ice-bound griefs have been broken,
What rivers of love been stirred,
By a word in kindness spoken,
By only a gentle word! —Sunday Magazine.

Nellie Graham's Mistake.

BY LIZZIE C. CRANE.

(Concluded.)

WHEN Aunt Lucy returned from her shopping she found Nellie poring busily over a story book, and supposing that this had been the charm which had kept her at home, called her playfully "a little bookworm," and then dismissed the matter from her mind.

Nellie's mission was not spoken of for many days afterward. Papa and mamma returned from their visit at grandma's. Aunt Lucy left, and nothing of note happened to the household.

One thing troubled our little friend, and this was the remembrance of that day when mamma left home and Aunt Lucy went out shopping. It seemed rather strange to her, too, that mission work had suddenly become so distasteful to her. Yet so it was. The very thought of it had grown almost into a nightmare. As to making confession about the watch, this worried her more and more.

Viewed in the calm light of reflection, the whole affair seemed more like an act of guilt than like one of benevolence. To tell the truth, Nellie felt utterly wretched over it all. Should she go to mamma, and, telling her all, ask her to explain the trouble? No; it would be too childish. Years hence, when she had grown up, and mamma going to find the watch upon her sixteenth birthday should discover it to be missing,—then she would tell her the whole story, and they could laugh about it as a childish folly of long ago.

Poor, troubled, misguided Nellie!

Two days more of apparently smooth sailing and then the storm broke.

It was Friday morning, and Nellie came singing in from school. "No more lessons for two days at least," she exclaimed, as she threw her books down upon a chair with a bang. Then she looked up into mamma's face. Why, what was the matter?

"It is nothing, dear," mamma said, in a quick, nervous way, which showed that her words were intended only to prevent giving alarm to her hearer. "We have had trouble with Bridget. I had hoped that you might be spared the pain of hearing of the unpleasant affair, and yet, perhaps it would be best to tell you after all.

"When your father and I returned from grandma's I went immediately to my bureau drawer, which I had carelessly left unlocked, and, to my horror, found its contents very much disturbed, and your little watch gone. At first I said nothing, thinking that your Aunt Lucy might be able to throw some light upon the subject. Even after receiving a letter from her, saying that she knew nothing about it, I was determined to let it pass. But your father was so annoyed at the affair, that without my knowledge he put the case into the hands of a detective and the watch has been found.

"Do not look so frightened, darling, it was no midnight robber in whose possession it was found, but only a little girl, Bridget's sister, the one who has just come over from Ireland. They discovered it hidden away in her little trunk. And though I am laughed at by all who have had to do with the case, I still maintain that Bridget herself is innocent. The poor thing cries about the kitchen from morn till night, and the whole thing seems to me to be very mysterious.

"The child herself, when questioned, mutters in a frightened way some story about having the watch handed to her by another little girl in the street, and says she hid it away without telling anyone about it because she was 'so scared.' Questioning her closely seems only to confuse her, and we have worried and worried all to no purpose. Bridget declares that the child has not been to our house at all—has been sick ever since her arrival from Ireland, and only been out to take a walk once, and then without going beyond the block where they live.

"But, Nellie dear, forgive me; you are trembling violently. I have been unwise. I have dwelt too long upon the unpleasant tale. Lay your head upon mamma's shoulder, dear, and we will try to forget it all?"

Sitting on mamma's knee, Nellie found courage at last for her confession. Let us not listen to her sobs, nor pause to gaze upon the tears of mortification that pour down her face, while her own words almost choke the little penitent. Suffice it to say that though joy was restored to the two households, and though great tenderness was shown towards the mistakes of the would-be missionary, yet Nellie ever after firmly maintained that if we would do real good in any department in life, we must not disdain either aid or counsel from those more experienced than ourselves.

Living Lunch Baskets.

OF course it is not at all surprising that you should carry your lunch with you when you are going to be away from home all day, but think of an animal doing such a thing!

There is the camel, for instance. Everybody knows that it carries its drinking water with it, but it does more; it carries its lunch too. That hump on the camel's back is not a curvature of the spine, as it may seem, but a mass of fatty material. That hump, in fact, is the camel's lunch basket.

When a well-fed, healthy camel starts out on a journey across the desert, its water pouch is full, and its hump is big. When water fails, the camel has only to draw on its reservoir, and when food is wanting, the hump is called upon.

Not that the camel helps itself to bites of its hump. That would be a decidedly uncomfortable way of getting a meal, and very likely the camel would rather go hungry than do that. In some way the hump is gradually absorbed, and for a long time after the camel has been unable to find anything to eat, it can get along very comfortably on what its hump supplies it with. By-and-by, of course, the hump is used up, and then the camel will starve as quickly as any other animal.

A great deal more like a genuine lunch basket is the bag the pelican carries its food in. The pelican is about as ungainly and odd a bird as can be found, and yet is a very interesting one. It has great webbed feet, short legs, big body, huge wings, and an enormous head.

Its head is mostly bill, and on the under part of the bill is a flabby bag made of tough skin. That bag can stretch and stretch until it can hold an incredible quantity of fish, for it is in that bag that the pelican puts the fish it catches for its food. When the bag is full, the pelican rises heavily from the sea, and with broad sweeps of its great wings flaps slowly to the shore, where it alights and prepares to enjoy the meal it has earned. One by one the still living fish are tossed into the air, and come down head first into the wide-opened mouth of the hungry bird.

Then there are some of the South American monkeys which have curious little lunch baskets in their cheeks. Everybody must have seen monkeys stuffing and stuffing food into their mouths until their cheeks were bulged quite out of shape.

It looks as if the greedy little fellows were merely cramming their mouths full. The truth is, many of the monkeys have queer little pockets in their cheeks into which they can stow enough food for a meal. Nor do the full cheeks interfere at all with the chewing of the monkeys any more than if the pockets were outside instead of inside of the mouth.

But there is a little animal called the pouched rat which has an odder way than this of carrying its food. On each side of its face is a pouch which looks very much like a kid glove finger drawn in at one end. These pouches stick straight out from the face, and can be made to hold a large supply of food.

The cow and deer and sheep and other similar animals have still another way of laying in a supply of food. They bite off grass and leaves and swallow them without chewing at all. That food goes into a special stomach, there to stay until it is wanted. When the animal is ready for it, a ball of food is made up in the first stomach, and sent up into the animal's mouth. That ball is just a mouthful, and the animal can chew it comfortably. After it is chewed and swallowed it goes into the proper stomach, and is digested. Eating in that way is called ruminating.—John R. Coryell, in Harper's Young People.

Never Swear.

1. IT is mean. A boy of high moral standing would almost as soon steal a sheep as swear.

2. It is vulgar—altogether too low for a decent boy.

3. It is cowardly—implying a fear of not being believed or obeyed.

4. It is ungentlemanly. A gentleman, according to Webster, is a genteel man—well-bred, refined. Such a one will no more swear than go into the street to throw mud with a chimney sweep.

5. It is indecent—offensive to delicacy, and extremely unfit for human ears.

6. It is foolish. "Want of decency is want of sense."

7. It is abusive—to the mind which conceives the oath, to the tongue which utters it, and to the person at whom it is aimed.

8. It is venomous—showing a boy's heart to be a nest of vipers; and every time he swears, one of them sticks out from his head.

9. It is contemptible—forfeiting the respect of all the wise and good.

10. It is wicked—violating the Divine law, and provoking the displeasure of Him who will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.

A Visit to Shakespeare's School.

IN 1482, Thomas Jolyffe, a priest, a native of Stratford, and a member of the Guild, gave certain lands and tenements to the Brotherhood of the Holy Cross, to maintain a priest fit to teach grammar freely to all scholars.

There is very little doubt that here, in his boyhood, Shakespeare conned his tasks. The antique appearance of the schoolroom is to a great extent gone, for in the lapse of time many of the old, characteristic features have passed away.

Yet the room still looks hoary and venerable, and impressed me deeply. At the invitation of the Head Master, I listened for a few minutes to the recitations in Greek of a class of stout and sturdy English boys.

The boys in Shakespeare's school when I visited it were lively fellows, full of fun, brimming over with spirits, and somewhat given to skylarking when the master's back was turned. Poor man! he seemed to have a rather hard time of it, in his endeavor to maintain a conversation with me, and at the same time restrain the exuberant feelings of his pupils.—Rev. Albert Danker, in St. Nicholas for April.

Little Heads Together.

BURIED AUTHORS.

1. His were words worth more than gold.
2. His cotton gloves did not last long.
3. He did rake the hay, as commanded.
4. It takes you very long, fellow traveller, to scale those heights.
5. There are many poets of whom we cannot speak.
6. While he rode in the car you were riding in the carriage. EDW.

DOUBLE ACROSTIC.

Primals and finals please to take,
And of them, Rappie, you will make
The friend and foe of all success—
The guide that helps you to progress,
The bane of honest usefulness.

1. Two egotists. 2. A silent assent. 3. Stupid. 4. Custom. 5. A near relative. 6. A band. 7. Radishes. 8. An affirmation. K. M. S.

CHARADE.

The pilot warns—they heed him not—
As by some evil genius cursed
They weigh the anchor, spread the sail
And glide before my favoring first.
But e'er behind the ocean's rim,
The gathering cloud-rack! Louder sings
The gale. "To whole!" is now the cry.
The broad sun dipped afar they spy.
Alas, 'tis vain! from certain doom
That fated crew naught can—my last,
For on the rocks their gallant ship
That night a mangled wreck was cast.
S. H. JACKSON.

Answers to Puzzles of March 10th.

Acrostic.— P-hut.
H-omer.
I-saiah.
L-azarus.
E-drei.
M-alachi.
O-rpah.
N-aphtali.

Charade.—Leap-frog.

Enigma.—A distinguished author.

Correct answers from E. M. Clark, John S. Christie, Rappie Bowne, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh, A. M. M., Russell Van Arsdale.

The "Little Heads" will please send puzzles and answers to COUSIN LOIS, at this office.

A Letter from the West Indies.

NASSAU, NEW PROVIDENCE.

ON leaving a cold and frosty climate, we soon arrive in the sunny South, where everyone can live out of doors, can have rest both of body and mind, of brain and muscle undisturbed by business or politics; all is quiet, for every man under British rule, if he chooses, can sit under his own vine and fig tree and enjoy himself in his own way. For several years it has been my custom to visit some Southern clime, not so much to evade the cold weather as for a change, yet many do leave an inhospitable winter climate to exchange Northern snows for Southern suns.

It was on a chilly and overcast morning in the early part of February that we left Savannah by steamer. We steamed through the yellow waters of the Savannah river and over the bar, and soon were out at sea, where the long, even swells took our ship gently in their arms and rolled her slowly from side to side, so that we could scarcely stand upon our feet. Next morning at sunrise we found ourselves in front of St. Augustine, Florida, where we experienced a perfect summer climate. We remained off in the ocean until about midday, waiting for high tide to cross the bar, when we soon reached St. Augustine. By the time we had taken on some thirty to forty passengers with baggage and freight, the tide had receded too much to leave the port, so the ship remained at the wharf until the next morning, when we started. On crossing the bar we met again the rolling swell, which suited some passengers better than others, although slight sea sickness is good for some people. We steamed on along the Florida coast until the next morning, when we turned eastward to cross the Gulf Stream. The porpoises leaped and darted by the ship's side, and every now and then we passed flying fish, which skipped over the placid waters as swiftly as birds. Early in the afternoon we discovered far in the distance a small speck on the horizon, and were told by the captain that it was one of the great Bahama Islands, which at length we closely approached and sailed along its coral shore until late in the evening.

Early on the following morning I was aroused by hearing strange voices and the thumping of oars. I hastened to look out, and there was Nassau. We were almost at the wharf; a long boat full of colored people was carrying a line to the dock. Here we had all the white town stretched before our gaze for a mile or more along the water front; every house is constructed of the white native stone, so all is white. There was a crowd of people on the wharf awaiting the ship's arrival.

The health officer soon made his appearance, and we were free to go ashore. We found that, like ourselves, nearly all our fellow passengers were going to the Royal Victoria Hotel. This is a first-class house, built of white stone; terms three dollars per day. The Royal Victoria is one of the largest and best appointed hotels in the West Indies, situated on high ground overlooking the sea, built by the British government in 1860 to meet the demands of invalids and others seeking to avail themselves of the peculiar advantages offered by Nassau as a winter residence.

The town was much larger than I expected to see it; but it ought to be a good sized place, for nearly all the people of the island of New Providence live there, and they now number over 13,000. The whole island of New Providence is of coral origin, resembling a form of white limestone. We saw large trees, apparently growing right out of the stones. Of course there is some soil, but precious little. More in the centre of the island in some places the jungles are so thick it would seemingly trouble the smallest animal to squeeze through. The trees are not very tall, but straight as reeds. We greatly wondered how the trees and foliage could survive at all, but all vegetation seems to abound in perfection, at least where it can obtain some little hold in the pores of the rock. This rock does not consist of boulders, but is comparatively smooth upon the surface, with a very slight covering of soil. The atmosphere, which never knows frost, seems to compel vegetation to grow. Unlike the seed in the Parable of the Sower, which fell where there was "no deepness of earth," it does not wither away, but, nourished by what may be fairly called a fertile air, comes to bloom and fruitage.

One is really enchanted in Nassau with the charming effects of color. The foliage is in every shade of green and purple. The oleander may be found in many places, covered with a profusion of red, white, pink and variegated flowers. They grow about thirty feet high, and are always in blossom. It was customary in ancient times to strew the pathway of the hero returning from the battlefield with flowers, but in Nassau flowers grow everywhere, for the hero and the feeble; and the good and the evil, the rich and the poor, have always their pathway strewn with flowers of many colors, by Him who sendeth the rain and the sunshine on the just and the unjust.

The climate of Nassau is one of its chief attractions. As a winter resort it is one of the most eligible and attractive places in the South, especially for a certain class of invalids needing a mild and genial climate. The air is balmy, yet fresh and bracing. The soft trade winds fan gently over the island nearly every day, devoid of the oppressive heat experienced in Cuba, Jamaica, San Domingo, and most of the West India Islands. During my sojourn on this island for three weeks in February, 1878, the temperature ranged from 73 to 78 degrees. It is said to vary only 10 degrees between summer and winter. There is no frost, and the winter months are absolutely free from all epidemic diseases, neither is there any special sickness, save among those who come to be cured. The island is not subject to hurricanes, earthquakes and other dangers usually incident to tropical countries.

The hospitality of the inhabitants is as warm and genial as their clime. Some of the English people invite the hotel guests to visit their families. Even the Governor of the island invited a few of us Americans to call upon him at the palace, and gave us a cordial reception. As a rule they are a church going people, having a good supply of churches of different denominations, both for white and colored people.

G. E. WINANTS.

....The Sophomores of Lafayette College hazed a freshman, for which offence a number of them have been suspended. The other students deserve credit for expressing their views in the following manly resolutions: Whereas, In consequence of the recent hazing and discredit brought upon the college, thereby Resolved, That we, the students of Lafayette College, do most heartily denounce hazing in every form. Resolved, That for the future the students will use their influence to prevent any recurrence of the same.

....According to a statement made at the Unitarian Convention in Philadelphia lately, they have in this country only 360 churches scattered over 24 States.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

In the Senate the debate on the suppressed papers closed, and the Edmunds' resolution censuring the Administration and declaring its right to all papers on file passed the Senate....A secret circular of Grand Master Powderly, threatening to resign his position as the head of the Knights of Labor, was made public....Secretary Manning's condition is still critical ...Jaehne resigned from the County Democracy Committee....Strikes yesterday on the Brooklyn Broadway railroad lines....A coal mine is burning in Tennessee....North Buffalo flour mills were destroyed by fire. Loss $40,000.

MONDAY, 29.—Successors have been appointed to fill the places of Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan, but it is feared that several other Cabinet officers will resign.... The damage done by strikers and rioters in Brussels is very great. At Charleroi the troops fired into the mob, killing and wounding a large number....Prince Alexander wants his troops to declare him King of United Bulgaria....The new Spirit bill in the German Reichstag is engaging close attention....The condition of Secretary Manning still continues to be critical in the extreme, and but little hope is entertained of his recovery....One train was moved out of East St. Louis in spite of the strikers. Rioters were arrested in Kansas. The strike in the Southwest has been ordered off; at a conference between Messrs. Gould and Powderly arbitration was agreed upon .. There is a threatened lockout at Lynn, Mass....A shipwrecked crew were rescued from the ship "Isernogora" at Manosquan, N. J....Alderman Jaehne is to resign the office of Vice-President of the Board of Aldermen....The strike among the street cars of Brooklyn is closed....Archbishop Trench, of England, died yesterday.

TUESDAY, 30.—Misunderstanding between Mr. Powderly and Mr. Gould. Strike continued....Secretary Manning a little better, numbness of lower part of right side of his body continues and he is very weak.... Steinitz wins the chess match for championship of the world... Proposed to examine whether the Legislature at Albany was bribed to pass Broadway R.R. bill....Mr. Gladstone yesterday announced that his Irish Government bill would be introduced April 8, the budget April 12, and Irish land bill April 15 ...De Lesseps confident of completion of Panama Canal in three years.... Greece said to be preparing for war.

LADIES will serve their own interests by obtaining the Spring number, just published, of Ridley's Fashion Magazine. It costs 15 cents a number, or 50 cents a year for four numbers. One hundred and twenty of the one hundred and forty-three pages are occupied with illustrations of the designs and form of the various articles the firm has in stock. We have submitted it to competent judges and the words which fell on our ears as the leaves were turned were: "Really pretty, handsome, very genteel, elegant." The ladies and misses suits and wraps are in excellent taste and decidedly handsome. There are specimens of really elegant designs in embroidered flannels, upholstery goods, underwear, worsted goods, fringes, edgings and flounces, in curtains, in lace goods, dress and cloak trimmings, and in a considerable variety of jewelry, cloak clasps, artificial flowers, etc. Besides these are inviting pictures of napkins, towelling, table cloths, tidies, piano covers and table covers. The remaining twenty pages are given up to an interesting variety of stories, verses, and articles on household affairs. The house we understand does much business on orders based upon the information given in this pamphlet.

A Grand and Brilliant Chorus.

J. Fischer & Bro., No. 7 Bible House, New York, have just published the beautiful Chorus, "Holy, Holy is the Lord." Composed by F. C. Goeb. It contains some delightful Solos and Duets for Soprano and Tenor, with a pleasing accompaniment for Organ or Orchestra. May be used for festivals of rejoicing, religious conventions, sacred concerts, etc. Price, 60 cents.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, March 27, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 19,253 pks.; exports 118 pks.

Old butter is in reduced stock here and is going out clean, and for the best qualities of it more price is made. New make butter is arriving sparingly and of very irregular quality, and choice makes sell on arrival at 28a30c., while poor tubs go slowly at 22a26c. Finest creamery makes of new butter brought 32a34c., and it looks now as though there would be a sharp demand for new spring make butter the next thirty days. We quote:

Old butter, good to fine	18	@24
do fair to good	13	@15
do common to fair	8	@12
New butter, fancy creamery	33	@35
do do dairy	28	@30
do ordinary dairy	20	@25
do poor to common	12	@18

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 13,624 boxes; exports 11,516 boxes.

All kinds of cheese were in good demand. Exporters took freely of fine to fancy factories at 10a10½c., and in few cases 10¾a11c. was paid. The bulk of cheese arriving this week were skims, which sold at 2a7c. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	10½	@11
" " white "	10	@10½
Good early useful cheese	8½	@ 9½
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 4

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 20,654 bbls. and 15,934 cases.

Market opened Monday at 12½c., and on Wednesday and Thursday advanced to 14a14½c. Friday trade was dull, and to-day, Saturday, best marks were freely offered at 13½a13¾c. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz.	13¾	@14
Southern and Western, per doz.	13	@13½

MAPLE SUGAR.—There is only a limited demand, and with increasing receipts lower prices must follow. We quote:

Choice new sugar	9	@10
Dark sugar	7	@ 8
Syrup, per gallon can	——	@75

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthy livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

A VIOLENT COUGH CONTINUED through the winter often brings Consumption in the spring. Soothe and tone the irritated and weakened lungs with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, and the Cough yields and the danger disappears. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Mellin's Food.

Aside from the high endorsements of some of the most eminent physicians at home and abroad, our own experience with Mellin's Food has been in every way satisfactory. We are convinced it is a perfect substitute for mothers' milk, and therefore recommend it heartily.

"The Care and Feeding of Infants" is the title of a little book published by Messrs. Dolliber, Goodale & Co., of Boston, Mass., which every mother should send for and carefully read. It contains a large amount of valuable information on the care of infants, besides a full explanation of the principles upon which Mellin's Food is made. The book will be sent free to any address upon receipt of postal.

The address of Messrs. Z. De Forest Ely & Co., whose advertisement of reliable seeds was published on page 16 last week, was omitted through oversight, and is Philadelphia, Pa. We cordially recommend this popular seed house, believing that all goods purchased of them will give entire satisfaction. Send for a copy of their catalogue.

We desire to call the attention of such of our readers as may be contemplating housekeeping to the house of Charles L. Hadley, Cooper Institute, New York city. This firm have constantly on hand full lines of white and decorated French china and English porcelain Dinner, Tea, and Chamber sets, as well as all housefurnishing goods, which they offer at popular prices. They make a specialty of sending their goods throughout the country on receipt of P. O Money Order or Draft, or by Express, C. O. D. Illustrated Catalogue and price list free on application.

CORRY, PA., April 16, 1884.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.:—Reflector gives universal satisfaction. I do not hesitate to say that it is the best Reflector I ever saw. It lights our whole audience room perfectly without the aid of side or wall burners; we do not need one even at the pulpit.
Yours, W. N. SLOAN,
Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. It is prepared with the greatest skill and care, under the direction of the men who originated it. Hence Hood's Sarsaparilla may be depended upon as strictly pure, honest, and reliable.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are known to be the safest, surest, and best purgative medicine ever offered to the public. They are mild yet certain in their effects, give tone and strength to the stomach, and keep the system in a perfectly healthy condition.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

MARRIAGES.

BELNE—WILSON.—At the residence of the bride's parents, March 17, by Gerrit Huyser, pastor of the Fairview Reformed Church, Mr J. Frank Belne, of Fairview, to Miss Lulu Wilson, of Fairview Township. All of Fulton Co., Ill.

CAMPBELL—WELLER.—At the home of the bride's parents, Schenectady, N. Y., March 24, at 2 P.M., by the Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, Mr. George Dudley Campbell to Miss Hattie E. Weller, both of Schenectady.

EDWARDS—MILLER.—At the home of the bride, March 25, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, Mr. Wygant Edwards and Miss Lillie Miller, all of Gardiner, N. Y.

ORLOP—KNAEDLER.—At Niskayuna, N. Y., on Wednesday, March 17, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, Sherman Orlop to Katie Knaedler, both of Watervliet, N. Y.

SHARP—RAMSEY.—At Lebanon, N. J., March 25, by Rev. Wm. E. Davis, Mr. David B. Sharp to Mrs. Keturah Ramsey, both of Lebanon, N. J.

WOODRUFF—BURRELL.—At Lebanon, N. J., at the residence of Mr. Austin Clark, on the 7th of March, by Rev. Wm. E. Davis, Mr. Robert Woodruff, of Westfield, N. J., to Miss Lizzie Burrell, of High Bridge, N. J.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

VAN WYCK.—At his residence, near Low Point, N. Y., on the Hudson, March 1, Henry Van Wyck, of pneumonia, in the 83d year of his age, son of the late General Abm. Van Wyck.

WYNKOOP.—At Rhinebeck, March 25, Rachel H. Wynkoop, aged 73 years.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY will meet on the third Tuesday of April, at 7.30 P.M., in the Madison Avenue Reformed Church of Albany. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion are to be sent to the Rev. A. M. Arcularius, New Baltimore, ten days before the meeting.
J. LANSING PEARSE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in stated session in the First Church of Hackensack on the third Tuesday in April, (20th), at 10 o'clock. Reports on the State of Religion must be sent to Rev. J. H. Suydam, (Chairman), ten days before the meeting. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting. P. V. VAN BUSKIRK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M., in the Second Church of Hudson City. The yearly reports of the churches are to be sent to Rev. W. R. Duryee, 239 Pacific avenue, Jersey City.
WM. RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA will meet in regular spring session in the Reformed Church of Syracuse, N. Y., on Tuesday, April 6th, at 7.30 P.M. Consistorial records should be presented.
C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated spring session in the Reformed Church of Farmer Village, the third Tuesday (20th) of April, at 2.30 P.M. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion, with full statistics, are to be sent ten days previous to the Rev. Peter De Bruyn, chairman of committee. Vacant churches and ministers without charge are required to report at this session. The Consistorial Books of Minutes from churches are to be presented and Classical dues are to be paid in. Applications of feeble churches for aid from the Board of Domestic Missions are to be sent ten days previous to Rev. P. De Bruyn, Chairman of Committee on Church Extension. J. WHITBECK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Reformed Church of Leeds on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Public services at 2 o'clock P.M. Consistorial records must be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting, and the annual reports of the churches sent to Rev. E. N. Sebring ten days previous to the meeting. B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF HUDSON will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Gallatin, the third Tuesday in April, at 10 o'clock A.M. The usual sermon will be preached at 10.30 A.M. Consistories are urged to observe the rule to send their statistical table and report to the address of the Stated Clerk at least ten days previous to this meeting.
T. S. DUSINBERRE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ILLINOIS will meet in regular session in the Church of Irving Park, on the second Tuesday (13th) of April, at 2 P.M. Classical dues to be paid. J. S. JORALMON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF IOWA will convene in regular spring session in the American Reformed Church, Orange City, Iowa, on Tuesday, April 13th, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. The Rev. J. W. Warnshius will preach the sermon on the evening of the first day. Minutes of consistories must be presented and Classical dues paid at this session. Reports of consistories must be sent to the Rev. J. A. De Spelder, Orange City, Iowa, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion. Requests for appropriations from the Board of Domestic Missions to be sent to the Rev. A. Buursma, of Orange City, Iowa. The Rev. F. Schaeffer, from the German Reformed Church, Neosho, Mo., and pastor-elect of Monroe, Iowa, Reformed Church, will be examined at this session.
L. DYKSTRA, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON will meet in stated session, April 13th, at 11 A.M., in the Church of Rosendale. Sermon by Rev. I. B Church. The Chairman of the Committee on the State of Religion is D. B. Wyckoff. Consistories will please present their minutes of sessions.
DEWITT B. WYCKOFF, S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the First Reformed Church of Jamaica, on Tuesday, the 20th day of April, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented. Consistorial reports to be sent to the Rev. Wm. H. DeHart, Chairman of the Committee on State of Religion, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet (D. V.) in stated session in the Reformed church at New Lots, on Tuesday, April 20th, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial reports must be sent to Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, East New York, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting.
R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE regular spring meeting of the Classis of Michigan will be held April 13th, in South Bend, Ind., commencing at 7 P.M. Church records and Classical dues will be called for at this session.
A. PAIGE PEEKE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONMOUTH will meet in stated session in the Reformed church at Holmdel, on Tuesday, the 13th day of April, 1886, at 3 o'clock P.M. The sermon will be preached on the evening of that day by the Rev. Theo. W. Wells, and an essay read by Rev. Charles D. Buck, D.D., on the Principles and Modes of Systematic Beneficence. Consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days before the meeting of Classis to the Rev. Elias Mead, Keyport, N. J., and all Classical dues should be paid.
S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY will meet in ordinary session in the Reformed Church of St. Johnsville, on Monday evening, April 19th, at 7.30 o'clock. Reports of consistories are to be sent to Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., at least ten days before the meeting. A. J. HAGEMAN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK will meet in stated session on Tuesday, April 13th, at 10 o'clock, in the Reformed Church of Franklin. Train leaves on N. Y. L. E. & W. R. R. at 9.05 A.M.
HENRY VEHSLAGE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session in the Reformed Church of Bound Brook, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M. The reports on the State of Religion will be sent to Rev. Alex. McWilliam, East Millstone, ten days before the meeting of Classis. E. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in stated session on the third Tuesday (the 20th) of April, in the lecture-room of the church, 5th av. and 29th st., at 10 o'clock A.M. All consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. G. H. Smyth, Chairman of Committee on the State of Religion, 127 East 127th street, and all applications for aid to Rev. Oliver H. Walser, Chairman of Committee on Recommendations, 131 East 86th street, at least ten days before such meeting of Classis.
OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C. pro tem.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in regular spring session in the Church of Montgomery, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 2 P.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. F. S. Schenck, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, ten days before meeting.
R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in stated session on the first Tuesday (6th) of April in the Reformed Church of Boardville, at 10.30 A.M. Rev. J. Russell Verbrycke is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days before the meeting.
S. T. SEARLE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in the church at Neshanic, N. J., April 20th, at 11 o'clock A.M. Delegates from Philadelphia leave 9th and Green, Bound Brook line, at 7.30 A.M. At Bound Brook change to Central R. R., and at Somerville to South Branch, R. R. Consistorial reports will be sent ten days previous to meeting to Rev. Samuel Streng, Churchville, Bucks Co., Pa.
W. B. VOORHEES, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Poughkeepsie on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. J. E. Lyall, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, at least two weeks before the meeting. A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will meet in stated spring session on the second Tuesday, the 13th of April, 1886, in the Reformed Church of North Branch, at 10.30 A.M. Statistical reports will be sent to Rev. Marion T. Conklin, White House, ten days before. Consistorial records will be laid before Classis, and Classical dues will be paid.
JOHN. F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA has made the following arrangements for the installation of Rev. Edward A. McCullom, at Schuylerville, on April 7th: Sermon, Rev. J. Webster Bailey, sec., Rev. Geo. I. Taylor; charge to pastor, Rev. Dr. Beardslee, sec., Rev. J. L. Southard; charge to people, Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman (by special request), sec, Rev. Theo. Shafer. J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in stated session in the First Reformed Church of Schenectady, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports are to be sent to the Rev. Robert Doig, Scotia, N. Y., at least ten days before the meeting. C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE will meet in stated session at Cobleskill, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 11 A.M. Classical dues must be paid at that time. Rev. D. K. Van Doren, of Middleburgh, N. Y., is the Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom reports on the State of Religion should be sent at least ten days prior to the meeting. Consistorial records must be presented at this meeting.
D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in stated session on the second Tuesday (13th) of April at 11 o'clock A.M., in the Reformed Church of Plattekill. Rev. W. A. Wurts is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom Consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days previous to the meeting. Consistorial minutes are to be presented at this meeting. J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—Regular meeting Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M., in the Church of Greenburgh (Elmsford). Sermon by Rev. Henry De Vries. Consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. P. A. Wessels, Neperan, N. Y., before April 10th. Applications to Board of Domestic Missions to Rev. Dr. Todd, Tarrytown. Annual reports of all ministers, and elders' books are to be presented at this meeting. CHAS. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

THE address of the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D, of Nyack, N. Y., will be No. 1517 North 10th street, Philadelphia Pa., after April 1st.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, three bottles of this medicine, have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendal T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

By Taking

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light without pain. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The Best Instruction Books.

Richardson's New Method for the Pianoforte

The fame and sale of this celebrated instruction book promise to be permanent. Having the field to itself, as the only first-class method, for its first few years, it has not suffered from the publication of other and really good instructors, but continues to sell very largely.
It is the most correct book of its class, having been many times revised. It has also been repeatedly enlarged, and is used by a multitude of teachers in all parts of the country. Price $3 00.

Send for Ditson & Co.'s large list of Easter Music: Carols, Anthems, Quartets, &c.

Clarke's New Method for Reed Organ, ($2.50) continues to be a well approved and favorite method, and contains good instructions, and much fine music. Other, cheaper and smaller, but reliable methods are, Johnson's Parlor Organ Instruction Book [$1.50]; Bellak's Method for Organ [$1] and Wunner's Ideal Method for Cabinet Organ [75 cts.]

LAKME, the new, brilliant and popular opera, mailed for $1.60 paper, or $2.00 cloth.

Remember our popular books. MINSTREL SONGS [$2], WAR SONGS [50 cts.] and COLLEGE SONGS [50 cts.] They sell everywhere, and please everybody.

Remember that any book will be mailed, postfree, for Retail Price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.
AN EASTER EXERCISE.
By J. E. HALL.
This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.
16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.
WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)
A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."
Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.
PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

The Church.

Not Lost.

THE star is not extinguished when it sets
Upon the dull horizon; it but goes
To shine in other skies, then re-appear
In ours, as fresh as when it first arose.

The river is not lost when o'er the rock
It pours its flood into the abyss below;
Its scattered force re-gathering from the shock,
It hastens onward, with yet fuller flow.

The bright sun dies not when the shadowing orb
Of the eclipsing moon obscures its ray;
It still is shining on, and soon to us
Will burst undimmed into the joy of day.

The lily dies not when both flower and leaf
Fade, and are strewed upon the chill sad ground;
Gone down for shelter to its mother earth,
'Twill rise, re-bloom, and shed its fragrance round.
. . . . . .

Thus nothing dies, or only dies to live;
Star, stream, sun, flower, the dew-drop, and the gold;
Each goodly thing, instinct with buoyant hope
Hastes to put on its purer, finer mould.

Thus in the quiet joy of kindly trust,
We bid each parting saint a brief farewell.
Weeping, yet smiling, we commit their dust
To the safe keeping of the silent cell.

—Horatius Bonar, D.D.

Revival Notes.

CHEERING notes of revival are coming to us from many directions. Just now in New York there is unusual religious activity. Probably there are more continuous special services being held in New York to day than at any other period for many years past. In some of the churches there is a deepening work of grace, and many are being brought to Christ. It is quite remarkable that so conservative a body as the old (Dutch) Reformed Church should be in the front rank of churches in their efforts to bring the Gospel in a popular way to the people. It has been our pleasure for three weeks past to hold Bible reading services in the afternoon, and preaching services in the evening, in that most stately edifice on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street. Notwithstanding the exceedingly unpropitious weather during each week, the congregations were large and attentive; and during each week they rapidly increased, until the house, which is one of the most spacious in New York, was comfortably filled both afternoon and evening. The services were entered into most heartily by all. We have reason to believe that great spiritual quickening has been the result among Christians, and not a few striking conversions have occurred.

Similar meetings to these are being held under the leadership of pastors and outside helpers in the other churches.

A note from Rev. Mr. Sewall, of Williamstown, Mass., whom we assisted in a week of evangelistic services, brings most delightful good-cheer. Nearly one hundred persons have come forward in the Congregational church in that village, confessing Christ and knocking at the door of the church. This does not include many who are coming forward in the Methodist church. Mr. Sewall reports many heads of families and old persons who have stood out for many years against the Gospel, and speaks of great and wonderful quickening and new experiences of power amongst his own people.

A note from our good brother, Geo. C. Needham, now at work in Charlottesville, Virginia, reports a great and remarkable work in Lynchburg. "Great things day and night in this place; no building large enough. I preached five times yesterday, while Mrs. Needham took two overflows to meet the demand. We have five services daily. The Bible readings have gotten hold in these regions. Daily services at the University, in addition to services in the town."

Judging from letters from pastors all over the land, asking for help of us and other evangelists, we cannot but believe that the Spirit of God is coming nigh to our land in unusual power, challenging us to faith and re-doubled activity. We devoutly trust that our brethren in the ministry will hold on and wait upon the Lord until the clouds which overhang our churches burst upon us, and flood us with a heavenly rain.

A letter just opened says: "There is a sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees." This, then, is the time to "fetch a compass" and gain a great victory for the Lord. Courage, brethren, keep your eyes toward the hills whence cometh your help. Call upon God and go forward. The Lord is on the giving hand, and those who have faith to put in the sickle will reap abundantly from the fields that are now white to the harvest.—Words and Weapons.

THERE are those who are constantly saying that Christianity has lost its power; that we never hear of any old-time conviction and conversion; that Christians do not now feel themselves called upon to make sacrifices, such as they did in times past, for conscience's sake and for God. We are glad to be able to give to such charges flat denial; for we are constantly witnessing the work of the Spirit in a most marked and wonderful degree, both in the conviction and in the conversion of men, old and young. That the Spirit of God, working in the hearts of His people, does bring about illustrious examples of self-sacrifice is also true. We have in mind two men, who, within a few months, have become Christians, one of them, at the time of his conversion, occupying a conspicuous and lucrative position upon the staff of one of our largest daily papers, bringing him an income of from three to four thousand dollars a year. The other a man, who, for years, having spent his life in the sporting world, had attained among his class an enviable reputation, and whose earnings were from seventy-five to one hundred dollars a week. For conscience's sake and for God, the first one laid aside his position, because he found it inconsistent with his allegiance to Christ to hold it, and has taken a position at probably fifteen dollars a week; and this he has done gladly. The other in giving up his old sporting life, with his large income, is to-day in a day-laborer's place, earning scarcely a dollar a day. These are not fanciful cases, but have come under our own pastoral eye, and we thank God for them. For, as a friend has said, they give our own faith a great uplift. No doubt there are thousands of just such cases, did the Church and the world know them; but it is a characteristic of this kind of consecration modestly to hide itself from the eyes of the world.—Words and Weapons.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

Lesson 2, Second Quarter.

M. John's Testimony.....John 1: 19-34.
T. The First Disciples.....John 1: 35-51.
W. The Paschal Lamb.....Exodus 12: 1-14.
T. The Lamb without Blemish.....1 Peter 1: 18-25.
F. Leaving All to Follow Christ.....Luke 5: 27-39.
S. Taking Up the Cross.....Mark 8: 27-38.
S. Unconditional Following.....Luke 9: 51-62.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

April 11th.—"The First Disciples."—John 1: 35-51.

Golden Text.—"The two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus."—John 1: 37.

Central Truth.—"I know my sheep, and am known of mine."—John 10: 14.

INTRODUCTION.

THE writer of this Gospel places John the Baptist in his true position as forming the connection between the Old Testament and the New. His work was not simply to proclaim the coming of the Messiah, but to designate Him according to signs expressly named by the Spirit. Immediately following our last lesson we have the record of an interview between John and the messengers of the authorities at Jerusalem. He distinctly disavows any claim to prominence for his own sake, and tells of the greater than he who should come after him, but be preferred before him. While thus placing himself in the right light before the Jews, John was preparing their minds for a more explicit declaration concerning Jesus. The time of temptation in the wilderness had passed and Jesus was even then coming toward John to be officially declared as the Messiah. The next day after this interview with the representatives of the Pharisees, Jesus made His appearance, walking by Himself. John the Baptist saw Him and was impelled to declare, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," and to add to this declaration the signs by which he had known his Master. The announcement appears to have made no impression upon the multitude, but among John's hearers were some who had attached themselves more closely to the prophet, and to whom doubtless he made more definite and fuller statements. The next day, early in the day, if we accept the theory that John employs the Roman notation of time, the Baptist was standing upon the banks of the Jordan with two of his disciples, when Jesus again appeared. Again the mysterious words were uttered, "Behold the Lamb of God," and this time not in vain, for the hearers of the words became immediately the followers of the Lamb. This beginning of discipleship has great interest for all those who have believed on this same Jesus because of the testimony of these pioneers in the Christian faith.

THE LESSON.

I. THE TRUTH HEARD.—VS. 35, 36.

V. 35.—"John stood, and two of his disciples." In one sense the entire nation had become disciples of the Baptist, but he appears to have gathered about him as personal friends and pupils some of the nobler sort who were waiting for the consolation of Israel. Among these disciples were found a few young men from Galilee who, with the ardor of youth and the intensity of the Galilean character, had attached themselves to the prophet as "Messiah's Messenger."

V. 36.—"Behold the Lamb of God." It is worthy of especial note that this first proclamation of the Messiah had reference to suffering and atonement. It would have been more in accord with the popular expectation if John had proclaimed Him King of Israel, but He becomes King only to those for whom He has suffered as Lamb, and who accept His Cross as their hope.

II. THE TRUTH OBEYED.—VS. 37-40.

V. 37.—"The two disciples heard him speak." It seems quite probable that they were alone with the Baptist when he made this second announcement. What other instruction they had received in private we do not know, but they were evidently prepared to accept Jesus as their Master, and to cast in their lot with Him. "They followed Jesus." While this expression literally describes their walking after Him, still it is a significant description of their whole course of discipleship, "following on to know the Lord."

V. 38.—"Jesus turned and saw them following." His sensitive spirit recognized the approach of souls already in sympathy with Him, and He turned to welcome and encourage them. "What seek ye?" This first public utterance of the Messiah was a cordial invitation to the seekers to lay their secret thoughts open before Him. He would have them and those who to-day are following Him free in confiding the wishes and troubles of their hearts to Him. "Rabbi, where dwellest thou?" This was not a question of curiosity, but implied a desire to share His dwelling, to become attached to Him as Rabbi, and so to come under His influence and teaching.

V. 39.—"He saith unto them, Come and see." He knew the hearts that beat high with strange expectation within the breasts of these two young men, and He welcomed them cordially into His companionship. "They came and saw where he dwelt." We wonder where Jesus led these new-found friends. Perhaps he had found a temporary home with some humble family in Jerusalem, or possibly a cave in the hills sheltered David's son as it had sheltered David himself. "They abode with him that day, for it was about the tenth hour." According to the Jewish reckoning this was late in the afternoon; but according to the Roman method it was in the forenoon. It seems quite probable that we are to understand the earlier hour to be designated.

V. 40.—"One of the two....was Andrew." The most natural inference from the omission of the name of the second is that the writer refers to himself, and with characteristic modesty fails to mention his own name. The entire Gospel, while suggesting the testimony of an eye-witness, never makes the author prominent, except by implication.

III. THE TRUTH PROCLAIMED.—VS. 41-51.

V. 41.—In this and the following verses we have an account of the first evangelical work undertaken by the disciples of Jesus. "He first findeth his own brother Simon." We have but little information about the work of Andrew in the Apostolate, but if he only brought Simon to Christ his usefulness was very great. "We have found the Messiah." The confidence of this first utterance suggests the deep impression made upon him by his brief interview with Jesus.

V. 42.—"Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas." Whenever in the Bible we find God changing the name of a man we are sure that he is thus designated for an important position in the history of God's work. Cephas is the original of which Peter is the Greek equivalent, both words meaning a stone, but not a rock. It is quite probable that while Andrew was seeking Simon, John was bringing his brother James to the Lord.

V. 43.—"The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee." The tone of the narrative indicates that the writer was in the company of Jesus on this journey, in fact we are warranted in thinking of Jesus as travelling with the two pair of brothers, and unfolding to them the truth He came to teach. "Findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me." Philip was a neighbor and probably acquaintance of the rest, so that these early disciples found themselves bound together by many sympathies.

V. 45.—"Philip findeth Nathanael." This is probably the Bartholemew who is mentioned with Philip in the list of the Apostles. We may imagine him to have been the brother of Philip.

V. 46.—"Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" The poor reputation of the village of Nazareth was a stumbling block in the way of Nathanael, but Philip meets the prejudice wisely, "Come and see." A personal interview had satisfied himself and companions, and he only wished his brother or friend to make a similar test.

V. 47.—"Behold an Israelite indeed." Jesus, knowing the difficulty in the mind of this new comer, presented immediately a conclusive proof of His divinity by reading and announcing his character.

V. 48.—"Whence knowest thou me?" Nathanael was so overwhelmed by this declaration that he does not question the accuracy of the description. Besides, he knew that he was honestly seeking to serve God. His wonder was still further increased by the reply of Jesus, "When thou wast under the fig tree I saw thee."

V. 49.—Nathanael knew by these words that his most private acts and secret thoughts were known to Him with whom he had to do, and he added his faith and testimony to that of the other believers. "Thou art the Son of God." In this first chapter we have the Divine mission and nature, and atoning work of Jesus recognized and declared, not by Himself, but by those in whom He had implanted a living faith.

Vs. 50, 51.—"Thou shalt see greater things than these." "To him that hath shall be given." The disciples, as the daily witnesses of His wonderful works, and the constant hearers of His words of life, saw the communication between heaven and earth, of which Jacob had dreamed, an accomplished fact.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. All teachers should point their pupils to Christ.
2. All scholars should follow after Christ.
3. Christ welcomes all who seek Him sincerely.
4. To be His disciples, we must abide with Him.
5. Strive to bring your dearest friends to Christ.
6. Jesus knows the hearts of all His followers.
7. Jesus has opened heaven for us.
8. "COME AND SEE."

The Truth about It.

"SPRING," sang the poet, "budding Spring."
Alas! the boughs were bare;
He was himself the one green thing,
For ice lay everywhere.

"Hail, Spring, with breezes soft and sweet."
The Spring returned his hail;
There came a shower of snow and sleet
Upon a wintry gale.

"Sing, merry birds, in bush and tree."
He read the almanac;
The birds were wiser far than he,
And did not hurry back.

"Spring, gentle"—here he ceased to sing.
Let the sad truth be told:
The while he sang of balmy Spring,
He caught an awful cold.

—Mrs. M. P. Handy, in The Century (Bric-à-Brac.)

Two Blind Men.

FROM THE GERMAN.

THERE were once in Rome two blind men; one of whom cried in the streets of the city, "He is helped whom God helps." The other, on the contrary cried, "He is helped whom the king helps." This they did every day, and the emperor heard it so often, that he had a loaf of bread baked and filled with gold pieces.

This gold-filled loaf he sent to the blind man who appealed to the emperor's help. When he felt the heavy weight of the bread, he sold it to the other beggar as soon as he met him. The blind man who bought the bread, carried it home. When he had broken it and found the gold, he thanked God and from that day ceased to beg. But the other, continuing to beg through the city, the emperor summoned him to his presence, and asked him, "What hast thou done with the loaf that I lately sent you!"

"I sold it to my friend because it was heavy and did not seem well risen."

Then the emperor said, "Truly he whom God helps is helped indeed," and turned the blind man from him.—S. A. H., in The Congregationalist.

How an Alphabet Is Developed.

SUPPOSE that some old nation of Asia, after having for ages drawn an ox when they wished to recall an ox, began at last to draw the picture of an ox also whenever it was needful to write about plowing. Then instead of an ox it would convey an idea relating to an ox, and would be what is called a symbol. After a while some one would say to himself: What is the use of drawing all of the ox when the head alone, which everyone will know from its shape and its horns, gives just the same thought? Now suppose this ox-head gradually gets to mean the sound of ox in all words of the language wherein that syllable occurs, as in the name of the river Ox-us. Then the ox-head would appear in words having nothing whatever to do with cattle or plowing. Then it is called a piece of sound-writing, because it does not recall a certain given thing, but a sound. Sound-writing is thus an improved kind of picture-writing. You all know sound-writing, and have probably composed sentences in it, but you know it under another name. Hardly a magazine for young people is printed in which you will not find rebuses. Well, many rebuses are nothing but sound-writings. And many, many thousand years ago our ancestors had no other kind of writing.

And the next step onward from sound-writing was syllable writing. Remember that people who had reached that stage thought of a sign or symbol as representing one syllable at the least. Suppose the ox-head was called aleph. It would soon be found more convenient to employ it in all words where there was the sound or syllable of al. And this was the process with as many other letters as there were in such early writing. We will call this the syllabary stage, because signs stood for syllables, and so distinguish it from the alphabet that came later.

The next advance would be to take the little picture for the sound a alone, and thus begin to use a real alphabet.—From "Wonders of the Alphabet," by Henry Eckford, in St. Nicholas for April.

THE longer I live, the more I am assured that the business of life is to understand the Lord Christ. Nothing else is to be called the business of life at all. I am extreme, you may think; but this is liberty and life to me—to know Christ.—G. Macdonald.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Unanimous Approval of Medical Staff.

Dr. T. G. COMSTOCK, Physician at Good Samaritan Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., says: "For years we have used it in this hospital, in dyspepsia and nervous diseases, and as a drink during the decline and in the convalescence of lingering fevers. It has the unanimous approval of our medical staff."

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime.—The friends of persons who have been restored from confirmed Consumption by the use of this original preparation, and the grateful parties themselves, have, by recommending it and acknowledging its wonderful efficacy, given the article a vast popularity in New England. The Cod-Liver Oil is in this combination robbed of its unpleasant taste, and rendered doubly effective in being coupled with Lime, which is itself a restorative principle, supplying nature with just the assistance required to heal and restore the diseased Lungs. A. B. WILBOR, Boston, proprietor. Sold by all druggists.

NEW PERPETUAL FLOWERING FUCHSIA "STORM KING"

This new Double Perpetual-Flowering Weeping Fuchsia, "Storm King," is the grandest plant novelty in many years. It is always in bloom, often as many as 200 buds and blossoms on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before they expand are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; and when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a sight which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid, 50 cts. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack secure from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. FORM CLUBS for this grand Fuchsia. See the low price at which they can be secured by the dozen.

Our new Double White Perpetual-Flowering Violet, "Swanley White," is the queen of fragrant flowers. It produces in great number large pure white double blossoms of great beauty and fragrance. A splendid winter bloomer and desirable for pot or open ground culture. Strong plants, which are now budded and blooming, by mail 30 cts. each, 3 for 60 cts., 12 for $2.00.

Our new Imperial German Pansies have created a sensation and are the floral wonder of the times. Flowers of enormous size, with colors and markings entirely new and of marvelous beauty (see catalogue). They bloom from May to December; always large and profuse through the dry, hot weather of Summer when other sorts fail. Mixed seed of over 50 distinct colors, 25 cts. per paper. We have 40 distinct colors separate, such as pure white, black, yellow, blue, spotted, etc., at 25 cts. per paper.

We also send 12 large flowering bulbs of Double Pearl Tuberoses for $1.00; 5 fine hardy Lilies, including Auratum, 75 cts.; 12 choice mixed Gladiolus, 50 cts.; 4 beautiful Tea Roses—white, red, yellow and pink, 50 cts.; 4 Chrysanthemums or 4 Carnations, 50 cts. See our large beautiful catalogue, free to all, for other special offers. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly as represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our great business, extending to all parts of the world. Orders can be sent at once.

SEEDS, BULBS and PLANTS.—Our large, beautifully illustrated catalogue sent free to all who apply. New and beautiful novelties in Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Gladiolus, Lilies, Amaryllis, Roses, Carnations, Geraniums, Clematis, etc. Preserve this advertisement, as it may not appear again, and remember that our goods have an established reputation and are warranted true. See catalogue which will be sent free to any who purchase or expect to.

Address JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, FLORAL, QUEENS CO., NEW YORK.

N. B.—Remittance can be made in Money Orders, Postal Notes, Bills, Drafts, or Stamps. For every dollar's worth ordered from this advertisement, the buyer can have free a paper of PURE WHITE or PURE BLACK GERMAN PANSY SEED. The white are magnificent for cemeteries.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 1500 TESTIMONIALS
BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

MEMORIAL TABLETS.
MEMORIAL WINDOWS,
CHURCH FURNITURE
INTERIOR DECORATIONS.
J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa
FOR OIL.

CURE FOR THE DEAF
PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,

The Care and Feeding of Infants

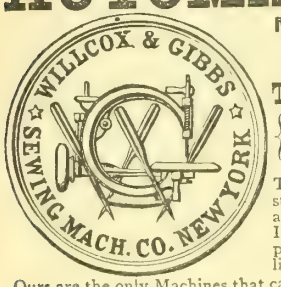
Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

WILLCOX & GIBBS

AUTOMATIC



MACHINES

All bear this Medallion Trade-Mark

{Needles form W, and G is the Machine.}

Absence of this Trade-Mark stamps a Machine as counterfeit. Imitators dare not put this Medallion on Machines.

Ours are the only Machines that can be used with

NO RISK TO HEALTH.

Unequalled for

LIGHTNESS OF RUNNING

AND

STRENGTH & BEAUTY OF WORK.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED LIST.

A MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LECCAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent. Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

FOR A FEW DAYS ONLY.

Moquette Carpets

AT

$1.15 per yard.

NUMEROUS PATTERNS, SUITABLE FOR ALL KINDS OF FURNISHING, TO SELECT FROM.

JOHN & JAMES DOBSON,

40 and 42 West 14th St.,

New York.

DURKEE'S

GAUNTLET

BRAND

SALAD DRESSING

UNEQUALLED FOR EXCELLENCE.

Without a rival as a dressing for all Salads, and as a sauce for Cold Meats, etc. It is prepared with extreme care; all its ingredients are of the purest and best; and will keep good for years.

BEWARE OF ALL IMITATIONS.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA,

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

Sold By ALL DEALERS Throughout The WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

Oriental Carpets.

A Magnificent Collection of

INDIA AND PERSIAN CARPETS

just landed.

An early inspection will repay those who intend to purchase.

The special attention of CONNOISSEURS is invited.

W. & J. SLOANE

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

In the United States, Canada and England wear

"GOOD SENSE" CORSET WAISTS.

THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.

BEST for HEALTH, ECONOMY, and BEAUTY.

Buttons at front instead of Clasps.

☞ Be sure your Corset is stamped "Good Sense."

Sold by leading Retailers everywhere. Send for Circular.

FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers 81 White St., NEW YORK.

BLACK SILKS.

THE VARIOUS WEAVES MAKES AND QUALITIES OF BLACK SILKS UPON WHICH RELIANCE FOR DURABILITY IN WEAR CAN BE PLACED, ARE NOW OFFERED BY US AT REMARKABLY LOW PRICES.

WE ARE ALSO OFFERING FOR COMBINATIONS WITH ABOVE A BEAUTIFUL ASSORTMENT OF RICH NOVELTIES IN CHENILLE AND VELVET EFFECTS EARLY INSPECTION IS INVITED. ORDERS BY MAIL PROMPTLY FILLED.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.,

Broadway & 11th St.,

New York.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office.

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,

PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Inks Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 Jobst reet, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

AGENTS with small capital. We have something new, no risk, large profits, special 30 day offer, write at once. Empire Co., 381 Canal St., N. Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

FINE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Offer the following

GREAT BARGAINS.

Five Hundred (500) pieces ENGLISH BODY BRUSSELS, warranted best quality, fine styles, at $1.25.

Three Hundred (300) pieces best quality DOMESTIC BRUSSELS at $1.00 and $1.10.

Extensive assortments of all other CARPETINGS at proportionately Low Prices. Complete stock of MATTINGS and RUGS, just opened.

Broadway & 19th st

NEW YORK.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,

469 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.....
Murdock's Liquid Food.....	14.10	1.97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's.....	Not any	54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28.67	22.62	11.09
Johnston's.....	do.	20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's.....	do.	56.13	60.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent.

It contains 0.42 of Ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3.30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S

BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 150 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 14. WHOLE No. 2906. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

NEARLY every week brings a note from some one, asking why this or that was printed. We answer that, doctrine excluded, our policy is to welcome full liberty of discussion. The contributors are responsible for what they say. On many subjects, as far as space will allow, we will publish the exact contrary of our own opinions. We believe in the principles of the Reformation, among them, in the right of private judgment and in freedom of debate. More room for just this we need very much, and hope the day is coming when a permanent addition of four pages can be made to the INTELLIGENCER.

THE WORLD has never before been in greater need of wisdom from above. Perplexing questions abound in all countries. These conditions, which almost confound statesmen and political economists everywhere, have been caused by the diffusion of the principles of Revelation. They come mainly from the conviction in regard to the brotherhood of man under the fatherhood of God, and from the knowledge of the love of God as declared in His Word. Or it may be said, the light of the cross, the light of redeeming love, having no respect of persons, has shined into the hearts of men, and the present perplexing situation is simply the result of the efforts of man to establish the lessons of the Cross as the rule of life. Therefore, the Book and the Cross which have created the present conditions, which are warring with the hoary organized selfishness of men, are the guides which will lead the nations out of darkness into light, will enable them to walk surely and safely on the path of true progress and will lead them to the light and love and liberty of a joyous day, which will be the foretaste and earnest of the eternal celestial day of which God and the Lamb shall be the light. There is a sure foundation for a rejoicing hope in the fact that our national and social perplexities are the beginning of the harvest from the sowing of the truths of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

IRELAND has not land enough to satisfy the need, let alone the desire of the people. An Irish parliament, if one should be given, would have to face this fact at the very beginning of its life, would probably sorely disappoint the people, and would probably be calling on England and Scotland in less than three years for financial help and help of other kinds, to enable it to live, if it should chance to survive any possible adjustment of the land question. The total area of the island is reckoned at eighteen millions of acres, of this about five millions are cultivated, the remaining acres being rough grass, mountain and bog. Of the 600,000 cultivators and tenants, 200,000 have from one to three, rarely four, acres of tillable land, and from three to seven acres of mountain and bog land; 200,000 have from three to five, rarely six, acres of cultivated land, with fourteen to twenty five acres of mountain and bog; and 200,000 have larger holdings and are regarded as well-to-do. The money value of the yearly crops on the cultivated land does not exceed $30 per acre, and in a number of counties is about $26. The rent is about $5 a year per acre. The mountain pasture is poor, but the tenants generally manage to raise a calf and pig for sale, which adds ten to twelve dollars to their yearly income. These tenants manage to live in a poor way by the help of remittances from members of their families who have emigrated to the United States or some other country, and by an annual trip to England, where they hire out as harvest hands. This lack of land is the fundamental Irish grievance and seems without remedy. If the cultivable land should be equally divided among the 600,000 tenants, it would give each one sixteen acres or a gross annual income of $480, from which taxes and assessments and all expenses must be paid. The land is now heavily mortgaged. Some one must pay those mortgages. If Ireland is given to the Irish, they will be expected to pay the mortgages and the value of the land over the mortgages, in annual instalments. A large proportion of the tenants are to-day deeply in debt to the shopkeepers. They cannot pay the mortgages, the British government must of necessity assume them, for as many of the tenants say, "If we got the land for nothing, we could not live out of it." Yet any Irish government possible must satisfy the desire for enough land to live out of decently, or face a general and unappeasable popular discontent, which would tend to destroy it.

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD owns 847 miles of road, includes in its system 995 miles, and operates in all 6,046 miles. The Texas & Pacific is included in the system. The 847 miles owned are represented by $29,974,800 in stock and $28,895,000 in bonds, actually issued. The road is capitalized, therefore, at $69,503 a mile. Above the money received from the sale of securities it has received State aid in money and has had land grants. A western company, now advertising its bonds for the construction of a new road, asserts that it can be constructed for $16,000 a mile. Let it be allowed that the Missouri Pacific cost $20,000 a mile, and that it was stocked with engines and cars at an additional outlay of $10,000 a mile, making the cost of construction and equipment $30,000 a mile. The artificial, fictitious capital, therefore, amounts to $39,500 a mile. On this interest and dividends are to be earned from the business afforded by a sparsely settled country. One way to earn a net income is to keep expenses, including wages to employés, as low as possible. This breeds discontent. The strike, it is said, was caused by the refusal to re-employ one man who had been dismissed. It is not improbable, however, that this act was only the spark which set a tinder box on fire. The men say it was, say that there had been an accumulation of grievances. These facts are to be taken into consideration. Strikes are unwise, costly and often ruinous to those who engage in them; but are not surprising. Acts of violence, the destruction of property and the injuries to trade are worthy only of condemnation; but it is not to be wondered at that men reduced to desperation do such things.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN of this city is evidently a corrupt body. A year ago the members were bribed to vote in the interest of the Broadway railroad, and it has been necessary for the legislature to pass a somewhat crude bill to prevent the present Board from engaging in a similar iniquity. The most important fact in this shameful business is that these men, who enter political life for what they can make, represent their constituency, and that constituency will blame them not for receiving bribes but for doing the thing so unskilfully that they have been detected and exposed. That constituency argues that the managers of such a road put fortunes into their safes at a very trifling cost to themselves, issue and sell securities amounting to millions of dollars on an actual outlay of a few thousands; that the Aldermen who make such a deal possible ought to share in the plunder, so that they, the constituents, can obtain their share in due time. They argue that if the speculators can make money after this fashion, it is no more than just that they should ultimately participate in the profits. They expect in due time to receive, under the item of election or campaign expenses, something for their votes and services; and they do get their part,—have received it in the past and count confidently on it in the present. The liquor saloons are in part responsible for the character of this body of voters. They are the headquarters, the common schools, the seminaries, where these citizens are taught and drilled. But men who are too shrewd to cloud their brains with intoxicants, who drink milk, are also responsible. It is to their interest to have just such voters behind the Common Council of the city. The exposure which has been in progress for a few weeks may for a time compel these corrupt men to abstain from their thievish propensities, but no real change in character or purpose has been wrought. After the suspicions of good men have been quieted, iniquitous practices will be resumed. Unless something is done to improve the character of the voters or to take power away from them, the government of the city will remain corrupt.

Action of Mind on Mind.

THERE is in Great Britain a Society of Psychical Research, which is occupied with scientific examinations of mesmerism, clairvoyance, mind reading, ghost seeing, spiritualism, and all similar phenomena. It is composed of gentlemen of various occupations, and of varied religious beliefs, who carefully examine the singular psychical phenomena reported by spiritualists and others, to find out just what there is in them. One important service rendered to the cause of truth by the Society was the examination and exposure of the tricks by which Madame Blavatsky, the theosophist, was deluding even shrewd and well informed men in India.

But the purpose of this notice of the Society is to describe briefly one class of experiments made by it. It was found that mesmerists and other persons akin to them were able to impress their own thoughts upon the minds of mediums and to a remarkable extent. Therefore, these gentlemen tested the matter among themselves, to ascertain just how far one mind could impress itself upon another. One of them, being blindfolded, was seated on a chair and supplied with a sheet of paper and a lead pencil. Another left the room and drew on another sheet of paper what figure he pleased. Returning to the room, holding this drawing before him and fixing his mind intently upon it, he stood behind the blindfolded man on the chair. The man on the chair in a few moments began to draw and repeated on his paper the figure his friend had sketched in the hall.

Another experiment was tried. An accomplished botanist, a member of the Society, was selected to fix his mind intently on a botanical term and see whether it would be communicated to the blindfolded man. He chose the name of a rare East Indian plant, recently discovered, the name being a very unusual one and of six or eight syllables. The man on the chair wrote it at once.

Other experiments were made to ascertain the distance from which one mind could so impress itself upon another, with very interesting results. In one case, very carefully investigated, it was found that the thoughts of a dying mother in England, which she expressed in words to those around her, were impressed upon the mind of her son in India. It was also found, as would be expected, that some minds would convey their thoughts and strong emotions more readily and distinctly than others, and that some would receive impressions with special distinctness and facility.

Talking of these tests recently with a friend, who has been a professor until within a short time in an important institution, he described a trial made at his residence by a company of acquaintances who were spending an evening with his family. At his suggestion and as an experiment which might afford amusement and instruction, a lady was chosen, was blindfolded and seated on a chair, and was furnished with pencil and paper. The Professor left the room and in the hall drew a zigzag, nondescript figure on a paper he held. Returning and standing behind the lady on the chair and fastening his mind intently on his drawing, she began in a few moments to draw slowly the irregular lines he had put on his paper. To test the matter still further, he again left the room and drew as perfect a circle as he could on a fresh paper. Returning, and under the same conditions, the lady drew a similar circle, then hesitated a moment, and then, to the surprise of all, drew a straight line from above the circle down into it. In a moment he remembered that on going out the second time his first intention had been to draw as perfect a rectangle as he could, and that he had carried out this intention so far as to draw the perpendicular line of one side of the figure, and inadvertently left this line on the side of the paper when he changed his mind in favor of the circle. The lady had followed a reversed order of the processes of his mind, and, the first intention being indistinct in him, had in a hesitating way repeated the straight line and carried it into the circle, instead of keeping it outside of it.

Such experiments—and those of the Psychical Society have been conducted with great care—bear upon the subject of inspiration. If upon the application of additional tests it shall be established that some minds can impress thoughts and words upon other specially susceptible minds, it follows that inspiration becomes a fact of mental science. The results, as reported in the printed Proceedings of the Society, are certainly very interesting.

"Old Colony" Papers.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY OF "PROGRESS."

II.

THE literary sciences, such as philology, ethnology, archæology, history and geography, have entered upon a new and unlimited career by the adoption of the comparative method. The fine arts, as is always the case, have kept pace with the progress of luxury and the accumulation of capital. The present period is to music what the age of Pericles was to sculpture, and the Elizabethan age to literature. Some of the world's greatest painters have flourished in these years. The improvement in wood-engraving, especially by the method of photographing on the block, is almost immeasurable. The art of decoration in house painting and furnishing, the development of flowers and dyes, landscape gardening, and the variety of picturesqueness introduced into architecture, have made remarkable progress. The establishment of public galleries and museums and princely private collections have promoted a more general as well as correct taste. Art schools and schools of science, fully endowed and equipped, the offering of prizes, and the increasing market for good work, are developing latent talent and affording skilled occupation to multitudes, especially to women.

The sewing machine has been put into every woman's weary hands, and her path has been opened into many new methods of self-support. Labor generally is better paid and fed and housed, and has for the most part lighter work and fewer hours. Educational grants by the government and splendid endowments by individuals have laid the foundation for the universal education of our people, from the alphabet to the most advanced learning. Mr. Peabody's example in giving three millions and a half for Southern education has been followed up by several others on a scale of equal liberality, and the various Christian denominations are spending a million and a half yearly for the instructing of the colored people. Scores of colleges for the higher education have been planted, and the older ones have greatly increased in equipment and in their standard of scholarship.

It cannot be said that the last 25 years have developed any large amount of literary genius, or added much to the world's stock of original and enduring books. In fact, our most eminent authors on both sides of the Atlantic have almost disappeared. But it has been a period of unsurpassed cleverness in presenting the results of study and research, both in books and periodicals, so that all kinds of knowledge have been brought into compendious, illustrated, and readable form. Even our newspapers are cyclopædias of information, and the school-books tempt us of a former generation to envy our children's easy and pictured path to learning. The best books are obtainable for the price of a good cigar, and papers cost not half as much as twenty-five years ago (though most of them, I fear, are dear at any price).

So much for the progress which the world has made during the quarter-century, in many ways affecting its material interests, its politics, its intelligence, its social arrangements,—in a word, its civilization. But the important thing to know is whether the world is better, as well as better off. Is it more moral? and, above all, is it more religious?

We can judge little of the essential morality of a community by its police reports and criminal statistics. These latter are determined rather by its social and economical conditions. We must inquire whether the life of men in their homes, their business, their amusements, their social habits, and their political action, is more just and honest and gentle and of good report. Civilization may lessen the amount of State prison offences among the lower classes, but has it lifted the ideals, the tone and the habits of the wealthy and the well-to-do into a purer and nobler atmosphere? There are sins against Society, proceeding as it were from banditti outside, which society is usually on the alert to punish. But there are also sins inside of society, which it virtually protects as a part of itself. Such are the abuse of trusts by individuals and corporations, the adulteration of the articles of food, the desecration of the Sabbath, the laxity of divorce, the unrestricted sale of liquors, the pollution of the press and of places of amusement by a pretended realism—which means a real sensuality.

Is there less tolerance of vice, if only it be æsthetically presented? Is marriage more general, more sacred, or more happy? If there is less swearing, may there not be more irreverence? If less gluttony and drunkenness, is there less luxuriousness and refined sensuality? There may be fewer arrests for intoxication, and yet the effect of the beverages drank may be more destructive to the health, the reason, and the souls of men. Have suicides not increased? Has the almost universal carrying of weapons made life more secure, or less? Has gambling ever been so prevalent, from the pitch-penny game of the side walk to the gigantic speculations of the street, and from the shabby policy shop to the palatial club-house?

While the organization of labor has wrought a substantial gain for the toiling classes, has it kept pace with the greed and power of oppressive and corrupting corporations? And has it not entailed a new species of oppression in its own ranks? And is it not lending itself unwittingly to a socialistic movement which is aimed at all accumulation by individuals, and which proposes to put all life under a popular tyranny, beside which the oppressions of the past have been light? If there are indications of a resort to arbitration and to peaceful negotiation among the great Powers, can we ignore the fact that Europe is one great camp with millions of its able-bodied men under arms; and that no less than twenty-five wars have been waged by Christian nations in the twenty-five years, besides our own, which cost us the lives of more than half a million of men; also, that the military expenses of the nations during this period have exceeded the civil expenditures four or five times.

Mind, I am not shutting my eyes to the evidences of moral progress and reform. The cause of liberty, of temperance, of political reform, of prison discipline, and the extension of a wise and tender humanity to the protection of children and animals, to the cure of the crippled and the comfort of the incurable, to the saving of life on our stormy coast, to the housing of the poor, the distribution of alms and the providing of employment, and to furnish the gratuitous enjoyment of many means of self-improvement and of escape from temptation, have signalized our day and made it illustrious. And I need not say that these years have afforded as magnificent and touching instances of heroism and self-sacrifice as the world has ever seen. Only let us beware of a shallow optimism, which will not look these questions in the face and on all sides and beneath the surface, and which says "peace, peace," when there is none.

But we must probe deeper still. We may freely admit that there has been a moral progress in certain directions, and a growth of philanthropic effort and organization. But the one thing needful is to know, not so much whether there is more "enthusiasm of humanity," but more vitality of godliness.

I am glad to report that in everything that respects religious organization and machinery, there is a great advance. The figures mostly look well. The number of nominal Christians in the world is now probably 475,000,000, and of those under control of Christian governments 800,000,000, both of which have more than doubled in the present century. In our own country, the proportion of communicants in evangelical churches has grown in these twenty-five years from one in six to one in less than five, whereas the so-called Liberal sects have diminished, relatively and absolutely. The income of missions, both in England and America, has more than doubled; the number of stations, missionaries and communicants is at least four times as great, and that of lay helpers and native preachers eight times. Home missionary operations have doubled, and so probably has the Sunday-school work. Young Men's Christian Associations had hardly begun in 1860, but there are now nearly 2,500 in the world, including 900 in North America, and the railroad and college branches have been added within a very few years. And yet I believe I am correct in saying, that we have not reached the point in missionary work where it keeps pace with the population of the world. It may well be asked, too, whether the gradual withdrawal of the laboring classes from the church, especially in our cities, may not erelong show a relative decline even in Christian countries.

But, above all, we should inquire earnestly whether there is more evangelical Scriptural, saving and sanctifying faith in the Church itself, and less of indifference, agnosticism, and materialism in the world outside. It will not suffice to look at the question in the light of numerical statistics, nor to gauge the Church's spiritual life by its mere organic force and propagandism, nor its faith by the outward appearance of conformity with the orthodox standards of theology. Let us make sure that there is more of vital godliness, of profound and fruitful repentance for sin, of crucifixion of the flesh with its affections and lusts, of emancipation from this present evil world, of self-denial, of holy living, of heavenly-mindedness, of a Christ-life within and without.

I do not care to pronounce upon these various questions at this time, but leave my readers to ponder them in their hearts. One thing is certain. As the stream of time draws near the end, it grows at once broader, deeper, and more rapid—and this at a geometrical rate of progression. So that it is truer than ever, which Tennyson said more than fifty years ago:

"Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay."

And yet even Cathay (or China) has in these last days been caught up in the great world-movement, and begun to

"——spin forever down the ringing grooves of change."

He, therefore, whose period of life and labor comes latest is the most favored, and the most accountable. That glorious man of God and leader of men, the late Dr. C. L. Goodell, of St. Louis, was wont to say in his cheery, hearty manner as he came into the ministers' meetings: "What a good world to live in! What grand opportunities for work! Was there ever such an age for usefulness?" A Christian or a congregation of Christians, which stands to-day armed with the experience of the eventful quarter of a century past, and confronting what will unquestionably be a still more eventful twenty-five years to come, is the elect of God for a transcendent service. It is to appear upon the scene at the critical and culminating moment of the conflict, to be a Blucher at Waterloo, or a Hancock at Gettysburgh!

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time,

In an age on ages telling,—
To be living is sublime!

"Worlds are charging, heaven beholding,
Thou hast but an hour to fight;
Now the red-cross flag unfolding,
On—right onward for the right!

"On! let all the soul within you
For the truth's sake go abroad!
Strike! let every nerve and sinew
Tell on ages, tell for God!"

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

MARCH 4th, 1886.

"Desultory Reading."

O FINEST essence of delicious rest!
To bid for some short space the busy mill
Of anxious, ever-grinding thought be still;
And let the weary brain and throbbing breast
Be by another's cooling hand caressed
This volume in my hand. I hold a charm
Which lifts me out of reach of wrong or harm.
I sail away from trouble; and, most blessed
Of every blessing, can myself forget;
Can rise above the instance low and poor
Into the mighty law that governs yet.
This hinged cover, like a well-hung door,
Shuts out the noises of the jangling day,
These fair leaves fan unwelcome thoughts away.

—F. M. P., in The Spectator, London.

Recollections of Early New York.

BY CAPTAIN WALTER BICKER.

ABOUT the earliest thing I recollect is my going upstairs (we then lived at 58 Cedar street, Albany Basin), to call my grandfather to dinner. It must have been before 1800. It was impressed upon my memory from the fact that upon asking him to come down to dinner, he said, "Yes, but stop; do you know what day this is?" I don't remember my reply, but he added: "This is Sunday, and little boys must not whistle on Sunday." He had heard me whistling as I was going upstairs.

I remember my grandfather's funeral, which must have been in the year 1800. I was then four years old. Other little incidents I remember as occurring at this time, and in 1803 my father's family moved up into Jay street, corner of Staple street. At this time the streets in this neighborhood were not paved, hardly graded. This I remember was the case with Jay street. Soon afterwards it was paved with cobble stones, the sidewalks were laid with red bricks, and the curb was of oak timbers placed edgewise.

About this time, or somewhat later, an attempt was made to build St. John's Church (which now stands on Varick street between Beach and Laight streets), on the corner of Hudson and Jay streets. Some of the material for the foundation and cellar walls were put upon the ground; but in digging for the foundation the ground was found to be very wet, the place having been a meadow filled in. The project was abandoned and the church edifice erected where it now stands.

At that time Hudson street was not opened beyond Laight street. Leonard Lispenard's house stood very nearly or quite on a line with the direction of the street (in a full opposition to then opening of the street) on an eminence, which very properly might be called a hill. Broadway was not paved beyond "the stone bridge," which stood where Canal street now crosses Broadway. This was a famous resort for us schoolboys. It was considered "out of town,"—all north beyond as well as the immediate vicinity was country, post and rail fences dividing the land into different sized parcels. This bridge spanned a small stream which conveyed water from the Collect on the east side of Broadway (where now stands the Tombs), to the west side, where was an extensive meadow, covering most of the ground from Broadway to the North river, and from Lispenard street to Spring street. There were occasional dry spots in the meadow, but mostly it was an extensive swamp.

Across the stone bridge, northward, extended Broadway to as far as Bleecker street, whence (as I think now), following the course of Bleecker street ran a road which connected with Greenwich lane, and thence to Bloomingdale. On the east side of Broadway connection was had by side streets to the Bowery, which thence eastward was called the Boston Post Road. Improvements beyond this are of modern date, and do not belong to this category.

I might here mention, however, that a project was on foot just before the commencement of the Revolution to supply the city of New York "with good and wholesome water" from the Collect, the water of which at that time was considered fit for household purposes. Works were actively begun upon high land which stood near the junction of Leonard street and Broadway. But the Revolution put an end to the scheme, and the works were abandoned. The Manhattan Company came in afterwards and supplied the city with water from other sources. The Tea Water Pump was also made a great institution, and supplied families with excellent water at two cents a pail, bringing it to your door in hogsheads and delivering it fresh from the pump. My father's family used it when I was a boy for making tea or coffee or for drinking; we had also brought into our cellar the Manhattan water for ordinary purposes.

This is all that occurs to me in this direction to speak of. I will now go down town and see what I can find there worth recording. Hudson street from Duane to Chambers was not opened till about 1815. The route from my residence on Jay street down town was, Jay to Hudson, to Duane, to Chapel, to Chambers, to Broadway—any distance to the Battery. My school was on Nassau street between Liberty and Cedar. This was, of course, my daily route.

At that time, 1805-6, or thereabouts, there stood at the corner of Chambers street and Broadway, northwest corner, a row of pig pens, and they were there for some time. On the park, just inside the Chambers street line, some fifty feet from Broadway, was the Alms House, or poorhouse, as it was most generally called, afterwards the City Museum. Further down, on the Broadway side, between the City Hall and Broadway, stood the Bridewell, and between it and the picket fence, on the Broadway side, stood the public whipping-post, where the public flogging was done according to law.

On the corner of Maiden Lane and Broadway stood the "Oswego Market," a very nice and cleanly place, with perhaps a dozen butchers' stalls and all the etceteras of a well supplied market. On the south side of the market was a space, perhaps thirty feet wide. Along the outside edge of this alley was a row of small buildings, but in the rear of the market, fronting on Maiden Lane, stood a very excellent three-story brick building occupied by Abraham Bininger, a first-class grocer of the best family order. At the lower end of Maiden Lane stood the Fly Market, built in sections at intervals between Pearl street and the East river, the passage of Water and Front streets being kept clear between the sections of the market buildings. This market was supplied mostly by products from Long Island.

The Bear Market occupied the ground comprised in the block bounded by Vesey, Partition (now Fulton), Greenwich and Washington streets. This market was supplied by Jersey, Staten Island and the Hudson river country. From the Jersey district was brought the nicer vegetables and fruits, particularly strawberries. These latter were not then, as now, cultivated to death to get big berries, but were of natural growth, wild berries, the more delicious for their flavor. The Jersey women would bring them to the city in neat baskets of a pint each, tightly covered with leaves from the oak tree. These baskets would be fastened by their handles to long light poles, perhaps twenty baskets to a pole, and with one of these poles so decorated in each hand, these women would come to your door to sell their merchandise at six cents per basket.

Another feature of Jersey enterprise in those days was the appearance on the streets of a decently clad negro man, wheeling a wheelbarrow with a buttermilk churn of huge dimensions, brought from New Jersey twice a week, which he retailed at three cents a quart. The excellence of which, (as I can testify from my own experience, having often partaken of the beverage,) was first-rate, and enabled him so soon to diminish the bulk of his stock in trade, that the labor of propelling his vehicle was of little account.

(To be continued.)

The Sun.

THE largest and most influential of the works of God which man can fairly examine and report upon is the sun. Prof. J. Norman Lockyer, F.R.S., made it the subject of the first lecture of a course on the stars, delivered in London to workingmen. He has observed the great orb for many years and carefully, with the aid of the best instruments; is one of the first spectroscopists in the world, and as an authority has no superior. To apprehend what he says in the selection now made it is only necessary to know that the photosphere is the name of the outside of the sun as ordinarily seen by the eye and with the telescope. The other parts are only visible during a total eclipse or with the spectroscope.

In his lecture Prof. Lockyer said:

"The next point which has been made clear by the work of the last quarter of a century, let us say, is that this central nucleus which we see ordinarily and call the sun, is only, after all, a very small part of it. Outside it there is a shell very exquisite in color. This might be described as a sort of sea surrounding the central nucleus, if that expression did not give the idea that the nucleus itself was a solid, which it is not.

"This first envelope, the chromosphere, as it is called, represents a sort of atmosphere or sea surrounding what is named the photosphere, to a height varying, say, from 5,000 to 10,000 miles. I have said that it is exquisite in color. It is of an intensely brilliant pearly white at the base, and of a magnificent scarlet, as a rule, higher up. But this is not the outside of the sun by any means. Further from the centre, again, there is another region, which we may call the inner corona, overlying the photosphere and chromosphere; the height of this atmosphere—I mean the distance from the top of it on the average down to the photosphere—we may again roughly take at something like 100,000 miles. Not very many years ago, in the text-books we were told that the earth's atmosphere only extended to a height of 50 miles, so that it can be easily recognized that we are dealing with an atmosphere on a very large scale indeed when we come to touch the sun.

"These portions of the sun's atmosphere are only very rarely seen under the best conditions. We can feel, so to speak, the lower reaches every day in our observatories, but we can only see them when the sun is eclipsed. When, in an eclipse, we can get a good sight of the inner corona, what we see is very beautiful indeed, because we not merely get a pearly shell of light, which, roughly speaking, may be taken to be 100,000 miles high, but we see stretching into it from and through the chromosphere beautiful and curious objects called 'red flames,' or 'prominences,' or 'protuberances.'

"Have we yet finished with the solar envelopes? No; there is still another. There is still an upper atmosphere, and to this I must ask you to give a height of anything you like between half a million of miles and a million and a half; and I speak thus indefinitely for the reason that the exact limit is at the present moment occupying those who are concerned in these matters. The limit of course you will understand is a limit which can only be determined during eclipses. Now the sun is only eclipsed for something less than a week in a whole century over the whole earth, and I suppose that if an observer of eclipses were to give his whole time to them he could not spend more on the average than six minutes every two years, so that the time is not excessive in which the astronomer either has to make observations or to make up his mind as to what he sees. You must not, therefore, be surprised when I give you this large choice. If we call it roughly a million of miles, we at all events shall not be very far off the truth, even supposing the height to be constant; but it would appear indeed that the height varies every time we have a chance of observing it. On that point we shall have a great deal to say further on.

"When we come to this outer atmosphere, we pass from one with a more or less concentric boundary, to one with a most irregular outline, full of strange forms varying in an almost inexplicable manner from eclipse to eclipse.

"In the eclipse of 1878 one of the observers who took special precautions to shield his eye from any brighter light at the moment that the eclipse took place, imagined, or saw, the fainter portions of the solar corona, or some solar surrounding, extending to several diameters. The outer corona is not only very strange in its appearance, but wonderful in color, and full of detail for a considerable distance from the dark moon.

"To sum up some of the principal points—by no means all of them—we may say, first, that its outline is very irregular; that there seems to be a flattening, or very often too opposed flattenings, at opposite ends of a solar diameter. This tends to make the thing look very often more or less square. In all parts of it, irregularly (by which I mean that you cannot predict quite where they will be), you get radial rifts in which the light is much less intense than elsewhere.

"I have, then, indicated that the sun that we see is not the whole of the sun. Hence, when we study the stars we shall probably find that we have not only to take into account the phenomena presented by the sun as we ordinarily see it, but others associated with those parts of the sun which are only revealed to us from time to time, and the possibility that such phenomena as we see on the sun may be enormously intensified in other bodies."

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Park Reformed Church, Jersey City.

IN common with many others this church has shared in a delightful spiritual refreshing. The seed had been sown and the soil cultivated with fidelity for many months. And the question was asked, where are the fruits? The pastor and officers were impressed that there was a harvest to be gathered, and yet three weeks since they could not point to a single person who had decided to confess Christ at the approaching communion, which occurred last Sabbath. It was resolved, therefore, to hold a series of ten consecutive meetings and see if there was not a blessing in store. And behold, it was far beyond all expectation! A number of earnest souled brethren were invited to assist the pastor, namely, Messrs. Gowen of Union Hill, Pockman of Greenville, Dr. Dunn of the M. E. Church, Jersey City, Raymond of Plainfield, Brett of Jersey City, Ford of Brooklyn, and Clark of Staten Island. They were informed of the supposed condition of the church and were requested to shape their addresses accordingly. And they did so, as if there had been a pre-arrangement. There themes were, "Gideon's Band," "A message from God," "Almost persuaded," "Unbelief," "God is love," "Coming short of glory and of grace," "Not far from the kingdom," and "Excuses." The rooms were crowded, the impression deep and solemn. And, as a result, 38 stood up and confessed Christ as their Saviour, and they sat down to eat the bread and drink the wine in remembrance of Him.

So God fulfils His promise that His Word shall not return to Him void. The pastor's heart is cheered, the faithful Sunday school teacher is rewarded, God's praying people are strengthened and encouraged to go forward.

It was a revival which "came down." It was an evident work of the Divine Spirit. As we rejoice with others, so we ask them to rejoice with us, while in concert we exclaim, "Praise the Lord."

The meetings will be continued another week.

S.

Madison Avenue Church, Albany, N. Y.

THE second Sabbath of March was communion Sabbath with us, and the hearts of both pastor and people were filled with joy because of the blessings that were granted to us. Seventeen persons united with the church on confession of faith, and youth and age stood up together to take the vows of Christ, and to confess their love to Him, and the large congregation rose to welcome them with true brotherly love, and an honest promise of help and support. Some were heads of families and came with their families, others for the first time communed with dear ones who had for many years sought their conversion by prayers and tears. In addition to the above number, ten others chose our church as their spiritual home, and joined us in the work we have to do for the Master. Such a gratifying addition as this was the result of the evangelistic services carried on by the pastors of the three churches after the conclusion of the Week of Prayer, each of the churches being open for one week and the services conducted by all of the three pastors. These services were pointed and practical, evangelistic and prayerful, and that the blessing should follow them is not a matter of surprise, but rather in the line of the promise. We of this church greatly regret that the Rev. E. F. See, of the Third Church, has determined to leave Albany, for his presence with us has always been a pleasure, and his honest, manly utterances are always good and true. We are sure the Master will acknowledge his work wherever he goes. A. S.

A Plea for Good Reading.

A MATTER of importance in the spiritual nurture of souls and the pre-occupying of the ground in the hearts of the young, so that bad books and idleness may not make them an easy prey to Satan, has filled my mind for some days past.

Some of my parishioners are about to be gone from home and religious influences for a period of some months, engaged in boating on the Delaware and Hudson canal. Some of the driver boys are members of our Sabbath school. Several of the boatmen's wives are members of my church. Very many of them, young and old, are the baptized children of this church. I want to give to each boat belonging about here a good stock of instructive and healthy reading. I want something more than tracts. I want attractive reading suited to uncultured persons of limited advantages and lively boys and girls, for whom I feel a responsibility as baptized children of this church. I can only furnish them from my own means to a very small extent. But I have no doubt my brothers and sisters in the Lord can give me just what I need.

I would like two classes of reading, divided into secular and religious. Cannot the Intelligencer tell some children who love the Lord Jesus that these boys and girls would like some of their best Sunday books that they can spare; old Sabbath-school papers or Christian Weeklies or Youth's Companions, or such books as Cassell & Co. publish. Some copies of the British Workman, such books as Abbott's "Young Christian" and "The Corner Stone." I can manage a lending library very well, and will guarantee that the books and papers will be thankfully read.

Any who can help me feed this multitude, to be without a shepherd all summer, will have the Master's blessing for He has compassion on them.

Packages of books sent prepaid by express to Ellenville, N. Y., or papers by mail to me at Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., N. Y., will be used in this way. If money, that "answereth all things," is more convenient to my friends, I can use it, for I have good facilities for getting books cheaply.

W. B. Darrach, Pastor of the Reformed Church.

Kerhonkson, March 30th, 1886.

....Pastors' Association met Monday, April 5th, 1886. The Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor gave a resumé of his paper on "Feasibility of a Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System," read at the meeting of March 29th, and the Rev Dr. Van Horn, of the Reformed (German) Church in the United States, who had come on from Philadelphia to attend the meeting and had been invited to sit with the Association, described the High and Low Church parties in the German Church, and represented the sentiment of the denomination as favorable to union. Dr. Waters, of Newark, moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Van Horn, which was carried.

The Rev. G. D. Hulst will read next Monday a paper on the subject, "Can our Church Standards be Changed?' which may be of practical value in view of the approaching meetings and discussions of Classes and Synods.

....Our Foreign Missions.—The receipts of the treasury for March reached the very respectable figure of $13,930.59. This is $4,235 more than the receipts of March, 1885, an increase of a little more than 30 per cent. There are still needed to complete the year without debt about $26,000. The receipts in April, 1885, were $22,260. A similar increase for this month would not only pay all expenses but reduce the original debt by $3,000. The receipt of $35,000 would suffice to pay all expenses and all in debtedness and leave the treasury free. Is not this result every way desirable? Is it not possible?

Sec.

....Pompton, N. J.—The third public anniversary of the Woman's Foreign and Domestic Missionary Society of this church was held Sabbath morning, March 21st. The Society enjoyed an extremely pertinent and interesting address from the pastor, Rev. H. W. Teller, and enters upon its new year with renewed energy.

The Treasurer's report shows that the receipts of the year amounted to $84.90, part of which is used for the support of a Bible Reader and Catechist, and the remainder for mission work in the West. Sec.

....Bedford, Brooklyn, N. Y.—This church has added to its membership within the last three weeks twenty-seven members, chiefly on confession, which makes a total addition during the past year of sixty. Three weeks of extra meetings were held in February, which were largely attended, and during which a deep religious interest was developed. The pastor, the Rev. W. F. Griffin, and his members feel very much encouraged by the present prosperity and hopeful outlook.

....Vedder Lectures.—An omission of an important word escaped detection. A sentence in Dr. Woodbridge's estimate of the lectures is made to read, "there can be language without vowel sounds." It should be, "there can be no language without vowel sounds." As the lectures are awakening discussion this correction is necessary.

A Sevenfold Plea for the Tenth Statistical Column.

TO THE CENSUS TAKERS OF EACH OF OUR REFORMED CHURCHES.

DEAR PASTOR AND CLERK OF CONSISTORY: I address you in behalf of the tenth statistical column of our Synodical tables,—"Total of baptized non-communicants." I do it in behalf of all those living within our bounds, on whom the Church of Christ has placed "the seal of the Covenant" in their infancy, but who have not yet given themselves to be registered in the column, "Total in communion;" and in behalf of the parents, living and dead, who presented them for baptism. I do it in the name of the Word of God, and of the Canons, Confession of Faith, Catechism and Compendium, Constitution, Liturgy, and General Synod of our Church. In 1879 the General Synod ordered the Stated Clerk to provide this tenth column in 1880 and thereafter, and "Resolved, That the consistory of each church be directed to report annually to its Classis, as nearly as possible, the number of its baptized members not in full communion."

There are seven pleas for your compliance this year and always, with this direction of General Synod.

1. The Scriptural plea. It is sufficient to mention that all who practise infant baptism believe that the Scriptural argument for it is, that "Infant Baptism is Infant Church Membership." This argument may be seen in full in Dr. Cannon's Pastoral Theology, pp. 317–349, and also in Dr. Woodbridge's Analysis of Theology, pp. 229–233. And, of course, the person baptized in infancy does not become unbaptized by growing to be an adult. Let not, then, those who hold this Scriptural position theoretically, hang out practically the blank flag of dissent over the column provided for this class of our Church membership.

2. The Canonical plea. First head of doctrine, Art. XVII.: "We are to judge of the will of God from His Word, which testifies that the children of believers are holy, not by nature, but in virtue of the covenant of grace in which they are comprehended." This is the echo, by the Church, of the Scriptural plea, and carries all the force of that plea with it into the tenth statistical column.

3 The Confessional plea. Confession of Faith, Art. XXXIV.: "The infants of believers, whom we believe ought to be baptized and sealed with the sign of the covenant." If you would not rebaptize them on their personal confession of faith, then the "sign of the covenant" is still on them, and that fact ought to be recognized in the public way provided in our statistical tables.

4 The Catechetical plea. Heidelberg Catechism, Question 74; answer: "They, infants, must therefore by baptism, as a sign of the covenant, be also admitted into the Christian Church." Compendium, Question 56: "Are infants to be baptized?' Answer: "Yes; for they, as well as the adult, are comprehended in the Covenant of God and in His Church." You cannot consistently refuse those who have been, under this double Church authority, "admitted into the Christian Church," the recognition of that admission in the appropriate column.

5. The Constitutional plea. Art. VI, Sec. 7: "A distinct and fair register shall be preserved by the minister of every baptism. It shall be the duty of the several consistories to make an annual statistical report, etc., according to such formula as the General Synod shall prescribe." Art. XI., Sec 3: "All baptized persons are members of the Church, are under its care, and subject to its government and discipline." The Constitutional plea and obligation for the existence and the filling of this tenth statistical column are thus seen to be perfect and perpetual.

6. The Liturgical plea. "Infants are to be baptized as heirs of the kingdom of God and of His covenant." And when he parents are called upon by the Church to "answer yes," to the statement that their children, "as members of His—Christ's—Church ought to be baptized," is it right to refuse these children afterward the recognition of their baptized church membership? Is it right to say to them practically, "Your baptism is so unimportant that it is not worth the trouble even of a public census of your numbers, in obedience to the direction of our General Synod?" Then, do not say it, practically, by that uncomfortable blank.

7. The Synodical plea. Digest, Chap. IX., Sec 12: "Resolved, That in the transfer of the parents from one section of the Church to another, the membership of their baptized children be recognized, and they be included in such transfer." Both this action and our tenth statistical column are certainly the legitimate outgrowth of the principles taught in all our Church Standards on the subject of Infant Baptism, founded, as we believe, on the teachings of the Holy Scriptures.

Does this sevenfold plea leave anything for the loyal census takers of our Church to do but to oppose all efforts to remove this statistical column, and, as so many have done, to endeavor to make it honorable and useful by filling all its blanks? If the pastor and clerk of consistory in every church of all our home Classes will fill up every blank in our tenth statistical column this year, with such figures as God has provided for them, they will follow the beautiful example of those in our foreign Classis of Arcot. Will you not do it? Assuredly, when we all properly appreciate and cultivate the Divinely-instituted covenant relation between the Church and her baptized children, we will find a wealth of blessing in it.

Truth.

Hope College.

IN the Intelligencer of March 24th, attention was called to the request of Dr. Mandeville and to the need of meeting the current expenses of the College for 1885-6. May He who directeth the hearts of men bring to pass the result desired!

I then said, "The churches in the West are generally engaged in making collections for the theological school." This did not refer to the past, for, as a fact, donations have come into the College as usual since April, 1885, but at present those churches are called upon to raise, and should endeavor to raise, a balance of the $700 stipulated, by the Synod of 1884, for the support of a lector (or lectors) in the Seminary. This severely taxes their ability. Cannot the needs of the College be thus met in the East?

But in coming, at this time, my main object was to start, if possible, an endowment either for the Presidency of Hope College, or for one of the Professorial Chairs. This matter presses,—should not be delayed. It appeals not so much to congregations as to individuals; to Christians whom God has blessed and prospered; to those who can give and do give largely to Christ's cause and kingdom; to those who would leave some lasting and ever-beneficial memorial of their connection with the Church, and the religious progress of men. Anyone who is concerned for the institution will see at once the need of this; will wonder that until this day we have not a single endowed College professorship. Will add some facts next week. Chas. Scott.

....Orange City, Iowa.—In The Christian Intelligencer of last week were given us extracts from "a few preliminary remarks to Rev. J. A. De Spelder's discourse, delivered on a previous Sabbath." For the purpose of information the undersigned desires to give a few facts.

1. This church, to which Rev. De Spelder ministers, is the American Reformed Church of Orange City, organized about a year ago. It is the only American Church in the town. When we remember that Orange City is the county seat of Sioux County, we consider this church of great importance. And when we consider that at Orange City is located our Northwestern Classical Academy, we feel and realize the necessity of this American Reformed Church. This church ought to receive our immediate aid, and we ought to make it a success. If this is not done by us some other denomination will occupy the field. We have the ground and ought to hold it.

2. They worship now in a room in the Town Hall. This room has a low ceiling, has no windows at the sides, only one in the front, and this is a large store window, hence it is impossible to ventilate the room, except by opening the door. For the existence and the growth of the church it imperatively needs a house of worship—a need that must be supplied this coming season.

3. The membership of the church is largely composed of young people of the First Church, county officers, and their clerks, with their wives. Very few of them are persons of means. All they have is their daily earnings. Yet they propose to raise fifteen hundred dollars towards a church building, in addition to the five hundred dollars they intend to raise for the support of their pastor. They truly make commendable effort toward self-support With the help of about three thousand dollars they will be able to build and furnish a suitable house of worship.

Is there not some brother or Christian lady whom God has blessed with means and a willing heart that can help this young church with the necessary aid? I would most cordially and earnestly recommend to the sympathy, Christian benevolence, and prayers of my many friends in the East this young, promising, American Reformed Church of Orange City, Iowa.

J. W. Warnshuis.

Alton, Iowa, March 30th, 1886.

....South Bend, Ind.—The quarterly review concert of the Chapel Sunday-school took place on Wednesday evening, March 31st, at the chapel on South Lafayette street. The attendance was large. The exercises comprised class and chorus singing, class recitations, lesson reviews and short addresses. The beatitudes were repeated in concert by a class, and ten young ladies recited the ten commandments. Another class gave the subject of each lesson for the quarter, and named the books of the Bible in their order. The infant class repeated the golden text of each lesson. Brief addresses were made by Rev. N. D. Williamson and Messrs. C. M. Baker and S. F. Allen. This school is one of the best working schools in South Bend. It was organized about fourteen years ago by Mr. Jasper E. Lewis, who has had the supervision of it ever since.

....Flatbush, L. I.—Rev. Dr. C. L. Wells concluded the twenty-third year of his pastorate last Sabbath and preached an appropriate sermon. The year he proved had been one of special prosperity, the number of families remaining the same, the membership increased by nearly forty additions, two-thirds on confession, and the loss by death and removals being about ten. The benevolence of the year, not fully made up, would exceed by some hundreds of dollars that of the previous year, when it amounted to $5,225. The service was characteristic, for the monthly collection was taken up for Foreign Missions, notice was given that, by a house to house visitation, a contribution toward a new mission church building in Brooklyn, would be gathered up during the week and liberal gifts were requested, and the congregation was told that the collection next Sunday morning would be for the Board of Publication. The monthly collection for Foreign Missions was taken after these announcements and yielded $101.

....New York—The Middle Church, on Lafayette Square, rejoiced last Sabbath in an addition of 13 to the membership, 10 being on confession and 3 by letter. This is the largest accession of many years.

....Woodside, N. J.—Rev. Mr. Jones, pastor, welcomed last Sabbath to Christian fellowship 6 on profession of faith and 3 on certificate.

....For Hope College.—I have received the following: East Reformed Church, Newark, N. J, $2; A Friend, Albany, N. Y., $10; Rev. H. Schnellendreussler, $5; S. B. Schieffelin, $25; 1st Holland Church, Paterson, N. J., $5 02. These have been forwarded to the Treasurer of the College. Glad to acknowledge these, and will be happy to acknowledge still more abundantly.

Giles H. Mandeville.

New York, April 5th, 1886.

....First Church, Philadelphia.—Rev. William R Taylor observed the second anniversary of his pastorate in this church last Sunday morning, preaching upon "The Ideal Church." During the two years fifty-three new members have been received, and the Sunday-school enrolment has grown to 370, an increase of more than 100. The contributions to religious and benevolent purposes for the ecclesiastical year just closed were $1,141, an advance of over 70 per cent above those of 1884. The increase in gifts for congregational purposes is a little less than 40 per cent Mr. Thomas H. Haug, for several years one of the most successful colporteurs of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, is doing excellent service as pastor's assistant W.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The Girls' Mission Circle connected with the Sabbath-school of the Reformed church at Nyack, N. Y., gave a very pleasing entertainment in the lecture-room of the church last Friday evening. There was a large company present, including many older members of the church and their families, and all joined in making the gathering an enjoyable one. The exercises were pleasing in character and creditably rendered, the young ladies acquitting themselves admirably in every instance. Refreshments were served, and a pleasant social time was enjoyed This is an energetic Society and is doing a commendable work in raising money for foreign missions. The sum of $53 was netted by the entertainment.

....The annual meeting of the Auxiliary to the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the church at Chatham, N. Y., was held March 18th. During the year the Society raised for foreign missions $61.63; for domestic missions $20.15.

....The Auxiliary Woman's Missionary Society of the First Church of Ghent, N. Y., held its fifth anniversary Sunday evening, March 28th. The attendance was good, and the reports showed the Society to be in a prosperous condition.

The General Outlook.

....Dr. Newman Hall's church in London operates nineteen Sunday-schools, in which are enrolled 5,600 children.

...The Methodist church at Iowa Falls, Iowa, which was destroyed by fire about three weeks ago has been particularly unfortunate. Once before it was burned to the ground, and at another time, after expending $1,200 in repairs, the edifice was seriously damaged by a storm.

....Missionary Diaz (Baptist) writes that about 300 converts are waiting for an opportunity to elude the priests and be baptized by night at Havana, Cuba, and its vicinity.

....At a recent conference of soap-boilers, leather-dressers, moulders, porcelain and glassmakers, cigarmakers, engravers and butchers in Berlin, Germany, resolutions were adopted condemning Sunday work, and declaring that if it were generally prohibited by law there would be no disadvantage to the workman.

....A Washington Methodist church, needing a pastor, sent three committees—one of old men, another of young men, and another of ladies—to hear a minister in Cincinnati, and as all agreed in a favorable opinion he is to be called.

....The Pastoral Aid Society, which has just celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at Exeter Hall, in London, has since its foundation paid out $10,000,000 in stipends.

....The convention of the Presbyterian ministers, elders, and people of Southern Ohio, Southern Indiana and Kentucky, assembled in Cincinnati on Tuesday, March 16th, and closed on Thursday evening. The attendance of delegates was large, and deep interest characterized every session. The addresses, interchange of views on living questions, devotional exercises, all were fervent and forcible, and spiritually stimulating. On the last afternoon of the convention the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

The Presbyterian in its report says: The peculiarly interesting feature of the closing service was the presentation and adoption of the "Pastoral Letter to the Churches," written by the late beloved and honored Rev. James Eells, D.D., LL.D., which, after a very tender and touching statement of the circumstances, was read by his colleague in Lane Seminary and his life-long friend, Rev. E. D. Morris, D.D., LL.D.

In arranging the programme, three weeks ago, the preparation of this letter was assigned by the committee to Dr. Eells. He had expressed a deep interest in the approaching convention and in the part which had been given to him to perform. But at the time of his sudden death, just one week before the opening of the convention, it was not known whether he had done anything in the way of its preparation, and the first search made failed to discover any trace of it. In a subsequent search on the day, and almost at the hour when the funeral services were held, it was found among his papers, written out in full by him, as he expected to read it at the time appointed. It came to the large assemblage who heard its tender and earnest words, and will come to the seven hundred churches to whom it shall be sent, as a solemn message from the unseen world—the last message (it is said) ever penned by Dr. Eells, except a letter to his absent wife written the day before he was called to enter into his rest.

....The Episcopalians of this country are making an effort to raise a missionary fund of $1,000,000 in commemoration of the centennial of their Church in America. They feel encouraged by the progress so far made

....There are 6,600 pastoral charges in the State Church of Prussia and 224 candidates are wanted annually to fill up vacancies. The number of theological students is 1,835 in Prussia, a total of 4,108 for Protestant Germany.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, March 31.—Belgian strikers quiet....It is reported that Greeks have crossed the frontier into Turkey, and war is expected....Reports sent to Mr. Gladstone indicate that the people are in a great state of expectation, and that the failure of the Home Rule policy will lead to an outburst of violence. More resignations from the Cabinet expected....In the mining regions about Bilbao an illness has appeared resembling cholera....Heavy rains reported through the Southern States. Lives reported lost and a great deal of damage done to railroads and farm lands....A large fire in Key West, Fla. Over fifty houses destroyed; fifty persons hurt. Loss $1,500,000....Senator Logan corrected a false interpretation of his remarks made in the debate on the Army bill....Senator Platt favored the administration of Washington Territory as a State. ....Secretary Manning's condition about the same....Comptroller Chapin made a special report to the Legislature on the salaries paid by the State, accompanied by a bill for taxing corporations....Jaehne's resignation accepted....The Southwestern Railroad strike ended....A mob of fifteen hundred strikers in East St. Louis routed a Sheriff and his posse and destroyed a great deal of property and disabled scores of trains and drove workmen who refused to leave their work out of the city.

Thursday, April 1.—Work resumed in all the factories and collieries in the Charleroi district. Authorities have forbidden the workmen to celebrate the ending of the strike by a carnival. Over two thousand persons arrested ...The Russian Government has notified the Powers that Russia will take no part in coercing Greece. Ten per cent of the men in the Greek and Turkish armies on the Turco-Greek frontier have been lost by the extreme cold weather ... Senator Vance advocated the repeal of the Civil Service Law ...Investigation in the Pan-Electric scandal still continues....The strike on the Gould Railway system broken. ....The "Europa," of Carr's Direct Hamburg Line, went ashore on Long Island coast near Quogue on Tuesday night owing to the dense fog. The captain thought he was fifty miles at sea....The steamer "Capitol City," of the Hartford line, ran ashore on Pearson's Point near Rye Beach during a heavy fog yesterday....A heavy tornado passed over Stone Mountain, Ga., and did considerable damage. It left a path 200 yards wide through the forest ...Heavy floods reported through the South....A heavy frost reported in Northern Texas and a great deal of damage done to crops.... The loss of property by the large fire at Key West, Fla., is estimated at $1,500,000. Four thousand persons are thrown out of employment.

Friday, 2.—It is reported that Russia has informed the Powers of her intention to occupy Bulgaria in case Prince Alexander refuses to accept the Governorship of Roumelia for five years only, and the situation in the East is considered very serious ...No agreement was reached on the Irish Policy with Mr. Gladstone....The steamer "Brittanic," of the White Star line, was disabled by broken machinery....The strike in the vicinity of Brussels still continues....The seventy-first birthday of Prince Bismarck was celebrated yesterday....Heavy damage to property is reported from many places throughout the country by severe freshets. ....There was a heavy fall of snow in Illinois and Iowa....Ex-Alderman Waite returned from Essex and confessed all he knew about the Broadway franchise. Ex-Alderman Kirk was arrested and more arrests are likely to follow....Three boys were injured by the fall of one of Buddensiek's walls....Three Methodist Episcopal Conferences are in session....The strikers in the Southwest at St. Louis refuse to return to work. But a large number of trains are running on the Missouri Pacific.

Saturday, 3.—Professor Huxley sends a long protest against Home Rule for Ireland. ....Mr. Gladstone is being very bitterly opposed in many quarters on the Home Rule question

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Look Out for Thunderbolts.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

["Rev. Dr. John Hall, referring to the great criminals of New York city, said: 'When men set themselves to debauch the public conscience, and reduce the public sentiment to the level of their own, then look out for the thunderbolts! Crime so audacious does not usually run long.' This warning expressed a feeling which has since become common to all thoughtful men in the community."]

FROM poverty to wealth he strode;
Thorns turned to flowers upon his road;
Strong arms were raised to bear his load
His humble hut became
A palace fit for any king;
Aladdin's lamp on everything
Was turned for him, but failed to bring
The auroral light of fame.

He raised and lowered the price of stocks;
He turned the key in Mammon's locks;
He clipped the fleece of golden flocks;
He gloried in his shame;
He purchased parliaments of men;
He silenced flippant tongue and pen;
He staked his fortune; lost it; then
Came not the chime of fame.

The huzzas of the multitude;
The tumult of the masses crude,
Are empty as the wind that brewed
The storm of rain and flame.
One way it blows the clouds to-day,
The next it blows another way,—
And all the weather-cocks obey;
But they're not birds of fame.

Blessed is he whose life is just,
Whose word is like a bond of trust,
His deeds smell sweetly from the dust
And like a censer flame,
Dispensing odors at the tomb.
For him the flowers of memory bloom,
Their light and beauty and perfume.

A Modern Sir Galahad.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER FIRST.

"How sweet are looks that ladies bend
On whom their favors fall!
For them I battle to the end,
To save from shame and thrall:
But all my heart is drawn above,
My knees are bowed in crypt and shrine."

"IF you were not a Sir Galahad I should ask you to call upon a young lady who lives here," remarked Andrew Haynes to his friend Laurence Bowles, as they were passing an old mansion that gave dignity to one of the streets of a watering place. Laurence Bowles had joined his old college classmate the night before, and as soon as the morning sun had dried the dew the two had started out—Andrew Haynes as guide. The long street upon which they had entered was an elm avenue, where the old trees made cathedral effects, and the sweep and sway of the branches could furnish suggestions to the most imaginative mind.

The house referred to was an old-time structure, one of a class often seen in our oldest towns and which emphasizes the far-reaching thought of the builder to furnish a substantial home for posterity. Square, strong, dignified, and in a sense pretentious, it could not fail to attract notice, even if its surroundings had partaken of the uniform character of the yards of the street, as of the town, whose only variety was found in the irregular placing of its evergreens—grass and evergreens were the rule until one longed for a change.

But the yard of the old mansion had an individuality, so that passers-by rarely failed to stop in front of it and notice it; and the longer one looked the more puzzled he became with regard to cause and effect, and at last gave up trying to find the secret of its influence of beauty, and was content with a simple enjoyment of it.

There were no gardener's effects, as we usually name effects; no evidences of the tireless efforts of the trimmer, but evidences of a certain freedom in carefulness, and wildness in cultivation, which the birds had discovered, for they thronged this particular yard, and as the friends passed were singing in chorus, the leader perched upon a shrub near the paling, the branch swaying as his small body throbbed with the ecstasy of song.

As Andrew Haynes finished his sentence, Laurence Bowles turned to catch sight of a figure in a light summer garment and to hear strains that did not come from a robin's throat. Then they passed on, and after a moment's silence the newcomer at the watering place asked, "And if I am a Sir Galahad, as you have supposed, why should I not be presented to the lady?"

"Oh well," answered the friend, "I should tremble for your vow to serve a world of ladies, if you once came under the influence of this one, whom to know is to worship—at least that is what all her admirers say. I had bestowed my heart gifts when I met her, so that I cannot speak from personal experience."

"Then she is one of those ladies who have hosts of admirers," remarked Laurence, his tone betraying his lessening interest in one who had become popular with his sex.

"Admirers in the distance. Miriam Eaton holds herself in reserve, and her charms are not of the vulgar sort."

Sir Galahad's heart throbbed strangely at his friend's words, as he connected them with the vision of the maiden and with the sweet sound of her morning song, and he asked, "May I inquire in what lies her charm?"

"That is what I would like to have answered for myself," replied Andrew Haynes, adding, "I think it is the unexplainable something which proves irresistible to the feminine as well as to the masculine mind, and creates for her universal admiration. I know of but one woman beside her who compels worship; you can guess who that is," he said after a little pause, with all the conceit of a love that is said to be blind, and also to have eyes.

Andrew Haynes, in showing his newly-arrived friend the attractions of the watering place, neglected no spot that he considered worth noticing, and found that all were appreciated; but what gave him peculiar satisfaction was the unmistakable signs of interest which the newcomer could not keep to himself in Miriam Eaton, for the engaged man had formed a little plan for Laurence Bowles—a plan that had grown out of his own blessedness in choosing and winning one maiden for his heart's light and inspiration. He had arrived at the second stage of love—where he could wish a like joy for others.

Laurence Bowles certainly held a side which was susceptible to the influence of woman. If he was a Sir Galahad in purpose it was due to the traditions of his home training, rather than to his natural instincts. His college friends had reverenced him as true, pure, and aspiring, and one among them—Tom Ayr—had given him the sobriquet with playful content, and it was taken up at once by the class, and was likely to cling to him so long as that class had representatives anywhere. But there came a time when Tom began to look seriously upon the qualities which had to his mind suggested the name, and to wonder what he could do to make Sir Galahad seem to touch the human side of life more really. Laurence was in the Divinity school and Tom was studying law, when at an informal meeting of friends Tom relieved himself of his burden of anxiety, Laurence being absent.

"Sir Galahad must not be allowed to enter the ministry until he has had a world experience, boys. He has had over-training in things of faith; he wants to be made to recognize sight to a degree at least. Did you notice him the other evening when our fun had become a little too boisterous? Well, I did, and it was positively a shock to see that lifted look of his, as if "all his heart was drawn above." His eyes had that far-away look which we see in the eyes of women who have been repressed, or have an unreachable ideal, but seldom in the eyes of men—and almost never in those of college boys. But what troubles me particularly is his relation to the other sex. He is a knight for all. He never will wear one lady's sleeve upon his helmet, I fear, but he will fight and sacrifice for the many. When he actually gets into the ministry trouble will begin for him. By Jove! his splendid eyes will be too much for the peace of maiden's hearts. And he will slay his tens of thousands and never know what harm he is working. Then if he marries, and I fear it will be a part of his general plan of sacrifice if he does, he will believe he is called to lay his wife upon the altar also, and loving all, she will be only one of them. It is plainly our duty to take him in hand."

There was a "well done" in chorus from the listeners and then all joined in a college song, and the refrain was sung with spirit:

"We'll give ourselves, we'll give our all
To thy demands, sweet love, sweet love!"

But when the course of study of the students in their respective departments was ended Sir Galahad was still true to his name, and pledged to the many.

When Andrew Haynes invited the minister elect to make a flying visit to Shoreton before taking up his professional duties, it was with the hope, with the help of his betrothed, Alice Compton, to get him pledged to the one; this one being the maiden who lived with her grandmother in the old house which has been described. However, he kept his hope from the minister wisely and well.

Laurence Bowles had been set apart for the ministry when he was a mere child. His mother, as she bent over her sleeping boy with rapt fondness, made her vow and her plan for him as a message bearer, and when, his father having died, his Aunt Beatrice came to the home, there were two worshipped women to plan and to hope for his future. Laurence Bowles never knew how costly was the sacrifice that made his education possible. Women have ways, where the heart is fixed upon a high purpose, of making burdens seem light and of transmuting pain and need. It was not until the young man, having finished his theological course, came home for a rest of a few weeks before taking up his life-work, that the faintest suspicion of what the frail mother had endured crossed his mind. When he arrived at this native town it was lying under an August sun which was beating pitilessly upon its unwatered streets, but his heart was peaceful and his eyes saw nothing but beauty in the town of his boyhood. He found his mother prostrated by weakness. She was sitting in the old chair which had been named the "sick chair" in the home, the sight of which brought back his father's passing away and sent a sudden pang to his heart, suggesting as it did a thousand fears for his mother.

"Thank God you are through, my son!" she whispered, then gave herself up to the relief of tears.

After a prolonged interview with his mother he went to seek his aunt and found her in the garden picking peas. She rose in her stately manner from her bending posture and offered her hand in greeting to her newly-honored nephew. After the first words of welcome were given she remarked in measured sentences:

"You found your mother quite prostrated. It has turned out, however, much better than I feared. I hardly thought at one time that she would live until the end of your course; your grandmother died in just one month after your Uncle Silas entered the ministry. But the end justified the sacrifice. I believe you appreciate the high honor to which you have been called and can partly understand your mother's agony of desire for you."

Laurence bowed, more from the habit of deference to his aunt than of assent to her words, for the import of these affected him disagreeably. He had come home after the long stress and toil of months of study to find, it seemed, no surcease from intensity, but instead an atmosphere where he could not hope to breathe other than the breath of sacrifice. He could not utter another word to his aunt, and turning he went out of the garden, went with heavy feet and heart out to the orchard. Instinctively he took the path to an old tree around whose trunk a rustic seat had been built. It was an old place of resort, a place where he had experienced many day-dreams, and had given himself up to the influence of nature as she revealed herself in beauty to his susceptible soul. But conditions were changed. A sudden sense of heaviness had shadowed the sky and the orchard charms for him. Hope lent nothing for the future, as in days that were past, but memory brought to him the hour, years before, when a boy his mother had revealed to him her purpose for his future. He was not then able to comprehend aught of the dignity and sacredness of the calling, nor of his mother's reverence and sacrificial attitude towards it. He now recalled some of her words, so full of intensity, and later words during his years of preparation, words so full of meaning in the light of developments since his graduation. If the question came to him, Is it worth the sacrifice? the voice was stilled by a voice echoed down the years by the traditions of his fathers. He could not see things apart from the influence of these traditions; he had a yearning desire to free himself from the influence of his life purpose for just one hour—to lie upon the grass and to imagine that his instincts were untrammeled, that there was no plan marked out for his future, that like the flowers and birds, though under the direction of a high Power, in contributing to the general use, beauty and harmony, there was freedom for certain proclivities.

It was only, however, in a vague form that these things came to his mind. And as at last he rose and went out of the orchard he attributed his restlessness to anything but the true source. He watched his mother grow stronger from day to day, and when she had recovered her strength so far as to take up the old home duties, he felt great relief, if not joy. When the invitation came from Andrew Haynes for him to join him at the summer resort, it was not the fault of his instincts that he for one moment entertained the thought of change and rest for himself without regard to the needs of his mother; it was rather the fault of the two women who gloried in being victims for the altar of a high priest. When the gentle voice of the mother and the decided tones of the aunt were united in convincing the young minister that he needed a change before taking up the duties of his holy service, as he had done all his life thus far, he yielded to the desires of the two as they had reference to his profession.

Glances Across the Sea.

BY REV. HENRY E. DOSKER.

THERE is no Church in Christendom whose history lies closer to our hearts than that of the Netherlands, and no part of it seems so near to us as the "Provincial Synod of North Holland," and especially the "Classis of Amsterdam." And just there to-day things are happening which should be known by every one of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, in order that we may be able to support our struggling brethren with our sympathy and prayers.

A glance backward may be necessary for an intelligent understanding of present occurrences.

King William I., in 1815, virtually destroyed the Presbyterian character of the Church of the Netherlands. All past ecclesiastical prerogatives were coolly set aside by the royal hand, and the entire Church was henceforth governed by lines, every one of which centered in the throne. The Classis of Amsterdam protested at the time against these high-handed proceedings, but in vain. It was quietly informed of its dissolution, and the novel argument was advanced, that, "since it was disbanded it was expected to acquiesce and cease from troubling the present Establishment, for that which did not exist could not protest." Fine reasoning that!

But the great wave of revival struck the Lowlands. It touched especially the middle and lower orders of society. It brought in its wake an uncontrollable desire after ancient religious liberty and a pure Gospel.

I need not tell the story of the great upheaval in the Established Church at that time. But, when such men as Bilderdyk, Capadose, da Costa, Groen Van Prinsterer, and other divinely-appointed leaders shrank from the logical consequences of their position; shrank from action when action alone could save, the Rubicon was passed by hosts of plain, everyday people, led by such men as Henry de Cock, of Ulrum, A. Brummelkamp, S. Van Velzen, H. P. Scholte and other men, unknown, young, inexperienced, but called forth by God, disciples mostly of the very men who now held back and hesitated. They were glowing with zeal for God's cause. They separated from the Establishment and founded a free church of the Netherlands, which to-day, under the name of "the Christian Reformed Church of the Netherlands," is one of the most flourishing, if not the most flourishing Church of the continent. It counts its churches and pastors by the hundreds, and its members by the tens, aye hundreds of thousands. Its strong and efficient seminary, with seven professors, some of whom have acquired national reputation, is its pride; and the Reformed Dutch Church of America needs not to be ashamed to number it among its corresponding bodies.

But meanwhile the fire kept smouldering in the Established Church. A smaller current of the revival had found its way in its dry ground. It was not forsaken of God. Hosstede de Groet might offer it a Socinian Christ, and even become the father of a formidably dangerous, so-called Groningen School; rationalism might make terrific havoc among its ministers and laity; the 7,000 were not wanting who never bowed to Baal, and who dreamt a sweet dream of the redemption of the old Church, built on the foundation of Christ and His apostles, and washed with the blood of the saints.

There are to-day in that Church several distinct parties, the most important of which are:

1. The Modern faction; the old rationalists, whose doctrines have unchristianized whole towns and districts, but who suffer the penalty by preaching, as a rule, to empty pews. Make an infidel of a man and he breaks with the Church. Churches of pure unbelievers are mere hallucinations. They never held together nor will they ever. "Vulgar rationalism" has seen its day as well in the Netherlands as elsewhere. To day it commands only a following where it comes under the aspect of the most refined humanitarianism. It exists mostly in "the upper-ten regions," but especially among the higher grades of the "bourgeoisie," the powerful middle classes.

2. The Ethical Trenical faction—a peace party; to-day the strongest faction in the Netherlands. Its theology is a cross between Calvinism and Rationalism. It departs from all the historical lines of faith, and must eventually either join the left or the right wing. It accepts all or nearly all the results of "modern criticism," and frowns upon orthodoxy fully as much as rationalism itself. In some respects it resembles closely the New England wing of the theological army of this country.

3. The Orthodox faction—by the very nature of things severely conservative. So much so that it is often charged with merely aiming at repristination. I am here coining a new word, vainly sought in Webster. Across the sea they use it constantly, and mean by it an apparently undue desire to return to and revive conditions and doctrines which are sealed up and labelled "past."

It is a very strong party and daily gaining in strength. Its able leader is Dr. A. Kuyper, of Amsterdam, under whose direction it has exerted a singular power on the shaping of ecclesiastical events in the last two decades. At Utrecht, and later at Amsterdam, he established his fame as one of the foremost pulpit orators of his country; a man of rare versality of talents, of wonderful magnetism, of colossal learning, remarkable both for its breadth and depth. Thence he went to the Lower House, where he led his party—the Conservatives or "anti-Revolutionaires"—in their political battles. Since 1880 he is Professor of Theology in the "Free University" of Amsterdam, established under his leadership, born from the bitter trend of the times.

It was a daring venture but necessary, because in the three universities of Leiden, Utrecht and Groningen, not one man is left to-day who teaches that theology to which the Church by her very symbols is bound. It has been felt for a long while that faith and unbelief could not, might no longer dwell under one roof. Rumors of a coming struggle have been in the air for years. The relation between the parties become insufferably strained. A rupture has come. The die is cast, the gauntlet thrown down and the mettle of the orthodox will be put to a severe test. Again in Amsterdam it seems as if the thread lost in 1815, over seventy years ago, were refound. The battle cry is sounded in the principal city.

And this is the way it all came about. The orthodox had slowly but securely gained the control of ecclesiastical affairs in the city of Amsterdam, with its vast collegiate administration, covering hundreds of thousands of florins. The consistory decided some time ago no longer to admit to the communion of the Church those who openly denied the essential doctrines of religion. Furthermore, no one was to be admitted by letter who would not subscribe a formula containing the essentials of the Nicean Creed.

But what to do with the catechumens of the "modern" preachers? A favorite way of escape had long ago been open for such cases by a regulation that such youths, upon presentation of a certificate of good morals, given by their own consistory, might be admitted to communion by a more liberal consistory. With deplorable ingenuity two things were thus to be secured: a. Orthodox consciences were not to be outraged. b. Modern youths were formally admitted to the Church; and a conflict was avoidable.

It had become the rule of orthodox consistories to avail themselves of this way of escape. Amsterdam refused to do it. The Church, they said, was one body; to harm its hand or foot, any part of it, was inflicting harm on the organism.

The applicants for certificates now appealed to the Classis of Amsterdam. It sustained the consistory. They appealed to the Provincial Synod of North Holland, and here they found support. The Consistory of Amsterdam was ordered, within six weeks, to issue the desired certificates.

These brethren refused to recognize the demand and, pointing to their open Bible, they appealed to Synod. Not one of our old, orthodox, representative Synods, understand me well, but to that royal creature, stable, servile, modern in warp and woof; which is a mere ghost of the traditional highest judicatory of Presbyterianism in the Netherlands. As might have been expected, the Provincial Synod was sustained, the appeal to Scripture, made by the Consistory of Amsterdam, was declared null and void, and, under date of November 24th, 1885, they were ordered to issue the certificates as directed.

January 8th, 1886, was the last day of grace. The agitation throughout the country was intense. Pamphlets fairly rained. Would the Consistory of Amsterdam stand by its banner? Not entirely. Some quailed as the storm approached, but the majority, nearly all the resisting members, were loyal to their principles unto the bitter end.

The certificates were not issued. Did the Classis of Amsterdam stand by its decision? Alas, no! Brethren became henchmen.

On Monday, Jan. 4th, the Classis suspended eighty members of the Collegiate Consistory of the Capital, five ministers among them. Among the suspended elders is Dr. A. Kuyper, and if I mistake not, also Dr. Rutgers, both professors of the Free University.

The excitement is intense. Many deeds of violence are being committed; forcible possession is taken and retaken of ecclesiastical buildings. By order of the Classis, or at least countenanced by it, the great safe containing all the papers, valuables, etc., of the administration was violently broken open and its contents abducted. Lawsuits are ripening, great demonstrations are made.

But what will be the end?

As brethren of these men, holding with them one faith, loving with them the old "homestead" whence our fathers departed to plant that self-same Church on these shores; watching their efforts to cast out the intruders who elbowed their way in and have now occupied the house from cellar to garret; we do, I trust, look eastward across the sea with keenest interest.

They are sure of our sympathy and prayers, and fervently we do hope that soon the day may dawn when the old Gospel banner will once more wave from the battlements and turrets of the mother Church beyond the Atlantic.

The Third Party.

MR. EDITOR: Your correspondent, writing on prohibition in a recent issue, propounds a question which is easily solved. After proclaiming himself a Prohibitionist of several years' growth; looking to prohibition as the goal toward which all his efforts tend; after asserting his intention to discuss the subject in season and out of season, in the pulpit and out of it, he asks: "Was my refusal to vote the prohibition ticket inconsistent with the principle I advocate?"

Most decidedly it was. The place for everyone who calls himself a Prohibitionist is with the Prohibition party, representing as it does the principle for which he contends; and the man who preaches prohibition, and prays prohibition, must vote as he prays, or he is a Prohibitionist only in name.

What, think you, would have been the "moral effect" if every Christian man had done his duty in this respect and voted for principle and not for party! Fancy intelligent (?) Christian ministers, claiming to be Prohibitionists, and yet failing to identify themselves with the third party, because of their unwillingness to "throw away their votes!"

We place prominently among the barriers to successful temperance reform the half-heartedness and apathy of the Church of Christ and her ministers. Listen, as nine out ten stand in their pulpits, and hear them pray for the salvation of souls, for the evangelization of the heathen world, for the government; but not one supplication for the redemption of our land from the power of this dread foe, intemperance. We have too many Howard Crosby's; too many "Calm Views of Temperance," which are working deeper ruin than the dram shops. Let the Church awake to her duty in this matter, and let her ministers preach temperance as they preach righteousness and judgment to come.

The religious press also must come in for a share of the like condemnation. These moral questions, paramount as they are to every other, are too often but feebly advocated. There is a suggestion of neutrality about their method of dealing with these things. Now we have no patience with neutrality of any sort. We must "take more decided ground" if we would reach the highest measure of success. Let us have free discussion and the most decided advocacy, even at the risk of offending the many who are "sore" because of what they have suffered (?) by the vote of the third party. J.

THE Rev. Dr. Milburn, Chaplain of Congress, is minister of the Methodist Church, and a native of Philadelphia. He was Chaplain of the House forty years ago. Ten years later he was appointed for the second time and now after the lapse of forty years, he occupies the office again. He has lately drawn to himself much public attention by his oddities in his prayers and acts. He makes pastoral calls upon the members of the House, and is popular with both Protestants and Romanists. He is blind.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....Easter Gifts.—Miss Irene E. Jerome has true and charming artistic taste and skill. Nobody questions the fact. Therefore, when it is known that "The Message of the Bluebird," an Easter book, is the product of her pen and pencil everybody knows what to expect. The designs are appropriate and beautiful, the verses are pleasing and the selections from Scripture are full of comfort and hope. The contrast between the texture and color of the cover and the card holding the title and an artistic design, is effective. (Lee & Shepard)

....A very handsome gift for Easter is a folding card, entitled "Rejoice, 'Tis Easter Tide." The exterior is decorated in gold and silver and with designs of lilies. The inner surface is occupied by original and delightful verses. The whole is in admirable taste and is beautiful in every part. (John Ireland, 1197 Broadway.)

...."Chaldea," the fourth of the "Story of the Nations" Series, by Zénaïde A. Ragozin, is written in a clear and graphic style, and shows a scholarly acquaintance with the subject. The chapters which give the story of discovery by Rich, Botta and Layard at Nineveh and Babylon are as interesting as a fairy tale. The name "Chaldea" is taken in the largest sense, as representing that vast and mysterious region, which the earliest dawn of history reveals as the primeval dwelling place of our race. This volume is accordingly designed to tell the story of the origin of nations, and to serve as a general introduction to the remainder of the series.

It is to be regretted that the author adopts and unfolds the evolutionary theory of the origin of religions, speaking of that of the Accads as "undoubtedly the most primitive religion in the world." While she always treats the Bible account of the beginnings of things with respect, it is plain that she classes it as only a higher order of mythology, evolved out of human imagination and superstitious fears and "sun-myths," instead of being the one pure stream of a primitive revelation amid a multitude of obscured and distorted traditions, handed down by those who loved not to retain God in their knowledge. She also goes out of her way to enunciate her dicta in Biblical criticism, declaring that "one thing is sure,"—that the books of the Old Testament were "put into the shape in which they have descended to us at a very late period, some almost as late as the birth of Christ." She admits that Genesis "belongs at all events to a somewhat earlier date," and goes on to take for granted the extremest views of the so-called "higher criticism" as to the contradictory character and diverse sources of that record. It seems a great pity that this important and interesting volume of a most valuable historic series had not been written in a more scientific spirit,—that is to say, that the author had not contented herself with telling us the story of what is known about Chaldea, without overlaying it with her theories concerning what is not known, and her ex cathedra judgments concerning the Hebrew Scriptures. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

...."The Mosaic Origin of the Pentateuchal Codes." By Geerhardus Vos. The author of this volume is a fellow of Princeton Theological Seminary and is a son of Prof. Vos, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, of the Seminary of the Reformed Church of Holland. The treatise was a thesis prepared in competition for a Hebrew fellowship at Princeton, and gaining the award, the author is now studying at the University of Berlin.

It is with special gratification we mark the thorough scholarship displayed throughout this work. It takes up the various points of the modern destructive school of critics represented by Wellhausen and Kuenen, and ably answers them by various arguments. The unity of the Pentateuchal Codes is urged, and the Mosaic origin insisted upon from internal and external evidence. The style is clear and forcible, and the survey of the whole field exceedingly scholarly. Prof. Green writes an introduction, and has a right to be well satisfied with one who has so fully absorbed his own strong teachings and has so ably expressed them. For those who wish a general knowledge of the Pentateuchal criticism we commend this treatise as furnishing all they could desire. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

...."St. Augustin, Melancthon, Neander." By Philip Schaff, D.D., LL D. In these three biographical monographs Dr. Schaff's skilful pen has reproduced the personal characteristics and most important events in the lives of the great men, who at intervals of centuries have served Christ in their own and for all succeeding generations. The narratives are in popular style, designed for general readers and condense in short space interesting materials that are scattered through many larger books. The author has dedicated it to his "Beloved Students," and we wish it might be put into the hands of all theological students in our land. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

..."Under the Mendips," by Emma Marshall, is a tale largely made up of scenes and events in the city of Bristol, England. The author shows more descriptive ability than dramatic power. Her readers look with pleasure upon the pictures presented to them, but are not led into sympathy with real flesh and blood characters. It is of the past they read, and the distance of time is so emphasized as to be felt. Still the book will be admired by the girls for whom it is intended. It is neatly and fitly illustrated. (E. P. Dutton & Co.)

...."Richard and Robin." By Mattie B Banks, author of the "Children's Summer." Almost any book for boys and girls from the press of the Carters carries with it the assurance of fitness for its young readers. This new volume with its handsome print, paper and binding, and written by a skilful hand, will brighten the eyes and cheer the spirits of many a child who loves well-told stories and enjoys the fun and the mischief, the troubles and the deliverances, the "ups and downs, ins and outs" of the boy life which is here pictured. (Robert Carter & Bros.)

...."Letters to Dead Authors." By Andrew Lang. A curious book is this, by a brilliant, clever and accomplished man of letters. There are twenty-two epistles addressed to as many dead authors, pagan and Christian, classical and modern, poets and prose writers; from Herodotus and Theocrates, to Sir John Mandeville and Izaak Walton, and down to Dickens and Thackeray. The versatile author frequently adopts the style of the writer addressed, with remarkable skill and with a keen, critical appreciation of the failings and merits of his shadowy correspondents It is a pleasant little book, too, to hold and read, in its tasteful yet plain binding and good print and paper. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

...."The Hero of Cowpens," by Rebecca McConkey, is a well drawn Revolutionary sketch, giving an account of the career of Gen. Daniel Morgan and bringing out a sharp contrast between his character and that of the traitor Arnold. It will be read with interest by those who take delight, as who does not) in recalling the achievements of the great men of former days. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

...."Yard Sticks and Scissors," by Edward A. Rand, is another volume of the attractive "Up the Ladder Club Series." It tells how the members of the Club stepped upon the round of active life; and the next volume, to be entitled "The Camp at Surf Cliff," will carry them still higher in the ascent of life. Books for young people which interest others in the practical ways of common life, and ply them with grand motives for making the most and the best of themselves for two worlds, are doing good service for the up-coming generation, and this series of books is of that class. (Phillips & Hunt.)

....The "Index to Harper's Monthly" gives the contents of the whole series from Vol. I. to LXX., inclusive. It has been arranged by Charles A. Durfee, and with its General Headings, Subject References, and Cross References, give all that a happy possessor of a complete set of the magazine could desire.

...."Transformed," by Faye Huntington, is a very interesting and well written story of a girl who rescues a family from moral degradation and leads its members into and onward upon the way of life. The author has a gift for writing for young folks and uses it in the service of God. The reader of "Transformed" may think that it exaggerates the power and influence of a young girl; but does it surpass the expectation warranted by the Divine promise, "A little child shall lead them." (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....It is necessary to read The Forum for this month, and whoever takes it up will be slow to lay it down. Mr. Andrew Carnegie writes a very clear, sensible and comprehensive Employer's View of the Labor Question. David Dudley Field in The Child and The State discusses a topic of growing importance. Prof. Noah K Davis considers The Negro in the South. George Gunton gives a many sided answer to the question, Shall an Eight-hour System be Adopted. Gail Hamilton contributes a spirited record of impressions received in Florida. Just now it is important to hear from Monsignor Preston What the Roman Catholics Want. There are also papers by T. W. Higginson, O. B. Frothingham, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and Prof. David Swing. A great many people will be sure to buy or borrow or beg this number, and a great many people ought to read it.

...The Dawn of Creation and Worship, by Mr. Gladstone, the first gun fired in the recent great battle between its author and his scientific opponents, is published as a supplement to the April number of the Popular Science Monthly, and in the body of the number is Prof. Huxley's reply to Mr. Gladstone's Defence, and Comments by Prof. Drummond. The editor also enters the list and treats the debate as a revival of an old and dead issue. There he is mistaken. A curious extract from Mr. Oscar Schmidt's book on the Mamalia, relates to the Teeth of the Coming Man, and gives rather a dispiriting outlook into the future. The Man-Like Apes are treated in an illustrated article by Prof. Robert Hartmann, and the first of a series of papers by Mr. Herbert Spencer on The Factors of Organic Evolution, occupies about twenty-five pages.

....Cassell's Family Magazine is true to its name. It is emphatically a periodical for the household. The April number has sensible words on that fruitful topic the weather, in answer to the question, Will It Rain To-morrow? The Family Doctor, whose words are golden, replies to What Can We Do? in case of sprains and fractures. The piece of music, A Lesson for Lassies, will be enjoyed and pondered. Our Coöperative House-Keeping, and Life In an American Boarding House, and the paper On The Decoration of a Bed-Room are in good season, instructive and agreeably written. Then there are stories—continued and short, a dissertation on the making of Kid Gloves, and verses, and in The Gatherer the usual valuable record of inventions and of directions relating to household affairs. The pictures are graceful and attractive.

....The Magazine of American History for the month has an excellent portrait of Gen. Hancock, and a sketch of his life by Wm L. Keese. Gen. W. F. Smith discusses Shiloh: The First Day's Battle, and Major Wm. Howard Mills supplies a graphic account of Chancellorsville. Interesting features of our early history are portrayed in The Newgate of Connecticut, being a description of the Old Simsbury Copper Mines, written by N. H. Egleston and illustrated, and in The Convention of North Carolina in 1788, vividly reproduced by A. W. Clason. In the Minor Topics will be found a journal by a daughter of James Alexander of a Jaunt to Philadelphia in 1762.

...Three in every way excellent illustrated papers will command favor for the current impression of the English Illustrated Magazine. They are, A North Country Fishing Town, written and illustrated by Nelly Erichsen; A Country Sunday, from The Spectator, with drawings by Hugh Thomson; The London Charterhouse, illustrated by H. Railton. The biography of the unmarried life of Dorothy Osborne, who became Lady Temple, by Edward Abbott Parry, is a delightful sketch of a lovely woman. A new story, The Unequal Yoke, is begun in the number.

....The Book Buyer fulfils the engagements made at the beginning of the year. The third illustrated paper, by Laurence Hutton, on some American Book Plates has a place in the April number, and is followed by reviews of The Life of Longfellow, and of Mr. Roosevelt's Hunting Trips of a Ranchman, each containing examples of the engravings which add so much to the attractions of these works. Many readers will be glad to see and possess the admirable portrait of Prof. G. P. Fisher, D.D., who has written the very acceptable and useful Outlines of History. The remaining pages are filled with instructive descriptions of recent publications here and abroad.

Books Received.

John J Hood, Philadelphia: The Gospel Chorus. A Book of Sacred Song, arranged for Male Voices. By John R. Sweeney, W. J. Kirkpatrick and T. C. O'Kane. Pp. 112. Board, 50 cents.

Cassell & Co: A Short History of Tapestry from the Earliest Times to the End of the Eighteenth Century. By Eugene Müntz. Translated by Miss Louisa J. Davis. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 399. $2; also,

Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States from the Days of David Garrick to the Present Time. Edited by Brander Matthews and Laurence Hutton. Vol. I. Garrick and His Contemporaries. 12mo, pp. 279. $1.50; also,

By Fire and Sword: A Tale of the Huguenots. By Thomas Archer. 12mo, pp. 256 $1.

Charles Scribner's Sons: The Epic Songs of Russia. By Isabel Florence Hapgood. With an Introductory Note by Professor Francis J. Child. 8vo, pp. 358. $2.50; also,

A Desperate Chance. By J. D. Jerrold Kelley, U. S. Navy. 12mo, pp. 233. $1.

John Ireland: Rejoice 'Tis Easter Tide! Illuminated card with silk cord and tassels. 10 cents.

American Tract Society: Concerning Them which are Asleep. By John O. Means. 32mo, pp. 22.

Unbound Books and Pamphlets.

Tulip Place. A Story of New York. By Virginia W. Johnson. (No. 65, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 195. 25 cents; also,

The Mystery of Allan Grace. A Novel. By Isabella Fyvie Mayo. (No. 518, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 73. 20 cents.

Labor Differences and Their Settlement: A Plea for Arbitration and Conciliation. By Joseph D. Weeks. (Economic Tracts, No. 20.) 12mo, pp. 79. The Society for Political Education, 31 Park Row, N. Y.

The Voyages and Travels of Sir John Maundeville, Knight. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I., No. 10.) 16mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

Thirty-sixth Annual Catalogue of the Officers and Students of the University of Rochester, 1885-6.

Periodicals.

April.—The Century, New Englander and Yale Review, The Homiletic Review, Babyhood, The Pulpit Treasury, The Book Buyer, The English Illustrated Magazine, The Musical Visitor, The Pansy, Vick's Monthly Magazine, The Sidereal Messenger, The Musical Herald, The Lutheran Quarterly, The Library Magazine, The Phrenological Journal, Entomologica Americana.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

MARRIAGES.

GARDNER—DAGGETT.—At the First Reformed Manse, Glenville, N. Y., March 31, by Rev. Norman F. Nickerson, Mr. John Friss Gardner to Miss Kittie E. Daggett, both parties residents of Glenville.

GRIFFIN—BURHANS.—Wednesday, Feb. 24, at Flatbush, Ulster Co., N. Y., by the Rev. Walter T. Griffin, assisted by Rev. A. A. Zabriskie, Nathan K. Griffin and Jennie E. Burhans, only daughter of Mr. Ephraim Burhans, all of Flatbush, N. Y.

MOORE—PHILIP.—On Thursday, March 25, by Rev. Isaac S. Schenck, Laton Moore and Annie F Philip, both of West Ghent, N. Y.

ROWE—TRAVER.—At the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. I. S. Schenck, Feb 3, John H. Rowe and Helen V. Traver, both of West Ghent, N. Y.

DEATHS

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

AMERMAN.—At his home at South Branch, N. J., on March 19, Gilbert Sutphen Amerman, in the 71st year of his age.

By this death a conspicuous figure is removed from the society of his native town. Of simple habits and quiet ways, he yet impressed hims if upon others as a man of strong individuality and character. His simplicity grew out of his unadulterated integrity, and his earnest piety had its source in a genuine faith in his Saviour. The unostentatious virtues of his daily life indicated his steady walk with God, while his warm and tender Christian feelings bore witness that the Holy Ghost had unobstructed acce s to his heart. Through seventy years he bore a record unstained, a life to which we yield our tribute of respect and esteem, and one which we believe has passed, by a certain transition, to an inheritance among the sons of God.

BROWE.—At Belleville, N. J., April 2, of pneumonia, Ruth Cushing Dill, wife of Elder James Browe, of the Reformed Church.

To those who knew her life, eulogy is superfluous. Religion to her was an intense and practical reality. It was evident to all that her motto was "this one thing I do." A more faithful disciple than she would be hard to find. She died at her post. Faithful to the end, "her desired haven" is reached. Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. B.

DEY.—On Wednesday, March 31, in the 81st year of her age, Lavinia Agnes, widow of the Rev. Richard Dey, of this city, and daughter of the late Col. Joseph Warren Scott, of New Brunswick, N. J. Interred at Greenwood Cemetery.

JENKINS.—At Jenkintown, N. Y., April 2, Elizabeth Jenkins.

Her decease is the first visitation of death in a family of seven. But death to her has been great gain. Many years ago, under the ministry of Rev. Charles Stitt at New Paltz, she gave her heart to God, and from that time has been most faithful in doing what she could for her Lord. Being an invalid for years, she was denied the activity in the Lord's service she so much desired. By sickness and God's grace she was perfected in patience and faith and sweetness of Christian character, and made meet for her entrance into her heavenly rest. E.

VEEDER.—At East Greenbush, March 25th, of pleuro-pneumonia, Margaret Nivers, wife of Christian Veeder, aged 67 years.

A modest, retiring Christian disciple has suddenly passed away. She died as she lived, in the hope of immortality. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

WILSON.—William M. Wilson, of Asbury Park, N. J., March 25, in the 96th year of his age.

He was born in Somerset County, N. J., in 1790. He made a profession of religion in 1817 at Millstone, N. J., under the ministry of the Rev. J. L. Zabriskie, and for nearly seventy years a faithful adherent to the church of his choice. He lived at Roysfield, Somerset County, where he was instrumental in establishing a sabbath-school fifty years since, and the first superintendent. He was one of the last of the twenty-five persons who were organized into the Second Reformed Church of Somerville, N. J., and remained in its communion till 1864. Then removing to New Brunswick, he connected himself with the Second Reformed Church. In 1867 his golden wedding was celebrated. He possessed a remarkable memory and enjoyed good health to the close of his long life. His son, the Rev. James S. Wilson, suddenly died four days previous, and was buried the day before his death. He failed gradually. His last words were "Waiting, just waiting." And quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE,

By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.

16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

POPULAR LECTURES.

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
Sing Sing, N. Y

MR. STOCKTON'S NOVEL,

The Late Mrs. Null

BY FRANK R. STOCKTON.

1 vol., 12mo, $1.50.

"He has written a book which you can't discuss without laughing; and that is proof enough of its quality."—N. Y. Tribune.

"We congratulate the novel reader upon the feast there is in 'The Late Mrs. Null.'"—Hartford Post.

The Epic Songs of Russia. By ISABEL FLORENCE HAPGOOD.

With an introductory note by Prof. Francis J. Child. 1 vol., 8vo, $1.50 net.

Miss Hapgood's book opens to English readers an entirely new mythology, and lays before them a series of tales so fresh, wild and fantastic that they will prove to be as much of a novelty as the Eastern stories were when first put into English. To students of folk lore and literary history their value cannot be overestimated. They present a new national literature and at a time when the interest in all things Russian is specially acute.

A Desperate Chance. By LIEUT. J. D. J. KELLEY, U.S.N. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.00.

Valentino. By WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR. New and cheaper edition, $1.00.

Movements of Religious Thought in Britain During the Nineteenth Century. By JOHN TULLOCH, D.D.

New and cheaper edition. 1 vol, 12mo, $1 00.

 These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.60.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

New Sunday School Music Books.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Jewels of Praise. $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gem of Gems. $30 per hundred. Specimen copy 35c.
Gospel Praise Book. $40 per hundred. Specimen copy 50c.

NEW EASTER MUSIC.

OUR RISEN LORD, SERVICE. 5 cts. $4 per hund.
HULL'S EASTER ANNUAL. 5 cts $2 per hund.

Address ASA HULL,
150 Nassau St., New York City.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A LIBRARY EDITION, IN TWO VOLUMES, OF

FISHER'S OUTLINES

—OF—

UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

BY GEORGE PARK FISHER, D.D., LL.D.,
OF YALE COLLEGE.

"It was a formidable task that the author undertook, and he has performed it in a manner worthy of all praise.... It will be found to contain a survey of the entire field of history admirable for its breadth and insight."—N. Y. NATION.

"...I am astonished that any one man should have been able to write such a work as the "Outlines of Universal History." No living man is more competent to do it than Dr. Fisher. I keep the book on my table for constant reference."—President JAS McCOSH, LL.D., Princeton College.

2 Vols., 8vo, Cloth, Large Paper, Uncut, Gilt Top, in box, $5.00.

Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co,

753 and 755 Broadway, New York.

The Best Instruction Books.

Richardson's New Method for the Pianoforte

The fame and sale of this celebrated instruction book promise to be permanent. Having the field to itself, as the only first-class method, for its first few years, it has not suffered from the publication of other and really good instructors, but continues to sell very largely.

It is the most correct book of its class, having been many times revised. It has also been repeatedly enlarged, and is used by a multitude of teachers in all parts of the country. Price $3 00.

Send for Ditson & Co.'s large list of Easter Music: Carols, Anthems, Quartets, &c.

Clarke's New Method for Reed Organ, ($2.50) continues to be a well approved and favorite method, and contains good instructions, and much fine music. Other, cheaper and smaller, but reliable methods are, Johnson's Parlor Organ Instruction Book [$1.50]; Bellak's Method for Organ [$1] and Winner's Ideal Method for Cabinet Organ [75 cts.]

LAKME, the new, brilliant and popular opera, mailed for $1.60 paper, or $2.00 cloth.

Remember our popular books, MINSTREL SONGS [$2], WAR SONGS [50 cts.] and COLLEGE SONGS [50 cts.] They sell everywhere, and please everybody.

Remember that any book will be mailed, postfree, for Retail Price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC.

"CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE." A new arrangement of Scripture Selections for Easter tide, interspersed with appropriate hymns, set to original music, the whole Service being eminently fitted for use on Easter Sunday for young and old. 16 pp. By Rev. ROBERT LOWRY. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"EASTER ANNUAL NO. 10."—Issued this season. Contains new and original songs by popular composers, furnishing an abundant variety of appropriate material for Sunday School Easter Festivals. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"FESTIVAL ANTHEMS." 64 large octave page Anthems, for Easter and other joyous occasions. Price, $3.60 per doz; 35c. each by Mail.

A complete Catalogue of Easter Music, Services, Carols, Anthems, etc., sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office.

336 Broome Street,
ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

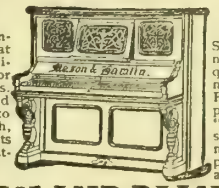
Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.



PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BARLOW'S INDICO BLUE.

Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.....
Murdock's Liquid Food.....	14.10	1 97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's.....	Not any	54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28 67	22 62	11.09
Johnston's.....	do.	20.13	47 16	3.30
Delacre's.....	do.	56.13	60.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent

It contains 0.42 of ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 59 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith is its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW

ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR TUBES. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

Peter Henderson's

SEEDS PLANTS

EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

He Knoweth Our Frame.

IT was in the early afternoon, and my friend and I were talking, in the half hour of leisure after luncheon, of many things precious to us both. Presently she said, apropos of nothing in our conversation, but as if the thought had come to her from somewhere else:

"Of all the dear verses in the dear Book, which could you least afford to do without?"

Such a question cannot be answered in a moment. For the Book has texts to suit all needs not only, but also all moods, and there is no experience which can come to a soul for which the illustrative motto, the guide to the best action, cannot be drawn from that treasury of comfort and wisdom. It is like asking you which book of the books in the Bible-library you would keep were all the rest to be taken away from you. You could not do without the beloved John, for so much of your daily bread has been broken to you by his hands that, lacking the "Let not your heart be troubled," and the "If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink," and the "I have called you friends," even though you knew pages and pages by heart, you would feel impoverished not to have that any more. And you could not part with the Psalms, for they are your daily music, now plaintive and tender, now jubilant and stimulating, the marching melody of life, the songs of degrees by which you climb the heights between this lower level and the uplands of God. And as for Paul, you need his inspiration, for daily do you not read your order of conduct in that grand epitome of Christian behavior, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service?"

Then there is Isaiah, which is to your heart as cordial to the fainting, and the Proverbs, which crystallize for you the wisdom of the ages, "infinite riches in a little room," and the Revelations with their telescope through which you look, and behold, though here storms beat and clouds thicken, "a pure river of the water of life, and trees that bear twelve manner of fruits," and a great company of redeemed and happy people, forever safe, where there are neither tears, nor disappointments, nor pain, because the former things are passed away. And Hebrews, and the Epistles of Peter and Hosea and Malachi, to say nothing of the rest.

Clearly there is no book in the Bible which you or I could spare. We require it all. And so there is no verse which beyond every other verse stars your sky with hope and fills your heart with peace.

But often and often, as the days go on, I find, and so I told my friend, that for a staff to lean upon, and a shield to cover me, and a pillow on which to rest my head, and a chalice to refresh my waning strength, each of these uses being freely offered to my present want, I take that sweet assurance, "He knoweth our frame."

Especially I take it in the hours when I am out with myself. It is far worse to be dissatisfied with myself than with another. It is hard to acknowledge with shame that I have been weak where I ought to have been strong, temporizing where I should have been decided, inadequate where capability was demanded. Verily, I believe that to be patient with one's own manifold shortcomings and tolerant of one's own errors, requires more grace than to forgive the worst blunders of other people. So often when the swift compunction follows on the hasty word, or the repentance supplements the ill-considered deed, so often when tears for a past mistake blur the sight, so that the waiting duty is unheeded, it would be wiser and better to be charitable, even with one's self, and to condone an offense which, having been committed, should not be suffered to lie as a stumbling-block in the way of one's work. The thought that He, the All pitiful, knoweth our frame is a great comfort at such times. We put forth the hand and touch the hem of that garment which comes so close that no audible prayer is needed.

> "What could I do but touch,
> And Thou so nigh, so nigh,
> What could'st Thou do but heal, O Lord,
> Ere I had time to cry?"

Then, too, the confident possession of this truth, He knoweth our frame, is a great comfort when we have disappointed other people. A great deal was expected of us, but the anticipations of friends, and the predictions of admirers have not been realized or fulfilled. The promise was larger than the performance, and, while we are aware that we did what we could, gave the best that was in us, tried to fill the place wherein we found ourselves, it is not agreeable to feel that even loving eyes are looking about for excuses which shall account for our incapacity. Never mind. In so far as our vanity is wounded, the suffering may be salutary. But if it be our heart which is touched, and we are grieved to have come short of reasonable hopes because some good work has thereby been crippled, let us accept the consolation that God knows our limitations as well as our possibilities, and does not hold us responsible for anything which is out of our power.

"He knoweth our frame" is an unspeakable comfort when our friends misunderstand us. For the misunderstanding of some one to whom we are indifferent we may afford not to care, but the reproaches or coldness of one we love wound to the core. Sometimes the sympathy on which we counted is lacking or is withheld; sometimes we are repelled where we had expected cordiality and a welcome. We know that it is because the aspect of affairs presents itself to our friend's eye as it does not to ours, and that if both sides of the shield could be seen all would be explained; and still we are hurt by the lack of comprehension. But never does the Divine love fail us; not once does it misunderstand. Always when we go to God in Christ, we are sure of being lovingly received into the heart that pities our infirmities, that knoweth our frame.

M. E. S.

A Barbarous Fashion.

I WISH I could persuade you, dear girls, never to wear a bird on your hats, nor even a bright wing to set off your rosy cheeks. If you realized how the cruelty of fashion which trims ladies' bonnets with song-birds is robbing the groves and woods of their music; if you thought of the fact that in many localities a price is set on the little feathered beauties, that they are trapped by the thousands and sometimes actually skinned alive, that their plumage may look the richer for your adornment, you could not wear a bird at such a price.

Once I had a lovely fan of swan's down, with a robin red-breast mounted on the centre. The robin, stuffed in a very life like manner, and with his little mouth open, seemed just ready to sing, and, the fan having been a gift, I kept it as a parlor ornament with some pride. One day a tender hearted baby girl, three years old, was looking at my fan, when suddenly the little lips quivered and the brown eyes filled with tears. I wondered a moment at the grieving look and was very much touched when the little one said, "Poor birdie! The last song came froo there!" pointing with her tiny finger at the open bill.

When we think what a glad, buoyant life a bird's life is, and remember the sweetness the birds bring to our homes, the melody they make in the morning, the sweet haunting vespers which dream away and faint into silence in the summer dusk, we cannot feel happy in reflecting that for a caprice of fashion the song-birds are murdered by wholesale.

Do not forget that you as an individual, Kate, Allie, Grace, Belle, Mabel, Emilie, can do something to make this barbarous style a thing of the past. Refuse to adorn yourself with a dead bird. The power of the unit is never more visibly shown than in a quiet persistence in doing right and making a wrong unpopular. If girls decide against it, this style of cruelty will cease to be profitable.

Aunt Marjorie.

"Home, Home, Little Boys' Home."

SHE was a lovely little mother. So the four little boys thought. And they showed their appreciation of her in ways suited to their varied ages and dispositions.

It was a pretty picture to see her with her children. Those of us who did not follow her to the home will long remember her brisk step on the street and her friendly greeting. She had a word and smile for everyone she met, as laughing and talking she hurried on, perhaps pushing baby before her in the carriage, or else entrusting him to the care of the eldest, a quiet, thoughtful boy; in fact, his mother's right-hand man. He was always to be trusted; mother was never worried when the little brothers were with him.

This dear mother fell sick one day. Oh, the anxiety of her little boys! How wearily the days passed with the thoughtful boy. He had fears he could express to no one. Aunties were good, just as good as they could be; but mother was mother; and what more need be said?

The crisis came and passed; and slowly strength came back to the mother. There was joy indeed in the young hearts when mother drove out for the first time. Before very long she walked out with the children frolicking around her as of old.

But alas! her strength did not all return. She did not feel quite as she used to. Perhaps she needed a change. She would go to the city and visit friends. It would do her good, no doubt.

The little boys accompanied her a short distance on her way; and then, with many kisses and promises of candy, she smilingly vanished from their sight.

With merry play the days sped on. Uncle and aunts helped them to be contented and happy during the separation. Now and then busy papa made hurried visits to the country home. All went well for a time. Then came letters that were not read to the children. Mysterious whisperings and anxious faces—telegrams and secret consultations. What did it all mean? "Your mother is sick, children. But we hope she will soon be able to come home." They hoped so too. Young hearts are always hopeful; yet the days grew long and dark as they watched and waited, and a deep shadow fell again upon the children.

The mother failed day by day until there came a day when, in her husband's arms, she gently breathed her life away.

The sad news came at night. It was withheld till the morning light, for they dreaded its effect upon the eldest boy. The youngest need not yet be told. The others were only little children, and might be more easily comforted. The baby was taken from the house before the silent mother was carried in. No kisses now, nor cheery words from those pale lips.

"Mamma is going to get well and bring me candy," the baby prattled; and none could make answer or smile assuringly.

The next youngest boy looked at his mother, and longed to be again folded in her arms. When he went out into the cold without his overcoat his aunt said, "Put on your coat, or you will take cold." But he simply said, "I don't care if I get sick and die, for then you will put me in mamma's arms."

Baby wrote several letters to his mother asking her to come home. His little brother one evening pointed up to the stars and said, "Baby, mamma will never come back. She is up there in the sky." Baby looked up and said, "Yes, I see her."

But he could not understand it; and again he asked for paper and pencil, saying: "Grandma, I've written five letters to mamma, and she don't come. She must be very sick."

Dear little boys; mother has gone where sickness is unknown. Play merrily as you can. Mother must rejoice as she looks down and sees the loving care bestowed upon you. She must love to see you all together, growing up with love for each other.

Upon the gate post the children have pencilled, "Home, home, little boys' home."

God bless the home that welcomes the motherless boys.

M. C. M.

One of Our Darlings.

SHE has bright, laughing blue eyes and golden curls, and her name is Kate, but her pet names are "Golden hair" and "Curly locks." When she was a very little girl she attended a Sabbath-school entertainment and was delighted with all she saw and heard.

A Christmas song by several little girls was especially pleasing to her. After reaching home she tried to recall both words and tune, and with her mother's assistance she succeeded, but rendered the words in this way:

> "Ese thee kings oth olient ah,
> Olly ge-s they come thom athah
> Esked needin, still poceedin
> Sollowin yondah stah."

These were the words:

> "These three kings from Orient are,
> Bearing gifts, they come from afar.
> Westward leading, still proceeding,
> Following yonder star."

She was very fond of "playing lady," and would come to my room and say, "Auntie, pay I tame to vithit you!" "Very well," I would answer, "if you are the visitor you must do the talking."

She could think of little to say except to ask after imaginary members of my family, so she would open the conversation by saying, "How's your thathah?" (father). "Very well, I thank you." "How's your mothah?" "She is quite well, I thank you." "How's your chooldun?" (children). "They are quite well." "Well," then she would draw a very long breath, trying to gain time to think of something more to say, but would invariably end with, "How's your samly?" (family).

When under five years of age she could easily sing as high as G, and knew several very pretty songs.

The infant class of the Sabbath-school which she attended gave an afternoon entertainment in the church one day, and the superintendent asked her to recite a short Bible verse. She readily said she would do so, but when she was called upon became embarrassed. She stood quite still for a few seconds without saying a word, then suddenly said "mamma" in a low voice. Her mamma quickly stepped to her side in front of the platform, when "Golden hair" took her hand and spoke out in a clear tone and repeated every word of her Bible verse without hesitation, so reassuring was her mother's presence.

Perhaps at some other time I will tell you more about my little niece who is now nearly six years of age.

AUNT PRUE.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

"Thy Kingdom Come."

"THY kingdom come." The almighty God, maker of heaven and earth, rules over all by sovereign authority. He holds and governs the universe. Suns and moons and stars obey His laws. The seasons roll at His command. In Him we live and move and have our being. He is over and above all His works—the same yesterday, to-day and forever. He is good and true and wise and righteous, and worketh all things according to His infinite wisdom.

But while He rules the material parts of the universe, so that the glory of His power may be seen every day in the rising or setting sun, in the growing seed and in the ripening harvest, yet the world of mankind is full of wickedness, of horrible crimes and of shocking outrages. The children of men rebel in every generation against wise and wholesome laws. Their hearts are set to do evil. They sin against their own souls. They hate and harm their fellows. They do not wish to have God rule them. They profane His name, deny His goodness, murmur against His Providence, and speak lightly of His commands. They are living in rebellion, and bring the wrath of God's broken laws to the work of punishment, so that, in a disordered and chaotic kingdom, the children of men are without peace or comfort. They challenge the Almighty and are overcome in the conflict.

God governs the material world with law, with power, with sovereign sway, to which every atom submits. But he governs men by truth, by love, by mercy, by patience, and by tender sympathies. He delivers the mind from error, the heart from deceit, and the conscience from cold, unfeeling selfishness. As the kingdom of God comes into human hearts they are made free from the bondage of Satan and taught to love God, as He is in Christ, for their salvation. They are changed inwardly, from rebels to children, from a sharp, bitter war for wicked and destructive pleasures to a delight in holiness, and then love rules them so that they grow like unto God Himself.

The kingdom of God in human souls and on the earth is not meat or drink, but righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. The sweetest virtues, the purest affections, the noblest motives, take the place of selfish desires, and then the light of an eternal day shines inward upon the mind. Love becomes the ruling power and men do not fear God nor dread His power nor despise His laws. On the contrary, they delight in His service, are pleased to obey His precepts and make His statutes their song in this the house of their pilgrimage. When this inward change has once been wrought by the Holy Spirit, His children come to know God, and that knowledge is eternal life. They love Christ and Christ saves them from sin and its dreadful results. They commune with the Holy Ghost, and He strengthens and purifies them. They have fellowship with the saints in heaven and saints on earth, and cultivate such feelings of friendship and good will as would, if universal, drive wars away and prevent the violent crimes that are now committed against the welfare of communities, States and nations.

E. S. P.

CLAVERACK, N. Y.

What Forgetting Did for Tommie.

"TWO palings are loose in the fence, I see," said Mr. Townsend to his son one morning; "they are on the east side, and I wish you to take the hammer and a few nails and make all tight again."

"Yes, sir, I'll fasten them on tight as I can."

"Be sure you do not forget to do it just as soon as you have finished your breakfast, my son, for it is the garden fence, and a pig could easily force an entrance, as the palings hang by one nail each."

"I'll remember, and go for the hammer and nails directly, father."

"Well, good by, all; I must hurry or I shall miss the train; it is about due now."

With a hasty kiss snatched from each pair of lips presented him, the kind father hurried off to the depot; his cotton shipped to Mobile must be looked after. So Master Tommie was left to attend to the fence. He intended to go just as soon as he had swallowed his last mouthful of corn-meal muffin and syrup, but Ed Crofts appeared on the scene at that very moment, shouting over the side gate:

"Tom, Tom! oh, Tom! hurry up and come out here! I got something to show yer."

As will be seen from his manner of speaking, he was not a young person of liberal education, but he had a kind heart beneath his ragged jacket, notwithstanding his lack of education. Moreover, he never presented himself in Tommie Townsend's well-regulated home, always hailing his friend from the gate-posts. Tommie bounded from his seat the minute he heard the familiar shout, shuffling in the remnant of his muffin with little regard to the size of his mouth. As he was putting on his cap his mother called out to him not to forget the broken fence.

"I'll be back directly—sha'n't be gone a minute, mother dear."

And he meant to be as good as his word. Tommie's intentions were always right; the trouble with him was what a little girl once called "a bad forgettity."

Ed had a fine young 'coon to show off that morning. An old negro had caught it alive for him, and he intended making a pet of it. Tommie was much excited over this baby from the woods and its master's plans for its comfort, and would have forgotten that there was such a thing as school if he had not seen some of the boys passing with their satchels on their shoulders. I am not quite sure that he would have noticed them, either, if they had not shouted to him, warning him of the lateness of the hour.

Now, there was to be a prize at the close of the term for the boy who had not been tardy once, and if matters continued as they stood at present, Miss Grant, their young lady teacher, might expect to furnish just fifty-six prizes, for not a boy had earned a tardy mark yet; no, not even Tommie with his "bad forgettity." He was not going to get one this morning, either, if he could help it. Home he flew as if on wings, huddled his books pell-mell (leaving his Reader behind) into his satchel, and, without waiting to hunt up mother, was off again like the wind.

He did not earn a tardy mark, it is true; but what do you think he saw in the garden as he entered the gate at noon? A great pig rooting up the turnips and everything else it could find. Ah, those two palings! Tommie armed himself with a long stick and ran at the pig as fast as two lively feet could carry him. They had a long chase of it, for that porker did not chance upon such a Thanksgiving dinner often. At last Piggy had to carry his kinky tail elsewhere, and sorely did he grunt over his interrupted feast. Tommie, all out of breath though he was, hurried for the hammer and nails. Alas! all the hammering in the world could not restore the choice sweet turnips his mother prized so highly, nor replant the other vegetables which Mr. Pig had uprooted and devoured.

Mother did not scold, but she talked very soberly to her boy about his naughty habit of forgetting, showing him how often it led to absolute disobedience, as it had done to day. She read him the parable of the father who had two sons, one always saying, "I go, sir," but never doing his father's will. She also told him that God had given him a memory, and would one day ask him how he had used it.

Tom went to school that afternoon with several new ideas in his head, and resolving as he trudged along, eating a bright red apple his loving mother had just given him, that he would try to remember hereafter that it was too mean for anything to treat his mother so. Yes, and what could he say when God asked him how he had used his memory?

And equally true is this of every one of us. Your heavenly Father gives you not only your memory, but every faculty of mind, every power of your body. Are you using them as He would have you? Your brain with its ability to think and reason, your eyes, your ears, hands, feet, and, most powerful of all, your tongue,—one of these days God will ask you how you have used them all. What will you say?—Ruth Argyle, in The Morning Star.

The Cider Curse.

THERE are some who object to drinking rum or brandy, but who think there is no harm in drinking cider. The stimulating and intoxicating principle in cider, wine, brandy, gin, rum, lager beer, and all these other intoxicants, is the same; it is alcohol, and alcohol is the same poisonous and deadly agent wherever it is found. Distil the alcohol out of cider, wine, beer, or brandy, and what is left would be simply dishwater. No man would drink cider if the alcohol were taken out of it.

"But sweet cider does not do any hurt," says one. No; and a man puts a barrel of sweet cider into his cellar; he drinks a glass of it, and it is sweet; he takes another glass, and that is sweeter; he keeps drinking and drinking until the barrel is empty, and the last glass is the sweetest of all; and then he is ready to tap a new barrel. You can no more tell when sweet cider becomes sour than you can tell when a boy becomes a man, or when a pig becomes a hog.

The man who commences with sweet cider is likely to proceed to sour cider, and finish off with rum, gin, brandy, whiskey, and all the catalogue of alcoholic poisons which ruin mankind and desolate the world. Boys, let cider alone!

Wonderful Calculations.

COUSIN LOIS selected not long ago from some paper an account of the calculations made in regard to the orbits of comets, and the accuracy of those reckonings as proved by the return of these celestial wanderers. It is wonderful how men have acquired such knowledge and ability.

But, "Little Heads," there is another lesson to be learned—one of resolute perseverance. Let me tell you of one of these calculators. His name was Joseph Hubbard. He graduated at Yale College, then became a clerk in the New Haven bank, became interested in astronomy, soon showed remarkable talent and was called to a position in the U. S. Naval Observatory at Washington. While he was there Biela's Comet began to go to pieces, separating first into two comets, and then going all to pieces and disappearing altogether as a comet. The November meteors are the fragments of this comet, which take fire as they strike the atmosphere of the earth. Prof. Hubbard set himself to calculating the positions and orbits of these two comets. How much work do you think that cost him? Four thick volumes of written pages of figures, with from one thousand to four thousand figures on a page! Think of that when you have long sums to do. By such labor the results of astronomical science have been reached.

UNCLE JOHN.

Little Heads Together.

DOUBLE ACROSTIC FOR DAME PLAYFAIR'S CLASS.

Primals and finals give the name of one of the greater prophets and his birthplace.

1. The high-priest who rescued Joash from Athaliah.
2. A king of the Moabites.
3. The city of the descendants of Rachel.
4. A preacher of good tidings.
5. The father of Samson.
6. A prophet who wrote the history of Rehoboam.
7. A mountain of Armenia.
8. The sick king to whom the Lord added fifteen years of life.

AN ENIGMA

Composed of 28 letters. The whole is a proverb.

25, 6, 28, 20, 13, 17, a place of sale.
23, 15, 1, 10, something that descends.
11, 9, 18, 3, a cupola.
7, 12, 19, 26, a species of soil.
14, 5, 27, 21, 17, fragrant.
2, 24, 17, a fruit of a shrub.
4, 16, 8, 21, a kind of fish.
22, an article.

"ITTALIE."

DIAMOND.

1. A letter. 2. Part of a neuter verb. 3. The staff of life. 4. A part of the head. 5. A letter.

JOSEPH.

Answers to Puzzles of March 17th.

Words Within Words—1. F-reel-y. 2. P-otter-y. 3. N-ada-b. 4. G-rave-l. 5. G-loom-y. 6. F-ell-y. 7. C-rat-e. 8. C-hole-r.

Pi.—

Twilight and firelight
Shadows come and go,
Merry chime of sleighbell's
Tinkling through the snow.

Riddle.—Plan-e-t.

Correct answers from Edith A. Glenney, E. M. Clark, Rappie Bowne, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh.

What to Believe.

"Is there anything in these days of change and doubt that one can believe?" (A Letter.)

HE has no joy who has no trust!
The greatest faith brings greatest pleasure,
And I believe because I must;
And would believe in perfect measure.
Therefore I send
To you, my friend,
This key to open mines of treasure—
Whatever else your hands restrain,
Let faith be free, and trust remain.

Believe in summer's sun and shade,
Although to-day the snow be falling;
Expect glad voices in the glade,
Though now the winds alone are calling.
Have eyes to see
How fair things be;
Let Hope, not Fear, prove most enthralling,
And skies that shine will oftenest be
Stretched lovingly o'er thine, and thee.

Have loyal faith in all thy kin,
Believe the best of one another;
One Father's heart takes all men in,
Be not suspicious of thy brother.
If one deceive
Why disbelieve
The rest, and so all kindness smother?
Who the most looks for love will find
Most certainly that hearts are kind.

Regard the age with hopeful thought,
Not it, but thou thyself art debtor;
Behold what wonders have been wrought,
Believe the world is getting better.
Oh, be thou brave
To help, and save,
And free men's hands from every fetter,
Yet know that cheery hopefulness
Is the great factor in success.

Above all things in God believe,
And in His love that lasts forever;
No changeful friend thy heart to grieve,
Is He who will forsake thee never.
In shine or shower,
His blessings dower
The souls that trust with strong endeavor.
Believe, believe, for faith is best,
Believe, and find unbroken rest.

—Marianne Farningham, in The Christian World, London.

The Comets.

TO MORROW Fabry's comet will be found at 23 hours and 27 minutes of Right Ascension and 39 degrees and 28 minutes Northern Declination. In other words it will be in Andromeda, between the Square of Pegasus and Lacerta, north of about the middle of the Square. It is below the horizon before the darkness of evening begins, and is to be looked for about two o'clock in the morning. A fairly good opera glass would certainly bring it within view, and it must soon become visible to the naked eye, for it is rapidly increasing in brightness. There is an expectation that this comet may pass between the earth and the sun on about the 27th.

Barnard's comet is at about 1 hour and 49 minutes of Right Ascension and 35 degrees and 30 minutes of Northern Declination, or on the border of the Triangle and Andromeda. This, too, is to be looked for in the early morning, and should be fairly seen with an opera glass. It is increasing in brightness and size, but is inferior to Fabry's discovery. This comet is moving northwestwardly and Fabry's northeasterly. Both are expected to become visible to the naked eye next month, and we are to be favored with the unusual spectacle of two comets in the northern sky at one time. F.

An Interesting Service in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 11th, 1883.

MY trip to this far-off city, of which I hope to write more fully when respite from incessant travel and sight-seeing in this wonderful land shall afford the opportunity, has enabled me to witness the first service of its kind ever held in the country. It was the installation of the Rev. Arcadio Morales as the pastor of a Presbyterian Church. "The land of the Montezumas" has never before seen a Presbyterian pastor regularly installed in office according to the forms and usages of the Presbyterian Church. The exercises were all in Spanish, and were participated in by the Rev. J. Milton Greene, who presided, preached the sermon, and asked the constitutional questions; by the Rev. Hesignio Forcada, who gave the charge to the pastor; by the Rev. Hubert W. Brown, who gave the charge to the people; and by the Rev. H. C. Thompson, of San Luis Potosi, who offered the installation prayer. The congregation was large, numbering fully four hundred, and though my companion, Gov. Bross, of Chicago, and myself could not understand what was said, we could easily see that the people were deeply interested, and we greatly enjoyed the singing, which was especially hearty and inspiring. Mr. Morales, of whom our Brother Greene spoke in the highest terms, impressed us from his appearance as an able and consecrated man. At the close of the service he received from his people a welcome which was general, cordial, and affectionate to a degree which I have never seen surpassed, if equalled, on similar occasions. His people are poor, but earnest and faithful. Six years ago they gave at the most but eight dollars a year; last year they gave over five hundred dollars It costs something to come out from the Papal Church in Mexico, and identify one's self with a Protestant Church. It involves frequently the sundering of the dearest earthly ties, and the sacrifice of the brightest earthly prospects. But they who come to know Christ Jesus as a Saviour, do not shrink from the sacrifice. Our mission work in Mexico is in an exceedingly prosperous and hopeful state. The Presbytery of the City of Mexico was just concluding its session when I arrived here. I have had the pleasure of meeting its members, a fine body of men. Our missionary force consists of two missionaries, two lady missionaries, twenty four ordained Mexican ministers, six Mexican licentiates, and three helpers. We have seventy five congregations and preaching stations, of which seven were opened in 1885. The number of communicants in the mission churches is 2 393. We have a theological seminary manned by two missionaries and one native instructor, and having a total attendance of twenty-seven, of whom fourteen are studying theology, while thirteen are in the preparatory department. We have also a girls' school, in which there are two American lady missionaries, and one native teacher, and with an attendance of twenty six, of whom all but two are boarders. The building which belongs to the mission is both substantial and beautiful, and is located in a very delightful quarter of the city, near the residence of our American Minister, Mr. Jackson, and thus in sight of the dear old flag which floats over his headquarters. Last but not least in this brief enumeration of our missionary forces, is the El Faro, or The Lighthouse, an illustrated monthly journal filled full of admirably selected religious reading, and with illustrations which would do credit to our best illustrated papers. To the editing of this paper, and to the translation into Spanish of some of our richest evangelical books, such as Hodge's "Way of Life," the Rev. Mr. Greene devotes a part of his most busy and most fruitful life. But of this work, as well as of this marvellously interesting country, it will remain to speak more fully in subsequent letters.—Clement, in The Evangelist.

Lyman Beecher Lectures at Yale.

GIVEN the Scottish Pulpit for a theme, with Dr. William M. Taylor to treat it, and it needs not the prophetic instinct to predict success. Such success has been realized in largest measure in the seven lectures of which the last was given to-day.

The introductory lecture was a graphic delineation of the characteristics of the Scottish people, with a concise sketch of the three periods in their ecclesiastical history and of the various branches of the Church, supplemented by an account of the method of ministerial education. The next lecture was devoted to John Knox, whose contributions to the Scottish pulpit were, the habit of expository preaching, vehemence of manner and undaunted courage.

Melville, Henderson, Rutherford, Dixon and Livingstone passed in review at the third lecture, the characterization of Rutherford being especially felicitous. In the fourth lecture, upon Robert Leighton and the field preachers, Dr. Taylor reached a height of eloquence which perhaps even he never attained before.

The portrayal of the moderates and evangelicals gave an opportunity which was well improved, to put in a strong plea for orthodox preaching. In the following lecture, too, which was wholly devoted to Chalmers, there was a similar exhortation. To day's lecture included sketches of John Brown, David King, W. L. Alexander, Norman McLeod, Guthrie and others, closing with two bits of advice, to wit: Be yourself, but do not preach yourself.—March 26th, Correspondent of Congregationalist.

Financial.

TUESDAY, April 6th.

THE coal companies in order to earn something and, as we hope, in order to be able to pay their employés better wages, are endeavoring to combine to raise the price of coal to consumers. At once the cry is raised by certain unwise writers for daily journals of "monopoly," "tyranny," and so forth. The companies are right. The price ought to be higher. The increase proposed is moderate and reasonable.

The imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $10,490,600 against $8 046,546 for the corresponding week of 1885; and the exports at $4,-260,444, against $5,824,232 last year. Since January 1st imports here amount to $111,291,838, against $98,-233,808 in the same part of last year; and exports to $52,800,604, against $84 424,624 in the corresponding period in 1885. The export of specie last week was $972 990, and thus far this year $21,629,312, against $8,128,468 last year. On account of a light demand for bills, sterling exchange yesterday sold at $4.86 for 60 day drafts and $4 88 for demand.

The banks reduced loans last week $6 252,000, lost in specie $624.800 and in legal tenders $2,537,600, and in deposits $9 426,600. The surplus of reserve was reduced $805 750, and became $11,991,400. The banks hold in specie $78,459,800 and of legal tenders $26 241,100. Loans on call last week were made at 1 1-2 to 5 per cent. Yesterday the rate on call was 1 1-2 to 2 1-2 per cent. The Bank of England rate remains 2 per cent.

No country besides the United States has a surplus of wheat of importance. Stocks in Europe are not as large as a few years ago it was thought they ought to be to provide for contingencies. Europe has been "bearing" the wheat market for some time. Quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 91 7-8, in Chicago 74 7-8; corn here 45 3-8, in Chicago 34; oats here 35 3-4, in Chicago 30. Provisions are dull. Quotations for cotton yesterday were: April 9.16-17; May 9 27; June 9 39-40; July 9.47-48. Hay and straw supply light and prices firmer.

The Stock Market is unsettled while awaiting developments. The transcontinental war in rates continues, the agreement of the coal companies it was hoped would be concluded yesterday, the strike on the Southwestern roads continues but in a less severe form. Some securities, believed to be improving, advanced. The list generally was unsteady.

The public debt was reduced last month $14,087,-884. The bonded debt is now $1,240,681,462.

Dry goods merchants report a better spring trade than for two years.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

In Germany the majority of the Reichstag decided to increase the sugar tax and to accept anti-socialistic law.... Advices from Newfoundland report terrible destitution as still prevailing. One hundred families are on the verge of starvation....About fifteen thousand strikers refuse to return to work in the Charleroi District, Belgium....The Powers are all joining in remonstrating with Greece against war-like action ...Fifteen lives were lost in Alabama on account of the recent flood. A wide territory is under water and the damage is very great....Four inches of snow fell in Ohio yesterday....A million feet of logs have been swept away by the freshet in the Susquehanna river....The strikers are still out of employment in St. Louis and disorder is reported in Parsons, Kan., and Fort Worth, Texas....Ex-Alderman Pearson is arrested. He and Kirk each gave $25,000 bail.

MONDAY, 5.—Preparations are being made for war in the East....Strikers in Belgium arrested....It is reported that the breaking up of the British Cabinet is imminent if Ireland is given control of the customs. There will be trouble if such a measure is insisted upon by Mr. Gladstone....It is said that Parnell contemplates making arrangements to collect funds in America, irrespective of the League agents.... The body found in the Thames river corresponds with that of Frederick R. Nourse, Treasurer of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, who has been missing for a month. It is thought he was murdered....Great excitement among the strikers at Decaseville, Belgium....The Balkan Conference will appoint Prince Alexander Governor of East Roumelia for five years, ignoring the Prince's refusal to accept the appointment for that term....Fort Worth is in charge of the militia. No arrests....Eight wealthy Californians arrested for land frauds ...It is thought that the Senate will take up and pass without unnecessary delay the Arbitration bill which passed the House Saturday....Secretary Manning continues to improve. Other sick Cabinet members are improving....Trains are running in East St. Louis. ....An attempt was made to lynch a farmer in Missouri ... The people of Key West, Fla., are asking for aid. A large amount of supplies and money has been received.

TUESDAY, 6 —The strike on the Missouri Pacific system renewed somewhat yesterday....Marked improvement in condition of Secretary Manning....Reports of large damage from floods in South and West continues. Number of lives lost....The House by 159 to 62 voted $550,000 for site and $500,000 toward a building for the National Library. It is estimated that the building will cost about $3 000,000.... The House also passed a pension bill for all soldiers and sailors who enlisted for Mexican war....Rev Sam Jones and Rev. Sam Small left Chicago yesterday for Atlanta. ....By the elections in Spain on Sunday the Ministerialists secure a large majority... Greece still bent on war....Right Hon. Wm. E. Forster, eminent Liberal English statesman, died yesterday, in his 68th year....Strikers in Belgium sentenced to from three to five years' imprisonment....Bread riots in Milan....Great efforts making to defeat Mr. Gladstone's Irish bills

Our readers will notice on page 16 a change from the small advertisement of Le Page's Liquid Glue, showing the small can or bottle. Instead of the simple announcement of its merits, those who use it, amount of sales, how sample can be obtained, &c., the Russia Cement Company perform a praiseworthy act in revealing a fraud which is the more contemptible, because it affects only the smallest size for family use (of bottle goods), and therefore affects those who are obliged to buy in small quantities rather than those who are able to stand the imposition. In addition to the statements of the advertisement, which we have from good authority are exact in details, we have it from sources unquestioned that various statements promulgated through the press, by show cards, &c., of other glues as receiving endorsements from high government officials, are entire fabrications with not even the color of truth. In point of fact, the Smithsonian Institution (as well as other Government Departments) have used, and still use, LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE exclusively, reason for which is found in its containing no acid, while we are informed all others have an acid base; and in its superior strength. At New Orleans, on a Riehle Testing Machine, a block of Georgia pine, one inch square, butted, registered 1,612 pounds before parting. LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE does not need our especial praise; the fact that such manufacturers as the Pullman Palace Car Co. have adopted it shows its worth to every wood worker, and for every family in the land.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.

Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, April 3, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 20,265 pks.; exports 1,051 pks.

Good useful old butter has gone out clean and is done for this season. There are some lots of low grades, however, knocking around the market and selling to packers and exporters at 6a10c New butter has been taken clean every day this week, and the market closes bare of stock, and all good stock wanted at quotations. We quote:

New butter, fancy creamery	.34	@35
do do dairy	30	@31
do ordinary dairy	22	@25
do poor to common	15	@20

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 10,993 boxes; exports 15,141 boxes.

Exporters bought lines of fine white cheese at 10¾ a11¼c., and colored ones at 11a11¼c., and skims at 2½a6c. Market closes with light stock and firm prices. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	.11	@11½
" " white "	1	¾@11¼
Good early useful cheese	8	@10
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 6

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 20,968 bbls. and 16,462 cases.

Sales to-day, Saturday, 12a12½c. for best marks fresh eggs

MAPLE SUGAR —Supply is largely increased and trade slow at 7a9c. Syrup 75c. per gallon can.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

Difficulty of breathing, a short, dry cough, a quick pulse, and pain in the left side are symptoms of approaching consumption. Relieve the chest and cure the cough with Hall's Honey of Horehound and Tar. This remedy is swift and certain, at any drug store at 25c, 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

The gloomy fears and the weariness of soul, of which so many complain, would disappear if the blood were made more healthy before it reaches the brain. Ayer's Sarsaparilla purifies and vitalizes the blood, and thus conduces to health of body and mind.

The pain and misery suffered by those who are afflicted with dyspepsia are indescribable. The relief which is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla has caused thousands to be thankful for this great medicine. It dispels the causes of dyspepsia, and tones up the digestive organs.

Relief is immediate, and a sure cure. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy, sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY will meet on the third Tuesday of April, at 7.30 P.M., in the Madison Avenue Reformed Church of Albany. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion are to be sent to the Rev. A. M. Arcularius, New Baltimore, ten days before the meeting.

J. LANSING PEARSE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in stated session in the First Church of Hackensack on the third Tuesday in April, (20th), at 10 o'clock. Reports on the State of Religion must be sent to Rev. J. H. Suydam, (Chairman), ten days before the meeting. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting. P. V. VAN BUSKIRK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M., in the Second Church of Hudson City. The yearly reports of the churches are to be sent to Rev. W. R. Duryee, 239 Pacific avenue, Jersey City.

WM. RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated spring session in the Reformed Church of Farmer Village, the third Tuesday (20th) of April, at 2.30 P.M. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion, with full statistics, are to be sent ten days previous to the Rev. J. W. Te Winkel, chairman of committee. Vacant churches and ministers without charge are required to report at this session. The Consistorial Books of Minutes from churches are to be presented and Classical dues are to be paid in. Applications of feeble churches for aid from the Board of Domestic Missions are to be sent ten days previous to Rev. P. De Bruyn, Chairman of Committee on Church Extension. J. WHITBECK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Reformed Church of Leeds on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Public services at 2 o'clock P.M. Consistorial records must be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting, and the annual reports of the churches sent to Rev. E. N. Sebring ten days previous to the meeting. B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF HUDSON will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Gallatin, the third Tuesday in April, at 10 o'clock A.M. The usual sermon will be preached at 10 30 A.M. Consistories are urged to observe the rule to send their statistical table and report to the address of the Stated Clerk at least ten days previous to this meeting.

T. S. DUSINBERRE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ILLINOIS will meet in regular session in the Church of Irving Park, on the second Tuesday (13th) of April, at 2 P.M. Classical dues to be paid. J. S. JORALMON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF IOWA will convene in regular spring session in the American Reformed Church, Orange City, Iowa, on Tuesday, April 13th, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. The Rev. J. W. Warnshius will preach the sermon on the evening of the first day. Minutes of consistories must be presented and Classical dues paid at this session. Reports of consistories must be sent to the Rev. J. A. De Spelder, Orange City, Iowa, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion. Requests for appropriations from the Board of Domestic Missions to be sent to the Rev. A. Buursma, of Orange City, Iowa. The Rev. F. Schaeffer, from the German Reformed Church, Neosho, Mo., and pastor-elect of Monroe, Iowa, Reformed Church, will be examined at this session.

L. DYKSTRA, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON will meet in stated session, April 13th, at 11 A.M., in the Church of Rosendale. Sermon by Rev. I. B Church. The Chairman of the Committee on the State of Religion is D. B. Wyckoff. Consistories will please present their minutes of sessions.

DEWITT B. WYCKOFF, S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the First Reformed Church of Jamaica, on Tuesday, the 20th day of April, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented. Consistorial reports to be sent to the Rev. Wm. H. DeHart, Chairman of the Committee on State of Religion, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet (D. V.) in stated session in the Reformed church at New Lots, on Tuesday, April 20th, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial reports must be sent to Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, East New York, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting.

R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE regular spring meeting of the Classis of Michigan will be held April 13th, in South Bend, Ind., commencing at 7 P.M. Church records and Classical dues will be called for at this session.

A. PAIGE PEEKE, S. C

THE CLASSIS OF MONMOUTH will meet in stated session in the Reformed church at Holmdel, on Tuesday, the 13th day of April, 1886, at 3 o'clock P.M. The sermon will be preached on the evening of that day by the Rev. Theo. W. Wells, and an essay read by Rev. Charles D. Buck, D.D., on the Principles and Modes of Systematic Beneficence. Consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days before the meeting of Classis to the Rev. Elias Mead, Keyport, N. J., and all Classical dues should be paid.

S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY will meet in ordinary session in the Reformed Church of St. Johnsville, on Monday evening, April 19th, at 7.30 o'clock. Reports of consistories are to be sent to Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., at least ten days before the meeting A J HAGEMAN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK will meet in stated session on Tuesday, April 13th, at 10 o'clock, in the Reformed Church of Franklin. Train leaves on N. Y. L. E. & W. R. R. at 9.05 A.M.

HENRY VEHSLAGE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session in the Reformed Church of Bound Brook, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M The reports on the State of Religion will be sent to Rev. Alex. McWilliam, East Millstone, ten days before the meeting of Classis. E. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in stated session on the third Tuesday (the 20th) of April, in the lecture-room of the church, 5th av. and 29th st., at 10 o'clock A.M. All consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. G. H. Smyth, Chairman of Committee on the State of Religion, 127 East 127th street, and all applications for aid to Rev. Oliver H. Walser, Chairman of Committee on Recommendations, 131 East 86th street, at least ten days before such meeting of Classis.

OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C. pro tem.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in regular spring session in the Church of Montgomery, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 2 P.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. F. S. Schenck, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, ten days before meeting.

R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PARAMUS will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Lodi, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 11 A.M. Consistorial reports must be sent to the Rev. W. C. Stitt, Piermont, N. Y., Chairman of the Committee on the State of Religion, before April 10th. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in the church at Neshanic, N. J., April 0th, at 11 o'clock A.M. Delegates from Philadelphia leave 9th and Green, Bound Brook line, at 7.30 A.M. At Bound Brook change to Central R. R., and at Somerville to South Branch, R. R. Consistorial reports will be sent ten days previous to meeting to Rev. Samuel Streng, Churchville, Bucks Co., Pa.

W. B. VOORHEES, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Poughkeepsie on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. J. E. Lyall, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, at least two weeks before the meeting. A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will meet in stated spring session on the second Tuesday, the 13th of April, 1886, in the Reformed Church of North Branch, at 10.30 A.M. Statistical reports will be sent to Rev. Marion T. Conklin, White House, ten days before. Consistorial records will be laid before Classis, and Classical dues will be paid.

JOHN. F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER will meet in stated session in the Multzeskill Church, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 30 A.M. Consistorial minutes should be presented. Consistorial reports should be sent to the Rev. H. A. Hendrickson ten days before the meeting. EDWARD A. COLLIER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA will meet in regular session in the Reformed church at Greenwich, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. Ira Van Allen at least ten days before meeting.

J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in stated session in the First Reformed Church of Schenectady, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports are to be sent to the Rev. Robert Doig, Scotia, N. Y., at least ten days before the meeting. C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE will meet in stated session at Cobleskill, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 11 A.M. Classical dues must be paid at that time. Rev. D. K. Van Doren, of Middleburgh, N. Y., is the Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom reports on the State of Religion should be sent at least ten days prior to the meeting. Consistorial records must be presented at this meeting.

D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in stated session on the second Tuesday (13th) of April at 11 o'clock A.M., in the Reformed Church of Plattekill. Rev. W. A. Wurts is Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom Consistorial reports should be sent at least ten days previous to the meeting. Consistorial minutes are to be presented at this meeting. J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—Regular meeting Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M, in the Church of Greenburgh (Elmsford). Sermon by Rev. Henry De Vries. Consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. P. A. Wessels, Neperan, N. Y., before April 10th. Applications to Board of Domestic Missions to Rev. Dr. Todd, Tarrytown. Annual reports of all ministers, and elders' books are to be presented at this meeting. CHAS. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

THE address of the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D, of Nyack, N. Y., will be No. 1517 North 10th street, Philadelphia Pa., after April 1st.

CORRESPONDENTS will hereafter please address Rev. Wm. Moerdyk at Pella, Iowa.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. A. Parsons at Knox, Albany County, N. Y.

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

RECEIPTS FROM FEB. 9 TO MARCH 12, 1886.

From Workers for Jesus, Paramus, N.J., $6.06; 2d Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 70; Gleaner receipts from Oct. 26, 1885, to Feb. 12, 1886, 222.48; Raritan, N. J., 30; Mrs. J. H. Van Doren, 5; Readington, N.J., 25.26; Aquackanonck, N.J., 100; 5th av. and 48th st., N.Y., 161; Madison av., Albany, N. Y., 192; 5th av. and 29th st., N. Y., 198; Fordham, N. Y., 30; Gibbsville, Wis., 40; Miss Eliza Van Deusen, 10; New Baltimore, N.Y., 20; Kiskatom, N.Y., 26.69; Lisha's Kill, N.Y., 25; Middletown, N. J., 60; South Church, N.Y. city, 100; Greenpoint, L.I., 50; New Paltz, N.Y., 34.50; Fishkill Aux. and S. S., 60; Fishkill S. S., 20; Brinkerhoff Mission Band, Fishkill, N.Y., 14.25; In memory of Charlotte W. Duryee, by her mother, 100; Ellenville, N.Y., 10; 4th Grand Rapids, Mich., 6; Yonkers Aux., 30; Editress Gleaner, 20; Somerville, N. J., 57.75; North Branch, N.J., 50; Willing Workers, Claverack, N. Y., 6 40; Aux., Closter, N. J., 32.30; A Friend to Missions, 10; Lafayette, Jersey City, N.J., Aux., 105; 1st Paterson, N.J., Aux., 25; 1st Albany, N. Y., 25; Guilderland, N. Y., 5; Aux., Harlem, N.Y., 200; Port Jackson, N.Y., 17.77; 2d Philadelphia Aux., 20; 2d New Brunswick, N.J., 265.15. Total, $2,445.61.

Parties wishing to remit will please do so by check, if possible, made payable to the Treasurer, or by registered letter, but not by Post Office order.

MRS. PETER DONALD, Treasurer,
39 West 46th street, New York City.

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases. —M. A. Rust, M. D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

Cured By Using

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured. —Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

The Church.

The Father's Word.

Nehemiah 8.

THE strenuous endeavor ceased at length,
Because the task was finished. Stone by stone
The patriots had built up the ruined wall,
Nor worked le s merrily because they toiled
To the discordant chorus of their foes,
And had their swords beside them. Each man's home
Lay near his work; and, as he glanced aside
And saw his children playing while he wrought,
His heart grew light within him, and his hands
More strong to bear the over-time and strain
Of that great struggle. But it was not long,
Because "the people had a mind to work."
And now, each man had rest within his home,
For high walls girt the city, and shut out
The attacking enemies.

Whence comes the thought
That moves as with one impulse at one time
Thousands of people? Unto Israel,
Safe once again within their promised land,
And in the city of their fathers safe,
There came a longing for the holy Word
Of Him who once had loved their nation more
Than all the world beside, whose hand had been Still over them for good, whose light had led
Their fathers through the lonesome wilderness,
And who had given to these their sons to take
Their harps down from the willows, and sing forth
The Lord's song in the land that was not strange.
They thought of all these things, and as they thought
They hungered for His love. So they came forth
Together as one man into the space
Before the water-gate, and called the scribe
To read to them the law.

All eyes were turned
To Ezra, when he there unrolled the book,
While all the people bowed their heads in awe,
Worshipping God. And then with their whole hearts
They listened while the sacred words were read.
And as they heard, the penitence and love
Of those who felt as prodigals returned
Unto their Father's house, moved them to tears.

From dawn to midday did they listening wait,
In patience and in wonder, and they wept
The more, the more they understood God's law
And His requirements, and their many sins.
But presently their teacher comforted
Their hearts, and bade them feast right merrily,
And send a portion to the poorer ones,
Because the day was holy, and they needed not
To be afraid, or mourn, since the great joy
Of God should be their strength.

Full oft to-day
The people gather in the open space,
And listen. But the difference is this—
That if the words are God's, short space of time
Can they afford; if some loquacious man
Prating of rights, not duties, hold their ears,
He has the better chance of teaching them.
And they go willingly the feast to keep,
But ask, not give, and seize, but not dispense
The goodly portions. They have many things,
Yet say that they have nothing. Ah! they lack
The joy that would be strength—the joy of God,
And therefore are they hungry, therefore weep.
If they but came, and sought the Father's Word;
And if their leaders gave not theirs but His;
And if they understood, and loved His law,—
Then would they go away to mirth and peace.

—Marianne Farningham, in The Christian World, London.

The First Shaftesbury Memorial Hall.

MEMORIALS to the late Earl of Shaftesbury are springing up abundantly, but none more appropriate than that which was dedicated to his memory on Tuesday afternoon in the form of a Mission Hall in the very heart of Bethnalgreen. The District Committee of the London City Mission, determined, eleven years ago, to hire a hall in which their missionary could supplement his house to-house visitation. Two rooms in a small house in Gibraltar-walk were thrown into one, and audiences varying from fifty to ninety persons have been gathered. The success which attended the work encouraged the committee to make an effort to provide one with increased accommodation, and on Tuesday afternoon the memorial stone laying and opening ceremonies were performed at one and the same time by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Buxton. The present Earl of Shaftesbury was to have presided over the opening ceremony; but a letter was read from him deeply regretting that he was too unwell to be present at the meeting that afternoon. Several Members of Parliament had promised to be present, but in prospect of a division on Mr. Dillwyn's resolution prayed to have themselves excused. Mr. E. H. Pickersgill, however, the Member for Southwest Bethnal-green, was present, and, speaking from personal knowledge of the missionary's work, expressed his hearty goodwill for his success in the new hall. The premises consist of a room on the ground floor, capable of holding about 150 people, and of four rooms on the upper floor, to be used for reading rooms and classes for religious instruction. The total cost of building, furnishing, etc., has been about £465, and toward this the sum of £275 has already been subscribed, apart from the contents of purses handed in by the scholars of the Sunday-school, and others connected with the mission, on the day of opening. In the course of the meeting it transpired that other Shaftesbury Memorial Halls are either now being erected, or being subscribed for by friends who think they cannot do better service toward the poorer classes of London than by this means to keep the memory of him who lived and worked for them ever fresh in their minds. A large and influential company supported Mr. Buxton with their presence on Tuesday last, and good omens for the future prosperity of the work to be carried on in the first Shaftesbury Memorial Hall were plentiful on all sides. The people of the surrounding neighborhood, though of the very poorest class, have entered heart and soul into the erection of this hall, as was practically manifested by the purses which they handed in, containing sums from half a crown to over £11.—Christian World, London, March 11th.

Impressive Audiences.

TWICE, now, have we seen 6,000 "men only" in that rink to listen to Evangelist Jones. The impressions named by us last week, consequent upon the first grand sight, were even deepened last Sunday when 6 000 more men faced a chilly, damp, penetrating day of sloppy discomfort, and forgot all things as they heard the truth. Twice also have we seen 6,000 "women only" (with clergymen and the reporters) listening to two incomparable talks "to wives" and "to mothers." The one spectacle suggested eager, earnest, clear-headed, even if sometimes wrong headed masculinity. The other had its suggestion of mighty forces whose secret lay in unquestioning and non-arguing instinctive devotion to purity and truth. The one crowd fairly thundered out the hymns in great waves of sound that made earth tremble, while the other thrilling soprano tempest suggested forces that substitute intense perseverance for thunderous dynamics. Few eyes have seen 6,000 women's faces turned eagerly toward one focal point. We confess to sensibility to a subtle, tremendous something in presence of wives and mothers that did not move one when the men gazed at the platform. The men could furnish generals, rulers, and mighty powers, but the women suggested resistless, insinuating energy that none but God can stay. Churches and papers are doing grand work, but those sermons by Jones excel in influence among good men and women who have not realized each other's existence and coöperation until thus assembled. No more mighty force has ever been felt in Chicago than that one which Mr. Jones set in motion during those rink services.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

Lesson 3, Second Quarter.

M. The First Miracle. ..... John 2: 1-11.
T. The First Marriage ..... Gen. 1: 15-25.
W. The Marriage of the Lamb..... Rev. 19: 1-13.
T. A Feast of Fat Things ..... Isa. 2 : 1-12.
F. Without Money and Without Price ..... Isa. 55: 1-13.
S. Do All to the Glory of God..... 1 Cor. 10 : 21-33.
S. The Life More than Meat..... Matt. 6: 24-34.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

April 18th.—"The First Miracle."—John 2: 1-11.

Golden Text.—"This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him."—John 2:11.

Central Truth.—"Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."—John 2:5.

Introduction.

JOHN dwells with peculiar fulness upon the events of the first and last weeks of Christ's public ministry. He brings us at the outset into that inner circle of friendship and revelation in which he himself had found a place. The scene described in our lesson may be regarded as a step in transition from private to public relations. In order to understand the facts recorded we must suppose that the report of the baptism of Jesus and of the witness of John the Baptist to Him had reached Galilee before the arrival of the little company. These reports, added to what Mary had hidden in her heart, would naturally cause her to be in an expectant state of mind, looking for some manifestation of power which would place her son in an exalted position before the people.

The Lesson.

Theme.—Jesus in the Home.

I. Jesus as Guest.—vs. 1-3.

V. 1.—"The third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee." Cana was probably a village not far from Nazareth. The site has not been satisfactorily settled. We know nothing of the persons in whose honor this feast was made. The human relations of the scene sink out of sight before its connection with the work of Jesus. It would seem probable that the parties were kindred to the holy family. "The mother of Jesus was there." She seems to have been present not only as a guest, but as an intimate friend, relieving the hostess of some care in reference to the details of the feast.

V. 2.—"Both Jesus was called and his disciples." Speaking according to modern customs we should say that the invitations to this feast must have been issued during Jesus' absence from home of over a month, so that He did not receive His notice until upon His arrival at Galilee, when the generous hospitality of the times and country immediately included His friends in the invitation hastily sent to Him.

V. 3.—"When they wanted wine." When the wine began to fail, but before the failure was known to any, perhaps, besides Mary. This unforeseen failure of supplies was very probably due to the unexpected addition of six or seven guests to the party. "The mother of Jesus said unto him, They have no wine." Many explanations have been given of this appeal which Mary made to Jesus, but when we remember what she knew concerning Him, and that she must have heard at least on that occasion something concerning the events of the past few days, it is not strange that she should have expected that the hour for His being manifested to Israel had come, and that He might at the same time make a display of power and relieve the embarrassment of her friends, especially since this embarrassment was due to the presence of Jesus and His disciples.

II. Jesus as Master.—vs. 4-8

V. 4.—"Woman, what have I to do with thee?" While these words were intended to convey a needed rebuke, yet they were spoken with the utmost tenderness and respect. Mary had been accustomed to the subordination of Jesus to herself in the home life; that was now at an end. She needed to learn that henceforth He was to be recognized as master in her heart and everywhere. He accepted the information which she gave, but which He did not need, and put aside forever any claim on her part to influence over His actions. "Mine hour is not yet come." The hour for which Mary was looking of Divine manifestation. That hour did not come until He was lifted up to draw all men unto Himself.

V. 5.—"Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." Mary recognized the force of Jesus' words and immediately abdicated in His favor. By her remark to the servants she indicated her faith in His interposition, while she herself retired from the scene.

V. 6.—"There were set there six waterpots of stone." The frequent washings of feet, hands, and utensils which the laws and customs of the Jews required, necessitated an abundant supply of water. These jars would hold, it is estimated, about three barrels altogether.

V. 7.—"Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water." It is probable that at this stage in the feast the jars were almost empty, and that an entirely fresh supply was provided. "And they filled them to the brim." The servants accepted Mary's directions to obey Jesus, with the utmost heartiness.

V. 8.—"He saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast." Without any ceremony He thus wrought His work of God.

> "The conscious water saw its God
> And blushed itself to wine."

The question has been raised whether Jesus changed the nature of all the water, or only of so much as was needed for the feast, thus performing a repeated miracle, whenever any was drawn out of the waterpots. The plain inference is that He changed it all, and thus provided not only for the emergency, but left a supply for future needs. As Godet says, "It was the rich wedding gift by which the Lord honored this house, where He with His attendants had just been hospitably received. It was the enduring monument of the Master's benediction upon the youthful household formed under His auspices."

III. Jesus as Lord.—vs. 9-11.

V. 9.—"When the ruler of the feast had tasted the wine." This person was sometimes a guest, but often a hired attendant, whose office it was to inspect all provisions before they were offered to the guests. "Knew not whence it was, (but the servants which drew the the water knew.)" The knowledge of this miracle was made public by the combined evidence of two independent classes of witnesses. Those who drank knew that it was wine, those who had drawn knew that it had been water.

V. 10.—The ruler thought that the bridegroom had made a great mistake in holding back such fine wine until the taste of the guests had been dulled by satiety. His words in this verse were the expression of a common remark among convivialists and do not imply anything concerning the sobriety of those present at this feast. It is evident that Jesus made real wine on this occasion, but this does not constitute an argument in favor of indiscriminate wine drinking under different conditions.

V. 11.—"This beginning of miracles did Jesus." This remark of the author disposes of all the alleged miracles of his boyhood, and makes this scene the starting point of His wonderful work among men. "And manifested forth his glory." This miracle magnified both the humanity and divinity of Jesus. As guest, master, and Lord, He revealed Himself to those who had eyes to see, and ears to hear. "His disciples believed on him." The impression upon the most of those present was transient, but it remained indelibly written upon the memories of His disciples, who had already yielded themselves to His influence. "To him that hath shall be given."

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Where Jesus is welcomed there His disciples should be received.
2. The presence of Jesus brightens all pure joys.
3. That which is given to Jesus occasions no real lack to the giver.
4. Jesus helps in His own time and way.
5. Jesus blesses graciously.
6. Jesus blesses abundantly.
7. Jesus blesses richly.
8. The work of Jesus manifests His glory.
9. "Believe me for the very works' sake."

The Little Maid's Amen.

A RUSTLE of robes as the anthem
Soared gently away on the air—
The Sabbath morn's service was over,
And briskly I stepped down the stair;
When close, in a half-lighted corner,
Where the tall pulpit stairway came down,
Asleep crouched a tender, wee maiden,
With hair like a shadowy crown.

Quite puzzled was I by the vision,
But gently to wake her I spoke,
When, at the first word, the small damsel
With one little gasp straight awoke.
"What brought you here, fair little angel?"
She answered with voice like a bell:
"I tum, tos I've dot a sick mamma,
And want 'oo to please pray her well!"

"Who told you!" began I; she stopped me:
"Don't nobody told me at all;
And papa can't see tos he's cryin',
And 'sides, sir, I isn't so small;
I's been here before with my mamma,
We tummed when you ringed the big bell;
And ev'ry time I's heard you prayin'
For lots o' sick folks to dit well."

Together we knelt on the stairway,
As humbly I asked the Great Power
To give back her health to the mother,
And banish bereavement's dark hour.
I finished the simple petition,
And paused for moment—and then,
A sweet little voice at my elbow
Lisped softly a gentle "Amen!"

Hand in hand we turned our steps homeward,
The little maid's tongue knew no rest;
She prattled, and mimicked, and caroled—
The shadow was gone from her breast;
And lo!—when we reached the fair dwelling—
The nest of my golden-haired waif—
We found that the dearly loved mother
Was past the dread crisis—and safe.

They listened amazed at my story,
And wept o'er their darling's strange quest,
While the arms of the pale, loving mother
Drew the brave little head to her breast;
With eyes that were brimming and grateful
They thanked me again and again—
Yet I know in my heart that the blessing
Was won by that gentle "Amen."

—Gospel Expositor.

"It Pays to Be Manly."

THIS is what Alfred Stanley said to a boy standing idle in front of a store who jeered at his manly appearance. Alfred spoke, and would have walked quietly on, but the boy said, "It does, eh? How much a week?" Something in the tone made Alfred stop. "I am paid every day, and every hour, and really every minute," he replied. "Come, now, no fooling." "I am truely paid," said Alfred, seriously; "and I invest capital in a place where it is safe. I can never lose it." The boy's attempt at raillery fell before Alfred's earnest face and manner, and he listened with something more of respect than he had shown in a long time, as Alfred continued: "I am not paid in dollars and cents; they won't last forever, you know. My pay is the trust of my friends, the knowledge that no honest deed ever dies, and the promise that the pure in heart shall see God." It was only a seed by the wayside; but who shall say that it was lost?

Why Bessie Loves Harry.

BESSIE goes to a little private school every afternoon. One morning, Miss Andrews, the teacher, took her pupils out to walk. She often does that in fair weather. That day they went to see the gold fish in the pond in Dr. Macy's grounds. This pond is small, but deep, and is alive with the pretty gold fish, who swim round and round.

The children had brought bread crumbs to feed the fish, and as they scattered the crumbs the fish would follow them along the bank. The bank was steep and the curbstone smooth and slippery. Miss Andrews had to call out very often, "Take care! Be careful!" as some little girlie would bend too far over the deep water.

At last Bessie did lean too far over the deep water. She had slipped and gone quite out of sight in an instant! Then Miss Andrews lost her presence of mind. Instead of thinking at once what to do, she only stood still and screamed. So, when Bessie's brown, little head came up out of the water, there was no one to take hold of her and pull her out, and down she went again under the water.

But somebody had heard Miss Andrews scream. That somebody was eight-year-old Harry, who came running as fast as his two feet could bring him. And when Bessie came up the third and last time, he was there to seize her and pull her out. So it is no wonder that Bessie and her mother, too, love Harry. For had it not been for Harry, Bessie would certainly have been drowned.

So she is always trotting after Harry, and saying: "O Harry, button my boots? O Harry, give me a drink of water! Please, Harry, let me ride on your sled;" or, "Here is a red apple for you, Harry; O Harry, here are some chocolate creams; O Harry, see what a cunning saucer pie mamma has baked for you and me," and so on and so on, until her mamma says she should think he would be quite tired out with hearing, "O Harry!"

But he never is, oh, no! he is a manly little boy, and likes to take care of little girls, and stray kittens, and all wee bits of things.—Little Men and Women.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
For Lemons or Lime Juice, is a superior substitute, and its use is positively beneficial to health.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. Sanford, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. Thompson, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. Barrington, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.
100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.
D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF
PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
Dr. Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime.—Invalids need no longer dread to take that great specific for Consumption, Asthma, and threatening Coughs,—Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. As prepared by Dr. Wilbor it is robbed of the nauseating taste, and also embodies a preparation of the Phosphate of Lime, giving nature the very article required to aid the healing qualities of the Oil, and to re-create where disease has destroyed. This article also forms a remarkable tonic, and will cause weak and debilitated persons to become strong and robust. It should be kept in every family for instant use on the first appearance of Coughs or Irritation of the Lungs. Manufactured only by A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION, Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.
Perfect Drainage is essential in every house worth living in, and Perfect Regularity in the working of all the excretory organs of the body is necessary to insure perfect health.
Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient is the most effective, agreeable and economical remedy known that will secure this result. In full doses it thoroughly evacuates the bowels, and by establishing a regular habit
Cures Constipation.
In medium doses it neutralizes excess of acid, promotes the action of the skin and cures Sick Headache. In small doses it stimulates the stomach, aids digestion and cures Dyspepsia. Prepared by TARRANT & CO., New York. Sold by druggists everywhere.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.
Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

☞ REFERENCES. ☜
Rev. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
Dr. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
Hon. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
Rev. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
Dr. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address
E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%
The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage Loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.
Burlington Route
C.B. & Q.R.R.
It is the only line with its own track from
CHICAGO TO DENVER,
Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.
It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to
SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO
It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.
From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between
Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,
For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.
Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.
For Tickets, Rates, General information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address
T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
HENRY B. STONE, Asst. Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, Gen. Pass. Agt., Chicago.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
New York Office, 51 Wall Street
Organized 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.
Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.
The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.
J. D. Jones, President.
Charles Dennis, Vice President
W. H. H. Moore, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. Raven 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. Chapman, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.
Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.
H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.
Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,111,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	387,483 93
Net Surplus	1,217,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	867,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,750 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	132,800 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 20
Real Estate	1,272,683 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, Jr., } Ass't Sec's.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.
MEMORIAL WINDOWS,
CHURCH FURNITURE
INTERIOR DECORATIONS
J. & R. LAMB, 59 Carmine St., New York.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. FOR OIL.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

BELLS
McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
Chimes and Peals for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Improved Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

"There is no gain "so certain as saving "what you have." Why then destroy valuable garments by using common and impure soaps upon them? Prof. Genth of the University of Pennsylvania, says: "I find the "Ivory to be a very "superior soap. It "gives a fine lather, "and it can safely be "used upon any fab- "ric."

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

Arnold, Constable & Co

FINE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Offer the following

GREAT BARGAINS.

Five Hundred (500) pieces ENGLISH BODY BRUSSELS, warranted best quality, fine styles, at $1.25.

Three Hundred (300) pieces best quality DOMESTIC BRUSSELS at $1.00 and $1.10.

Extensive assortments of all other CARPETINGS at proportionately Low Prices. Complete stock of MATTINGS and RUGS, just opened.

Broadway & 19th st

NEW YORK.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

LOOK AT THESE BOTTLES

and see which you had rather have—the big "10-cent bottle" with 5 cents' worth of glue, or the honest bottle with

DOUBLE THE QUANTITY, AND BETTER QUALITY.

This is an exact reproduction of a bottle of glue extensively advertised as a "10-cent article."

IT IS NOT LePAGE'S.

This cut shows the smallest size of

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

bottle,—outside and inside.

THE TOTAL QUANTITY of LePAGE'S LIQUID GLUE sold during the past five years in all parts of the world amounted to over

32 MILLION

Bottles. Everybody wants it.

ALL KINDS of DEALERS find it a good thing to handle. It brings new customers, and makes the old ones STICK.

TWO GOLD MEDALS

London, 1883; New Orleans, 1885. At the New Orleans Exposition joints made with it endured a testing strain of over

1600 POUNDS

TO A SQUARE INCH.

Pronounced the Strongest Glue Known.

IT MENDS EVERYTHING,

Wood, Leather, Paper, Ivory, Glass, China, Furniture, Bric-a-Brac, etc.

STRONG AS IRON, SOLID AS A ROCK.

Indispensable in every household.

If your dealer does not keep it, send his card with five 2-cent stamps for sample by mail. RUSSIA CEMENT CO., Gloucester, Mass.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. 7% Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

BLACK SILKS.

THE VARIOUS WEAVES MAKES, AND QUALITIES OF BLACK SILKS UPON WHICH RELIANCE FOR DURABILITY IN WEAR CAN BE PLACED, ARE NOW OFFERED BY US AT REMARKABLY LOW PRICES.

WE ARE ALSO OFFERING FOR COMBINATIONS WITH ABOVE A BEAUTIFUL ASSORTMENT OF RICH NOVELTIES IN CHENILLE AND VELVET EFFECTS EARLY INSPECTION IS INVITED. ORDERS BY MAIL PROMPTLY FILLED.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.,
Broadway & 11th St.,
New York.

SEVEN PER CENT.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES,

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED BY
The Equitable Mortgage Co.

REFERENCE—FIRST NATIONAL BANK, NEW YORK.

The following are a few of the loans we now have to offer, and the margin of security gives some idea of the safety of these mortgages:

Number.	Amount.	Security.	State.
2621	$300	$1,300	MISSOURI.
2679	500	3,400	KANSAS.
2694	600	3,500	MISSOURI.
2 95	700	2,[illegible]05	KANSAS.
2546	800	2,400	MISSOURI.
2673	900	3,[illegible]00	KANSAS.
2680	1,000	3,500	KANSAS.
2648	1,[illegible]00	3,700	KANSAS.
2693	1,500	5,170	MISSOURI.
2686	1,600	5,600	KANSAS.
2575	1,700	5,250	KANSAS.
2577	1,[illegible]40	5,450	KANSAS.
2685	2,[illegible]00	7,100	KANSAS.
2[illegible]43	2,000	8,000	KANSAS.
2[illegible]0	3,000	10,380	MISSOURI.
2669	3,400	10,000	KANSAS.
2647	4,500	14,000	KANSAS.
2664	5,000	17,000	KANSAS.

OFFICES:
NEW YORK, 135 and 137 Broadway.
BOSTON, 23 Court Street.
PHILADELPHIA, 112 South 4th Street.
KANSAS CITY, MO.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N. Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

RIDLEYS'

Grand, Allen and Orchard Sts., N. Y.

ANNOUNCE

THE RECURRENCE OF THEIR

Spring Opening,

Tuesday & Wednesday,

APRIL 13 AND 14.

In the meantime

NOVELTIES

For Spring wear will be found in large assortments throughout their Establishment at prices which will show a material saving.

Straw Goods.

New Colors and Combinations

IN STRAW HATS AND BONNETS.

The Largest Stock in the City.

All the Latest Novelties Added Daily.

The Modiste, a very Stylish Hat for Ladies, in fine White Milans, Fancy Straw Edge.

The Startle, a new Bell Crown Turban of fine White Milan Crown, Black Milan Brim. Also in Colors and Combinations, including the New and Popular Colors, Coral and Privet.

Misses' and Children's School Hats, trimmed with Satin and Velvet Ribbon, Chenille, Tinsel Buttons and Buckles, in New and Popular Shapes, all Colors and Combinations.

There is no doubt about our stock being the largest in this city to select from.

MILLINERY.

Our Millinery Parlor contains a very large and varied assortment of

Pattern Bonnets and Hats,

Including Paris Trimmed and those from our own workrooms, and in each case the difference in price will show a saving of one-third to one-half usually paid.

DRESS GOODS

In all the Latest Effects

In All Wool, Silk and Wool, and Cotton.

SPRING SUITS AND WRAPS

For Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all the New Spring Styles.

Fashion Magazine.

The Spring Number surpasses any of its preceding issues, and is beyond doubt the best periodical of its kind published. All illustrations are exact copies of the originals, which are on sale in our 52 departments, and the price-list gives the same prices as are asked at our counters. Issued Quarterly, 50 cents per annum, or 15 cents Sample Copy.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 311½ to 321 Grand St.,

56 to 70 ALLEN ST., 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST.,

NEW YORK.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916, Boston, Mass

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 15. WHOLE No. 2907. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

JOHN BUNYAN.—It has been customary for a long time to consider the author of the "Pilgrim's Progress" a Baptist. But it seems now that this is incorrect. There is no evidence that he was ever immersed, though he doubtless preferred that mode of baptism, and there is evidence that three of his children were baptized in infancy. Hence, Mr. Vedder says in the Baptist Quarterly, "No strictly organized Baptist church of the present day would admit to membership one who, like Bunyan, practised infant baptism in his own family. Nor could it do so without ceasing to be a Baptist church." All this is strictly true, but it is a good deal worse for the exclusionists than for Bunyan.

AN EXAMPLE.—There has recently been privately printed for family use a well-executed and tasteful memorial volume of the late Hon. Augustus Schell. In this we observe two features worth reproducing. One is the circumstance that in the prime of his vigor and influence Mr. Schell consented to act as a judge of election in one of the city districts, which of course he did not for the trifling emolument, but from a sense of public duty, the same that induced Madison after being President to act as justice of the peace in Virginia. Such examples should be noted and imitated. The other is the fact that he would never make answer to newspaper attacks, no matter how bitter or persistent. As an active and prominent politician he suffered much from the license of the press, but he opened not his mouth, following the same rule as the late James T. Brady. Such a course shows true dignity and self-respect. And besides, often silence is the most crushing reply that can be made to a calumniator.

MR. EDWARD ATKINSON, who has made economical statistics a special study, reckons that two single men, occupying one room, can live comfortably and decently in Boston, on $172 each a year. The estimate, therefore, of the Commissioner of Massachusetts, that a married workingman, with presumably a family of two or three children, needs $754 a year to furnish him with a healthful and decent living, is a close one, leaving no margin for contingencies. Decency requires that the married workingman shall occupy at least two rooms, doubling the rent—an important item. Mr. Atkinson's reckoning demands constant and intelligent economy. When with these calculations the fact is regarded that the average earnings of the large majority of workingmen the country over is only $7 a week, the discontent of a large portion of the working classes is accounted for. To keep the family out of debt the children must work and earn wages as soon as possible. Their education, beyond a merely rudimentary one, is out of the question. However he may profess to despise the "literary fellers," no man is really more sensible of the value of education than the untaught workingman. He knows that for him and his, as wages now are, the future offers only work and unbroken economy. He knows another fact, as everybody does, that incorporated capital has been increased 20, 50 and even 100 fold, at the simple cost of printing the stocks and bonds, and that on this increase the percentage of profit goes on. Therefore, he is restless, is driven to desperation, drowns his hopelessness and anxiety in drink and is lured to acts of violence.

BEFORE THE THIRD PLENARY COUNCIL of the American branch of the Roman Church was held in Baltimore, a delegation of the hierarchy in this country visited Rome and there submitted to the Pope and his counsellors a list of the topics to be discussed. A series of topics was agreed upon, and the Council, when it met, walked along the line marked out at Rome. The decrees of the Council, when adopted, were transmitted to Rome, to be approved and clothed with authority. They have recently been returned with the Papal approbation. From this outline it is plain that the branch of the Papal Church in the United States is an alien ecclesiastical body, ruled from Rome. The decrees modify the methods by which bishops are nominated, but these nominations are to be sent to Rome and the appointments are to be made there. They also contain excellent words in regard to the observance of the Sabbath and in relation to liquor selling, and condemn certain scandalous practices at fairs and picnics. But they declare that the marriage of a Romanist with a person of another faith is regarded with disapprobation; that each parish shall institute a parochial school and that all parents shall send their children to such schools; that secret societies are to be condemned and the formation of societies of Romanists to be commended. The decrees exhort Romanists to be a separate people and enjoin measures to make them such.

MR. GLADSTONE addressed last week such an audience as never before has listened to one man. The entire civilized world attended to his words. The venerable statesman, now in his seventy sixth year, in moral elevation and courage, in dignity, in intelligence, and in deference to an enlightened and conscientious public opinion was equal to the occasion. The spectacle was one of true moral and intellectual grandeur. There was majesty in the cheers of the people which preceded and attended the progress of the great leader of men from his residence to the House of Commons and which greeted his appearance in the House—such cheers, it is said, as have never before been heard in London. One man stood up in his place to answer and equal this demonstration of tens of thousands of men, and in every respect did equal it.

What will be the result? No man can tell, except that Ireland cannot be and will not be ruled hereafter as it has been. To citizens of the United States it appears an easy matter to arrange a State government, with large powers, under a central government, with limited but supreme power. Some such arrangement in Great Britain would relieve Parliament of the consideration of many affairs of only local importance and satisfy everywhere the desire for independent local government. And some such arrangement in regard to Ireland will follow the position taken by Mr. Gladstone last week.

What then? This: The Romanists of Ireland will make just such use of power as Romanists have always made, and the results will be those which everywhere and in all times have attended the rule of Romanists. For such results the responsibility cannot be laid on the British Parliament; but Home Rule will be accountable for what it does. And the final result will be the decline and overthrow of Romanism in Ireland by the children of the people who are now amongst the most devoted adherents to the Papacy.

Not the least of the grand achievements of last Thursday night was the telegraphic report of the incidents of the day in London, and of the occurrences in Parliament, including Mr. Gladstone's speech, which occupied nearly three and a half hours in its delivery.

"A Reasonable Faith."

LAST year a small volume bearing this title was issued by Macmillan & Co. It is simply an attack on "Evangelicalism," and condemns it as unscriptural and unreasonable, laying, however, the main stress on the latter feature. Let us look at the matter.

The book speaks of "the horrors of predestination," but what is there horrible in the notion that God governs the world and always meant to govern it for His own glory, yet respecting and preserving the free agency and responsibility of man? The unreasonable view is that all is at haphazard, and God may be and is often disappointed. Again, "imputed righteousness" is spoken of as a fundamental mistake, whereas we affirm that it is what reason requires. Man is subject to a law which requires perfect obedience. This he cannot render. There is no hope for him, therefore, unless at the great day he can produce a righteousness which the Judge will accept. Besides, imputed righteousness is the necessary preliminary to inherent righteousness. Again, a modal trinity is substituted for the actual Trinity of the Scripture. On this point reason says that we know only what God has been pleased to reveal of Himself, and what He has revealed is three distinct persons in one Godhead. Again, the vicarious sacrifice of the Lord Jesus is denied. Whether such a sacrifice was made is to be determined by Scripture, but that the doctrine is reasonable is shown by the customs of the whole heathen world and by the faith of the historical Church from the beginning. Again, we are told of the "voice within," which is and ever has been present to the human soul. But if this is of real account, why do not its utterances agree with one another? And if it is a sufficient Divine revelation, why did God add another? Again, Inspiration, it is said, means merely that the sacred writers were "gifted with a remarkable power of spiritual apprehension." This puts them on the same plane with Augustine, Anselm and Pascal, and confounds "the oracles of God" with the wisdom of man; which is absurd. It is not strange, therefore, to see the distinct avowal that "if we find in the Bible what seems to us less exalted and pure than the character of God should be, we are not to bow down to it as God's revelation to us." This, we insist, is the height of unreason. The Bible is God's Word, or it is not. If it is, then clearly it is to sit in judgment on us and not we on it. Every rational soul must agree with the Apostle, "Let God be found true, but every man a liar."

We have thus gone through most of the salient points of this pretentious work of Three "Friends," not because the book deserves it, for it is superficial and illogical in the extreme, but because of its taking title. All men desire a reasonable faith, and the glory of the Christian system is that it commends itself to the best judgment of men, alike in its doctrines and its ethics. But it is easy to distort and misrepresent dogma, (which is just what these writers have done,) and then call the caricature unreasonable. Hence the need of asserting and reasserting that the evangelical faith is not only true and Scriptural, but preëminently reasonable, satisfying at once man's intellect, his conscience and his heart, and illustrating this fact by its triumphant victories not only throughout Christendom, but in every field of Christian missions in any part of the world.

License.

We extract from an organ of Prohibition the following, which is a fair specimen of its utterances:

"We hope it will be thoroughly understood that Mr. Bascom's action in going to Albany and firing hot shot at that High License bill of Dr. Crosby's meets the entire approbation of Prohibitionists. If that High License bill, like the good boys in old-time Sunday school books, dies young, and the desire is felt to blame the Prohibition party for it, let it be understood the party is perfectly willing to shoulder any or all of the responsibility. It is ready, too, to repeat the operation at any time."

So it has been for twenty years and more. Reputable persons go to Albany to seek to have some improvement of the License Laws, but these men stand in the way and say, "No, it must be prohibition or nothing," and they actually join hands with the friends of free rum. They call this wisdom. To us it seems the contrary. In Illinois high license has banished the rum shop from many localities, and in Chicago has reduced the number by some hundreds. It is true that there is a difference of opinion in regard to the effect of the regulation. Testimony in relation to it is contradictory. One reason, perhaps, is that the full effect of high license may not be seen in the first year of trial. There are indications that, if vigorously enforced, it will continue to diminish the number of liquor saloons. In one case, at least, a liquor seller in a high license State wrote to a friend in Iowa, inquiring whether, in one of the towns in Iowa, where prohibition has not been enforced, he could carry on his business with profit. The answer was that he probably could not, that the cost of defending suits that would be brought against him would consume the profits. But this dealer evidently was finding that he could with difficulty make a living under high license.

However all that may be, it is plain that what is especially needed in this State of New York and neighboring States, is a union of those who would restrict the liquor traffic to the utmost possible extent. There are thousands of intelligent men in this State who would like to see the saloon banished, but who are convinced that at present it cannot be done, that prohibition is impossible. They believe that something less must first be attained. Many of them believe that high license is an advance toward prohibition. They are intelligent, conscientious, active, earnest Christian men. They are to be ranked among the very best citizens of the commonwealth. They are total abstainers, are fully alive to the great evils produced by the use of intoxicants. Their example in the communities in which they live is of the highest value, and has great effect in inducing other men to leave liquor alone. On the other hand are the citizens, also intelligent, conscientious and Christian, who believe that prohibition should be on the statute book, and they are the minority at present. We do not know that they claim that prohibition can be enforced in this and the neighboring States. What is desirable is a union on some measure backed by a strong body of citizens, which can and will be enforced. And no organization, no body of temperance men, will gain anything by forgetting the ninth commandment.

CHURCH TRIALS.—A fortnight ago the Methodist Conference of New Jersey, being requested to postpone the trial of an accused member, because he at the time was under trial before a civil court, refused to do so. This seems to us strange. The custom in all the Presbyterian and Reformed bodies, when a man is prosecuted both civilly and ecclesiastically, is to give precedence to the former, for the obvious reason that a civil court can command the attendance of witnesses, and an ecclesiastical one cannot. Hence the latter can be surer of the evidence by awaiting the action of the former. And certainly this stands to reason.

"Old Colony" Papers.

AN OLD ORGAN.

I.

AMONG the treasures and heirlooms of my library are four bound volumes, entitled "The Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church." The statement that such a publication ever existed is probably a revelation to most even of that elect company who maintain an intelligent interest in our Church by means of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. For that reason, together with the fact that the "Magazine" was the forerunner of this paper, and was practically merged into it, leads me to tell my readers something about it. And I am specially bound to do so at this time, because its first number appeared in April, 1826, exactly sixty years ago.

It was a tolerably well printed periodical, of thirty-two 12mo pages, with double columns. The first two volumes have the imprint of "Terhune & Letson, New Brunswick," and the others that of "William A. Mercein, No. 1 Burling Slip, N. Y.,"—both of these being designated as the "Rutgers Press." The prospectus (or "Introduction") was addressed from New Brunswick, where the editor was then Professor of Languages in the College; but "the office of the Dutch Magazine" was soon transferred to the corner of Nassau and Ann streets, N. Y., where was also the "Agency of the Missionary Society of our Church." In point of fact, the magazine was vitally connected with the evangelistic work of the denomination, not only being designed to "diffuse missionary intelligence" and to "call forth the vigor of her missionary efforts," but pledged to appropriate its profits to the cause.

One-half of the title page was taken up with the grand old symbol, which stands also at the head of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. This, I presume our readers are aware, is the coat of arms of William the Silent, Prince of Orange, and is the accepted emblem of the Reformed Church.* The title-page also states that it is "conducted by an association of gentlemen and edited by William Craig Brownlee, D.D." The last two volumes, however, omit the editor's name, and announce the magazine as "conducted by a Literary and Theological Association, and published by the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society of the Reformed Dutch Church."

The "Introduction" adverts to the "very remarkable change" which "characterizes the present age" in the diffusion of knowledge among the unlettered, especially by means of periodical publications. And yet the "extensive and flourishing" Reformed Dutch Church had not yet had "a single periodical work which she could call her own, or which she could wish to patronize as a Church....There has not been one religious weekly or monthly messenger to visit the dwellings of her sons and daughters to excite in us a tender sympathy, a generous attachment to the Church of our forefathers." Another object which is emphasized, and which has been equally sacred to those who have conducted its successor, THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, is to "advocate the pure doctrines of our Church and defend them against the invasion of modern speculations." A resolution of the last General Synod, recommending such a publication, is quoted with the words, "This Magazine is, therefore, the child of the General Synod."

A curious illustration of the still more "remarkable change" which has taken place in "the diffusion of knowledge" is given in this Prospectus,—which speaks of "an arrangement with a distinguished bookseller in New York to import" certain of the foreign periodicals, that are pledged to "reach us forty days after the day of their respective publication in Britain."

The editor, Dr. Brownlee, was a notable and a noteworthy man. Like a number of our leading and most loyal "Dutchmen," he was Scotch, not only by descent but by birth. He was a little over forty years of age at this time, and apparently a person of unusual vigor. I only remember him as a physical wreck, as he used to attend the Lafayette Place Church and sit in the elders' pew, one side having been disabled by a paralytic stroke. He was certainly a man of great energy, intellectual force, and varied acquirements. His professorship at Rutgers was of only a year's duration. In 1826, just after he initiated the Magazine, he was called to the Collegiate Church, where he ministered for twenty-two years, and was the emeritus pastor for twelve years longer. He was a Boanerges as a preacher, and a "war horse" as a controversialist. In the assaults upon Romanism, which were rife in those days, he was a leading champion. He was a prolific writer, and a versatile one. I associate him especially with a novel in two volumes, entitled "The Whigs of Scotland," which I read and re-read in my childhood. It might not affect me so now, but I found it intensely thrilling then, and have ever since had an impression of those Covenanter days as among the most heroic and romantic in history.

Dr. Brownlee contributed the lion's share to the Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church. "The Association of Gentlemen," as is apt to be the case with unpaid labor, does not seem to have overwhelmed him with manuscript, at least of an "available" kind. In one of the earlier numbers he confesses to have been plunged into a fit of "the blues" on account of the failure of a writer to furnish "copy." He was evidently forced to do considerable "padding" in the way of old sermons and the republication of former treatises. Among the latter were twenty-one pages on "The Nature, Obligations and form of the Civil Oath," and more than fifty pages on the authenticity of 1 John 5: 7. His most extended and valuable contribution was a "History of the Reformed Church in the Netherlands and in the United States," which has probably been of great service to those who have since written up the annals of our Church.

Even in the "driest" discussions Dr. Brownlee's style is vitalized and even racy, and there are several unsigned papers which bear his water-mark. The chief of these, and to my taste the best thing in the whole magazine, is a serial, occupying seven numbers, entitled "Traits of Primitive Character." It details in a charmingly quaint and graphic style, reminding one of a Dutch Addison or Goldsmith, the family history of one Hans Van Benschooten, a godly elder of the Reformed Dutch Church, and intensely loyal to its doctrine and usages,—so truly loyal that he was entirely acquiescent in the changes (such as the introduction of English preaching), which were requisite for its perpetuity and progress. Notwithstanding his fidelity in bringing up his children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord,—extending even to the reading and expounding of the Constitution of the Church and the Canons of the Synod of Dort at family worship,—one of his boys goes astray by the evil influence of one Richard Van Winkle. But the pledge of the covenant is fulfilled by his return, a repentant prodigal, to die—his evil genius being reformed also.

I suspect that if the magazine had contained more of this human and readable element, such as would interest the average layman and the women and children, its career might have been longer. And yet we find a communication protesting against so much "light reading," and appealing for "something of the more solid," to wit, "profound and critical pieces," such as "the discussion of 1 John 5: 7." "If men want novels, profane or holy novels, let them look for them elsewhere." This is evidently meant as a blow directly between the eyes of Hans Van Benschooten. The editor prints side by side with it the following:

> Sir,—I do hope you will let us hear again, and soon, from Hans Van Benschooten. And if any article must be omitted, let the discussion on 1 John 5: 7 be omitted, or at least served up less frequently and on smaller dishes. W.

There are several indications that Dr. Brownlee was not exempt from an editor's tribulations, and from those which have uniformly moderated the joys of an editor in the service of the Reformed Dutch Church. If he failed of producing the ideal magazine, it was not for want of advice and fault finding, especially (as he remarks) from those who never did anything to help him either in the way of contributions, sending news or getting subscribers. He says, in pathetic italics, that "it is hard work to please the palate of each guest." He makes dejected appeals to delinquent subscribers. He complains that those who are most clamorous for church news, and the readiest to denounce inaccuracies, are the last to furnish it. He detects the same tendency which has always been the bane of our Church,—a disposition to fault finding and disparaging criticism of our own men and institutions. His sensitive spirit shows itself to be stung by ungenerous and discourteous "attacks." And it is no wonder, that when he resigns his chair at the close of volume four, while expressing "deep respect for his patrons and gratification at the favor received at their hands, he drops into

* That faithful son of our Church, Mr. John S. Bussing, has recently been so kind as to send me a beautiful copy of this device in its original coloring, with a description of its origin and the significance of the three shields and the crown, of which it is composed.

italics again and says, "Yet he retires without regret."

In my next, I shall examine in more detail some of the noteworthy contents and features of this pioneer periodical of our Church. F. N. Zabriskie.

Princeton, N. J., April 1st, 1886.

A Prayer by the Sea.

I SAW the ships on a windy sea
In the light of the morning's gold;
And the shout of the sailors came to me
Like songs from the days of old.

Wild waves leaped up on the crags and beat
On the edge of the rock-bound shore;
And the thought of a coming time was sweet,
When the sea should be no more.

No more, no more shall mothers and wives
Dream of loves that the blue wastes hide;
No more shall the vigorous hearts and lives
Be flung to the wind and tide!

Oh, Father, follow the gallant ships
Through the light of the morning pale!
Thou hearest the prayer of the loving lips,
Thy mercy never can fail.

And guide us all to some haven blest
Where never a tempest is known;
For life is sad, and the secret of rest
Is hidden with Thee alone. —Sarah Doudney.

Collections of Early New York.

BY CAPTAIN WALTER BICKER.

IN those days hogs were a nuisance. They were allowed to run at large in the streets, and in the upper part of the city, as our vicinity was then called, they abounded to excess. There was no police in the city in those days. There was a "night watch" for the night, but the day had pretty much to take care of itself, except a constable might be found as occasion required. One of the watch houses for night watchmen stood at the corner of Wall and Broad streets, where the white marble building of Drexel & Morgan stands now.

On the northeast corner of Wall and Nassau streets stood the Federal, or as it was generally called, the City Hall. It was on the balcony of this building that George Washington took the oath of office as first president of the United States. Under his administration (2d term) I was born. This building was an antiquated looking affair even in my boyhood. It was quite venerable in its appearance, was built of blue stone (granite). Along the front on Wall street, near the curb, were large square columns of stone, upon which rested the front wall of the edifice from the second story to the attic. The main front wall was on a line which is now the bottom step of the porch in front of the sub-treasury building. This condition of the structure formed an archway as a footpath for pedestrians passing the front of the building, leading out to the regular sidewalk east of the Hall.

Wall street at this time was not the business street it is now. The Presbyterian church, a large building, stood in the middle of the block between Broadway and Nassau street, the venerable Dr. Rogers, pastor. The Bank of New York, Manhattan Company, U. S. Branch Bank and Bank of America, I think, were all the banks that were in Wall street before 1808. Two of these, the bank of America and the Manhattan Co., were dwellings, the first floor being occupied for business purposes, and the residue occupied by the families of the President or Cashier of the bank to which they belonged. There were perhaps two fire insurance companies in the street at that time. The remainder were strictly private dwellings as far down as Pearl street; below that were stores.

In the days of my boyhood what is now Exchange place, from Broadway to its terminus, was called Flattenbarracks Hill, though I think it had a local street name, which I have forgotten. This street was much steeper then than it is now, and formed quite a grand course for coasting in the winter time, of which the boys used to avail themselves to the fullest extent of boyish delight. The course was, starting at Broadway and coasting down to Broad street and turning to the right any distance down Broad street one might choose. To be sure there was some danger from carts or carriages in Broad street; but what boy thinks of danger in coasting time!

At the Bowling Green, where now stands that fine row of well-built, commodious brick houses, originally built for private residences by Stephen Whitney, James Byers and others, each one for his own occupancy, stood the Government House, so called under British rule. It was a handsome building, with pediment front, supported by four large columns. The ground was considerably elevated above the street, with easy access to the building, and in my early day was occupied as the Custom House, David Gelston, Collector, and John Fleming, (my brother-in-law,) Cashier.

At the foot of Whitehall street was a ferry stairs—an inclined plane of thick plank, with stout cleets nailed on to secure people and horses from slipping. This ferry ran to Staten Island. This was long before the day of steamboats.

At the corner of William street and Garden (now Exchange place) was the post-office. It was an ordinary two-story building, the front room of which, fronting on William street, was used as the post-office proper. There was a sort of covered piazza along the front; there were a small number of private boxes for letters and papers. The post-office room may have been twenty feet square. In this room was transacted all the business appertaining to that service for the whole of the city of New York! Mr. Bailey, (I think his Christian name was James,) was Postmaster, and his family lived in the house. The back room on the first floor was the family room, and as a glass sash door opened from the post-office room into the back room, anyone from this room could answer the call. Customers were attended to as now; no one entered the post-office. Letters and papers were handed out through an opening in the front sash partition, across the front line of the building. Carriers were employed as at present, except that they were paid by the receiver two cents for each letter and one cent for newspapers.

At "The Battery" Marketfield street has been considerably widened by taking off a large slice of the Battery. At the farther northerly end of the Battery, as it then stood, there was a mound or elevated spot of ground, say twenty feet square. From the centre of this mound grew a Madeira nut tree. (I have eaten of the nuts myself.) There were settees upon the top of the mound, from which, under the shadow of this tree, a very nice view could be had of the river in a westerly direction. On the Battery, about in line with the gate to Castle Clinton, not far from what was then the outer line along the river front, stood the old flagstaff building. It was built of brick, circular in form, about twenty feet in diameter and the same in height; the diameter lessened as the building approached the top. Upon the top was a flooring, and around the edge of the space was a railing with seats on the inside. It was a sort of orchestra for music, and in the evening a "Vandau" band performed to the no small amusement of the multitude usually assembled there. The building was used for the sale of refreshments. The flagstaff proper was erected in the middle of the building, piercing the upper floor and rising to a very considerable height above. The floor was reached by a sort of a step-ladder arrangement in the inside.

The Battery at this time was not more than half the width from State street to the river that it is at present. Along this waterfront there stood the Old Fort, built of very heavy pine logs, hewn smoothly, top and bottom and sides. Perhaps the structure was ten feet thick and eight feet high. The fort was pierced with embrasures, through which the cannon were fired. In my early days the top of the fort was used as a promenade or lounging place for idlers. There were settees at intervals along the whole length of the fort, which extended from the flagstaff to Whitehall street. A considerable portion of the interior of that part of the Battery, at the junction of Whitehall street and State street, between the fort and the fences, was excavated to the depth of some three feet. Here was placed a furnace for heating cannon balls red hot to fire at the shipping that might come within their range.

The Battery was in those days the principal resort for pedestrians, as the elite of the city lived not above Chambers street, the greater part not above Vesey street. Greenwich street also contained first-class dwellings for a considerable distance, say as far as Cortlandt street. And Cortlandt and Dey and Liberty streets were prominent streets for dwellings.

I should have stated in connection with the item about the fort, that one very cold winter, on or before 1808, this fort was entirely demolished, and was cut up into convenient pieces for handling and distributed to the poor gratuitously. I recollect a very cold winter, but cannot place the year, hickory wood sold in the city for ten dollars a load—carman's load, three of which made a cord—and oak wood at a comparative rate.

The foregoing will be found quite a desultory compound of strange facts, put together as the idea of each presented itself to my mind. I thought that in the multitude of incidents which occurred to my thoughts some of them would be found interesting as curious matters to exist in this, now so great a city, only so few years ago.

The Sun's Heat.

ANOTHER point in which we find an enormous difference between the sun and any other body that we investigate in the solar system is this—that the sun is an intensely heated globe of gas. It is of no use to use any adverbs to tell you how hot it is, and, unfortunately, there are very few available facts; so that I must ask you to give your imagination play, and to believe that it is very, very hot. The values that have been suggested by various men of science vary between 18,000,000 deg. and 3,000 deg. You may take your choice. The fact is, I think, that we are not yet in a position to find out the very best method of determining the solar temperature and then marking it down in an absolutely perfect manner, for the reason that the more one knows about the problem, the more one sees how terribly complicated it is.

No doubt we have here a field of work of the very highest interest. Of course, when men of science have stated that the temperature of the sun is 18,000,000 deg. or 3,000 deg., they have referred to the temperature of that part of the sun which is available to our observation, and to the hottest parts of it. Naturally, if the sun be a heated globe of gas, on the outside it must be cool, so that they do not mean that this globe of gas is equally heated throughout, but that the hottest part of it—the part which sends us the effective heat which we try to measure—is at that temperature.

There is one other very interesting question connected with the remark that the atmosphere must cool to the outside. This time last century the idea was that the sun was a habitable globe just like the earth. An intense heat and light were granted to an exterior envelope, but it was imagined that there was a reflecting stratum inside which sent all the heat away earthward, and planetward, and starward with redoubled energy, while at the same time it shielded the inhabitants who were below this reflector from the direct light and heat of this envelope. That was Sir William Herschel's idea. We know now that these things cannot be so. If the walls, and ceiling, and floor of this lecture theatre were incandescent, you may depend upon it that, in spite of any number of reflectors we should soon be incandescent too. According to what is now known as Prevost's theory of exchanges, anything inside a heated chamber must, if you give it time, get to the temperature of the walls of that chamber, for the reason that the walls would be giving heat to the object inside, and the object would be sending the heat back again if it had a surplus of it, and you would get this exchange going on until the temperature of everything inside would be the same as the temperature of the envelope; so that we are now perfectly certain that, if the temperature of the photosphere of the sun, let us say, be 3,000 deg., or 30,000 deg., or 3,000,000 deg., the temperature of the internal part of the sun will not be less. It may be much more. So that we have to give up all that beautiful idea of the habitability of the sun by creatures like ourselves.

Now, if this mass of gas, a million and a half of miles in diameter, let us say, is coolest outside, and hottest at the centre—which I think you will grant—there must be a gradual increase both of temperature and of pressure toward the centre. The observations which have been made during eclipses indicate with sufficient definiteness that there is an undoubted increase of temperature toward the centre, and that the various appearances which we get at the photospheric level really mean that at this point, where the pressure is greater than at any superior level—as the pressure in London is greater than the pressure on the top of Mont Blanc—the temperature also is higher, as is indicated by the extreme brightness of the objects seen, as compared with the dimming off of those parts of the solar atmosphere which are farther removed.

Now, can we watch this? Can we study it so that we can find out all about it? Well, not entirely. The photosphere which carries the spots to which I have referred allows us certainly to see the phenomena of the spots, but then it acts as a veil that prevents us seeing anything nearer the centre of the sun, whatever it is. It practically serves as a veil for all the underlying phenomena. Also, as I have mentioned, the outer corona is only visible for a few minutes in each generation; so that, when we attempt to watch the totality of the phenomena from the top of that magnificent radius down to that part of it which cuts the photosphere, there are difficulties of every kind supervening; we can only continuously and effectively study those regions of the atmosphere just above the photosphere, or in other words the phenomena included in the inner corona.—From Lecture by J. Norman Lockyer.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

....NOTICE.—Will our friends when sending slips from local journals relating to incidents in the life of the churches kindly insert the date of the issue or the date of the occurrence described?

An Easter Collection.

A SUGGESTION was received at the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Foreign Missions that every church, in which it can be done with propriety, shall take a special collection on Easter Sunday for the relief of the treasury. The suggestion was accepted. One church in this city, which has made its annual liberal contribution, voluntarily concluded a few days ago to make such an Easter offering.

The proposition springs from a knowledge of the needs of the missionary treasury. The receipts of April must reach $26,000 in order that the fiscal year may meet its own expenses, or must reach $35,000 to meet the outgo of the year and remove the debt ($9,000) under which the year began, or $39,000 if the $100,000 recommended by the General Synod is to be raised. April last year yielded $22,000, and if either of the amounts just mentioned is to be realized special collections seem necessary.

It is very desirable that $35,000 be obtained this month, to clear away the debt and pay the appropriations of the fiscal year which closes on April 30th, for the following reason: The Board has accepted three first-rate young men, to be commissioned if the Church by its gifts warrants such an act. There is no question and can be none as to the quality of the men. If the Board had attempted to make a selection it is doubtful whether it would have made as wise and promising a choice as God seems to have made for it. We say "God seems to have made," because no advances, no solicitations in any degree or form have been made by the Board to these young men. So far as man can judge they are "chosen of God." Two will be ordained ministers and are willing to undertake work in academies—work very much wanted in order to raise up a body of intelligent native evangelists and pastors; and one is a physician of whose services there is undoubted need; indeed, such a man has been desired for years. Besides some of the present force on the field are not in good health and others are advancing in years. To maintain the force it must be recruited.

If these brethren are to be sent forth the appropriations of the new fiscal year, beginning on May 1st, must be increased above those of the year now closing, by about $5,000. It is very desirable, therefore, that the new year shall not begin under a burden of debt.

Is not the Board authorized, by the Providential facts now facing it, to say that the Church should not only think twice, but think many times before it concludes not to send out these young men. Two of them devoted themselves to the foreign field years ago, and have been on the Board's list of candidates about two years. Now the studies of the three are completed and they are ready and wish to leave for the missions. The work they are willing to do has been waiting for them for years. Therefore, here on the one hand is the work, resulting from the gracious influences of the Spirit of God, and on the other hand are the men, called of God, and ready to do the work, and each a first-rate man, with testimonials of the best character.

The matter is one to be decided by the Church, and it can be decided only by the contributions of the Church in money. The Board is not ready to believe that God who has prepared the work and called the men qualified to do it, will withhold from the Church the disposition to assume this additional call upon Christian liberality. OFFICIAL.

....THE REV. DR. JACOB CHAMBERLAIN will speak on Foreign Missions in the Collegiate Church, on Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street, next Sabbath morning, April 18th.

....THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS has accepted the application of Mr. Albert Oltmans, of the Senior Class in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, to go to Nagasaki, Japan. Mr. Oltmans will take the place made vacant by the transfer of Mr. Harris to Tokiyo, and be engaged in the work of education, for which he is believed to have peculiar qualifications.

The Rev. John G. Fagg, who has accepted the call of the churches of Cobleskill and Lawyersville, is still in connection with the Board. He is simply released for a limited period in order to carry on and establish the work so auspiciously begun by him. So soon as the way shall be open he expects to enter the foreign field.

Board of Domestic Missions.

THE CLOSE OF THE FISCAL YEAR.

WITHIN three weeks, or more definitely, on the 4th day of May next at noon, the 54th year of our Board will close. The undersigned desires to call the attention of pastors, consistories and individual members to the above fact, in order that those who desire their contributions to appear in the next annual report may remit before the above date. Will treasurers of churches, Sunday-schools and missionary societies send in at the earliest date, (but certainly before May 4th, 1886,) all funds on hand for either the Domestic Board or the Church Building Fund.

In making remittances please draw checks to the order of "Board of Domestic Missions, R. C. A.," and do not insert the individual name of either Secretary or Treasurer.

JOHN S. BUSSING, Treasurer pro. tem.

....ROCKY HILL, N. J.—Last Sunday (April 4th) 38 were received into the church on confession of their faith, and 18 of the number baptized. This is the harvest of the glorious revival which we had during the month of January last, when God so graciously visited us and poured out His Spirit upon us.

C.

....JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The Free Reformed Church, Rev. Henry Mattice, pastor, received nine more new members on confession during the first week of this month, after having received 17 last month.

....SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—At the communion service of the First Church, held on Sunday morning, April 4th, twenty five persons were received into membership, twenty-two on confession of their faith in Christ. Professor Frank Hoffman, of Union College, united by certificate.

....PASCACK, N. J.—Rev. E. Lodewick, the pastor, preached his eleventh anniversary sermon Sunday, April 4th. His text was, Song of Solomon 7: 12, "Let us see if the vine flourish." Notwithstanding the changes caused by death and removals, there has been an increase of thirty-five families, thirteen of which came in the last year. More pews are now rented than ever before in the history of the church, nearly all being occupied. The morning congregation is large. During the eleven years eighty-eight have been received on confession and thirty-three by letter, making a total addition of one hundred and twenty-one members. Fourteen were added on confession last year, all from the Sabbath-school except one. He has attended one hundred and sixty-three funerals of persons, mostly outside of his congregation. They have lost by death thirty nine members. Mr. Lodewick has officiated at fifty seven marriages and seventy-five baptisms. The congregation is now engaged in erecting a chapel.

....PERSONAL.—The Rev. W. T. Griffin, of the Bedford Church, Brooklyn, sails on Wednesday on the "America," of the National Line, for Europe, where he will remain for a few months seeking a restoration of health....The Rev. Abrm. R. Van Nest, D.D., has returned from Florida, and is ready to engage in the work of the ministry where his presence may be desired.

....THE CLASSIS OF HOLLAND met in regular spring session at Zeeland, Mich., on April 7th. Rev. J. P. De Jong was elected President and Mr. J. Den Herder, Clerk. On the evening of the first day the Classical sermon was preached by the Rev. G. Niemeyer.

A communication from the Rev. A. Zwemer was received, requesting that he may again hold a place in this Classis. The nature of this communication was such that it was unanimously resolved that the request be granted.

The Rev. P. Phelps, Jr., D.D., requested to be dismissed to the Classis of Schoharie. The following was adopted:

Whereas, The Rev. Dr. Phelps has applied to our Classis for dismissal to the Classis of Schoharie, therefore, while the Classis accedes to the request and grants his dismissal, it hereby records the valuable and self-sacrificing services of the Rev. Dr. Phelps during his connection with our Classis for more than a quarter of a century, especially as President of Hope College, to the welfare and upbuilding of which institution he has devoted the best energies of a great part of his life, and, while in the Providence of God, his connection with our Classis will now cease, the Classis of Holland prays the Great Head of the Church may abundantly bless our dear brother and make him an instrument of great usefulness in his future field of labor. S. C.

....AS A MEMORIAL of the Rev. Dr. Oscar H. Gregory, the excellent sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. John W. Beardslee, in the North Church of West Troy, N. Y., is published by the Consistory. Dr. Gregory's ministry is fitly described as a beautiful example of obedience to the Lord's command, "Be thou faithful unto death."

....THE YOUNG LADIES of the Collegiate Dutch Church corner 48th street and 5th avenue, will give a

KAFFEE-KLATCH

on Thursday evening, April 15th, in the parlors in the rear of the church. Coffee and cake will be sold, the cup and saucer to be retained as a souvenir of the occasion. The proceeds of the entertainment will be used for missionary purposes. There will be vocal and instrumental music at eight o'clock.

The young ladies desire to have this entertainment social in its character, and so extend a cordial invitation to all the friends of the church to be present.

....CAATSBAN, N. Y.—The Ladies' Missionary Society of this church held their annual meeting one day last week. From the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer read by the pastor, Rev. A. J. Sebring, it was shown that the Society has seventy members, and that it has raised for the Woman's Board $103.85 during the year. Excellent and stimulating addresses were made by Revs. Peter E. Kipp of Schenectady, N. Y., and J. F. Riggs, of Bergen Point, N. J.

These brethren also spoke in the evening at the anniversary of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Church of Saugerties, N. Y. The reports of this Society, read by Dr. Wortman, also indicated that gratifying success had attended its efforts in behalf of both Foreign and Domestic Missions.

....SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Rev. Dr. Griffis delivered his farewell sermon in the First Church on Sabbath evening, April 4th. The attendance at the morning service had been large, when the communion was administered and twenty-five persons welcomed to church fellowship; but in the evening every available place was occupied. The Star says, "Not at the commencement exercises, nor on any other occasion has the church been more completely filled." Rev. Peter E. Kipp, of the Second Church, assisted in the service. The sermon consisted largely of lessons educed from the history of the Reformed Church in the Netherlands and in the United States, and concluded with expressions of regard for the citizens of Schenectady, the members of other churches, the members of the church and congregation of the First Church.

Dr. Griffis' pastorate covers nearly nine years, beginning with May 31st, 1877. During that time 145 persons have been received on confession of faith and 69 by certificate, and the amount collected for congregational and benevolent purposes has been $60,406.

A farewell reception was given to Dr. and Mrs. Griffis during the following week. Amongst the large number present were many representatives of other churches of the city. Hon. Austin A. Yates, in the name of the church, after a charming and brief address, presented to Dr. and Mrs. Griffis a large and handsome silk-lined case containing a full table service of solid silver forks and spoons. On the case is inscribed on a silver plate, "Presented by the First Reformed Church, Schenectady, N. Y." The church also gladdened the heart of the pastor's little daughter by a gift of a solid silver salver, cream jug and sugar bowl. The lecture-room was abundantly decorated with flowers for the occasion.

....THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC met at Boardville, April 6th. Owing to the severe rainstorm and to the delay of the cars there was not a full or prompt attendance. Rev. T. J. Kommers preached from John 4: 34.

The following were appointed as delegates to the Particular Synod of New Brunswick: Primarii, Revs. Philip Furbeck, J. O. Van Fleet, J. Russell Verbrycke, T. J. Kommers; Elders J. Davenport, H. Vreeland, J. R. Berdan, W. S. Williams. Secundi, Revs. Wm. E. Bogardus, H. W. Teller, B. C. Miller, Jr.; Elders A. D. Bogert, S. P. Roome, H. V. Doremus.

A call from the Church of Franklin Furnace upon the Rev. G. S. Garretson was approved, and a committee was appointed to install him, April 29th, at 7.30 P.M.

A committee was appointed to organize a church (Holland) at Little Falls, N. J.

The report on the State of Religion was of an encouraging nature, the Churches of First Totowa, Paterson and Pompton Plains having been specially blessed and the addition to all the churches on confession of faith amounting to 110.

S. C.

....SCHUYLERVILLE, N. Y.—The installation of Rev. E. A. McCullum took place according to appointment of Classis, on April 7th, at 7.30 P.M. A large audience gathered notwithstanding the storm, and the pulpit was beautifully adorned with flowers. The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman of Albany, preached from Luke 4: 43. Rev. J. W. Beardslee of West Troy, read the form and delivered the charge t

the pastor; Rev. J. Webster Bailey, of Northumberland, charged the people; Rev. A. C. Cochran, of Easton, President of Classis, presided; Rev. J. G. Fallen of the Methodist Church read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. J. C. Forte of the Baptist Church offered prayer. The people are greatly attached to their new pastor.

....The Record, published by the First Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., informs us that an addition of 40 members has resulted from the revival in the First Church of Grand Haven. That the First Church of Holland, Mich., has nearly prepared the basement of a new church building for occupancy. The building will cost $10,000. That Rev. C. Van der Veen has for the present engaged as the stated supply of the Presbyterian Church of Montague, Mich. That the Church of Centreville has recently received an addition of 40 members, the fruit of a revival.

....Pompton, N. J.—It was the Rev. T. J. Kommers who delivered the acceptable address at the anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Trailing Arbutus.

THE Mission Band of the children of Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., New York, has concluded to charge 25 cents for a box about 4 1-2 by 8 inches of arbutus, and supposes that the postage will be from 6 to 10 cents additional. They will pick and pack the charming flowers and put the proceeds into the missionary box. The pastor writes: "The flowers are pretty forward. We expect, if the weather proves favorable, to make the first gathering about the 21st." We hope that many orders will be sent to the pastor, Rev. W. B. Darrach. For ourselves, we are waiting with a great longing for the coming of our package.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The Young People's Association of the Second Church of Hackensack, N. J., celebrated its first anniversary on Sunday evening, April 4th. After singing, Rev. A. Johnson offered prayer and Rev. Ralph Brokaw read the Scriptures. Secretary Banta's report gave a brief review of the Association's work for the first year. It started with 28 members and has doubled that number, 19 of whom have professed religion and became members of the church. Rev. Mr. Brokaw addressed the assembly, confining himself to the work of such societies, the good accomplished through their agency, and gave incidents in his experience. Rev. A. Johnson, who is President of the Association, also delivered an address. He expressed satisfaction at the progress made in a single year and felt encouraged. The exercises were brought to a close by singing.

....The organ in the church at Port Jervis, N. Y., which was completely demolished by the late gale which blew down the church steeple is to be replaced by a new instrument. The organ which was destroyed was the gift of the late H. H. Farnum. The new one will be the gift of Mr. Farnum's nephews: Peter E. Farnum and Eli P. Farnum. The organ is to be built by the J. & C. Odell Co. of this city, and placed in the rear of the pulpit so as to harmonize with the newly designed auditorium. The whole interior of the church is to be thoroughly renovated; the ceiling will be in white ash finished in oil and varnished, the side walls kalsomined, the necessary painting done, and new carpets will take the place of the old ones. With all the improvements, the church when complete will present a handsomer appearance than ever before. The work of repairing the steeple is being pushed along as rapidly as possible, and it is expected that everything will be completed about the middle of July.

The Ladies' Bible Society, N. Y.

THE beautiful hall of the Managers of the Bible Society was filled with ladies last Thursday afternoon attending the Seventieth Annual Meeting of the New York Female Auxiliary Bible Society.

The Rev. Dr. R. R. Booth presided, and, after the presentation of the annual report, introduced with felicitous terms the various speakers who had been invited to address the meeting.

Rev. E. W. Donald, of the Church of the Ascension, alluding to the three score years and ten which had passed since the Society was founded, spoke of the power inherent in the Bible, from which the passing years had detracted nothing, and which would grow more and more manifest before another seventy years had passed.

Dr. James M. King, of the Park Avenue Methodist Church, emphasized the need of carrying the Bible to those who are living in ignorance of its truth and pressing its claims upon the heart and conscience.

Rev. Alfred A. Butler, of the Church of the Epiphany, commended the work of those who supplement the written Word by their ministrations of charity.

Great interest was added to the meeting by the presence of a venerable clergyman, the Rev. James D. Wickham, D.D., of Manchester, Vt., well known to many residents of New York as the father of ex-Mayor Wickham. Dr. Wickham, who is eighty-nine years of age and in vigorous health, told the story of his being present at the organization of the American Bible Society in 1816. At that time a recent graduate of Yale College, his interest in the Bible Society was due to letters which he wrote while acting as an amanuensis for President Dwight, when the possibility of uniting Christian people of different denominations in such an organization seemed to many minds well-nigh impossible. Copies of one of these letters were sent to Lyman Beecher, Dr. Elias Boudinot, and other leading men.

A few score people were present at the first meeting of delegates in May, 1816, of whom few, if any besides Dr. Wickham survive. The New York Female Bible Society was organized not many weeks later, and Dr. Wickham's mother was one of its earliest members. K. B. W.

American Bible Society.

THE Board of Managers met at the Bible House, on Thursday, April 1st, the Hon. Enoch L. Fancher, LL.D., President, in the chair.

Interesting letters were presented from the foreign field, containing in many cases a review of the agency work during the year 1885, extracts from which will appear in the Bible Society Record and the Annual Report. Mr. Milne's visit to Caracas has resulted already in the sale of 711 volumes of Scripture in that city, and in an earnest appeal, signed by forty or fifty persons, that his colporteur, Mr. Penzotti, may be sent back to reside there as a pastor.

Grants of books were made for benevolent distribution at home and abroad of the aggregate value of about $6,900. Appropriations of funds were also made for printing and circulating the Scriptures in foreign lands to the amount of $66,633.48. This includes appropriations to the Society's Agencies in La Plata, Brazil, Persia, Cuba, China, and Siam; to the Presbyterian Board, for its Mission in Siam; to the American Board, for its Missions in Madura and Spain; to the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for its work in Germany and Switzerland; to the Evangelization Committee of the Waldensian Church, for Bible colportage in Italy; and to the Evangelical Society of Geneva, for Bible colportage in France.

A letter was presented from Mr. Andrew L. Taylor, who has been Assistant Treasurer of the Society for seventeen years, tendering the resignation of his office, to take effect on the first of May next.

The total receipts in March were $58,463.59. The total receipts in the year ending March 31st were $521,910 59.

The issues from the Bible House in March were 87,180. The whole number of volumes issued from the Bible House during the year, not including those issued in foreign lands, was 904,179.

....A monument to John Wesley is proposed by the Baltimore Conference, to be located in Washington, and a committee has been appointed to consider plans and location.

The General Outlook.

....A short time ago the centennial anniversary of the founding of Presbyterianism in the city of Montreal was celebrated. The Presbyterian relates the story, and gives the results of the first church organization in Montreal thus: "The first congregation was founded on the 12th of March, 1786, in a private house on Notre Dame street, by John Bethune, a Scotchman, an army chaplain, and a Loyalist from the United States. After fourteen months it was left for four years without a pastor and with precarious supply, and but for the true inherent Presbyterian tenacity would certainly have foundered. In 1791 the Rev. John Young was called from Schenectady, and for two years he and his charge were under the jurisdiction of the Presbytery of Albany." The church lived on in spite of adverse circumstances, and now in Montreal there are seventeen Presbyterian churches, and side by side with them a Presbyterian college, and the prospect of future growth is quite as g od as at any time in the past.

....The centennial celebration of the introduction of Methodism among the West India Islands was recently observed in Antigua under circumstances of special and peculiar interest. The author of "Antigua and the Antiguans" gives this bit of history, showing how the event commemorated came about: "In 1786 Dr. Coke, the Wesleyan missionary and historian, left England for the purpose of spreading Gospel tidings in America. Meeting, however, with violent gales, the ship in which he took passage was unable to make her destined port; and after encountering a series of disasters, as a last and only resort, was obliged to put into Antigua in distress."

....The Rev. Theodoric Pryor, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Nottoway Court House, Va., now in his 82d year, preaches as frequently and vigorously as he did forty years ago. During the last three years sixty members have been added to his church on confession of faith.

....The course of Monday lectures in Boston which closed two weeks ago was the eleventh given by Joseph Cook, making an aggregate of 186 lectures, in which double that number of topics have been discussed. In attendance and interest this winter's course compares favorably with that of previous years.

....The two hundredth anniversary of Hans Egede, Greenland's apostle, was lately celebrated at the Greenlander's House in Copenhagen. After an address in Danish a full service in Greenlandish was conducted by Rev. Jörgeson. As early as the 11th century the Gospel had been carried to Greenland, since which the Church there seems to have been forgotten. This negligence pressed heavily on large-hearted Hans Egede, in Norway, and he had no rest till he trod the icy land with his own foot, in 1721. His success to begin with was very little. In 1733 his heart was gladdened by the unexpected arrival of three Moravian missionaries. But the joy was shortlived, and his life was embittered by the pride of the newcomers. Egede was slandered and avoided as an unconverted man, because he could not submit to their doctrines on justification and sanctification and other doctrines. "He repaid their hostility with the most self-denying care when they were attacked by a contagious disease." In 1736 he returned to Denmark, where he labored as Superintendent of a Greenlandish Seminary in Copenhagen. His missionary work in Greenland was taken up by his son, Paul Egede.—The Lutheran.

....The Western Christian Advocate says it has reported 25,000 conversions since the first of the year.

....A Mormon congregation near Munich, Germany, consisting of sixteen persons, was recently dissolved by the civil authorities.

....At the last meeting of the Committee of the Methodist College in Belfast, Ireland, Sir William McArthur announced that if the trustees of the College would provide a site, he was prepared at his own personal expense to erect a hall for the education, first, of the daughters of ministers; and secondly, of other ladies who might wish to avail themselves of the advantages of collegiate education.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, April 7.—There is trouble in the British Cabinet on account of Mr. Gladstone modifying his Irish policy....Mr. Gladstone delivered a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Wm. E. Forster in the House of Commons....The Canadian Premier, Sir John A. Macdonald, is in a very critical physical condition ...The army bill was debated in the U. S. Senate, and the Post-office appropriation bill passed the House....In the Legislature at Albany the Senate listened to arguments to annul the Broadway Railroad charter....A prominent physician in Baltimore died from hydrophobia....There is a rumor that the Knights will be joined by the engineers on the Missouri Pacific road....There is a threatened tie-up on several of the surface roads of Brooklyn....There was a loss by fire at Lacrosse, Wis., of $1.000,000....Dr. Bristor has been expelled from the Newark Conference....Extensive damage was caused by the recent flood in many quarters.

Thursday, 8.—There is great excitement in London over the expected unfolding of the Irish policy of Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons. Thousands of Irishmen in London will cheer him as he enters, and a Liberal manifestation is also expected. ....General Don Bernardo Soto has been elected President of Costa Rica....Great suffering from the recent floods is reported from different quarters. At Charleston, West Va., four hundred families are destitute, and supplies have to be sent to them to keep them from starving....On the Fitchburg Railroad between Bardwells Ferry and West Deerfield, Mass., a passenger train went over an embankment of 200 feet into the Deerfield river. A number were killed and many wounded. Six bodies have been recovered....A large mob of strikers in St. Louis went to the different railroad yards and compelled men to stop work. In one of the yards the mob was stopped by deputy marshalls with Winchester rifles....The bill to annul the charter of the Broadway Railroad passed the Senate at Albany, as did also the bill to elect fifteen Aldermen on a general ticket....The British schooner "Beta" was lost on the coast of Massachusetts....The tie-up of cars in Brooklyn has been averted by arbitration. ....Professor Thacher, of Yale College, died suddenly yesterday....Seventy girls in a feather factory in New York went on strike yesterday.

Friday, 9.—The House of Commons was crowded to overflowing, and the enthusiasm was intense as Mr. Gladstone defined his long expected Irish policy, which favors giving to Ireland a domestic legislature to consist of two orders. First, twenty-eight representative peers, and seventy-five representatives elected by the people, and second, a body of two hundred and six representatives. The bodies shall deliberate together, but vote separately. It excludes Irish members from the British Parliament; and retains in the hands of the Parliament customs and a few other affairs. Mr. Parnell strongly supports the measure....The Italian Ministry have sent in their resignations. ....The Congressional Library bill has passed the Senate ...The Pan-Electric Telephone investigation still continues.... Three bills proposed by the railroad commissioners passed the Assembly at Albany. ...Ex-Alderman Miller was arrested in Florida yesterday as one of the bribe takers in the Broadway railroad affair, and the arrest of several others are expected... A fire occurred in the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, in which a number of valuable paintings were destroyed....In the Deerfield accident eleven bodies have been recovered. Twenty-eight persons were wounded. There are two persons still missing ...The condition of Secretary Manning remains unchanged.

Saturday, 10.—Mr. Chamberlain and the Marquis of Hartington replied to Mr. Gladstone against Home Rule ...The British newspapers criticize Mr. Gladstone's policy very severely....A number of congratulatory telegrams have been sent to Mr. Parnell....There has been a fight between strikers and gendarmes at Lyons, France.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

A Modern Sir Galahad.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER II.

So the young man went forth, knowing but two types of womanhood—one self-sacrificing and of a sweet, yielding nature, except as related to her inflexible purpose toward the object of her sacrifice—her son's ministry; the other, self-sacrificing and in a sense unyielding, but both high-souled and pure hearted types of New England womanhood in our isolated towns. What wonder was it, having seen the seeming delight in self-sacrifice of these two, and knowing really nothing of other women, that Laurence Bowles should regard self-sacrifice as a happy and appropriate element for women, and should feel that men honored them most truly when crowning them with its mission?

"You must have a change, little mother," he said, as he bade her good-by. "I shall expect you and Aunt Beatrice to make me a long visit when I am settled in my own parish." The fond mother smiled more at a recognition of the spirit of the words than at a hope of change for herself. Aunt Beatrice did not smile, but pursed her lips; one might have divined her expression as being one of incredulity. She was, however, thinking more of her nephew's linen, which for days her thoughts and hands had been engaged upon, than of his words, for she appreciated to the last degree the importance of fine, well-kept, nicely-laundried linen as factors in ministerial success; and a young minister, she felt, could hardly place too much importance upon the fact, as she saw it, that a pure Gospel might be dishonored by the slovenliness of the message-bearer.

When the tall, straight form of their handsome young man had become lost to the sight of the worshipful two, they turned to each other with tears of love and pride, happy that their hero was just what he was and like none other.

The church to which this hero had been called was in a worshipful, waiting state. Its heart had been captured at a first hearing of the young man. A sister in the church, whose intellect was regarded as above the average and whose discernment of spiritual gifts was considered unquestionable, declared that "she felt like Simeon—almost ready to depart in peace when she heard the long prayer, so comprehensive, so full of the wrestling spirit, so full of sweet trust in its strength of faith." Even Deacon Meade, who had felt that the Danton First Church must wait long for a shepherd who could lead it as had the reverend servant who had given up his service only with his breath, had said that "it was hard for him to decide whose preaching and character the minister's resembled most—St. Paul's or St. John's." Deacon Meade always spoke of the apostles and prophets as if he had been honored with a personal acquaintance, and, indeed, no one had a better right than he to boast of intimacy with them, if close study of their separate lives and missions gave such a right.

Danton's previous pulpit ministries had seemed to be for those whose characters had passed the formative stage and had seemed to have no relation to the needs of the young people, recognizing, perhaps, the idea established in many churches of old towns in the long ago, that the righteous will order their households after them. But with the first sermon of the new minister the young people of the church felt as if a new Gospel had been preached to them, and when on the third Sunday a sermon was delivered to them especially, it seemed as if new conditions for every-day life were made possible to them. So had Laurence Bowles vitalized the truths presented to his mind and heart. Danton's young people were not, as a whole, aspiring or cultivated, according to our modern ideas of culture. Especially were the young ladies far behind their sisters in our great centres of civilization and culture, for the great impulse toward a life purpose and calling had not begun to be recognized except in literary and forceful mind centres. Young men who had been seized with a desire to enjoy more of a chance than their quiet old town offered had sought the large cities, and had begun to taste the sweets of success or the bitterness of disappointment, but the young ladies had not dreamed that the way was opening for their feet to follow in a path which individual talent or ability would in the end justify. This sermon to them was an elementary one in their experience. They began to question within themselves whether it was possible for them to be more than they were, a lesson which was useful if used in reference to succeeding stages of development. But the young minister's personal magnetism had much to do with the effect of that sermon, though if any recognized this fact they did not lisp it.

The church, in its call to the young man, had emphasized the idea of their need of a wholly-consecrated man for a pastor, and if Laurence Bowles could not answer to this need it was not that he had not laid his life-purpose upon God's altar. For him and his service, as has been said, this church was now worshipfully and hopefully waiting. When Andrew Haynes, after inviting Laurence Bowles down to Shoreton, whispered his purpose to his wise Alice, she cautioned him with respect to the needed discretion in trying to bring about an introduction to her friend Miriam Eaton. "It must all seem a happening," she said; "in truth, I have a superstitious fancy that psychological forces will establish favorable conditions and bring about legitimate results for those who were born for each other." Andrew Haynes looked into the love-illumined eyes of the speaker and silently blessed the forces, whatever they might have been, which had brought their two lives together; but somehow he was not quite willing to trust the fate of his friend to a like power. He reasoned within himself, Laurence is such a Sir Galahad in make-up that his knighthood will hardly allow him to recognize love as unmixed; he will always wonder what service of sacrifice it will promise for his life-pledge; yet he finally concluded that his mentor's word was law in in this respect, as in all others.

A few days after his arrival Laurence Bowles was invited to tea at the home of the mentor. He dressed himself in his ministerial suit and went out for a walk along the beach before keeping his appointment. He passed the stretch along which the many bathing houses were ranged and from which the bathers were coming and going; he walked on until he reached a point where one bathing house supplied the demand of a few very quiet people who disliked publicity when taking a bath; and to whom it had only a common significance, not accepted wholly at promiscuous bathing places.

Sir Galahad's eyes were upon the sands and his thoughts were far away in the town where he was so soon to begin his service for the cause to which he had devoted himself. The waves were breaking near him with a dash that seemed, even half-conscious as he was, in harmony with his intense desire to become a power spiritually. Suddenly he was roused from his reverie by a scream: "Oh help!" He saw a white-faced bather with arms uplifted in an imploring gesture. He threw off his minister's coat and rushed forward, his knighthood springing instinctively to the call. He had reached the bather who had shouted for help and saw the need—her elderly companion had been carried beyond her depth. It was only a moment's work to reach the sinking woman, bear her up and strike out toward the shore. Three dripping, speechless ones stood by the bathing house. The dry clothes of the ladies were waiting for them in the bathing-house, but Sir Galahad had but one dry garment waiting for him—his ministerial coat upon the sands. The elderly lady saw in the road above a public carriage. To its driver she beckoned and ordered him to take the gentleman to his hotel. Turning to her deliverer she said, "I must know more of you. I should like your name."

Laurence Bowles appeared confused, hesitated, then taking from his ministerial coat a card, he handed it to the lady. She bowed and then followed the young girl into the bathing-house, while her rescuer entered the carriage and was soon at his hotel. He found that the news of the rescue had already reached there. And his dripping garments, which surely were not knightly apparel, revealed to them his knightliness in the affair. Many sentences, expressing the minds of as many people with regard to the rescue, fell upon his ear as he passed to his room. "A fellow who will save an old woman like her is a knight in the true sense." "If it had been the attractive young lady instead of her disagreeable old grandmother, a romance might have grown out of it." "But," answered a cynical voice, "it might have been for the sake of the young lady, after all." From all this Sir Galahad gathered enough to show him that the young lady was considered a prize in the town. He had been impressed with the expression of the pale, sweet face, and the words which he had been obliged to hear gave him a sense of disgust and of humiliation. That a simple act of humanity should be judged as a selfish one was bad enough; but to drag the young creature who had implored his assistance into the low calculations was to him profanation.

It was late when the minister arrived at the home of the Comptons, to find his friend Andrew Haynes impatient at his delay. The guest felt the annoyance of the situation as he realized that to explain the cause of his late appearance would be impossible to his dignity or to his delicacy of conception. He made his apology in a few fitting words and then followed the hostess with her other guests to the dining-room. In the course of the conversation one of the gentlemen remarked, "I heard as I was on my way here that the old lady Eaton and Miss Miriam were bathing, and that the old lady went beyond her depth and that a gentleman who was walking on the beach heard the call for help and rushed in to save her from drowning."

"And who was the favored individual who rescued her?" inquired one; "the gods have smiled upon him surely, for the old lady never forgets a kindness, and he will certainly be rewarded by a permission to look upon the beautiful girl she has kept caged so long."

The Sir Galahad motives of the minister were again insulted. He did not raise his eyes, and it was well that he did not, for instinctively Andrew Haynes turned to him with a searching glance, and this glance, unseen by the knight of the wave, took in the fact of the travelling suit. From that moment there were two abstracted guests at the table. No one among the company had heard who the deliverer was, and so the subject was dropped, much to the relief of the gentleman in travelling dress. After the company had separated that night and Andrew Haynes, as a privileged member of it, was left with the fair daughter of the house to have a half-hour communion, he told her his suspicion with reference to the rescuer of the old lady Eaton.

"Well, my dear little enchantress, you are likely to prove yourself a prophetess also," said the devoted lover; "you rested upon the belief that those who were born for each other would be brought together through psychological influences. Your prediction with regard to Sir Galahad and your friend is likely to be fulfilled; you could not have chosen, with even your versatility, a more unique situation," and Andrew Haynes was happy in the thought that another was about to become, if not as happy as himself, yet nearly so, perhaps.

Laurence Bowles had been surprised to learn that the maiden who had implored his help in saving her grandmother was the same as she whose figure and voice had attracted his attention as he passed the old mansion on the morning after his arrival, and that night he had his dreams—waking and sleeping.

(To be continued.)

Timely Thoughts on the Liturgy.

The writer was much interested in the article on "Our Liturgy" which appeared in The Christian Intelligencer of March 17th. The conclusions which "Chesty" reaches have been held by the writer for several years. They are the result of constant observation of the tendency toward a closer union, which is characterizing the churches of the present day, and of his earnest conviction that the Reformed Church occupies a position in the community of Christian churches at once unique and one which should make it the natural point around which this drift of feeling may gather. Another important reason for the writer's conviction is the benefit and edification he has derived from a participation in the use of the liturgy. Being a member of the Collegiate Church, in which the Revised Liturgy was adopted the same year as authorized by the General Synod, he has looked forward to every service with a new interest, feeling that the reading of the Psalter, making the responses, and joining in the repetition of the Creed, etc., have met the longings of his heart toward a truer Spirit of worship and emphasized the fact that he was an integral part of the congregation.

There is not a particle of doubt that "our Church has everything necessary to become a great organization," and that "our history is a grand one and to-day we want to be able to take advantage of any general religious movement, such as now seems about to commence, and to do our share of the great work to be done." What is needed is a more general adoption of the Revised Liturgy, so as to place us before the world in our true historic position as a spiritual, historical and Reformed Church.

The writer has often been pained, when attending certain Reformed churches which use a liturgy, to note the contrariety of opinion which seems to prevail respecting its proper use. One reason for this doubtless lies in the fact that members of other communions have come into our Church, who of course have not breathed the spirit of the Reformed Church nor had that special training which comes from being educated in her institutions. It is very natural for such ministers, instead of employing a liturgy which expresses the mind of the Church for centuries, to construct one according to their own individual ideas. It is difficult for such persons to realize that the worship of the Church is better promoted by that sinking of the individuality which comes from the proper use of the Liturgy. Then again, some of our own ministers do not allow the liturgical question to occupy that place in their minds which its importance seems to demand. It is a noteworthy fact that some ministers, born and educated in our Church and who have placed no special value on its Liturgy, have, upon entering other communions which do not possess liturgical features, been awakened to its importance.

The Presbyterian Church, with all its virtues, has, in times past, exercised an unfortunate though limited influence on our Church in liturgical matters; but happily there are strong indications of a desire to return to our ancient usages.

The General Synod of 1882 wisely anticipated the rising of the tide by setting forth the Revised Liturgy. When the Church is convinced of the utility of this liturgy let such amendments as experience may determine be made thereto, and then let the use of the same be made obligatory. Meanwhile, let the ministers make their services conform to the Revised Liturgy as it now stands.

The orders for morning and evening service are herewith appended, with some rubrical suggestions, in the hope that they may be found helpful.

THE ORDER FOR MORNING SERVICE

as set forth in the Liturgy of the Reformed Church.

(If there be an anthem let it precede the Invocation, but the Christian doxology should never be used in this place.)

I. INVOCATION.

The Invocation is concluded with the Lord's Prayer, in which the people, either kneeling or with bowed heads (but never standing,) unite audibly, as also in the Amen at the close of every prayer in public worship.

II. SALUTATION.

This should never be omitted, it being one of the distinguishing characteristics of our Church. It is derived from the custom of the Apostles as shown in their Epistles.

III. READING OF SCRIPTURE.

1. The Ten Commandments and Summary of the Law.

After the reading of the law a suitable response to be sung.

2. The Psalter.

To be read responsively by the people standing, after which is to be sung the Gloria Patri, the people still standing. There is great propriety in singing the Gloria Patri at this point, as it connects the Old Testament with the New.

3. Lesson from the Old Testament.

After which is to be sung, the people standing, the Te Deum, the Gloria in Excelsis, Venite, Ps. 95, Jubilate, Ps. 100, or other canticle, either of which is to be found in our own books adapted to congregational singing.

4. Lessons from the New Testament.

IV. SINGING.

The hymn to be sung by the people standing, and to conclude with the Amen, as are all the other hymns as they may occur in the service.

EXORDIUM REMOTUM.

The use of the Exordium Remotum is an ancient custom in our Church, and when used aright is a source of edification, by preparing the minds of the worshippers for what is to follow.

V. PRAYER.

The people kneeling or with bowed heads. If the Liturgy be desired it is to be used here.

VI. SINGING.

The hymn to be sung standing.

VII. SERMON.

VIII. PRAYER.

The people kneeling or with bowed heads.

IX. OFFERINGS TO THE LORD.

X. SINGING.

The hymn to be sung standing and to conclude with the doxology.

XI. BENEDICTION.

This should be pronounced when the people have resumed their seats with bowed heads or are reverently kneeling.

The Levitical as well as the Apostolic Benediction should be used in the morning service, this being the ancient custom and continued to the present day in some of the churches.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

The order for the evening service is the same as in the morning service, except that the reading of the Ten Commandments is omitted and the Creed introduced after the first hymn, the Creed to be repeated with the minister, the people still standing.

It is desirable that other chants be used in place of those sung in the morning service, such as Cantate Domino, Ps. 98, Bonum Est, Ps. 92; Deus Misereatur, Ps. 67, Benedic Anima Mea, Ps. 103, or the Magnificat.

The orders of service as above set forth are in nearly every particular followed in the Collegiate Church at the present time. Indeed, this church has always been diligent in retaining as far as possible the ancient usages.

The writer from boyhood never remembers the seasons of Christmas, Easter and Whitsuntide, to have passed without proper recognition in the service of the church. The Salutation, Exordium Remotum, the use of the robes of office by the ministers in the discharge of their several functions, the setting apart of special pews on either side of the pulpit for the elders and deacons, the custom of the consistory of greeting the minister when he descends from the pulpit after the service in order to show approval of his discourse, and other usages are still maintained.

The writer earnestly hopes that this paper may do its part toward awakening the church to the importance of asserting its individuality and maintaining uniformity in its service. W. L. B.

First Impressions of China.

BY REV. P. W. PITCHER.

FIRST impressions of a new land are apt to be strong ones. To say ours were such on entering this country is but half expressing the fact. Native customs and manners presented a novel scene. So entirely different was everything from what is seen in our own land that we almost imagined we had been transported to another world. I know my pen must fail in presenting, to you who are so far away, the real picture. To see these things as they are, to appreciate the towns and cities with their crooked and filthy streets, you must be an eye witness. But one reason prompts me to attempt it. Need I tell you that reason is to draw your thoughts towards this degraded people? And for such a reason you will pardon much.

For a few days before reaching port we enjoyed an excellent view of the coastland of China. It is very rugged. The rocky peaks stand out in bold relief, extending in precipitous headlands. Bare hills stare down upon us. Numerous islands nestle all along the shore, some of them pagoda-crowned. Lift your eyes a little and as far as your vision extends you may see range upon range of mountains, stretching far away in the distance. They lift themselves up from little hills to mighty towering peaks, thousands of feet high. On some one or two of these high places stand, like some bold sentinel, the temples of superstition and false gods—the pagoda casting gloomy shadows upon the land. Huge boulders of rocks rising to an elevation of many hundred feet and bristling pines line many a mountain side. And then looking a little nearer we see the small hills terraced one above the other, covered from base to summit with plats of wheat, barley, rice and other vegetables. And on many another hillside we see the tombs of the dead scattered about. Choice spots they are for the last resting place, the old ocean lulling them to sleep.

At last we were among this great people, that portion of the human race from whom so many shrink and regard as outcasts. Well, they are a sorry looking set of beings that swarm before us. Here they are in multitudes. The streets are alive with a teeming throng, and the unwary pedestrian is liable to be hustled about and shouted at unceremoniously. Here every aspect of Chinese life passes before you, presenting grotesque pictures. Here goes the motley crowd, from the wretched beggar clothed in filthy rags to the stately mandarin adorned in royal garments. On beholding such sights we stop and question ourselves if this is all real or whether it is not the working of our imagination. Men almost nude, hatless and bootless, go hurrying by, giving a grunt of warning for people to clear the road as they go struggling under the weight of some ponderous burden. Others are drawing heavy laden wagons and some are before the jinrickshas, while still others are bearing on their shoulders the sedan chair. What does it all mean? Have men turned themselves into "beasts of burden?" Alas! too true. Do you wonder such scenes appear unreal? And they present a sad phase of human life. But perhaps the beggars show a more wretched state of existence than these "heavily laden" ones. They dress themselves in the most outlandish way possible and appear as hideous as they can. They do most horrible things to carry on their professions, such as putting out their eyes, deforming their features, cutting the flesh and severing the cords of the body, and thus destroy the use of their limbs. The other day we saw one of these professionals on all fours, being unable to stand erect. Thus men doubly make themselves beasts to gain a lazy livelihood. It is horrible enough for men thus to mutilate their own bodies, but what sight so piteous as to see a little, deformed and blind girl, shabbily clothed, seeking for "cash" for those at home who have made her the miserable wretch she now is. Oh, that the shadows and the darkness might no longer fall upon and crush the life out of these little ones!

In Chinese towns we see queer sights and hear strange noises. Through crooked and extremely narrow streets we wend our way; climb flights of stone steps and pass through much mud and filth. You have no idea what disgusting places these streets are. Many of the cattle-yards in your land are far preferable. In the words of the poet: "Several well-defined and distinct stenches" greet the sense of smell at every step. The streets are always full and in "Indian file" the procession moves. One must needs be on constant guard else he will run against some one ahead or be run into from the rear. "Lost in wonder and amazement" at the strange sight, we are suddenly made aware of our existence by the shouting of some degenerate cooly, as though we were ten miles off, to "clear the track." And we clear. He goes by and we escape injury. So he is forgotten and we become oblivious to everything in the line of coolies and look with wonder at the open shops with their wares in full view. These shops have no doors or windows; one whole side is open. They look more like stalls than stores. Multitudes rush by. All is motion. And from such activity one would think there was not another place in the whole world where so much business is transacted, while the contrary is the fact. At times the noise is deafening. Gongs are being sounded in all directions; some heralding the procession of some idol and others announcing the approach of the street vendor. Vociferous cries of hucksters and coolies; the barking of dogs and grunting of pigs; the firing of crackers and reports of guns, as well as the screeching of the cockatoo and other domestic sounds, make one grand pandemonium worth hearing. Perhaps in the confusion we have been banged against and hustled about relentlessly; but what is that in comparison with these new experiences.

The dogs of China are fit subjects for an artist, and they are a wonder in themselves. The brief picture I must draw of them would make the dogs happy to know that this was their real state. What more graphic word can I use than bald-headed? Some of them are bald headed all over. Some have hair on their tails and none on their heads, and vice versa. Some are half rotten and full of sores. Others are nothing but a set of bones. Others have the whole combination and are more dead than alive. They are hideous and most disgusting to look at. And, sad as it may be to say it, there are many, many human beings here not much better off.

As we pass along we get a hasty glance into some of the homes. Dark and dingy the room appears. Very little sunlight can cheer that small dwelling. If any windows at all, they are extremely narrow and without glass; they are nothing but wide cracks through which the rays of the sun can steal their way. In these homes also dwell the pig, the goose, the chicken, the duck, the turkey, the cat and the dog—all members of the family. If there be any choice rooms in that house, these creatures are just as free to occupy them as any other members. And they are just as much at home. They have free access.

There are many strange things of which I would like to speak, but my letter is already too long, and these must be deferred until another time. But do you ask after reading this: Has not Christian influence done much for this people? Is no religion making brighter homes and a nobler race? Yes, a thousand times, yes. Our chapels on the Sabbath declare this truth. Many the home that is brighter and happier, being enlightened by God's truth. Many the joyful heart that unites in singing God's praises. Little children join the chorus and swell the anthem heavenward. But where there is one happy home, there are ten hundreds of desolate ones; where there is one singing a hallelujah, there are ten thousands who know not God. To the missionary, looking upon the great work, a sense of utter helplessness comes into his heart. It is only through God's Spirit that the work can be carried on. But it has pleased our God to work through means. And here a sense of weakness comes again when we see there are so very few for this great work. Think of it! millions dying about us and we unable to take to them the word of truth. Oh, send more men and women! Delay not. Give the Gospel you possess to these perishing souls. Pray for the blessing on our labor.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....For Easter.—The Intelligencer acknowledges with hearty thankfulness the receipt of a dozen or more of the beautiful "Cards" printed by Messrs. L. Prang & Co. The designs are in exquisite taste and the printing faultless. Mr. W. Hamilton Gibson contributes a charming combination of flowers, and Mr. F. S. Matthews and Miss L. B. Comins have drawn captivating pictures of happy children and of cherubs surrounded with flowers. The various compositions of Mrs. O. E. Whitney cannot fail to win general admiration. Some are of flowers on birch bark, some of flowers combined with lovely little landscapes, others adorn crosses, and those arranged as book-marks are novel, useful and very pleasing. The card representing an Easter angel, with outspread wings and bearing lilies in her arms, is full of grace and beauty. It is by Miss L. B. Humphrey. Too much cannot be said in praise of the designs of blue birds, the harbingers of Spring, by Miss Fidelia Bridges and H. Giacomelli. In fidelity to nature and in the addition of appropriate flowers, grasses, and other accessories, they have seldom been equalled. The satin covered book, adorned with Easter lilies, from a drawing by Mrs. E. T. Fisher, with its collection of choice and inspiriting verses, is as elegant a gift as any one can desire. To one compelled to make a choice the collection is bewildering and perplexing.

....Messrs. George R. Lockwood & Son, who ministered so acceptably to the desires of last Christmas, have again prepared a series of three dainty parchment covered books, the covers adorned with designs in silver and tied with ribbon, as Easter gifts. Spring Flowers for Easter contains verses selected from Longfellow, Adelaide Proctor, Mary Howitt and other poets. Poems for Easter are from the works of Frances Ridley Havergal and breathe the spirit of true Christian adoration and exulting faith. The Easter Bells are by Charles Wesley, M. E. L., Bishop Heber, Henrietta, Electress of Brandenburg, and others. Admirable selections throughout.

...."How We Got Our Bible." By J. Paterson Smith, A.B., LL B. The questions which come up in reference to our Revised Version are constantly presented, and this new book furnishes answers to most of those which relate to the sources of the sacred text. It has but eight chapters, but in these there are very complete statements as to early manuscripts, versions, and the various English translations. The special feature of the book is the number of specimen pages from the earlier English Bibles. In paper and print the work is admirable. (John Wiley & Sons.)

....The latest additions to the new and revised edition of the "Illustrated Library of Wonders" enrich each of the three series into which the Library is divided. To the "Wonders of Man and Nature" has been added a volume by W. De Fonvielle on "Thunder and Lightning," which presents in a very readable form the facts ascertained by scientific investigation. The author is exceedingly moderate and cautious in his statements, and gives numerous examples and incidents to substantiate the positions taken. There are also many practical suggestions which will be appreciated by the general reader. In the same series we have "Adventures on the Great Hunting Grounds of the World," by Victor Meunier, which gives an excellent account of the habits of the wild animals which have tried and developed the skill and courage of the hunter and the methods employed in overcoming them. The narrative is enlivened by animated descriptions of the exploits of famous hunters.

Two neat volumes are added to the "Wonders of Science," the first of which, "The Wonders of Acoustics, or the Phenomena of Sound," from the French of Rodolphe Radau, treats of the laws of sound and their practical application. Beginning with the simplest sounds in nature the author leads the reader, easily and pleasantly onward, to the consideration of the principles enunciated as applied to music, and as utilized in such inventions as the phonograph and telephone. Another volume in this series is "The Wonders of Water," from the French of Gaston Tissandier, edited with many additions by Schele De Vere, D D., LL D. This is one of the best books of the collection, and under the five general divisions of "The Ocean," "The System of Circulation," "The Action of Water on Continents," "The Physical and Chemical Properties of Water," and "The Uses of Water," discusses the whole subject in a clear, comprehensive and popular way, furnishing a large amount of useful information. The last division is especially valuable. To the series on "Art and Archæology" has been added an interesting book on "The Wonders of Architecture," from the French of M. Lefévre, with a chapter on English Architecture by R. Donald, in which the most famous buildings of the Old World, in ancient and modern times, are agreeably described.

These books are all copiously illustrated and are neatly bound. (Scribners.)

...."Ramblings in Beulah Land," by Miss Jennie Smith, is a straightforward, unpretentious record of the writer's evangelistic work, personal experience and home life, covering about one year. Miss Smith was an invalid for sixteen years and was restored to health in answer to prayer. She has given an account of the proof of her faith in trial in a volume entitled "The Valley of Baca," and of her healing in another, "From Baca to Beulah." (Garrigues Brothers, Philadelphia.)

...."A Tale of a Lonely Parish." By F. Marion Crawford. This new volume, by the author of "Mr. Isaacs," is well conceived and executed. The scenes are confined to an inland English village, and yet have sufficient variety and are ably drawn. The plot presents nothing new, but it is cleverly managed and effective. The novel is well written, without any painfully elaborate passages. The development of character is made with a good deal of skill, and one can read without being shocked at absurdities. Mr. Crawford seems to take his place in the front rank of English novelists. (Macmillan & Co.)

...."The American Male Choir." By J. H. Tenney. Male quartets and choruses are getting to be very popular, and, of course, the collections of pieces for such organizations are also increasing in number. The new book now before us seems to answer a very good purpose. Its chief contents are sacred songs, but it has also a number of spirited secular glees. (Ditson & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The special and novel feature of Lippincott's Magazine for April is the confessions of Julian Hawthorne, Edgar Fawcett, and Joel Chandler Harris, under the head of "Our Experience Meeting." There is nothing very remarkable in these bits of autobiography, but it is always interesting to get behind the scenes and know more about the personality of the writers whom we have read, and especially how they came to write what they did. "Utah" is served up in somewhat new points of view by Alice W. Rollins, who styles herself "An Impressionist." Grant Allen has a characteristic essay on the curiosities of "Scores and Tallies." "Aunt Sukey" is a good "dialect" story by F. C. Baylor, "A Vacant House" is a vivacious trifle by M. H. Catherwood. The serial stories "Taken by Siege" and "A Bachelor's Blunder" are well sustained. The "Monthly Gossip's" only fault is rather too apparent an effort to be sprightly. Dora Read Goodale might have found a worthier subject for her muse than "Walt Whitman." Instead of an "April torrent" carrying down drift upon its "large and crystal heart," we beg leave to consider his poetry a mud puddle, and a small one at that.

....The Century for April has three unusually interesting papers on the "Alabama," entitled Life on the Alabama, by P. D. Haywood, one of the crew; Cruise and Combats of the Alabama, by Capt. John McIntosh Kell, her executive officer; and The Duel between the Alabama and the Kearsarge, by Dr. John M. Browne, surgeon of the Kearsarge. These papers form the special feature of this number. Annie Fields gives Glimpses of Longfellow in Social Life; there is also a frontispiece portrait of the renowned poet. George W. Cable furnishes a unique article, illustrated, on "Creole Slave Songs." Washington Gladden treats in his usual vigorous manner of "Christianity and Popular Education." The Grant Monument is discussed among "Topics of the Times." The demand for this number, on account of the Alabama and Kearsarge articles, has been so great that the entire edition is exhausted and it will no doubt be a matter of regret to many that, as the printers of the magazine are moving to new quarters on Lafayette Place, it will be impossible to issue a new edition The English publishers are returning all the copies they can spare, which is said to be only five hundred.

...The Baptist Quarterly for April shows growth. The first article treats of the Preacher as an Interpreter. The second finely expounds the Five-Linked Chain (Rom. 8: 29, 30), only the writer, M. MacGregor, forgot to consult Cremer on the word foreknew. Dr. MacArthur continues the discussion of the Pastor's Leadership of his Church, and invents an advisory committee to do what the Reformed churches long ago secured by the bench of elders and deacons. Dr. G. B. Stevens has a learned article on the Pauline Theology of the Law, but blunders fearfully in making the prescriptive moral authority of the Law to cease under the Gospel. This is followed by two articles on the Lord's Day, one of which, by Dr. C. E. W. Dobbs, utterly denies the continued authority of the fourth command or of "the effete Sinaic decalogue" (!!), offering a string of arguments as weak as water, while the other, by Dr. W. C. Wilkinson, is a severely logical demonstration of the divine authority of the Christian Sabbath. The Editorial Department is well filled, The Homiletic is passable, and the Review of Current Literature is admirable. We specify the criticisms on Cave's Introduction to Theology, Lightfoot's Ignatius, Progressive Orthodoxy and the New English Dictionary. Our Baptist brethren owe it to themselves to give this review a generous support. It deserves it on every ground.

....Babyhood for April is spoken of at home in high praise. The mother-readers specify a number of articles as their favorites; among them "Baby Must Mind," by Marion Harland, and "Our Boys," by Lucy White Palmer. The ideas put forth in these and other short articles express their views exactly. It deserves the reputation it has widely won of being a bright, practical, common sense magazine all the way through. The outline drawings of animals by infant fingers are very cute, and please little eyes.

....St. Nicholas for April contains two articles on Vacation-Schools in Boston. One of these is by E. E. Hale, the other by Charles Barnard. Several illustrations represent little girls at work, sketching, sewing, setting and serving the table, and so on. It is needless to say that both papers are full of interest.

....Wide Awake for April has a most captivating article on Feathered Giants, by C. F. Holder. Among other things worth reading in this number are a delightful sketch of Alice and Phœbe Cary, by Amanda B. Harris, and a description of Cave Spiders, by Mary Treat.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Reformed Publishing Co., Dayton, Ohio: A Popular Treatise on Baptism. By Rev. J. J. Leberman. 16mo, pp. 153. 60 cents.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: Moments on the Mount: A Series of Devotional Meditations. By Rev. George Matheson, D.D. Second Edition. 12mo, pp. 280. $1 25; also,

Theism and Evolution: An Examination of Modern Speculative Theories as Related to Theistic Conceptions of the Universe. By Joseph S. Van Dyke, D.D. With an Introduction by Archibald A. Hodge, D.D., LL.D. 8vo, pp. 433. $1.50; also,

The Last Days of the Consulate. From the French of M. Fauriel, Member of the Academy of Inscriptions, and Professor of Foreign Literature at the Sorbonne. Edited with an Introduction by M. L Lalanne. 12mo, pp. 328. $1.50.

Harper & Bros: The Railways and the Republic. By James F. Hudson. 8vo, pp. 439. $2; also,

Massacres of the Mountains: A History of the Indian Wars of the Far West. By J. P. Dunn, Jr., LL.B. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 784. $3.75; also,

Memoir of Mrs. Edward Livingston. With Letters Hitherto Unpublished. By Louise Livingston Hunt. 12mo, pp. 182. $1.25; also,

Two Arrows: A Story of Red and White. By William O. Stoddard. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 239; also,

Atla: A Story of the Lost Island. By Mrs. J. Gregory Smith. 16mo, pp 284. $1.

Dodd, Mead & Co.: A Daughter of Fire. By Amelia E. Barr. 12mo, pp. 335. $1; also,

The Captain of the Janizaries. A Story of the Times of Scanderberg and the Fall of Constantinople. By James M. Ludlow. 12mo, pp. 404. $1.50; also,

Three Martyrs of the Nineteenth Century. Studies from the Lives of Livingstone, Gordon and Patteson. By the author of "Chronicles of the Schönberg-Cotta Family." 12mo, pp. 315. $1; also,

A Ranchman's Stories. By Howard Seely. 12mo, pp. 356. $1; also,

Tales from Many Sources. Vol. V. and VI. 12mo, pp. 281, 287. 75 cents each.

Thomas Whittaker: Expositions. By the Rev. Samuel Cox, D.D. Second Series. 8vo, pp. 455. $2.25.

American Tract Society: Hope Reed's Upper Windows. By Howe Benning. 12mo, pp. 304. $1.25; also,

The Workman: His False Friends and His True Friends. By Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, D.D, LL.D. 16mo, pp. 254. Paper, 25 cents.

Phillips & Hunt: Commentary on the Old Testament. Vol. VII. Isaiah, Jeremiah, and the Lamentations of Jeremiah. Book of Isaiah. By H. Bannister, D.D. Books of Jeremiah and of the Lamentations. By F. D. Hemenway, D.D. D. D. Whedon, LL.D., Editor. 12mo, pp. 472. $2.25.

EASTER PUBLICATIONS.

George R. Lockwood & Son: Spring Flowers for Easter. Parchment cover, silver decoration. 32mo, pp. 16; also,

Poems for Easter. By Frances Ridley Havergal. Parchment cover, silver decoration. 32mo, pp. 16; also,

Easter Bells. Parchment cover, silver decoration. 32mo, pp. 16.

L. Prang & Co.: Easter Lilies. 12mo. Selected Verses. Pp. 5. Satin decorated cover. In box; also, Cards with Designs by Mrs. O. E. Whitney, W. Hamilton Gibson, Miss Helen W. Emery, Walter Satterlee, Miss Fidelia Bridges, H. Giacomelli, F. S. Mathews, and others. Various sizes, with fringe and without, some on satin, some arranged for book-marks.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Are the Eastern Industrial Training Schools for Indian Children a Failure? 8vo, pp. 45. Indian Rights Association, 1316 Filbert st., Philadelphia.

With the King at Oxford: A Tale of the Great Rebellion. By the Rev. Alfred J. Church. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 66.) 16mo, pp. 200. 25 cents; also,

Sea-Life Sixty Years Ago: A Record of Adventures which Led up to the Discovery of the Relics of the Expedition Commanded by the Comte de la Perouse. By Captain George Bayly. (No. 67, Same Series.) 16mo, pp. 191. 25 cents; also,

The Last Days of the Consulate. From the French of M. Fauriel. Edited with an Introduction by M. L Lalanne. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 359.) 4to, pp. 69. 20 cents.

Roosevelt Hospital, New York. Fourteenth Annual Report, 1885 8vo, pp. 48.

National Academy Notes and Complete Catalogue. Sixty-first Spring Exhibition National Academy of Design, New York. With 93 Illustrations, etc. Edited by Charles M. Kurtz. 1886. Sixth year. 12mo, pp. 170. 50 cents. Cassell & Co.

Sedalia. By Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis, author of "Waiting for the Verdict," etc. (Cassell's "Rainbow" Series of Original Novels.) 12mo, pp. 150. 50 cents.

The Vicar of Wakefield and The Good-Natured Man. By Oliver Goldsmith. (Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 191. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

April.—The Expositor, The English Pulpit of To-Day, The Brooklyn Magazine, The Book Buyer, The Gospel in All Lands.

May.—The Quiver.

BEAUTIFUL NOVELTIES FOR EASTER, IN DAINTY AND ENTIRELY NEW STYLES.

EASTER FLORALS, ETC.

EASTER MESSENGERS. A new poem of the flowers by LUCY LARCOM, written especially for White, Stokes & Allen. Reproduced in fac-simile of the author's MS, as well as in type. Illustrated by SUSIE BARSTOW SKELDING, with exquisite colored plates of Lilies; White Daisies and Grasses; Jonquils and Crocuses; and Sweet Peas. Covers in burnished silver bronze, with design of White Azaleas, surrounded by circles of gold.

I. Sateen Style.—Bound in French sateen, delicate tints, floral patterns, tied with satin ribbon. Cover, as above described, is mounted on the satteen. In box covered with silvered paper, $1.50.

The fac-simile given above is in greatly reduced size, and gives a poor idea of the beauty of the volumes, owing to the impossibility of adequately reproducing the appearance of the colors and bronzes.

II. Silver-edged Style.—With double cover, as before described. Tied with two knots of ribbon. Edges of book silvered. In neat box, $1.

III. Ivorine Style.—[See No. 6, under The New Ivorine Binding.]

EASTER BELLS. An Easter poem by H. H. [HELEN JACKSON.] Written especially for White, Stokes & Allen. Reproduced in fac-simile of the author's MS. Illustrated by SUSIE BARSTOW SKELDING, with colored designs of Pansies; Anemone; Hepatica; Daffodils and Narcissus. "A gem fraught with the true spirit of Easter-tide."—[Baltimore News.

Satteen Style, $1.50. Silver-Edged, $1 [same as Easter Messengers]. Ivorine Style [see No. 5, under The New Ivorine Binding]. Silk-Fringed, $1.50.

EASTER FLOWERS. By SUSIE BARSTOW SKELDING. "One of the most exquisitely beautiful Easter books we ever saw."—[Journal of Education.

Exquisite Colored plates of Easter Lilies, Trailing Arbutus, Violets, and Pink and White Azaleas, illustrating poems by well-known writers, including fac-similes of MSS. by CELIA THAXTER and H. H. Covers in burnished silver, with designs of Passion flowers and Snowdrops.

Satteen Style, $1. Silver-Edged, 75 cents. Silk Fringed, $1.

SPRING BLOSSOMS. Colored plates of Pussy Willow and Catkins; Pansies; Orchids; and Buttercups and Ferns; with poems by prominent writers, including one of JOHN G. WHITTIER in fac-simile. Covers in green and gold bronzes blended; with design of Dog-wood and Apple Blossoms.

Sateen Style, $1.50. Gilt-Edged, $1. Silk-Fringed, $1.50.

EASTER. By ROSE PORTER, author of "Uplands and Lowlands," "Summer Driftwood," etc. Cover in bright silver bronze, with design of a wreath of Easter Lilies.

Sateen Style, $1. Whatman Style, with wreath of lilies on silver ground mounted on covers of rough white drawing paper, with ragged edges, tied with silk-and-silver cord, $1. Silk-Fringed, 50 cents. Ivorine Style [see No. 2, under The New Ivorine Binding].

For all Seasons of the Year.

BIRTHDAY FLOWERS. Colored plates of Pansies and Roses; Violets; Eglantine; and Forget-me-nots and Four-leaved Clover; with poems by prominent writers, including one by MARY BRADLEY in fac-simile. Covers in gold and violet bronzes, with designs of many varieties of pansies. A most beautiful birthday gift.

This is one of the 14 volumes in the famous "Flower-Songs Series," a descriptive circular of which is sent free to any address on application.

Sateen Style, $1.50. Gilt-Edged, $1. Silk-Fringed, $1.50.

THE NEW IVORINE BINDING.

ORIGINAL WITH WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN.

A Remarkable and Beautiful Style of Binding, prepared especially for a number of EASTER VOLUMES.

A fine engraving of perfect finish is printed by a secret process upon IVORINE, a material which closely resembles Ivory. This then has a title illuminated on it in metal, and is mounted upon rough white drawing paper.

The whole, with a "ragged edge" and a knot of silk-and-silver cord, forms an exquisite cover, of great novelty and appropriateness for Easter.

In this new binding are:

1. A CHILD'S DREAM OF A STAR. With design of apple blossoms in red and title in gold on Ivorine. Text printed in red.

2. EASTER. By ROSE PORTER, with designs of passion flowers in blue and title in silver on the Ivorine. Text printed in blue. [See also under Easter Florals.]

3. GOLDEN WORDS OF HOLY MEN. With design of lilies in brown, and title in gold on the Ivorine. Text printed in brown. Selections from THOMAS A KEMPIS and others.

4. SILVER THOUGHTS OF GREAT MINDS. With design of basket of pansies in purple and title in silver on the Ivorine. Text in purple. Selections from JOHN BUNYAN and others.

Each one of the above four is printed in clear type, on fine laid paper, with wide margins, and is in a neat protector and a box covered with silvered paper. Each volume, $1.

5. EASTER BELLS. By H. H. [Mrs. JACKSON], with four beautiful colored plates of flowers by SUSIE BARSTOW SKELDING.

6. EASTER MESSENGERS. A new Easter poem of the flowers, by LUCY LARCOM; illustrated by SUSIE BARSTOW SKELDING. Each in protector and silvered box, $1.50.

For full particulars of text and illustrations of EASTER BELLS and EASTER MESSENGERS, see under Easter Florals.

7. FLOWERS FROM GLADE AND GARDEN. Easter Edition, in the new Ivorine binding, with fine engraving of a landscape, surmounted by pansies, etc., in brown on the Ivorine.

8. FLOWERS FROM HERE AND THERE. Easter Edition, in Ivorine binding, with fine engraving of a landscape with a cluster of daisies on the Ivorine.

9. FLOWERS FROM HILL AND DALE. Easter Edition, in Ivorine binding, with engraving of landscape, surmounted by flowers in red on the Ivorine.

10. FLOWERS FROM SUNLIGHT AND SHADE. Easter Edition, in Ivorine binding, with engraving of a landscape, with leaves, etc., in blue on the Ivorine.

Each one of Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 is bound in French Sateen, with the Ivorine mounted upon it. Each book, in a box, $3.50.

Any of the above books can be had of your bookseller, or will be sent to any address, at publishers' expense, on receipt of advertised price.

New catalogue and illuminated circular sent free to any address if the name of this publication is mentioned. Contains full descriptions of many miscellaneous books and Easter Publications.

WHITE, STOKES & ALLEN, Publishers, 182 Fifth Ave., New York City.

PORTRAITS OF OUR SAVIOUR.

WITH 20 ILLUSTRATIONS.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE

(No. 432)

FOR MAY, 1886.

CONTAINS:

"Faith."

Frontispiece. From a Painting by E. ARMITAGE, R.A.;

Portraits of our Saviour.

By WILLIAM H. INGERSOLL. With Twenty Illustrations;

The London Season.

Illustrated by GEORGE DU MAURIER;

Springhaven. A Novel. Part II.

By R. D. BLACKMORE. Illustrated by FREDERICK BARNARD and ALFRED PARSONS;

King Arthur:

Not a Love Story. Part II. By the Author of "John Halifax, Gentleman;"

Sap Bewitched.

By WILLIAM HAMILTON GIBSON. With Four Illustrations by the author;

Their Pilgrimage. Part II.

(THE CATSKILLS.)

By CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER. Illustrated by C. S. REINHART;

She Stoops to Conquer. Part XI.

Illustrated by E. A. ABBEY;

With the Bluecoats on the Border.

By RUFUS F. ZOGBAUM. Illustrated by the author;

The Home Acre. Part III.

(GARDENS AND GRAPE CULTURE.)

By E. P. ROE;

The Story of Feather Head.

By Lieutenant H. LEMLY, U.S.A. With Two Illustrations by T. DE THULSTRUP;

East Angels. A Novel. (Conclusion.)

By CONSTANCE FENIMORE WOOLSON;

Poems

By PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, JULIET C. MARSH;

Editor's Easy Chair.

By GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

The Dethronement of Italian Opera in New York.—A Retrospect of Columbia College.—The late John B. Gough.

Editor's Study.

By WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

Mr. Stevenson's Romance, and others.—The Badness of the Duchesse de Langeais.—Literary Fetichism.—Tennyson's Latest Poems.—The Ultimate Selection of Literature.—The Destiny of Poetry.—Mr. Froude's Kindly Notion of Americans.

Monthly Record of Current Events.

Editor's Drawer.

Conducted by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

Per Year:

HARPER'S MAGAZINE	$4 00
HARPER'S WEEKLY	4 00
HARPER'S BAZAR	4 00
HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE	2 00
HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	10 00
HARPER'S HANDY SERIES. (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	15 00

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States or Canada.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

When no time is specified, subscriptions will be begun with the current number.

☞ HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents.

Published by HARPER & BROTHERS, N. Y.

BEAUTIFUL BOOKS FOR THE Easter Season.

The Blessed Easter-Tide.

Consisting of three parts. Good Friday, Easter Even, and Easter Day. Each part contains the Gospel Narrative and choice selections of poetry appropriate to the day. The initial letters and running title of the first two parts are printed in purple, those in Easter Day in gold. Illustrated with three photographs: Easter Morning, by Sant; The First Resurrection, by Thompson; Choir of Angels, by Correggio. Bound in cloth, with elaborate side stamp in purple and gold, with fly-leaves in a design in gold and brown. The press-work is by the University Press. Quarto, 160 pp., full gilt edges, $2.50.

An Easter-Song.

By the Right Rev. ROBERT HALL BAYNES. With four full-page illustrations, and sixteen pages of illustrated text, vignettes, tail-pieces, etc., drawn by J. H. Gratacap, and re-produced by the Photo-Gravure Company. Quarto. The binding of a portion of the edition is unique and Easteresque—white cloth and JAPANESE GOLD BROCADE. The side stamp is a calla-lily, printed in gold and purple. $3.50.

The remainder of the edition is in light colored cloths, side stamp, printed in purple and gold, $3.00, and in Whatman's white drawing paper, tied with silk cord, $3.00.

The Lady of La Garaye.

By the Hon. Mrs. NORTON. A new and beautiful edition of this charming poem. Printed on hand-made paper, with two steel-plate illustrations. Bound in two styles. Half vellum, cloth sides, with antique gilt lettering, $1.50; in bond paper with steel-plate engraving on side, $1.50.

The Celestial Country,

from the rhythm of St. Bernard of Cluny. Translated by JOHN MASON NEALE, D.D. A sumptuous edition of the master translation of this poem. Printed upon hand-made paper. Embellished with four photo. illustrations from original designs. Small quarto. Bound in two styles. In light cloth, $2.00; also in Whatman's white drawing paper, tied with silk cord, $1.50.

The Story of Easter as Told in the Book.

The narrative of the Resurrection and Ascension, taken from a volume entitled "The Life of our Lord in the Words of the Four Evangelists," being the Four Gospels arranged in chronological order and interwoven to form a continuous narrative." Printed on hand-made paper, in handsome, clear type, rubricated. Bound in white leatherette, and lettered in gilt antique; also in Whatman paper, tied with silk cord. Embellished with two photographs: St. John the Evangelist, by Correggio; The Walk to Emmaus, by Plockhurst. Oblong. Price, in each style of binding, $1.25.

Evenings with the Sacred Poets;

QUIET TALKS ABOUT THE SINGERS AND THEIR SONGS. By FREDERICK SAUNDERS, author of "Salad for the Solitary and Social," "Pastime Papers," etc. New edition, revised and enlarged. Containing two new chapters, which bring the record of recent English and American verse down to date. Bound in cloth, gilt side stamp, and ornamental back, 580 pp, $2.50.

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & COMPANY,

900 Broadway, Cor. 20th St., New York.

Complete Catalogues sent on application. Sold by booksellers, or sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.

ANNETTE L. NOBLE.

16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.

MRS. E. R. CHURCH.

16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.

MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.

MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.

REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.

16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.

Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.

Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.

Price, per hundred, $2.00.

Address orders to

Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,

116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

The Newest Songs!

READY IN APRIL.

THE

GLAD REFRAIN.

Messrs. LOWRY and DOANE'S NEW Book of Sunday School Songs. It is fully equal to any of their former popular works.

This NEW Song Book embraces a number of NEW features, and is gotten up on an entirely NEW plan, in a NEW shape, and is printed from beautiful NEW type. It is sure to please, and will create a NEW interest in the Song Service. It will be sold at a NEW price,

$25 per 100 Copies, in Boards.

Single copy sent as soon as published on receipt of price.

Specimen pages sent free on request.

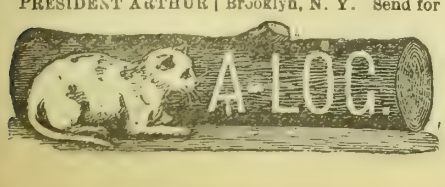
An Edition in Aikin's Character Notes, at Same Price.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.

81 Randolph St., Chicago.

THREE TERMS in the WHITE HOUSE.

PRESIDENT GRANT | EACH HAD A BRADBURY
PRESIDENT HAYES | PIANO MADE BY F.G.SMITH,
PRESIDENT ARTHUR | Brooklyn, N. Y. Send for



MUSIC BOOKS.

THREE HOLY CHILDREN, ($1), by Stanford, is a new Cantata of great power and brilliancy.

RICHTER'S HARMONY, ($2); RICHTER'S COUNTERPOINT, ($2), and RICHTER'S FUGUE, ($2), are three standard books on composition, by an eminent German Harmonist.

OPERAS. The best and most complete editions.

AIDA ($2); BELLS OF CORNEVILLE ($1.50); BOCCACIO ($2); CARMEN ($2); ATINITZA ($2); LAKME ($2); MARITANA ($2); MEFISTOFELE ($2); MIGNON ($2.50); ZENOBIA ($2); and many others.

Libretti, full and complete, of 80 operas, for 25 cents each. Cheap editions, 15 cents each.

EASTER MUSIC, in quantity. Send for Lists. Orchestral parts furnished when desired.

WINNER'S IDEAL METHODS, (each 75 cts.), are famous and really good cheap Methods for Violin, for Flute, for Accordeon, for Cornet, for Banjo, for Guitar, for Fife, for Clarinet and for Flageolet.

MASON'S PIANO TECHNICS ($2.50), are constantly increasing in favor, as most valuable aids to practice. All teachers should use them.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N. Y.

Sunday School Books!!!

BEST BOOKS. BEST TERMS.

Catalogues free.

N. TIBBALS & SONS,

124 Nassau St., New York.

N. B.—Fine Stock of Easter Goods.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts. IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

OR LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted.—Men and Women, $100 to $200 a month made. No Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.

Is a perfect WASH BLUE, thoroughly tested and endorsed by thousands of house keepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 233 S. Second St., Phila., Pa.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

An Experience Meeting.

A HALF-DOZEN Christian women found themselves detained for an hour the other day, and, as their meeting was an apparent accident, their informal talk followed the order of a chance suggestion. "Why," said one of them, "is it that we feel so much diffidence and reluctance in speaking for Jesus? We hesitate to press His claims upon our friends, and yet we are not ashamed of Him."

The question interested all present, and it may elicit replies from some who read this "Corner,"—helpful replies, for comparison of views is often very helpful.

One lady urged that in a sensitive nature there is always a shrinking from speaking of its love for an earthly friend; it craves reticence as a veil or protection. This feeling carried out, compels such a nature to regard much talk of love to Jesus as a manifest indelicacy. Love is not garrulous.

But to this thought the answer was that love for Christ is importunate in its desire to win others to share it, and it therefore conquers natural reluctance to speech. The first disciples went at once to find others and tell them of the Lord. "Find" and "tell" are Christian watchwords.

Another thought that great care was needed in making personal appeals or even in giving suggestions. One might so easily offend where the wish had been to persuade, or alienate where one had hoped to win. The person addressed might resent our interest as an intrusion, and go away regarding us as meddlesome busybodies, intent on what did not concern us.

True, but does not loyalty to Christ require our taking even this risk, was urged here.

A third friend had the impression that a feeling of self-consciousness was at the bottom of much of our reluctance to carry the Gospel to our families and acquaintances. An invincible shyness and reserve came from our living so much in the constraint of our own shadows.

What of this? How is it with you? And with me?

A suggestion advanced was pertinent, viz.: that our own realization of inconsistency and shortcoming, our feeling that our principle was better than our practice, and that we were not living up to our talking, was one great cause of sealed lips. To speak of Jesus and His love, while they who heard should perhaps be remembering our infirmities of temper and our love of the world, would not be easy. So much lower than our ideal, did not silence and humility become us. Why should we be preachers, when our practice was so often inadequate?

But this would make us all dumb if we admitted it as a consideration.

Who will contribute a word to this experience meeting?

A Few Thoughts About Pictures.

BY EMMA J. GRAY.

ALICE CARY, in her beautiful poem entitled, "An Order for a Picture," gives the portrait of the tender mother so vividly, that already in imagination the artist sees a face upon the canvas more lifelike than his fingers, ever so skilful, can portray. For her heart and soul seemed mingled with her words and lent their magic power. So ever can we separate the living from the dead, whether it be in art or literature.

J. G. Brown, the great figure painter, whom New York is justly proud to claim among the tenants of the Tenth Street Studio Building, has had his imagination quickened ofttimes by the small boys of New York, bookblacks and street urchins, who find it to their interest to posture for this great, big-hearted man in the pretty room which some of us remember as his studio, while at the same time they are lifted from the mire and dirt of their every-day life into better surroundings,—their imagination thus quickened, so that we think it not too much to hope that their future will also tell of greatness. We each feel the power of contact and none more so than children.

It is J. S. Blackie who says, "As in a journey you must see milestone after milestone fall into your rear, otherwise you remain stationary; so in the grand march of a noble life one paltriness after another must disappear, or you have lost your chance." And it is surely a chance worthy of acceptance that is given the small boy by this great life painter. He sometimes gives it also to the old man. Some of us have seen the wonderful picture of the street fiddler. On one of the busy streets of New York J. G. Brown found him, and paid him well to let him take his portrait. Rest, the old man thought, had come at last. And so it had, for soon after the picture was finished he found not only rest, but love and home eternal.

The imagination of the old artists seemed ever to dwell on the Nativity, therefore the many pictures of the Christ. And as we each have hidden in thought the portrait of the Child who was born in Bethlehem, of the Man crucified on Calvary, it would be strange if any picture realized our ideal. A little friend of mine, travelling over the continent and visiting with his parents many renowned picture galleries, surprised them one day by refusing to leave the carriage when told he was going to see pictures, with the words, "I've seen enough Jesus Christs!" So vivid was his imagination that childhood was unsatisfied.

Raphael was born on Good Friday, 1483, and very early showed extraordinary genius. His first teacher was his father, Giovanni, who possessed much talent, but Perugino was counted a more celebrated master, and so at the age of twelve he went under his teaching. Perugino at once recognized the merit of his drawings, and said, "Let him be my pupil, he will soon become my master." Raphael died on Good Friday, his 37th birthday. Above his coffin at his funeral was hung his paining of the Transfiguration. It was while he was in his 25th year that he completed the decoration of the Vatican. He painted the Bridgewater Madonna, "La Belle Jardiniere," the Sistine Madonna, and many others; it seemed ever his favorite subject. His works are indeed exquisite and visited by all picture-loving people who have opportunity. Yet, even he was not entirely equal to the greatness of the Invisible. The little child was true enough to give just criticism.

A painter must not only put in the work of a cunning hand, but as Alice Cary did in her poem, put in heart and soul. Some of himself must always enter his work. We know that J. G. Brown painted the picture, we need not look for his name any more than we look for the name of our friend on the photograph, which we almost expect to speak to us, so natural the familiar face seems. Imagination is a sacred gift, and in no way is its power more felt than in the world of art. With its help the canvas under the master-hand will breathe, will speak of whatever chapter in life it is unfolding.

A Mother's Pleasure.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: I have long time thought of writing to tell you how much I like the "Corner" and what a pleasure it is to me. After reading the wise and solid editorials that seem to "hit the nail on the head every time," and the brilliant effusions of "Old Colony," who lately seems graver than of old, it is with positive gladness of heart that I come to the dear old "Corner," and it seems like getting home, for there I find the mother and children, such a kind and tender mother, and such dear children, for are they not our own and almost dearer than our own lives?

This morning I have been reading Mrs. Sangster's article on crowned motherhood. I agree with her decidedly in regard to the position a mother should maintain in her household. Yet I wondered if she knows by happy experience the blessedness a mother feels in being the one to give up the prospective trip to the mountains, or the nice new spring suit, longed for perhaps and perhaps really needed, that the fair young daughter with her beautiful golden hair, blue eyes and lovely complexion, shall be made yet more attractive by a fresh, delicate-tinted silk when the green springtime has come. It would be a pity to see her in the old brown suit she has worn all winter, and mamma! well, the proverb is homely but very "pat," "Every dog has his day," and mamma has had hers. She remembers with such gratitude her mother's care and labor that she should be well furnished and nicely clothed, though there was no money to be wasted in the family and economies had to be practiced to keep the dress in repair and give once in a while a trip off for the health of one and another of the family; outings that were positively necessary.

What a pleasure for the mother to make over the old silk for the third time, trimming it with velvet till it looked good as new! "better than new," as Mrs. Stowes' dressmaker says, that Alice and May may have a soft nun's veiling for early summer; what a peace settles down on her heart as she kisses good-by to her Alfred, who takes the last of her pin money for a trip to the Maine woods to renew his shattered nerves, that he may be able to pull through the college year. How much she had planned to do with that fifty dollars, and none to replace it in months. Does she need compassion? O no! it is almost the keenest pleasure she can have, for the happiness of her children is her dearest delight.

But, while the American mother is all right, there is room for a great change for the better in the children. I have read that American and English children are not so well behaved as those of the Latin nations. If this is true, what a blot on our Protestant civilization! I do know that our young people are not what they might be and have not the sweet docility and reverence for their parents that we see in English children. In many cases our youngsters positively rule the family, and as seen in public places they stride along ahead of their parents, and if crossed in any way the mother gives in rather than have a scene. Cannot something be done to bring about a better state of things? I am fully persuaded that the press can accomplish anything within the bounds of possibility, if united and earnest, and why should not our manners and social and home life receive as much attention as the fleeting news of the day, much of it too disgusting to read in a family circle; or our political life, which though of great importance, need not crowd out better considerations and efforts.

For the sake of our blessed religion, that it be not despised in the eyes of the nations, should we not strive for a sweeter, brighter and more reverent home atmosphere? MARIE JEAN.

Our correspondent is entirely right in saying that mothers delight in sacrificing their own comforts and conveniences to their children. Too often such self-denial is not for the children's real advantage. The latter part of her interesting letter really answers her introduction, and while mothers contentedly suffer themselves to be pushed into the background, children, so selfish is human nature, will take a precedence which is unbecoming.

We do not think that young eyes, bright hair, and rosy cheeks require much aid from dress to set off their charms. The simplest dress is the prettiest for a young girl. It is the fading mother who requires the silk, if there can be only one, not the brilliant daughter. But this is a mother's parliament.

Hints to Mothers.

BY MRS. J. H. DAVIES.

I HAVE been deeply interested in the talks relative to boys. When I see the little "waifs and strays' running about our streets I wonder where their mothers are, and find that some of them are tired and long for quiet. They willingly send their boys to the street for diversion, heedless of the associations and temptations among which they place them. Good mothers they mean to be, but they may be unconsciously filling their own cups with bitter dregs.

Sometimes a mother wishes to enjoy a quiet evening talk or walk with a friend, and knowing that her little lad is restless and naturally demands attention, she arrays him for the street and sends him forth with "Be a good boy; do what is right, son."

While that mother entertains and is entertained by her friend until, perhaps, a late hour, where is her boy? Seeking amusement, innocent or otherwise, out of her sight in the time when he ought to be under her influence and protection.

We have been told over and over again, that we should make home as pleasant as possible for our boys. We should interest ourselves in their undertakings, even though it often seems a waste of time. The future years may prove to us that these are moments well spent. We must have noticed that when children become weary of their play they almost invariably come to "mother" for her to suggest something new or some change, and very often any little plan which she proposes is received with delight, the greater because she proposed it.

Boys need to be employed. If we fill up a fair share of their time with light tasks and pleasant recreations they will be far happier than if left to their own devices. Boys need looking after; if mothers fail to do it Satan is ever on the alert for mischief for idle hands.

If we wish beautiful flowers we do not scatter our choice seed among thistles and weeds, and leave it to grow as it will without further thought, but we place it in a spot suited to it and bestow the requisite care and nourishment. How carefully we remove every weed, and whatever will tend to check its growth. We willingly give the needed attention, because we desire the beautiful blossom.

It is much more important that we select desirable surroundings for our dear boys; that we furnish them with healthful food for mind and body, and give them our watchful care during their boyhood. Unless we do this we may expect to be disappointed in them. We cannot rationally expect them to develop into good and useful citizens if we fail to use our influence at a time when their minds are plastic, so susceptible to every external influence, and when none is so potent as that of the mother.

More time and care spent upon our children, less thought of dress and the frivolities of the day will insure to us more good sons and fewer heartaches.

With children we should use decision. Many parents have a habit of denying a child's request without giving the matter a moment's consideration, and often after a little persistency the child will gain the wished for "yes." How much better had the desire been granted at once. Too often we might trace the disagreeable habits of our children to our lack of discipline.

In home training it is essential that we exercise firmness, and that we sympathize with the children in their successes or defeats, and show a readiness to help furnish occupation or recreation, as they require from time to time.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

A Friend in Heaven.

DEAR LITTLE HEADS: Cousin Lois must tell you in sadness that you have lost a friend. Mrs. J. T. Stremmell—our kind Dame Playfair—our entertaining Aunt Kathy—has gone from earth to heaven.

Dear, winsome old lady! To see her was to admire; to know her was to love. We read the announcement of her death with sorrow, even though we are sure that she has gone to see the King in His beauty in the land where there are pleasures forevermore.

She delighted in helping others, in doing what she could to make the world brighter and better. She has tried lovingly and faithfully to help you in the study of God's Word and to show you how to be true and gentle and good.

Could she speak to you now, she would say, Try to be like Jesus; try to live as He lived; and then whenever He calls, you will be ready to go and be with Him forever.

A few contributions from her—sacred now because the hand that penned them shall write no more—are in Cousin Lois' possession, and will be given from time to time in your "Portfolio."

When you see no more of her cheering words, still remember what she has done for you, and though you grieve because she is no longer on the earth you may rejoice that a friend has entered into the rest that remains for the people of God. COUSIN LOIS.

A Wee Princess.

HAD any of the "Little Heads" been in England on the 6th of April, 1605, they would have heard the church bells ringing all day, and seen bonfires blazing, and the people in the streets scrambling for money thrown to the crowd. And if they had asked the meaning of it they would have been told that a baby girl had been born to King James I., and that as it had been seventy-five years since such an event had occurred in England, there was great rejoicing.

Perhaps you would like to know what the wardrobe of this little princess was like? We are told that she had a carnation velvet cradle, fringed with silver lace and lined with carnation satin; a double scarlet cloth to lay upon the cradle at night; a cradle cloth of carnation velvet, with a train embroidered with silver and lined with silk, to lay upon the cradle; two little cloaks of velvet; one large "bearing cloth" of carnation velvet to wrap the baby up in when taken out of her chamber; "one great head sheet of cambric for the cradle, containing two breadths, and three yards long, wrought all over with gold and colored silks and fringed with gold;" large handkerchiefs of fine linen, one edged with lace work, to lay over the baby's face; "six veils of cambric edged with fair bone lace, to pin with the mantle;" six bibs of fine lawn with lace-edged ruffles; three bibs to wear under them, wrought with gold and colored silks; and all this, we fear not very comfortable finery, in addition to all the lace and cambric dresses, etc.

The baby's christening, on the 5th of May, was the grandest event of its kind that had ever been seen in England, many noblemen being created and others raised to higher rank in honor of the occasion. The chapel of Greenwich Palace, where it took place, was hung, we read, with green velvet and cloth of gold. A splendid font of silver and gilt, "most curiously wrought with figures of beasts, serpents, and other antique works," stood under a cloth of gold twelve feet square. The baby was carried to her christening from the queen's rooms by the Countess of Derby, under a canopy borne by eight barons. A brilliant company of noblemen went before the Earl of Northumberland, who bore a gilt basin, and after him came a countess with a cushion covered with jewels. The Lady Derby's train was borne by ladies of the highest rank, and the baby's "train of the mantle of purple velvet, embroidered about with gold and furred with ermine," by noblemen. The Archbishop of Canterbury christened the tiny princess Mary, no doubt for her beautiful and unfortunate grandmother, Mary, Queen of Scots; and when the christening was over the heralds sounded their trumpets and proclaimed her name aloud in the chapel. After which, we hope, the poor baby, who must have been dreadfully tired with all this ceremony, was taken home and relieved of that purple velvet train and cuddled to sleep like a commonplace everyday baby. Indeed, it is far more comfortable to be a commonplace baby of to-day, in a plain white dress, than a befurbelowed princess of that age. For the royal children then, instead of staying snugly at home, were sent away to be cared for. So when wee Princess Mary was only two months old we find her given into the charge of and taken to the house of Lady Kuyvett, together with her "six rockers," which, we take it, means nurses, and "several inferior attendants."

One would think that under such circumstances she should have been well cared for, and no doubt she was, according to the ideas of that time, for babies were not then very well understood. No doubt Lady Kuyvett was very faithful to her little charge, but when she was two years old she caught a violent cold which settled on her lungs, with burning fever. The queen came constantly to see her little girl, but nothing availed, and she died on the 6th of September, 1607, saying with her last breath, so the old chronicle tells us, "I go, I go;" and again, "Away I go."

This account of her death reminds us of that of a little niece of hers, the Princess Anne, daughter of Charles I., who died some thirty years later at the age of four, and who, when dying, was reminded to say her prayers. "I am not able," said she, "to say my long prayer, (meaning the Lord's Prayer,) but I will say my short one: 'Lighten mine eyes, O Lord, lest I sleep the sleep of death.'" And so the blessed little lamb passed away. The Princess Mary was buried in Westminster Abbey. Her monument, with her figure on top in its quaint old-fashioned dress, is by that of her younger sister Sophia, who only lived two days, and whose monument is a marble cradle covered with a marble quilt, in which lies, as if asleep, a tiny marble baby.

Troublous times were at hand. England was rent with civil war. Their brother, the unfortunate King Charles I., lost both his crown and his head; misfortunes gathered thick around his family; but through it all the wee princesses slept in the quiet old Abbey, the one who had entered life only to leave it, and the other who was so soon "away" to that bright land where no death enters. ELA THOMAS.

A Good Start.

I WANT all my nieces and nephews to stop whatever else they may be doing, and listen to me for a few moments, while I talk to them about the importance of a good start. Yes, Charlie and Bertie, Ollie and Mary, I mean you; and it is because you happen to be where you can start well, if only you will, that I shall wait until you are ready to pay attention before I begin. There! I see your bright eyes lifted, and the right listening look on your faces, and I will proceed.

I heard a certain lad—I will not mention names just now—ask the maid one evening, not long ago, to be sure to call him when she should rise in the morning. "I have work to do," he said, "and I must be up an hour earlier than usual." Let me whisper here that sometimes a good start for the day is gained by beginning the night before. For example, it is a much better thing to finish all the school-work—lessons, themes, exercises—before going to bed, than to leave it to the chance of rising an hour earlier than the accustomed time. It makes, you see, the difference between a certainty and an accident.

In the case of my young friend the good start he had counted upon was lost by the fact that the maid forgot his request, and never thought of it until she rang the bell to awaken the rest of the family. Many another boy loses his good start by not getting up when he is called.

I think if young people knew how much needless trouble they give their elders by just this one vexatious habit of going to sleep again after they have been called in the morning, they would turn over a new leaf.

When I have ordered breakfast at an hour much earlier than suits my own convenience, that Mollie and Marty may eat it in comfort, and have plenty of time to set out for school, I am not in the most cheerful of moods if I am obliged at least half a dozen times in the course of an hour to call, "Mollie! Marty!" the call making no impression. It is hardly fair—is it?—that if they do not care for making a good start in the day for themselves, they should spoil mine for me.

One thought leads to another. Children, believe me that no day is started well if it begins with cross looks and fretful words. There is a homely proverb about having the black dog on your shoulder, which simply means that you are hateful and horrid and disagreeable. Let us be careful never to be horrid on purpose. Perhaps we cannot help being slow or stupid, but we all can help being peevish and perverse.

In starting out in a new study—Latin or algebra or botany—the rate of your progress will depend greatly upon the thoroughness of your beginning. You would call that man a foolish builder who forgot to look after his foundations, and I am sure it is quite as absurd to build badly in a new study. Get a good start, boys. You will then go on without failing in the end.—Aunt Marjorie Precept, in Harper's Young People.

The Man who Swallowed a Bible.

IN the days of my boyhood, my father told me that he knew a man who had swallowed a Bible. This greatly excited my astonishment, and I wondered how it could be. My father having an object in view, never explained what he meant; but went with me some time afterwards, to call upon the old man. I remember that visit as well as though it happened but yesterday.

Oh how graciously did the texts of Divine truth fall from the lips of that aged servant of Christ! His Bible seemed to be a mine of illimitable value, and he drew forth liberally, like one who draws water from a well that he believes to be inexhaustible.

As we came away, my father said to me, "Well, and what do you think of this man having swallowed a Bible?"

"Think, father!" said I, "why I think that he has indeed swallowed a Bible; for the Word of God seems like meat and drink to him."

Children! it would be well if each one of your number would swallow a Bible. You would find it "sweeter than honey and the honey comb."—Selected.

Little Heads Together.

RHOMBOID.

(Prize Puzzle.)

Across.—1. A form or mode of syllogism of which the first proposition is a universal affirmative, and the other two particular negatives. 2. An impure color. 3. To sign with the initials. 4. A marsh. 5. An adder. 6. Stopped.

Down.—1. A consonant. 2. Part of a verb meaning to exist. 3. To snatch away. 4. Spoken. 5. The Mohammedan Scriptures. 6. A military engine of the ancients. 7. A species of lyric poems invented by Archilochus. 8. Coal-scuttles. 9. To knit. 10. A musical syllable. 11. A consonant. CHARLES M. MYERS, Newburgh, N. Y.

(Aged 10 years.)

CHARADE.

My first's a fierce and dreadful foe,
It lays the cot and palace low,
Yet, strange to say, you'll always find
It is a friend to human kind.
My next is seen in every land—
In fact, upon the spot you stand;
My whole the family surround
When in a cheerful room 'tis found.

S. H. JACKSON.

DIAMOND.

1. In ministerial. 2. What you should say to your father. 3. Things to stand upon. 4. A large number. 5. Part of a king's life. 6. A near relative. 7. In eventually.

V.

Answers to Puzzles of March 24th.

Enigma.—"The cat in gloves catches no mice."

Diamond.—

D
SAT
DAVID
TIN
D

Decapitations.—1. C-ash. 2. C-all. 3. P-ray. 4. T-rap.

Correct answers from Fannie Steffens, Rappie Bowne, L. P. C., Emily C. Field.

The "Little Heads" are invited to send puzzles and answers to COUSIN LOIS, at this office.

Biblical Exploration.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: The new circular of the Egypt Exploration Fund, relating to the Biblical and historical excavations and researches in the Delta, are issued, and I invite all interested to apply to me for them and other information. Donors of but $5 receive the illustrated memoir of each season—an elaborate atlas shaped work with plans and photographs—and the reports, lectures, etc. We give our labors, often severe, to this cause; hence the almost presentation of these books to small contributors. No pastor's study, no public library, should be without the memoirs. Absolutely without endowment, an appeal for aid is necessary. That $2,000 to $3,000 may be yearly ensured the work, I ask for 500 annual subscriptions of $5 each. Acknowledgment is promptly made by me, and a receipt sent by the accomplished secretary in England, Miss Amelia B. Edwards, who will shortly sketch in Harper's Magazine, with full illustrations, the excavations at the Biblical Zoan. As Prof. Howard Crosby says, "The work is of universal interest." Among our valued subscribers is Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers.

WM. C. WINSLOW, Vice Pres., etc.

429 Beacon St., Boston, April, 1886.

The Chinese Question.

A MEETING was held at Sacramento, Cal., a few weeks ago, composed of delegates selected by the Boards of Supervisors of the counties of the State, with which was incorporated the San Jose convention of delegates from the anti-Chinese Leagues. The conclusions of the meeting were embodied in the paper given below. The resolution in regard to boycotting was opposed by many of the Supervisors' delegates. Apart from this, the action of the convention, it is claimed, represents the convictions of ninety-nine hundredths of the population of California. Gov. Bidwell, one of the most conservative citizens, a member and elder of the Presbyterian Church, in opposing the boycott clause, still said, "I regret that the Chinese ever came here, and will join hands with you to have practical means adopted for having those here leave."

The following was the action of the convention:

Whereas, The people of the State of California are with a unanimity of sentiment unparalleled in history opposed to the presence of the Chinese in their midst, and are likewise opposed to the further immigration of that race into the United States; and,

Whereas, This opposition is not of sudden growth, but is the result of more than thirty years' experience; and,

Whereas, The history of all countries where the Chinese have been permitted to reside among other races is a precise counterpart of our own; and,

Whereas, The evils arising from the presence of the Chinese are:

First—Their coming is an invasion, not an immigration.

Second—They have no families or homes among us.

Third—Their domestic relations and modes of life are such as forever preclude their assimiliation with our people.

Fourth—By education and customs they are antagonistic to a republican form of government.

Fifth—They maintain in our midst secret tribunals in defiance of our laws.

Sixth—The presence of so many adults owing allegiance to a foreign government is dangerous.

Seventh—They deter laboring men from coming to California.

Eighth—The contract system by which they come to this country is virtually a system of peonage, hostile to American institutions.

Ninth—Their presence deters the growth of a reliable labor element among our boys and girls.

Tenth—After subsisting on the lowest possible portion of their earnings they remit the residue, amounting to many millions annually, to China, while the substitution of American labor would retain this vast sum of money in our country.

For these reasons they are a constant and growing source of irritation and danger to our State, and it is necessary that their immigration be immediately stopped, and every lawful measure adopted to remove those among us.

Resolved, That we demand that the Government of the United States take immediate steps to prohibit absolutely this Chinese invasion.

Resolved, That to encourage the early removal of the Chinese, we accept the suggestion of the Constitution of California, which says that no Chinese shall ever be employed upon any work of the State, except in punishment for crime.

Resolved, That the interests of the people of the State of California demand, in harmony with the organic law of the State, that the presence of the Chinese shall be discouraged in every particular, and that in every instance the preference should be given to white labor, and we earnestly appeal to the people to do their utmost to supplant the Chinese with such labor. We are not in favor of any unlawful methods, but so firmly are we impressed with the great importance of discouraging the employment of the Chinese that we recommend that they be not patronized in any way, and we are in favor at the very earliest moment of boycotting any person who employes Chinamen directly or indirectly, or who purchases the product of Chinese labor. The date at which the boycott commences in different localities shall in all cases be left to the local leagues.

Financial.

TUESDAY, April 13th.

As often occurs at this season the Associated Banks of this city added to their holdings of money last week. Loans were enlarged $332,100, specie was reduced by $976,100, but the gain in legal tenders was $5,132,500 and in deposits $2,367,700. There were added to the surplus of reserve $3,567,475, making it $15,555,875. The average rate for money on call is 2 per cent, and on loans well secured 5 per cent. The Bank of England rate remains unchanged.

The imports of merchandise at this port for the week were valued at $10,126,097, and the exports at $5,173,180. Sterling exchange was dull yesterday at $4.86 1–2 for sixty day bills and $4.88 1–2 for demand. There is said to be a good demand for securities from foreign buyers. The export of specie for the week was $274,355.

The European grain markets were reported generally firm yesterday. Stocks at Odessa, reports say, have been so drawn upon by the demands of Mediterranean ports that they are reduced to almost nothing. The stocks of wheat in this country at the chief centres declined last week 1,239,192 bushels. The market yesterday was firm, but a rise was restrained by promising reports in regard to the growing crop. Quotations were: Wheat here for May delivery 91 3–4, in Chicago 78 1–8; corn here 46 1–2, in Chicago 37 3–4; oats here 36, in Chicago 29 7–8. Provisions are dull. Quotations of cotton yesterday were: April 9 22–23; May 9.32–33; June 9.44–45. Prices of hay and straw are firmly maintained.

The Stock Market is stronger and more hopeful.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

In the U. S. Senate Mr. Frye made a telling speech on the fisheries question....In the House twenty-five pension bills were passed....Six persons were killed and a number wounded by deputy sheriffs in East St. Louis who were defending the railroads against the strikers....There was a heated debate on the subject of lobbying in the Assembly at Albany....James A. Richmond, President of the Broadway road, was indicted for bribery. He was arrested and admitted to bail....More thefts by Ferdinand Ward have been discovered....Burglars at Nyack ransacked several houses....The treatment of the Chinese Minister at San Francisco by the Collector of the Port is severely condemned....A servant girl in New York robbed a number of houses....A young woman was found murdered in Hackettstown, N. J....There is said to be an active Mormon lobby at Washington.

MONDAY, 12. — Cardinal Manning is strongly opposed to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule scheme for Ireland....The socialistic leaders who were tried recently in London have been acquitted....The bill to expel priests and nuns from public schools in France is being bitterly opposed by the priests....In the U. S. Senate the bill passed that makes Washington Territory into a State....East St. Louis is being patrolled by malitia-men. A large fire destroyed a great deal of property; the victims of the riot were buried yesterday; all is quiet in that section at present....Major William H. Quincy, a politician and lawyer of Brooklyn, committed suicide with a carving knife....Ferry passengers were endangered by pistol shots from a man who was trying to shoot a man who had insulted him....The Land Leaguers approve of Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule policy ...Ex-Alderman Miller was locked up at Police Headquarters Saturday night....Four more mail bags were received from the wreck of the "Oregon" ...A boat containing three boys capsized at Albany; two were drowned.

TUESDAY, 13.—The deputy sheriffs who fired on the crowd in East St. Louis last week are under arrest. The strike continues. The Missouri Pacific claims that it is handling all freight and running trains regularly. ....The boycott of Mrs. Gray, a baker at 508 Hudson street, in this city, increases her business....Seventy-six Apache prisoners, of Geronimo's band, are on their way to the prison at St. Augustine, Fla....Four more bags of "Oregon's" mail recovered....Transcontinental differences between railroads unsettled. All the Pullman cars on Pacific roads in use and crowded....Thaddeus Fairbanks, the scale maker, died yesterday, in his 91st year....A law case relating to taxation of Indian lands, beginning in New Jersey in 1812, was settled yesterday in U. S. Court....A suit has begun to compel North Carolina to pay interest on its bonds....Lord Churchill assailed Irish Home Rule in the Commons yesterday. Attorney-General Russell replied....Another batch of Aldermen of this city arrested this morning for taking bribes.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, April 10, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 22,547 pks.; exports 318 pks.

The trade here and the dairy mind throughout the country has been accustomed to connect very closely the weekly and monthly exports with the future of the market. With large exports there was confidence and courage and hopefulness. This year, without any exports to speak of, the old butter market has gone out clean and was a couple of weeks short of stock on the last end. There was a low price through the fall and winter based partly upon this very fact of no shipments to foreign lands, yet the stock has all melted away through various channels, and it is only after it is all gone that the trade or the country had much faith in its value. New make has been doing well. Fine qualities sold all the week mostly at 30c. for fancy dairy make, and up to 32c. for creameries. At the close Western creameries were freely offered at 33c. for extras, and at 30a31c. for fine makes, and the market was weaker. Better roads and the advancing season will now be adding to the receipts, and no delay should be allowed in getting butter to market. We quote:

New butter, fancy creamery	—	@33
do do dairy	—	@30
do ordinary dairy	20	@25
do poor to common	15	@20

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 11,153 boxes; exports 8,765 boxes.

Stock is very light, but it has been a dull week. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	11	@11½
" " white "	10½	@11¼
Good early useful cheese	8	@10
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 6

MAPLE SUGAR.—We quote:

Prime new maple sugar	7	@ 9
Maple syrup, per gallon can	——	@75

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Publisher's Department.

Difficulty of breathing, a short, dry cough, a quick pulse, and pain in the left side are symptoms of approaching consumption. Relieve the chest and cure the cough with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. This remedy is swift and certain, at any drug store at 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

That feeling of extreme debility is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla. "I was tired all over, but Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me new life and strength," says a Pawtucket, R. I., lady. Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5.

One might as well try to stem the rapids of Niagara, as to expect perfect health while a Scrofulous taint exists in the blood. Through its alterative and purifying properties, Ayer's Sarsaparilla removes every vestige of Scrofulous poison from the blood.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

The Spring Months

Are undoubtedly the best in which to purify the blood and strengthen the system, because at this time the body is most susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. The feeling of debility, languor, and lassitude, caused by the changing season, is entirely overcome, and scrofula and all humors are expelled from the blood by the powerful reviving and purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Do Not Delay.—Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

BROWE.—At Belleville, N. J., April 2, of pneumonia, Ruth Cushing Dill, wife of Elder James Browe, of the Reformed Church.

Resolutions by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church, Belleville, with reference to Mrs. James Browe:

Whereas, God, in His All-Wise Providence, has seen fit to remove from us our esteemed and beloved president and faithful friend,

Resolved, That while we deeply mourn the irreparable loss to our Society, our Church, and the community of one who was ever going about amongst us doing good, we yet bear with submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That we tender to her bereaved husband our deepest sympathies, with the prayer that his covenant-keeping God will give him "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." SEC.

CADMUS.—April 6, at Belleville, N. J., Mary Elizabeth King, wife of Edwin Cadmus.

She was for 25 years a consistent member of the Reformed Church.

DATER.—At Hawthorne, N. J., March 26, in the hope of a blessed immortality, Mary H., wife of Rev. Henry Dater, in the 50th year of her age. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

HAGAMAN.—At Hagaman's Mills, N. Y., April 7, Esther Palmateer, widow of J. W. Hagaman, in her 78th year.

She was born and spent her life here, and was among the very few of her generation left with us. With her husband she was one of the original members at the organization of the Reformed Church in 1850. In 1851 she was left a widow, with an adopted daughter, who died in 1857. She will be greatly missed by all. Her natural kindness of heart made her a universal favorite. In the Church will her loss be most deeply felt. Early in life she confessed Christ, and maintained a consistent profession to the end. Her place in the sanctuary and weekly prayer meeting was seldom vacant. To every good work she was an earnest helper and liberal giver. Her memory is blessed.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy, sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE COUNCIL OF HOPE COLLEGE will meet in regular session in the library of the college, at Holland, Mich., April 28th, 1886, at 10.30 A. M.

The Board of Superintendents of the Western Theological Seminary will meet at the same time and place as above, to conduct the annual examinations. The closing exercises of the seminary will be held April 29th, at 7.30 P. M., in the Second Reformed church of Holland, when Rev. P. Lepelta will deliver the annual address to the students.

P. MOERDYKE, S. C.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF ALBANY will meet in regular session in the Reformed church at Herkimer, N. Y., on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 8 o'clock P. M. Delegates proposing to attend will please notify C. L. Avery, Chairman of Committee of Entertainment. In the absence of the preacher elected for special sermon, the Rev. Dr. Wortman will by special request preach; subject, "AGAPE—The Christian Love."

J. W. BEARDSLEE, Stated Clerk.

THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY will meet on the third Tuesday of April, at 7.30 P.M., in the Madison Avenue Reformed Church of Albany. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion are to be sent to the Rev. A. M. Arcularius, New Baltimore, ten days before the meeting.

J. LANSING PEARSE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in stated session in the First Church of Hackensack on the third Tuesday in April, (20th), at 10 o'clock. Reports on the State of Religion must be sent to Rev. J. H. Suydam, (Chairman), ten days before the meeting. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting.

P. V. VAN BUSKIRK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M., in the Second Church of Hudson City. The yearly reports of the churches are to be sent to Rev. W. R. Duryee, 239 Pacific avenue, Jersey City.

WM. RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated spring session in the Reformed Church of Farmer Village, the third Tuesday (20th) of April, at 2.30 P.M. Consistorial reports on the State of Religion, with full statistics, are to be sent ten days previous to the Rev. J. W. Te Winkel, chairman of committee. Vacant churches and ministers without charge are required to report at this session. The Consistorial Books of Minutes from churches are to be presented and Classical dues are to be paid in. Applications of feeble churches for aid from the Board of Domestic Missions are to be sent ten days previous to Rev. P. De Bruyn, Chairman of Committee on Church Extension.

J. WHITBECK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Reformed Church of Leeds on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Public services at 2 o'clock P.M. Consistorial records must be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting, and the annual reports of the churches sent to Rev. E. N. Sebring ten days previous to the meeting.

B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF HUDSON will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Gallatin, the third Tuesday in April, at 10 o'clock A.M. The usual sermon will be preached at 10.30 A.M. Consistories are urged to observe the rule to send their statistical table and report to the address of the Stated Clerk at least ten days previous to this meeting.

T. S. DUSINBERRE, S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the First Reformed Church of Jamaica, on Tuesday, the 20th day of April, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented. Consistorial reports to be sent to the Rev. Wm. H. DeHart, Chairman of the Committee on State of Religion, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. Classical dues are to be paid.

W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet (D. V.) in stated session in the Reformed church at New Lots, on Tuesday, April 20th, 1886, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial reports must be sent to Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, East New York, at least ten days before the meeting of Classis. Consistorial minutes must be presented at this meeting.

R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY will meet in ordinary session in the Reformed Church of St. Johnsville, on Monday evening, April 19th, at 7.30 o'clock. Reports of consistories are to be sent to Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., at least ten days before the meeting.

A. J. HAGEMAN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session in the Reformed Church of Bound Brook, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M. The reports on the State of Religion will be sent to Rev. Alex. McWilliam, East Millstone, ten days before the meeting of Classis.

E. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in stated session on the third Tuesday (the 20th) of April, in the lecture-room of the church, 5th av. and 29th st., at 10 o'clock A.M. All consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. G. H. Smyth, Chairman of Committee on the State of Religion, 127 East 127th street, and all applications for aid to Rev. Oliver H. Walser, Chairman of Committee on Recommendations, 131 East 86th street, at least ten days before such meeting of Classis.

OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C. pro tem.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in regular spring session in the Church of Montgomery, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 2 P.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. F. S. Schenck, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, ten days before meeting.

R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PARAMUS will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Lodi, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 11 A.M. Consistorial reports must be sent to the Rev. W. C. Stitt, Piermont, N. Y., Chairman of the Committee on the State of Religion, before April 10th.

JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in the church at Neshanic, N. J., April 20th, at 11 o'clock A.M. Delegates from Philadelphia leave 9th and Green, Bound Brook line, at 7.30 A.M. At Bound Brook change to Central R. R., and at Somerville to South Branch, R. R. Consistorial reports will be sent ten days previous to meeting to Rev. Samuel Streng, Churchville, Bucks Co., Pa.

W. B. VOORHEES, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Second Church of Poughkeepsie on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports to be sent to Rev. J. E. Lyall, Chairman of Committee on State of Religion, at least two weeks before the meeting.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER will meet in stated session in the Multzeskill Church, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 30 A.M. Consistorial minutes should be presented. Consistorial reports should be sent to the Rev. H. A. Hendrickson ten days before the meeting.

EDWARD A. COLLIER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA will meet in regular session in the Reformed church at Greenwich, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. Ira Van Allen at least ten days before meeting.

J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in stated session in the First Reformed Church of Schenectady, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial minutes are to be presented for examination. Consistorial reports are to be sent to the Rev. Robert Doig, Scotia, N. Y., at least ten days before the meeting.

C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE will meet in stated session at Cobleskill, on Tuesday, April 20th, at 11 A.M. Classical dues must be paid at that time. Rev. D. K. Van Doren, of Middleburgh, N. Y., is the Chairman of the Committee on Classical Report, to whom reports on the State of Religion should be sent at least ten days prior to the meeting. Consistorial records must be presented at this meeting.

D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—Regular meeting Tuesday, April 20th, at 10 A.M., in the Church of Greenburgh (Elmsford). Sermon by Rev. Henry De Vries. Consistorial reports are to be sent to Rev. P. A. Wessels, Neperan, N. Y., before April 10th. Applications to Board of Domestic Missions to Rev. Dr. Todd, Tarrytown. Annual reports of all ministers, and elders' books are to be presented at this meeting.

CHAS. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

THE address of the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., of Nyack, N. Y., will be No. 1517 North 10th street, Philadelphia Pa., after April 1st.

CORRESPONDENTS will hereafter please address Rev. Wm. Moerdyk at Pella, Iowa.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. A. Parsons at Knox, Albany County, N. Y.

CORRESPONDENTS will address Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., at 15 Clinton avenue, Newark, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address the Rev. Abrm. R. Van Nest, D.D., at 208 Fifth avenue, New York.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS and particularly adapted to Warm Climates. No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass.

The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

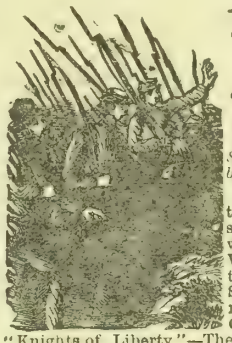
It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six bottles, $5.



THE SPY OF THE REBELLION.

By the Great Detective, Chief of U.S. Secret Service, ALLAN PINKERTON.

The "SPY" reveals many Secrets of the War never before told.

A graphic account of the first plot to assassinate Lincoln—How he was conducted safely to Washington—Early Battles of the War—The Secret Service—A Female Spy—A Trusted Officer's Treason—The "Knights of Liberty"—The "SPY" in Richmond—The "Loyal League"—McClellan and his enemies—The "SPY" journeys through the South—Defeat of Gen'l Pope—Battle of Antietam—McClellan's farewell address—THRILLING NARRATIVES OF PINKERTON'S SPIES—etc.

The "Spy" is the most thrilling War Book ever published. Endorsed by the Press and hundreds of AGENTS. A large handsome book; WANTED 688 pages; 50 illustrations. Sold only by our Agents. Can not be found in bookstores. Many of our agents are earning from $25 to $40 per week. We want agents everywhere. For full particulars and terms to agents address G. W. CARLETON & CO., Publishers, New York.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,

PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve, no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St. N. Y.

AGENTS coin money with our Amateur Photo outfit, and collecting family pictures to enlarge. Special 30 day offer. Empire Copying Co., 381 Canal St., New York.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 cts.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL

Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85

Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886. $5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,111,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,750 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,800 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 50
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, F. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY

of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE,
By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.

16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

The Church.

Conclusions.

IT would take from life its pleasure,
It would take from life its light,
Rob our souls of real treasure,
Fill with pain and sore affright;

We should live in dreary waiting
For our life to ebb away
To a dark and endless chaos,
To a night without a day,

Could the infidel and sceptic
Rob us, Lord, of faith in Thee;
What a weary sterile desert,
What a blank this world would be!

We, no doubt, of pain and trial
Then, as now, should have our share;
But without one hope to cheer us,
Sunk in endless, deep despair!

Tell us, ye who spend your talents
Trying to eclipse the light,
Sowing seeds of moral darkness,
Turning day to darkest night,

If we doubt the love of Jesus,
And distrust our Father's hand,
What support have ye to offer?
Tell us, let us understand!

We have seen earth's brightest jewels
Turn to ashes in our grasp,
And our own heart's dearest idols
Snatched by death from our fond clasp!

Yet amidst the midnight darkness
Shone a ray of light afar;
'Twas the promise of the Saviour,
Like a bright and morning star!

We will yield our earthly treasures,
But we cannot, will not, part
From the faith that binds to heaven,
From the sun that warms our heart;

From the clasp so sure and steadfast
Of our ever-present Friend;
From the sympathy and comfort
Of the love that knows no end!

—Rhoda Carpenter Clewes, in The Christian, London.

How to Find Christ.

THE promise reads, "Seek, and ye shall find." How is it then that some, who claim to be seeking Christ, fail to find Him? One of the saddest features of every period of special religious interest is that some appear to give evidence of a true desire to enter upon the Christian life, but never do enter upon it, and gradually lose their interest, and drift away, too often into a state of worse indifference than ever. Why is it?

Is not one reason because they do not seek Christ Himself? They study about Him. They learn by heart the outlines of Christian doctrine. They endeavor to practice the Christian virtues and illustrate the Christian graces. They try to cultivate sympathy with the Church of Christ in its work. But this is all. It is excellent and valuable, in itself, but it misleads them. What is necessary is to become acquainted with Jesus Christ Himself, to learn to know Him, to realize that His love is as personal as, and far more tender than, that which the dearest earthly friend feels for us. Seek Him, and find Him, and learn to love and obey Him really, even though but feebly at first, and the problem is solved. Then the knowledge of Him and His truth has a much more practical meaning and value. Then the fountain of the heart is purified, and the stream of belief and conduct which flows from it cannot come forth mixed with unclean waters.

Is not another reason because they do not seek Christ in the way explained and commanded by Him? They think themselves willing to be His disciples but they wish to become such in their own manner. Many, for example, like the young ruler, are ready to follow Him if He will not require of them too absolute a consecration of their property. They all fail to see that the whole difficulty is one of the will; that, whatever the special illustration may be, its principle, is the same—reluctance to actually surrender to Christ and obey Him as supreme. Now there is no alternative in the case. They must either give up wholly, and take their orders, so to speak, from Christ literally and uniformly, or they cannot be His disciples at all. When they realize this the desire of many a one grows lax.

Is not another reason this, that, having begun to seek Christ rightly, they fail to persist? Sometimes He does not manifest Himself plainly at once. Often the proper development of their characters and their zeal, depends upon their not finding the path made too easy before them. This is an ordinary law of human nature, as true in spiritual things as elsewhere. He never puts insurmountable or unreasonable obstacles in the way. Those who persevere and find Him always see and confess afterwards, as they look back, that His treatment of them was both the most wise and the most loving. He never fails to give all the encouragement necessary to induce a right minded seeker to take the next step in advance. But He does demand a real persistence which will not stick at trifles, but with business-like energy means to succeed, and neglects no proper effort to secure success.

"Seek, and ye shall find!" The pledge never has failed to be honored. But the seeker must seek Christ Himself, in His own appointed way, and persistently.—The Congregationalist.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Periodicals and Papers.

AS a half year is not far away the attention of the officers and teachers of Sabbath-schools is called to the fact that the Presbyterian Board publishes monthly The Westminster Teacher, and the American Sunday-School Union The Sunday School World, both devoted mainly to practical, sensible and evangelical expositions of the Lessons for the month and, therefore, helpful. They contain also a few pages of useful articles by authors highly esteemed among the churches. The Sunday School Union also publishes The Youth's World, a monthly, and The Picture World, a semi monthly for the little people; while the Presbyterian Board publishes The Sabbath School Visitor for the larger scholars, Forward, also for the older scholars, The Morning Star for the pupils a little younger, each of these as a monthly or semi monthly as may be preferred, and The Sunbeam, for the little folks, once a week. All these papers are handsomely illustrated, are excellent, are a blessing to the households they enter, and are supplied at a moderate cost. As everybody knows the distribution of such papers adds to the attractions of the Sabbath-school.

Home Readings.

LESSON 4, SECOND QUARTER.

M. Jesus and Nicodemus.....John 3: 1-18.
T. The Clean Heart.....Ps. 51: 1-19.
W. The New Man .....Eph. 4: 22-32.
T. The New Heart.....Ezek. 36: 25-38.
F. The New Creature.....2 Cor. 5: 14-21.
S. Elect of God.....Col. 3: 9-25.
S. Sons of God.....1 John 3: 1-9.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

April 25th.—"Jesus and Nicodemus."—John 3: 1-18.

Golden Text.—"Ye must be born again."—JOHN 3: 7.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."—ROM. 8: 6.

INTRODUCTION.

SOON after the wedding at Cana, the Passover called all the devout Jews to Jerusalem, and thither Jesus and His disciples journeyed. It does not seem probable that He had wrought any miracles or had taught publicly in the meanwhile. His first public appearance before the nation at large was when with righteous indignation He drove from the Temple those who polluted its courts by their worldly and often dishonest traffic. This scene recalls the prophecy of Malachi, "The LORD whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple." This bold proceeding on the part of Jesus aroused public attention and secured for Him willing listeners as He began to unfold the things of the kingdom. He also wrought a number of miracles which are referred to, but not related. The first impression made upon the people was somewhat favorable, but the faith awakened did not prove sufficient to withstand the influence of the opposition, except in the case of a few like Nicodemus. The conversation between Jesus and this ruler is full of the most profound truths of the Gospel, and will never lose its charm as containing one of the choicest utterances of Him who spake as never man spake. Our Divine teacher gives us in verse 12 a suggestion as to the most natural division of the lesson. He speaks of earthly and heavenly things as the subjects of His teaching, and by the former seems to mean those things which pertain to human experience, and by the latter those which pertain to God's purposes of redemption.

THE LESSON.

I. THE HUMAN NEED.—VS. 1-11.

V. 1.—"There was a man of the Pharisees." The Pharisees were the leaders of public opinion, and wielded a mighty influence over the people. As a class we find them opposed to John and Jesus as they afterward were to the disciples. "Nicodemus a ruler of the Jews." This man was not only a Pharisee but a Scribe, that is, one learned in the exposition of the law and recognized as a teacher, and a member of the Sanhedrin, which was the supreme court among the Jews.

V. 2.—"The same came unto Jesus by night." We are not to attribute very definite faith to this man at the outset, nor to criticize him for coming under cover of the darkness. He was an investigator. His attention had been aroused, and he was determined to test this new teacher and His claims, yet he was by no means ready to declare himself, for his knowledge was very imperfect. His precaution in avoiding notice was natural and justifiable under the circumstances. "We know that thou art a teacher come from God." He speaks in the plural as expressing the honest convictions of others besides himself; convictions which many stifled by their prejudices. This statement reveals the seeker's state of mind. He acknowledged Jesus as God's messenger, and doubtless hoped that He might prove to be the very Messiah.

V. 3.—"Jesus answered." Not the spoken question, nor even the conscious thought of Nicodemus, but his need. He had entirely erroneous ideas of the Messiah and His work. He regarded himself as by birth and education and position one of the elect, and Jesus removes the veil of self righteousness so that he may see himself as a lost sinner. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." These words set forth in distinct light the universal need of man. Nicodemus would acknowledge that the heathen, and even the masses of the Jews, were estranged from God, and spiritually dead, but Jesus extends the indictment until it embraces the holiest of the self-righteous Pharisees.

V. 4.—"How can a man be born when he is old?" The strange reply given to his salutation had thrown Nicodemus off his balance, and rendered him for the time incapable of appreciating the force of Jesus' words. He takes them in a natural sense and stumbles at the apparent absurdity involved.

V. 5.—"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit." Jesus immediately proceeds to make the matter clearer, and to sink the arrow of condemnation deeper into the heart of his visitor. The Pharisees had not submitted to the baptism of John, for they "needed no repentance"; they were also ignoring the spiritual side of the truths of prophecy, especially in connection with their Messianic hopes. Jesus says in substance, You Pharisees must humble yourselves to the level of the multitudes whose consciences responded to the teaching of the Baptist; you must seek a spiritual not a political deliverance.

V. 6.—"That which is born of the flesh is flesh." All that comes to us through the course of nature is sin defiled. Sinful man can beget only a sinful seed. This first birth according to nature must be followed by a new birth above nature, before man can be capable of intercourse with God.

V. 7.—"Ye must be born again." Jesus here brings the matter home personally to His hearer. He, Nicodemus, of blameless life, so far as we know, of high repute for sanctity among his fellows, can enter heaven on no other terms than do the publicans and harlots.

V. 8.—"The wind bloweth where it listeth." In Hebrew and Greek the same word is rendered both Spirit and wind, so that the aptness of this illustration is evident from the very names employed. The wind does not manifest itself to man's sight except by its power, so the Spirit proves the new birth by producing a new creature.

V. 9.—To the mind of Nicodemus perplexity seems to follow perplexity. He recognizes the authority of his Teacher, and cannot gainsay His statements, and can only plead ignorance, at the same time asking to be taught.

V. 10.—"Art thou a master of Israel?" The article in the Greek is definite, and some have thought from this that Nicodemus occupied the position in the Sanhedrin which entitled him to be known as the teacher. At all events he claimed to understand and to be capable of teaching the Scriptures, yet finds himself ignorant of the beginnings of spiritual life.

V. 11.—"Verily, verily." The frequency with which these words occur in this passage is noticeable, indicating the great importance of the truths thus introduced. "We speak that we do know." One of the impressions made upon the people by Jesus' teaching was that He spoke as one having authority, and not as the scribes. Their teaching was vague, that of Jesus was clear; theirs was a kind of guesswork, His was positive; theirs was taken up with the externals of religion, His went to the root of the matter.

II. THE DIVINE GRACE.

V. 12.—This verse is a transition between the two chief divisions of the lesson. From matters of human experience Jesus passes on to matters of Divine revelation. "How shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?" Nicodemus had been so dull of comprehension in respect to the simpler subjects already treated, that there seemed but little hope of making him understand the deeper things to follow; yet Jesus does not give up, but sows seed which ripened fruit on the day of crucifixion. The remainder of the passage is full of heavenly wisdom, and we can do scarcely more than enumerate the topics.

V. 13.—Notwithstanding the difficulty in arriving at the precise meaning of the terms employed in this verse, its practical lessons are evident, viz., that knowledge of God can be imparted only by one who is in intimate fellowship with Him, and Jesus is the only one whose experience of things both earthly and heavenly qualifies him for the office of revealer.

V. 14.—"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness." Nicodemus, in common with the rest of the Jews, was looking for a Messiah who should be exalted above the kings of the earth, and lift up the down-trodden nation with Himself. Jesus points to the cross as the first stage in His exaltation.

V. 15.—"That whosoever believeth in him should not perish." Faith is made the touchstone of character. Not as Jew or Pharisee, but as believers in Jesus will men be saved. The only alternative for faith is death.

V. 16.—"God so loved the world." The emphasis is doubtless upon "world." Jews were expecting Messiah as God's gift to them as a peculiar people; He comes as God's gift to the world at large. The Divine love is not circumscribed by national lines.

V. 17.—"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world." Part of the work of Christ, according to the Pharisaic programme, was to be the conquest of the Gentiles, or the judgment of the world. Instead of coming to take vengeance on the nations the wrath of God fell upon the unbelieving Jews, and salvation was given to the Gentiles.

V. 18.—"He that believeth on him is not condemned." Has passed out from the dominion of the law. "Shall not come into condemnation." He that believeth not is condemned already." Each man's position before the judgment is determined by himself. Self judgment anticipates the declarative judgment of God in the last day.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. The wisest need to be taught of Christ.
2. We can come to Jesus by day or night.
3. The purest as well as the vilest must be born again.
4. The Holy Spirit alone can quicken us.
5. Christ has been lifted up on the cross for you.
6. "Look unto me and be ye saved."
7. "Believest thou on the Son of God?"
8. "Thanks unto God for his unspeakable gift."
9. "We love him because he first loved us."

The United States Mail.

ON the end of a business house on Market street, Philadelphia, adjoining the new United States Post Office, there is an exceedingly suggestive picture, in two panels, giving the old and the new ways of delivering the United States mails.

The one indicates a very little to do, with leisure in which to do it. The other, much to do, for which haste is required. To one who is familiar with the growth of the postal service, this picture starts a very interesting train of thoughts. One of these brings back the old stage-coach and the horseback rider, and the fact that between these two the work of distributing the mails of the country was divided. Over against these come to mind the facilities of the present day, with the high rate of postage reduced to figures hardly more than nominal by comparison. From the external mechanical changes the mind turns to the contents of the letters both of the old time and the new.

One of the most engrossing topics in which people everywhere always have had, and always will have a common interest is the matter of personal health.

A large class of writers seeing in the public press the statement of cures by the Compound Oxygen Treatment, which has been so widely advertised, at once write to the references for fuller particulars. The patients who have been cured are so numerous, and they have so freely spoken of their restored health, that the divided task has been to many a light one. But one lady in Maine writes us that she has answered letters from nearly every State, and from some sections very many.

Hon. William D. Kelley, member of Congress, answers a very large number, saying that he owes the good health he has enjoyed for ten years to the treatment. Hon. William Penn Nixon, Editor of The Chicago Inter-Ocean, receives hundreds of inquiries as to the genuineness of his testimonials, and as to the permanence of results. These he answers through the mail, as it was through a letter received from a relative in Boston that he learned first of the value of the remedy. Once in a while one too hard pressed finds it necessary to ask relief from part of the task, as in the case of a prominent member of the bar of Topeka, Kansas, Hon. H. P. Vrooman, whose title came through service in the courts for a term as judge. He is also prominent in temperance work, being Chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Prohibition Party of Kansas. In one of his letters he said, "I have been interrupted about twenty times since commencing writing." This brief statement gives some idea of the value of his time. The reason for his being called upon on this subject, and letters written to him, is found in a letter to Doctors Starkey & Palen, June 27, 1882, telling of the benefits his wife had received from their Compound Oxygen Treatment. We quote exactly: "In the interest of suffering humanity, I send you for publication an account of the almost miraculous cure which your Compound Oxygen performed in the case of my wife. Her condition was a very peculiar one. She had a complication of diseases, dyspepsia, torpid liver, or liver complaint, as her physicians have always called it, and general nervous prostration.

"If you will refer to my description of her case, when I made the first order for your Treatment, in December, 1877, you will see that she was suffering from severe attacks of colic and vomiting. These attacks first came once in two or three months, when she would vomit herself almost to death's door, and until she would raise a large amount of green bile. When her stomach was relieved from this she would become better at once. But as soon as a certain amount of bile would again accumulate, there would be another attack of colic and vomiting. Each time the attacks came at shorter intervals, and were more severe, until the became so weak and exhausted that we are sure she could not have lived many days longer, had not your Oxygen Treatment come just as it did and save her, for the colic and vomiting had become almost perpetual, and her strength and life were nearly exhausted.

"We could see a change in her condition from the first inhalation, for she never had so severe an attack of colic afterward, and had more strength to endure the pain and retching. She continued to gain steadily, and for the past four years has had no severe attacks. If she is threatened with one, she takes an inhalation or two, and so escapes any severe paroxysms.

"We have used in all nearly five Home Treatments in four years. One of our boys, fourteen years of age, had an attack of inflammation of the bowels, which left him in a very bad condition. The Treatment did him nearly, if not quite, as much good as it did Mrs Vrooman.

"I think it but right that we should make known to others what Compound Oxygen has done for us, and therefore send you this statement for publication."

Such a statement of necessity attracted wide attention, especially among invalids, who naturally wanted particulars. These, Judge Vrooman has in all cases cheerfully given, so far as his time would permit. This he has continued to do for nearly four years, to the gratification of all who need such aid. At the same time his business engagements have made it desirable that a portion of the time thus occupied might be saved. This wish he expresses in a letter, dated February 24th, 1886. It is as follows:

"Since I sent you my testimonial, which you published in June, 1882, I have received scores of letters from all parts of the United States asking almost all kinds of questions about the Oxygen, etc; but the main thing most of them wished to know was, whether I do really exist, or whether I am a mere myth, and you only humbugging the people with fictitious names for the purpose of deceiving them.

"And now I wish to say to the public further (if you will publish it), to save my answering so many letters, that my wife has not been compelled to take any more treatment for nearly five years, since which time her health has been constantly improving, and she weighs more than she ever has before, and has borne a fine, healthy boy, now almost four years old, who, of course, is smart, he being the seventh son.

"I impart this information to show the public that the Compound Oxygen is not merely a temporary relief, but that it will permanently cure and give new life and vitality to the whole system; and if any are still solicitous to know whether I am or not, I will say in the language of Daniel Webster, 'I still live,' and may be found with my law sign still out at 155 Kansas ave., Topeka, Kansas.

"I hope what I have said may remove some doubts concerning the permanency of the cures performed by Compound Oxygen, and that afflicted ones may not delay too long in testing its efficacy."

The request that Judge Vrooman makes that we print his statement, we cheerfully comply with, and agree with his thought that what he has said should remove some doubts. What he has written to patients, has undoubtedly helped many to accept the evidence so freely and abundantly given of the curative power of Compound Oxygen. There are others coming forward to divide the task with him, and a very interesting letter just at hand, giving in one report the record of results in three cases, one thousand miles apart, will serve to show how this relief is coming. The writer, Rev. Isaac Leonard, of Sperry, Iowa, says:

"I have been able to labor in my old field beyond all my expectations. Some Sabbaths have four services, and some weeks preaching every evening.

"My old friends express the surprise that I appear so young and vigorous. For this I am largely indebted to your Compound Oxygen Treatment. My nephew, James L. Leonard, of Iona, N. J., writes me that he has been able to accomplish more the past season than for four years past, all owing to the Compound Oxygen.

"My sister, Mrs. Mary S. Leonard, has gone to Lake Worth, Fla., at the urgency of her physician. She writes me that she discontinued the Compound Oxygen Treatment on arriving there, but that she became so nervous that she could not sleep, and became so miserable that she hardly knew what she was doing. She then resumed the Treatment, and in one week was quite comfortable again. I see many that need the Compound Oxygen, and am not slow in recommending it. You are at liberty to use my letter as you desire, with the hope that others may derive the same benefits that my friends and I have received from the use of the Compound Oxygen Treatment.

"P. S.—Two of my friends whose address I enclose, have applied to me for your address; one in the State of Indiana, and one in Burlington, Iowa. They want to see your Treatise. Please respond."

These letters show the widespread interest in this method of treatment for diseases, and in the vivid light they throw on the freedom of communication between different parts of the country, give emphasis to the thought of how great an institution is our United States mail.

A Treatise of nearly two hundred pages, entitled "Compound Oxygen," its mode of action and results, giving full and interesting information, is mailed free to every applicant by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,

Unequaled.

Dr. R. M. Alexander, Fannettsburg, Pa., says: "I think Horsford's Acid Phosphate is not equaled in any other preparation of phosphorus."

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. Lovejoy, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. Stanton, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION,

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

Perfect Drainage is essential in every house worth living in, and Perfect Regularity in the working of all the excretory organs of the body is necessary to insure perfect health. Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient is the most effective, agreeable and economical remedy known that will secure this result. In full doses it thoroughly evacuates the bowels, and by establishing a regular habit Cures Constipation. In medium doses it neutralizes excess of acid, promotes the action of the skin and cures Sick Headache. In small doses it stimulates the stomach, aids digestion and cures Dyspepsia. Prepared by TARRANT & CO., New York. Sold by druggists everywhere.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF

PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. The advantage of this compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. For sale by A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston, and by all druggists.

DRESSES DYED WITHOUT RIPPING.

LEWANDO'S FRENCH Dyeing & Cleansing Establishment

OFFICES:

17 Temple Place, Boston, U. S. A. | Fifth Ave. cor. W. 14th St., New York.

Price List Sent Free.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly three times as much as U.S. BONDS. I am known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

Rev. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
Dr. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
Hon. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
Rev. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
Dr. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. Perkins, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. Perkins, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
CHURCH FURNITURE
INTERIOR DECORATIONS

J. & R. LAMB, 59 Carmine St., New York.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. FOR OIL.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
Chimes and Peals for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y, Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 500 TESTIMONIALS
CINCINNATI, O. BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

The real cost of soap is not to be estimated by the price paid, but by the results. Soap made of inferior stock, or of good materials not properly combined, will injure whatever it is used upon, so it is not cheap at any price. The Ivory Soap which Prof. Cornwall, of Princeton College, says "Is very "well made, and can "not injure anything," is certainly very cheap at the price which any grocer will furnish it to you.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

FOR A FEW DAYS ONLY.

Moquette Carpets

AT

$1.15 per yard.

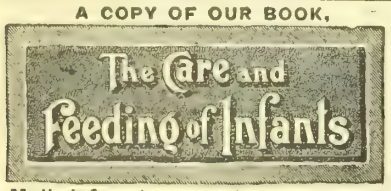
NUMEROUS ERNS, SUITABLE FOR ALL KINDS OF FURNISHING, TO SELECT FROM.

JOHN & JAMES DOBSON,

40 and 42 West 14th St.,

New York.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,



Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office.

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting ana Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled, 3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

W. & J. SLOANE

Invite attention to their unusually attractive importation of China Mattings.

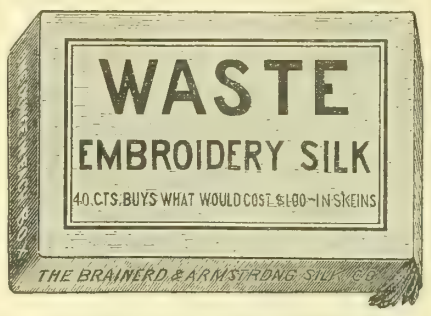
Owing to the limited supply of these goods this season, they recommend intending purchasers to make early selections.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

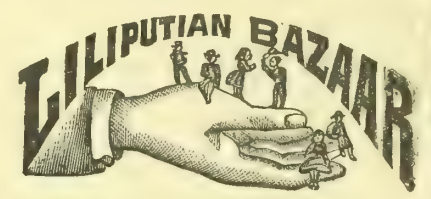
NEW YORK.



Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,
469 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

BEST & CO.



The largest establishment in the world devoted to the Outfitting of Children.

OPENING NEW SPRING STYLES.

BUYERS OF

BOYS' AND YOUTHS'

Suits and Overcoats,

Hats, Caps, and Furnishing Goods,

MISSES' AND GIRLS'

Cloaks and Dresses,

Millinery, Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves, Shoes, &c., and INFANTS' CLOTHING of every description will find in our stock the largest and most complete assortment of fashionable styles at the lowest prices.

Persons residing in any portion of the United States may avail themselves of the superior advantages afforded by our establishment by sending for our Illustrated Catalogue, from which they can order by mail.

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN

UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains n

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.,

EXHIBIT THIS WEEK THEIR SPRING IMPORTATIONS IN BLACK AND COLORED SILKS, VELVETS, ETC., WITH THE LATEST SELECTED DESIGNS IN RICH NOVELTIES TO MATCH FOR COMBINATIONS. THEY OFFER SEVERAL HUNDRED PIECES FANCY SILKS IN GLACE CHECKS, LOUISIENNES, FOULARDS, TRICOTINE, IMPERINES, ETC., AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES. ALSO 5,000 YARDS OF RICH SILK AND VELVET NOVELTIES IN VARIOUS DESIGNS AT ABOUT HALF THEIR COST TO IMPORT.
ORDERS BY MAIL PROMPTLY FILLED.

Broadway cor. 11th St.,
New York.

THINK FOR YOURSELF.
IF YOU ARE A SENSIBLE WOMAN
AND BELIEVE THAT Health, Comfort, and Beauty
ARE DESIRABLE THINGS,
BUY GOOD SENSE
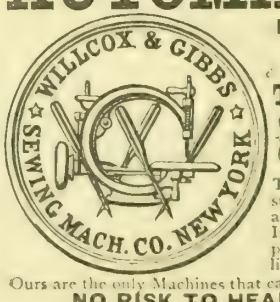
CORDED CORSET WAISTS.
Beautifully made of BEST MATERIALS throughout.
THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.
☞ Be sure your Corset is stamped "Good Sense."
FIT ALL AGES
Infants to Adults.
Sold by leading retailers everywhere. Send for circular.
FERRIS BROS. Manufacturers
81 White St., NEW YORK.

WILLCOX & GIBBS

AUTOMATIC



MACHINES
All bear this
Medallion Trade-Mark
(Needles form W. and G. in the Machine.)
Absence of this Trade-Mark stamps a Machine as counterfeit. Imitators dare not put this Medallion on Machines.

Ours are the only Machines that can be used with
NO RISK TO HEALTH.
Unequalled for
LIGHTNESS OF RUNNING
AND
STRENGTH & BEAUTY OF WORK.
Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N.Y.
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED LIST.

LE PAGE'S
LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mfd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

RIDLEYS'

Grand, Allen and Orchard Sts., N. Y.

SPRING AND SUMMER

NOVELTIES

Are now to be seen and had in abundance at our Establishment, and at prices which will show a very large saving.

There is no doubt about our Stock being the largest to select from.

MILLINERY.

Our Millinery Parlor contains a very large and varied assortment of

Pattern Bonnets and Hats,

Including Paris Trimmed and those from our own workrooms, and in each case the difference in price will show a saving of one-third to one-half usually paid.

Straw Goods.

New Colors and Combinations

IN STRAW HATS AND BONNETS.

The Largest Stock in the City.

All the Latest Novelties Added Daily.

DRESS GOODS

In all the Latest Effects

In All Wool, Silk and Wool, and Cotton.

SPRING SUITS AND WRAPS

For Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all the Spring Styles.

Fashion Magazine.

The Spring Number surpasses any of its preceding issues, and is beyond question the best periodical of its kind published. All illustrations are exact copies of the originals, which are on sale in our 52 departments, and the price-list gives the same prices as are asked at our counters. Issued Quarterly, at 50 cents per annum, or 15 cents Sample Copy.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 311½ to 321 Grand St.,

56 to 70 Allen St., 59 to 65 Orchard St.,

NEW YORK.

UNEQUALLED FOR EXCELLENCE.

Without a rival as a dressing for all Salads, and as a sauce for Cold Meats, etc. It is prepared with extreme care; all its ingredients are of the purest and best, and will keep good for years.

BEWARE OF ALL IMITATIONS.

A MILLION
BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 16. WHOLE No. 2908. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE FELICITOUS practical application of the International Lesson, in the Sunday-school department of this number, is commended to our readers. The Rev. Mr. Van Deventer constantly furnishes comments full of meaning in a few words, and in this instance is at his best. It is a notable improvement, as the saying used to be, of the conversation between our Lord and the woman of Samaria.

EASTER SUNDAY in Judea occurs at the beginning of the barley harvest, and has a meaning differing widely from that generally connected with it by Europeans and Americans. To Christians in Judea it spoke and speaks now of a finished work, of redemption accomplished, of a triumph over the powers of darkness and the last enemy death. Not life springing from death so much as a harvest begun, the gathering in of the results of life, the sure triumph of truth over error, of righteousness over sin, of peace and joy over turmoil and suffering, was there the lesson of the Passion and Resurrection of Our Lord. "It is finished," was the declaration of the Son of Man and Son of God on the Cross. It is the privilege of the Church to gather from the crucifixion and the triumph over death an assurance of success in the work which the Lord has committed to her hands. The same conflict, conducted by the Master with ignorance, unbelief and sin, is the lot of every faithful follower of the Lamb of God. He has reason to exclaim to those with whom he is associated, "Oh, slow of heart to believe." He must often endure and overcome popular misrepresentation and abuse. Sneers and ridicule, opposition and malediction often attend his work. Perversions of the truth confront him. The multitude is against him. The self-righteous and the sceptical oppose him, and they find favor with the people. And the trial of his faith reaches its height when tokens of the Divine presence and favor are withheld, and he cries, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me." To him the events commemorated this week say, "Know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Success is as sure as that Christ triumphed on the Cross when He said, "It is finished;" as sure as His victory over death and the grave. The servant shall be as his Lord, shall be opposed, tried, assailed by the powers of darkness, shall be seemingly overcome; but shall also succeed and overcome as did his Lord. The assurance of the success of true Christian life and work is one of the chief lessons of this week. The contemplation of the Cross and the victory over death should invigorate our faith and courage and hope, and should add fresh ardor to our Christian activity.

AS TO CHURCH UNION it may be said: No one of the great denominations shows any tendency toward it. The Methodists, Episcopalians, Baptists, Lutherans and Congregationalists, expect to remain distinct organizations. The Presbyterian Church shows no intention to relinquish its peculiarities. It has a disposition to receive and absorb any decent Christian body willing to be absorbed,—the same disposition exists in other churches. Besides, high-churchism is more popular than low-churchism. High-church Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, are held in higher esteem than their moderate fellows. A strong influence has been bearing in a contrary direction, namely, that of undenominational religious weeklies. Notwithstanding, high-churchism to-day is popular. Besides, three or four families, living in separate dwellings, will be the best of friends, but if brought into one house to dwell together, will fall out with each other. True Christian union can and does exist without organic union.

THE GOVERNORS of the New York Hospital have issued an appeal to the public against the project to destroy the Bloomingdale Asylum. It seems to us that their positions are correct. The institution is a public charity, and should be protected and preserved. To cut streets through the Bloomingdale property would be to destroy it for the purposes of an asylum, and there is nothing to take its place. No public interest requires any such action, but on the contrary it is to the interest of the entire community that there should be such a place of seclusion for the victims of mental disease, and that such grounds free from buildings should be preserved as serving many of the purposes of a park.

RUDENESS.—There are in this city not a few well-dressed brutes who, whenever opportunity offers in a crowded street car, make themselves excessively disagreeable to ladies who chance to be without a male companion. We have known recent cases in which young ladies have been compelled to leave a Broadway car to escape this painful rudeness. We find in the National Baptist a suggestion on this point which may be of service to some of the sufferers from such outrageous conduct. Our sprightly contemporary says that it "recalls the instance of a young woman of much presence of mind and nerve and muscle, who was once riding in a street car, when a respectably dressed man sitting beside her put his arm around her waist. The young woman did not scream nor faint nor make a scene. She quietly drew from her dress a pin (the true feminine weapon), and drove it to the head in the hand of the respectably dressed man. He groaned and gasped and got out of the car.

"Another young lady was travelling alone on the cars, when a person dressed in good enough clothes turned back and began a conversation with her, or at least attempted a conversation, though it was but a monolog, as she did not reply. Presently, putting her hand behind her ear, and leaning forward, she asked, with the sharp tone of the partially deaf, and in a loud voice, 'WHAT DID YOU SAY?' The disgusted passenger made no further effort at a conversation."

THE STRIKES continue. Workingmen have checked the flow of public sympathy by some unwise deeds and proclamations. Some of them are foreigners and have not rid themselves of the belief that the conditions of American life are like those of life in Europe. The boycott, that adaptation of Papistical excommunication, senseless, tyrannical and brutal as Papal excommunication, has been applied here and there, and has offended and outraged the conviction and sentiment of the citizens of a free country. Attempts have been made to establish illegal restrictions of personal liberty. Demands have been made that workingmen must be discharged because they do not belong to a Union. On the other hand employers and corporations have demanded that workingmen shall not organize, shall not be members of a Union. This is just as much an illegal and unreasonable limitation. Workingmen have a clear right to form Unions, to organize their power to secure just treatment from organized capital. While all this is true, it is also true that capital in some instances is striving to effect settlements that will prove no settlement at all. If organized capital succeeds in some of its endeavors it will only postpone and probably but for a little while an uprising of a much more serious character. Some of these devices will do nothing toward allaying or removing discontent.

In the midst of this strife the anniversary of the priceless sacrifice for sin occurs. Mercy and grace for the undeserving, for those whose folly and iniquity and guilt culminated in despising and rejecting the Holy and the Just One, are proclaimed by the cross and the sepulchre of our Lord and Saviour. He was no respecter of persons, was the friend of publicans and sinners. "This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them," was charged against Him. But He was wisdom and righteousness and mercy in perfection. May the example of Divine grace, of the lovingkindness and tender mercy which took upon itself the infirmities and hardships and sorrows and griefs of men, be mighty in allaying and removing the existing contention.

The Beginning of Vegetation.

PRINCIPAL SIR J. W. DAWSON, of Canada, President-elect of the British Scientific Association, in the Expositor of April, sustains the position taken by Mr. Gladstone in the recent debate in regard to the first chapter of Genesis. In that debate the declaration of Moses, (Gen 1: 11, 12,) in relation to the beginning of vegetation was not definitely vindicated by Mr. Gladstone, and on that point Principal Dawson bears testimony of the highest importance. He writes:

"Here at the outset we are met by an apparent discrepancy between the record in Genesis and what we have learned of the history of creation from the study of the earth's crust. Our author informs us that vegetation was introduced on the day preceding the final arrangements of the solar system, and two days before the inswarming of animals on the fifth day. This vegetation also included the higher kinds of plants, for while it was at first Deshe, or seedless plants (not grass as in the Authorized Version), it also contained herbs bearing seed, and trees bearing fruit. In so far as geological discovery has yet reached into the older layers of the earth's crust, it has found abundant remains of animals as low as the Lower Cambrian; but below this there is a vast thickness of both crystaline and fragmental rock, in which the Eozoon of the Laurentian stands out as the sole representative of animal life; and its claim to be an animal is still in question. But land plants are not known to reach so far back. None are known so old as the Lower Cambrian, so that marine animals, and probably marine plants, appear to have existed long before land plants. Yet the geologist cannot safely deny the existence of land vegetation even in the old Laurentian period. We know that there was land at that time; and in the middle of the Laurentian series, there exist in Canada immense bedded deposits of carbon, in the form of graphite and of ores of iron, which cannot be accounted for on any known principles of chemical geology, except by supposing the existence of abundant vegetation. It is true that Eozoon exists in these beds, but it is in any case a mere precursor or foreshadowing of animal life, while the quantity of Laurentian carbon which it would seem must owe its accumulation to the deoxidising agency of plants, is enormous. Whether we shall ever find Laurentian rocks in a condition to yield up the actual forms and structures of this old vegetation is uncertain; but we know, as certainly as we know anything inferentially, that it existed. Of its character and quality we have no information except the record in Genesis. It was given to the primitive prophet of creation to see in his vision the forms of Laurentian vegetation; he saw what no geologist has yet seen, but what some geologist of the future may possibly see. In any case he has to thank the discoveries of Sir William Logan and his confrères in Canada, for establishing at least a probability on scientific grounds that he was right; and until these discoveries were made, the fact of pre-Cambrian vegetation rested on his sole authority. It may be said that such vegetation would be useless; but the same remark may be made as to the lower animals which existed so long before man, or as to the exuberant vegetation of some oceanic islands untenanted by the higher animals."

There is no higher authority on Canadian geol ogy than Principal Dawson, and he shows that God has not left Himself without a witness in the rocks in regard to His inspired record of the beginning of vegetable life. Not to know such a fact as Dr. Dawson relates is pardonable in Mr. Gladstone and in those of us whose knowledge of geology is necessarily largely general or at best is not an ample knowledge of details; but ignorance in regard to these Laurentian deposits and their significance by Prof. Huxley cannot be excused. And when we learn such a fact as Prof. Dawson mentions we can only wonder at the language used by Prof. Huxley in his attack on Mr. Gladstone—language which certainly was not honest.

The Laurentian rocks were so named by Sir William Logan, they constitute the principal range of mountains in British America, extend from Labrador to Lakes Huron and Superior and thence toward the Arctic Ocean—a distance of 3,000 miles. The system is ranked as older than the Silurian of Great Britain, and by some is regarded as one of the oldest of the earth. The scientific classification, beginning with the oldest rocks, is as follows: Eozoic, consisting of the Laurentian and the Huronian; Palæozoic, consisting of Cambrian, Siluro-Cambrian, Silurian, Devonian, Carboniferous, Permian; Mesozoic, etc. These Laurentian rocks are sedimentary and stratified, but have been baked into gneiss, quartzite, feld spar, crystalline marbles, etc. In fact they seem to have been the first sediment deposited in the earlier ages of the world's history. Their thickness is estimated at 30,000 feet. In them are found deposits which, when found in later rocks, are ascribed to the presence of land vegetation. The Mosaic account is sustained. In truth, squirm and dodge as they may, withhold and ignore facts as they do, sceptical scientists cannot account for the record of Genesis except by admitting that it was inspired.

IMAGES.—"The Christian Intelligencer alludes to the fact that the Second Commandment was once regarded as a prohibition of art—but 'only by fanatics.' We have known persons who would not permit a portrait, nor a daguerrotype, because it was a likeness of something in the earth—and they were not fanatics, unless this particular literalism rendered them such—on all other subjects they were steady enough. There must have been a streak of this iconoclasm in the Reformed churches, though we cannot trace it at present. Who will explain?"

So says the Interior. The iconoclasm spoken of was simply the tremendous reaction against the images and pictures which filled the papal churches. That it went to a fanatical extent is apparent from the fact that the same book which contains the Second Commandment contains also a precept to make the cherubic forms which covered the mercy seat. To make the Scripture consistent with itself, one must restrict the prohibition concerning images and likenesses to those which were intended for worship. These are rigidly forbidden, others not.

"Old Colony" Papers.

AN OLD ORGAN.

II.

THE Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church arose at a time of great denominational awakening, and was doubtless one of the signs of it. Those years constitute, in reality, the transitional period of our Church's existence. Thoroughly emancipated from old world associations, except in sentiment, it awoke to a realization of its responsibilities and opportunity on this continent, as well as to the heathen world. The very first article in the magazine is a sermon on "The Duty and Necessity of Missionary Exertions," by Dr. Brownlee. With his characteristic vigor of language, he closes by denouncing "the enemy of disinterested missionary enterprises," and exclaims: "Christians! can a parallel to this character be pointed out in all the busy walks of human life, among the most thoughtless of the sons of men?"

The same number contains also the beginning of a history of "The Missionary Society of the Reformed Dutch Church," by its secretary. Evangelistic work was carried on until 1819 under the care of the Classis of Albany, at which date it was transferred to a central committee in New York city. It was time, for the work had languished. During the last ten years there had been an average of only one missionary employed, and most of the previous work had been done by missionary tours of a few weeks at a time in "the frontier settlements of the State of New York, and the Province of Upper Canada." The last report to Synod was that "all their efforts had been unavailing; that missionaries were so few and funds so low, that they could present no pleasing prospect whatever for the missionary cause."

The new committee set about their task with energy. They blew this blast upon their bugle to a sleeping church: "Whilst other denominations have labored with indefatigable industry for the extension of their bounds, our Church has done nothing for the advancement of her particular interests." They stopped missionating in Canada, sent out eight missionaries, and organized a system of annual collections and Female Cent Societies. (Our devoted "Women's Boards" will be interested to see that they have good old Dutch precedent for their coöperation). And in three years our missionary organization was ready to burst its chrysalis "committee" state, and become "The Missionary Society of the Reformed Dutch Church" in capital letters. It began as a voluntary association "of pious individuals, at the suggestion of the Rev. Paschal N. Strong," but was at once "hailed with joy" and recognized by the General Synod with this stirring drum-beat: "It is high time that the Church should awake from its guilty slumber, and wipe away the reproach of former years." In the four years during which this Society had existed up to the writing of that magazine article, twenty-six missionaries had been employed in forty-five different places, fourteen weak congregations had been aided, and auxiliary societies were rapidly forming in the churches of the denomination. Among the graduates of the Theological Seminary of that year (1826), who entered the service of the Society, was David Abeel, afterwards the founder of our Amoy Mission in China.

Our foreign missionary work was in a highly nebulous state until the year 1826, when with other denominations we were swallowed up by the American Board. This arrangement was not an agreeable one to a large section of the Church, and Dr. Brownlee's magazine headed the revolt on the ground of "Hopkinsianism and Independency." "We can never go, as a Church, into this Eastern theology and Eastern policy. We avow this publickly and boldly. We are no half-way men!....We do embark heartly in the grand and holy enterprise, at home and abroad. But we do it in our own cautious, prudent, Dutch way." He goes on indignantly to denounce "those men who oppose us, who oppose the Magazine," and "go headlong into the Eastern policy," while "they overlook and starve their own institutions at home as far as they can." Meanwhile "we, good-natured Dutchmen, fold our hands and sleep and slumber while our hedges are being broken down, and the paths of the good old ways are being shut up before our eyes by unnatural children in the midst of us. As your editor, I make my solemn appeal on this matter to the General Synod, and to every Dominie" (Ah! good Dr. Brownlee, your Scotch "Dutch"-ness betrayed you in the spelling of that word) "and consistory and member of our Church."

The appeal was heeded so far as to bring about the ecclesiastical independence of our missions, though still under the alphabetical style and firm of the A. B. C. F. M. till 1856, when a still greater stride was taken and we walked out of the "Eastern" camp altogether, and wiped our hands finally of "Hopkinsianism," very greatly to the benefit of the heathen as well as of our stimulated selves.

In number seven, (October, 1826), Dr. Brodhead's Synodical sermon has an urgent recommendation of an Education Society; and in number eight there is a characteristic editorial demand for one, closing with the words: "Will the Presbyterian Church believe it, will the Christian public believe, that the great and wealthy Reformed Dutch Church has not yet one Education Society!!!" A foot-note is added: "Since writing the above, a committee of three leading members of the Collegiate Church has been appointed with a view to form an Education Society in these churches. May God prosper and bless it." And in volume III. we read of the organization of a Board of Education on the 7th of May, 1828, at a Convention held in New York, with Col. Henry Rutgers as President, and Gen. Stephen Van Rensselaer and Gen. John Frelinghuysen as Vice-Presidents,—certainly a militant display of interest in the good cause of recruiting the ranks of the ministry.

I may here mention that, upon the same page, is a notice of the anniversary meetings of a "Female Tract Society" and a "Female Sabbath School Association" connected with our New York churches; also, in Vol II., of the "Female Missionary Society of New York, auxiliary to the Missionary Society of the Reformed Dutch Church," organized in 1824,—all of which adds emphasis to what I have already said, that our present Women's Boards are simply marching in the venerated footsteps of their grandmothers. Good old Knickerbocker names, too, appear in the lists of Directresses, Managers, etc., such as Van Nest, Varick, Beekman, Van Wagenen, De Forest, Anthony, Heyer, Demarest, Westervelt, Labagh, Duryee and Brinkerhoff.

A Sabbath School Board was also formed at this time, and even a Bible Society, and a City Missionary Society. It seems to have been the moment of crystallization in our Church, and there appears to have been an abundance of material, especially of energetic young men, of devout women, and of solid and well-known citizens.

Our institutions at New Brunswick were also taking a new start. The magazine records the accession to the theological faculty of those very different but very able men, Drs. Cannon and McClelland, and the endowment of the third professorship was secured. The College (we are told in the first number of our magazine) had just been revived, under the new name of Rutgers, given it in honor of the services and generous endowments of Col. Henry Rutgers, of New York. In the appeal which is published in its behalf, I notice that a special point is made of its non-adoption of the dormitory system, as an inherent feature of its original design. The founders "disapproved of excluding youth from the domestic and social circle, and shutting them up in cells or chambers per se" (sic), which the editor considers as a relic of Roman Catholicism. "They judged it proper that the students should be distributed, under the supervision of the faculty, in genteel, sober and Christian families; that the heads of these families should exercise a parental care over them; that the officers of the College should, at any time they choose, visit their pupils to see that they are at their studies and are in at the regular hours and submit honorably and steadily to the regulations of their respective well-governed boarding houses." An appalling picture is drawn, as that which "the founders" had in mind when they made this proviso of the consequences of placing the young men "beyond the reach of the moral influence of genteel and Christian families" and "the potent influence of female presence and discipline." They "will yield themselves up to a dissipated turn of mind, will enact scenes of folly and madness, will be plotting or executing mischief on those—they may be the best of men—who yet seem to hold them in a kind of prison and durance vile!" How far these Arcadian prospects have been realized may well be submitted to a committee of experts, composed of President Gates, ex-President Campbell, and the Mayors and ex-Mayors of New Brunswick.

In illustration of the "price of living" sixty years ago as compared with to-day, I give the following official statement of annual expense, which appears in the magazine:

Board for 38 weeks, at $2 per week -	$76.00
Tuition fees - - - - - - - - - - -	40.00
Fuel and contingencies in College - -	5.00
And $5 entrance - - - - - - - -	5.00
Average expenses - - - - - - - -	$126.00

A foot-note is appended, saying that it is hoped that arrangements will soon be made to procure board on still lower terms, and that "a certain number of students in reduced circumstances will be admitted for one-half the ordinary tuition fees."

Those were indeed lively times in our Dutch Zion, and Dr. Brownlee was their prophet. If the new departure, which seems to have been taken in those days had been adequately followed up, our denominational strength and efficiency must surely have been greater than it has proved to be. But one thing is certain,—that The Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church and its editor cannot be held responsible for any failure. And if the fresh start, which has characterized these latter days does not result in regaining much of the lost ground, it will not be the fault of the magazine's successor, THE CHRISTIAN INTELL'GENCER.

Apropos to the above statement of the price of living in 1826, I have been amusing myself with a little calculation of the amount of reading matter—most of it, I beg leave to submit, of a far more readable kind—which a subscriber to this paper gets at the price of $2 65 a year, as compared with what a subscriber to the magazine got for his $1.50 (which probably had quite as much purchasable value as the $2.65 of the present day). And I find that the former receives at least one-third more (I think it would be found to be nearer double) every week than the latter received once a month. My readers whose algebra is still available can figure up that sum, and forthwith start out upon a canvassing tour in their neighborhoods in behalf of this new "organ" of the Reformed (Dutch) Church! F. N. ZABRISKIE.

The Star; the Cross; the Rising.

A HYMN BY EMMA M. TOOKER.

SPARK Divine! Thou orb celestial,
Calmly on thine errant way,
Wherefore, o'er yon humble vestal
Thus thy placid form delay?
Myriad hosts with zealous fervor
Echoing, answer o'er the plain,
'Tis the Voice of our Creator,
'Tis the Star of Bethlehem.

Spices, fragrant of devotion;
Breath of heaven and earth combined;
God, with pitying emotion
Sleeping in His Holy Child.
Here, the serpent's head is trodden;
Here, the law has ceased its reign;
Type to anti-type shall blossom
In this Babe of Bethlehem.

Holy Cross! Bedyed with crimson,
Gall of our iniquity!
Bursts the soul-cry from its prison,
"Why hast Thou forsaken Me?"
Rocks are split, and caverns rending
While the veil is torn in twain;
Jehovah, God, His wrath is spending
On the Lamb of Bethlehem.

In the Star, the Cross, the Rising
Hope, humility and life,
Conflict here, with Love's chastising,
Endless joy beyond the strife.
Trinity of free redemption—
Typified—Anointed—Slain—
Work in us our full salvation,
Glorious King of Bethlehem.

Temperance At Albany.

ONE of the chief political and social questions of the day is: What shall be done in regard to the use and sale of intoxicating liquors? It is not a new question and is not likely to prove ephemeral. It will be asked and argued until satisfactorily settled. Under the influence of the principles of the Word of God opinions and convictions against the unrestricted use of ardent spirits will become more general, earnest and resolute. Society will become more and more determined to protect itself from the perils and evils of drunkenness and of the liquor saloon.

The man who makes himself drunk dethrones his reason. A half drunken man is one-half bereft of reason. No man is at liberty or has a right to dethrone his reason and to threaten his fellows with injuries to their persons and property. No man also has a right to reduce himself and his family to pauperism by a habit he cannot restrain, and increase the burdens of society. No man, again, has a right to allure men to drunkenness. The poor houses, the jails, the insane asylums are full of men and women brought to them by the use of liquor. The perennial corrupting influence in the political life of the country, from the town government to that of the nation, is that of the maker, the seller and the user of intoxicating liquors. Other influences come and go, this remains constantly. In the cities it is the chief foe to an intelligent, honest and humane administration of affairs. Against such a vicious and destructive influence the community has the right to protect itself, and an increasing proportion of the community is advancing toward a determination that it will protect itself and will bring this powerful influence into subjection.

But there is a need of united action. This deficiency is evident to-day in the Legislature of this State at Albany. The Church Temperance Society, aided by a large number of our best citizens, has introduced and is advocating a high license law. The Prohibitionists send their representatives to the Committee of the Legislature to oppose and condemn high license and to insist on prohibition. The Permanent Committee on Temperance of the Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Synod of New York send a delegation to Albany, to advocate County Local Option and to favor high license for the cities. The following report of what occurred when this representation met the Committee of the Assembly is made:

Rev. Dr. John Hall, who spoke first, was careful to say that they were not there either to advocate or oppose the Excise Bill now pending. He had nothing to say about that bill. But he pleaded that if the Legislature felt disposed to pass that or a similar Excise Bill, they would so amend it as to admit of the principle of County Local Option, or else pass a Local Option Law as a separate and independent measure. He urged the principle of granting to the people of each county in the State the right to exclude the saloon if they so desire. Referring to the County Local Option Bill now pending, which had just been put into his hands, he said he could see at a glance that it was imperfect; the first section should make the duties of the supervisors at least mandatory.

A member of the Excise Committee asked, "Why make the county the unit of prohibition?" Dr. Hall replied that the county was a political division well understood, and of sufficiently large area to give practical protection to a considerable district, whenever it should be voted to exclude the saloon. He feared there might be difficulties in the system of returns in smaller districts; but if the matter be practicable, the Committee would gladly have the principle of Local Option applied to boroughs, townships, and wards, as well as to counties; but it was for County Local Option that he specially pleaded.

Drs. Ecob and Holmes indicated reasons why the present provisions in the Excise Law for towns had not accomplished more.

Rev. Dr. W. Y. Brown affirmed that the goal to which the Presbyterian Church looks forward, as declared by our General Assembly, is the entire extinction of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

A member inquired, "Why not try prohibition for the whole State?" "We shall gladly vote upon Constitutional Prohibition," said Dr. Brown, "if the Legislature will appoint a day apart from a political election; and we hope you will do so. But this will not interfere with the passage of a County Local Option Law, which would still be in force if the great cities should count out prohibition—as they are likely to do."

The Committee had a brief and satisfactory interview with Speaker Husted of the Assembly. He declared himself as heartily in favor of submitting the question of Constitutional Prohibition to a vote of the people.

Can these organizations be united? It is very desirable that they shall be. Would it not be wise for all bent on putting the rum power in its place,—a position of subjection—and on restricting temptation to use and the use of intoxicants to the utmost possible extent, to unite on local option for counties and high license for cities?

There are sensible men among the Prohibitionists who read the INTELLIGENCER, in fact, so far as we know, they are all sensible men. It is respectfully suggested to them that they are the minority, the decided minority. Without asking them to relinquish their purpose to attain prohibition, they are requested to consider whether it is not most wise at this time to unite in the endeavor to secure County Local Option and City High License, or, if they cannot do that, that they shall withdraw their opposition to these measures. Will not all who deplore the degradation, the corruption, the sorrow and woe and ruin which intemperance is producing day and night without intermission, unite in sustaining the measures now before the Legislature of this State and any similar statutes in other States? Would it not be wise to hold town meetings, pass a resolution seconding these bills and send the action to the legislative committees?

Mr. Spurgeon and His Tabernacle.

THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

LAST Thursday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening for public worship of the Metropolitan Tabernacle. It is a good thing for any church to find occasion for thanksgiving; in the twenty-five years of its memorable history the great church at Newington-causeway has had experience of God's goodness sufficient to keep it praising Him for the next twenty-five. Mr. Spurgeon, therefore, did well to set up a special Ebenezer on Thursday, albeit he and his people had no intention of being contented with the mercies of the past; they look upon it as a fresh starting-point for an onward march in the service of the King.

The worthy pastor of the Tabernacle had plenty of comrades and fellow-workers on Thursday evening, to join him in his tributes of thanksgiving. There was a largely attended praise meeting at six o'clock in one of the basement rooms, and at the seven o'clock service in the great building the congregation was immense. We should have been glad to see present many of Mr. Spurgeon's neighbor ministers of all denominations to share in the common joy of the occasion, but we suppose they were busy at their own work.

The prayers and praises at the early meeting were very hearty and very representative. Some of the elders and deacons led off the chorus; then came the Sunday-school superintendent, four of the college students, followed by some of the members of the church; and last of all, as representing outside friends, the voices of Mr. Henry Varley and Mr. David McLaren chimed in with those that had gone before. All were unfeignedly thankful to God for the great blessing He had bestowed on the church in giving it such a pastor, and crowning his labors with such abundant success. It was touching to hear some venerable fathers pouring out their heart's praises for the rich blessing that had come to their families through Mr. Spurgeon's public ministry. One of the members (a rough diamond, judging by his diction, but a real one) took the meeting into his confidence as he exclaimed in his prayer: "Father, do save our unsaved ones. I was talking to one of mine last night, and, bless Thy name, she told me she has given her heart to Thee. Bless the Lord! She will soon be a member here, I believe, but best of all she is a member of Christ."

In the course of the hour Mr. Spurgeon remarked that he had been in the pastorate for thirty-two years, but twenty-five years had passed since God gave them, without debt, that immense structure. It had been a kind of nest egg from which the Almshouses, the College, the Orphanages, and many other good works had sprung. Ever since the Tabernacle was built, he said, we have found the people anxious to hear the Word of God. We have not verified the predictions of the prophets that it would be a nine days' wonder, and that after a short time we would need to make the place smaller. I cannot help saying that I feel it a peculiar source of thanksgiving that during all these years we have had no division, and no strife; nobody has quarrelled with me—indeed, I do not know that I have ever quarrelled with anybody in my life. I very much question whether any pastorate of the same length could have been spent more happily than mine has been. I know that I should be as ugly and cantankerous as any man if I were left alone, but I am not alone. As one instance of God's goodness at that particular time, Mr. Spurgeon said that a Chancery law-suit in which he was concerned, that had been going on for five and a half years, had been finished up satisfactorily the day before. He hoped if any persons purposed leaving money for any of the works with which he was connected they would make a clear will, and he would beseech them not to make him an executor. Ministers of the Gospel have enough to do without that kind of thing.

As we have said, the meeting in the Tabernacle was a very large one. The hymns sung, the Scriptures read, the petitions offered, all partook of the nature of praise. Finally Mr. Spurgeon preached a most characteristic discourse from Ps. 40: 9-11. He dwelt on the fact that by the grace of God he had been enabled all these years to sound forth a continual testimony to the simple, saving truth of God's Word; and he had some severe things to say about those who use the Scripture as a stalking horse for the promulgation of their own opinions and speculations. "The great congregation" to which he had preached suggested many practical thoughts both as to the delight and the responsibility of his office. Lastly he desired for the future, whether his time of service were to be long or short, an interest in the Psalmist's prayer: "Withhold not Thou thy tender mercies from me, O Lord; let thy lovingkindness and thy truth preserve me." That prayer will be offered on his behalf, we doubt not, by multitudes who were not in the Tabernacle on Thursday evening, but who feel that his pastorate is something like a world-wide possession. It is eminently true of Mr. Spurgeon that the world is his parish.—The Christian, London, April 1st.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

....Once More.—"The Classis of Z—— met yesterday." So says the slip sent to us, except that it does not say, "of Z——." When was yesterday? No clue is given us to the date. Will our friends to whom we may be indebted for printed slips of Church News kindly see that the date is inserted? Also, will those who are still more kind, in that they send us an original written record of events, write the names of persons and places plainly and oblige us very much? We are frequently compelled to make a guess at a name, with the chances in favor of missing the mark.

The Easter Collection.

DEAR EDITOR: I have just seen, with gladness that has no alloy, the article entitled an "Easter Collection," in your paper of 14th inst.

The fruitfulness and the resultant needs and the beckoning promise of our Foreign Missions have inspired the suggestion. And it is modestly open to "every church in which it can be done with propriety."

I rejoice in it as a long-time friend and lover of Him who "rose again for our justification," and my faith is built above His open tomb. And I ask myself, what church will pronounce itself one in which it cannot "be done with propriety."

It is a worthy proposal for a noble object and one especially binding in its sanctions, as uttered by Him who gave the Great Commission after He had risen from death. May God prosper His own cause in Asia, through the fidelity of us all.

One of the 83,000.

Special Notice.

THE Stated Clerk of the General Synod desires to call the special attention of the Stated Clerks of Particular Synods and Classes, and all others concerned, to the following items:

1. The Stated Clerks of the Particular Synods are requested to send a copy of the printed minutes to the President of the General Synod, at the earliest practicable moment, that he may prepare a digest of the same, he being chairman, ex-officio, of the Standing Committee on the State of Religion. Min. 1884, p. 465.

2. The Stated Clerks of Classes will please notice the following:

"Resolved, That upon the death of any one of our ministers it shall be the duty of the Stated Clerk of the Classis to which he last belonged to transmit notice of the fact to the Stated Clerk of General Synod, and, at least within a week after the next meeting of the Classis, to transmit also a copy of such memorial record as the Classis may have made, together with any facts in the case which may help to form the basis of the necrological report to Synod." Min. 1884, p. 576.

3. The Stated Clerks of Classes are earnestly requested to see that the footings in the Classical statistical tables are correct. Conspicuous errors appeared last year. In one Classical table in the Particular Synod of Albany there are only three columns out of the fifteen added correctly. There is a mistake of 241 in the number of communicants, of 6 in the number of Sabbath-schools, of $600 in the amount of benevolent contributions, and of over $4,000 in the sum for congregational purposes. Such peculiar arithmetic should not be employed in ecclesiastical statistics, or the old proverb that "figures cannot lie" will have to be reversed.

4. Stated Clerks are further requested to see that all licensures, ordinations, and ecclesiastical changes are fully reported to the Particular Synods, and that the names of ministers in transitu are also recorded. It frequently happens that the names of ministers cannot be found on any of the Classical tables. They are allowed to drop between two Classes and have to be hunted up.

It is also suggested that the word "Candidate" be dropped for the word "Licentiate." Young men studying for the ministry are sometime erroneously reported as candidates. The other term cannot be misunderstood.

It is kindly asked of those who send communications to the General Synod that they will not use postal cards, and that they will put each separate matter on a separate paper. It is very inconvenient to refer two or three subjects to as many different committees when they are all crowded together on one paper. It is also important that communications addressed to the Synod should be carefully and legibly written, as the clerks do not always have time to study them before reading. It may be worth while, too, for those who address written overtures to the Synod to remember that a manuscript badly written and read with difficulty makes a poor impression when first heard, whatever may be its intrinsic merits.

One thing more. The Classical tables for the General Synod are reprinted from those in the Minutes of the Particular Synods. These will therefore be regarded as sufficient, without a copy in manuscript. But Stated Clerks will confer a favor if in giving post-office addresses they will observe uniformity, and to this end follow the form in the Minutes of the General Synod.

P. D. Van Cleef, Stated Clerk Gen. Synod.

....New Durham, N. J.—A very impressive service was witnessed on the first Sabbath in April in the Grove Church. Twenty-nine persons were received into the membership, twenty-eight on confession and one by letter. The sacrament of baptism was administered to six adults, and twenty-two baptized in infancy were received publicly into full fellowship. The pastor gave to each one a text of Scripture as a life text. The work of sowing has been faithfully done in this field for many years and the harvest time seems fairly to have begun. Special services were conducted by the pastor during March, but the largest manifestation of the Spirit was at a regular Sabbath evening service, when, after the sermon, twenty-six rose and accepted Christ's invitation. J. W. G.

....Chatham, N. Y.—The Reformed church, Rev. T. S. Brown, pastor, welcomed nine new members at their last communion,—seven by confession and two by letter. The "Church Porch," a weekly prayer-meeting, has been ably conducted for more than a year. Some of the young people testify that through this agency they have been led to confess Christ. At the yearly sale of pews nearly all were taken at advanced rental. Thus we have been blessed spiritually and financially and are looking for further results, assured with the promise "As ye believe so it shall be done unto you." A. J. B.

....The Classis of Raritan.—The following persons were appointed as Delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. Frederick E. Schlieder, J. Preston Searle, Benjamin V. D. Wyckoff, Wm. E. Davis; Elders, Ferdinand Gitter, John Voorhees, Jacob G. Schomp, George D. Winters. Secundi: Revs. Marion T. Conklin, Philip M. Doolittle, E. G. Read, G. W. Scarlett; Elders Gilbert L. Brokaw, Samuel B. Little, F. V. L. Wyckoff, J. H. Wingate.

Increased zeal was manifested in the cause of foreign missions, and steps were taken to deepen the impression of the late missionary convention. An able circular had been prepared by Rev. J. P. Searle, chairman of committee appointed by it, of which two thousand copies were ordered to be printed, that the appeal might be placed in every family within the bounds of the Classis; and arrangements were made for holding another convention at an eligible point soon, that the members of our congregations might hear the deeply interesting facts of this department of our Church work.

The statements of the annual reports to General Synod revealed gratifying results. The churches generally are located in the country, and have suffered from financial depression during the year past on account of short crops and low prices. Yet the Church of North Branch spontaneously doubled its gifts to benevolent objects. The pleasing tidings come from all sides, houses of worship repaired, parsonages improved, debts paid or reduced, efforts in these hard times which have cost self-sacrifice, and show supreme devotion to Christ. Every congregation has had accessions on confession, several have received from ten to fifteen converts, while the Church of Peapack has gathered in a harvest of fifty-six souls. The statistical table foots up a total of one hundred and sixty-seven communicant members added to our churches on confession and ninety-three by certificate. The general tone of the report bespeaks progress and prosperity, quietness without stagnation, steadiness without relapse; the regular church services, prayer-meetings, and Sunday schools well sustained; and ladies' missionary societies and helping bands among the young people organized.

The Second Church of Somerville has resolved by weekly or monthly contributions to accumulate a fund for building a new house of worship in the future. S. C.

....The Classis of Newark held its regular spring session in the Church of Franklin, with a full representation of all the fifteen churches of the Classis. The reports indicate no large accession of members, but a hopeful tone was manifest, and reference was made to the gain of 133 by conversion during the year. The following were chosen as delegates to the Particular Synod, which meets on May 4th, at Jersey City: Primarii, Revs. G. S. Bishop, D.D., A. V. V. Raymond, R. W. Brokaw and D. Waters, D.D.; Elders W. D. Holmes, W. H. Kirk, Wm. Robb and S. H. Wheeler. Secundi, Revs. C. Girtanner, J. A. Davis, C. H. Jones and J. N. Jansen; Elders J. Lancaster, C. C. Hine, Richard Field and Nelson Jacobus.

For the vacancy in the Board of Superintendents of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, Rev. Dr. Waters was nominated.

It was reported as a matter of congratulation that, with only one exception, all the churches are now supplied with pastors, and that marked advantages have been manifest as the result of a series of Classical Visitations. S. C.

In Memoriam.

REV. JAMES B. WILSON died at Bloomingburgh, N. Y., March 22d, in the 62d year of his age, and 35th of his ministry. His aged father, being in his 96th year, died four days after. Mr. Wilson was born in Somerset County, N. J. After graduating from the Theological Seminary in 1851, he accepted a call from the newly-organized church at Long Branch, N. J., and was ordained and installed as pastor in the fall of 1851. The church had only nine members, yet the young minister went to work with all the ardor of a first love, and during the twenty-seven years of this successful pastorate there were added to the membership more than two hundred and fifty souls. A large and commodious parsonage was built and other material improvements were made, his own hands frequently ministering to the necessities of his position. Long Branch and the adjoining beach, early in Mr. Wilson's pastorate, began to give evidence of rapidly becoming a favorite summer resort. This led him to secure a suitable lot near the sea, on which was built the beautiful edifice widely and favorably known as the Sea Side Chapel.

In 1875 Mr. Wilson saw, as he supposed, an opportunity for doing further work in the way of church extension within the bounds of the Classis. He selected an eligible site at Asbury Park, the gift of James A. Bradley, Esq., purchased the lumber, hired the men, and erected a chapel thereon, which has since been replaced by a handsome church edifice known as Grand Avenue Reformed Church.

In 1878 he resigned the pastorate of the church at Long Branch village and organized the Sea Side Chapel into the Second Reformed Church. From a nominal membership this church grew in his two years' pastorate to between sixty and seventy members, with a Sabbath-school of over 100 scholars. Thus he saw his great work advanced from a church of nine members to three organizations and a membership of over 300. In 1880 he removed to Jericho, L. I., where he was instrumental in organizing a new church, to which he ministered till the fall of 1882. He was truly a church builder. In December, 1882, he went to Bloomingburgh, N. Y. There his labors were graciously rewarded. Some fifty persons were added to this church in his brief ministry of four years, making more than 350 brought into the visible church through this faithful and devoted servant of Christ.

He attended the prayer-meeting of his church on Thursday evening, became very ill in the night, and died on Monday morning. The funeral took place in the church, March 25th. There was a large attendance. The ministers spoke very tenderly of him. The day was pleasant, and with mourning friends we laid him to rest near the scenes of his earthly labors. F.

Hope College.

WHY does it need an increased endowment?

1. When it was incorporated in 1866, it was upon the basis of $100,000, to be invested and paying interest. Dr. Phelps was recommended at the East for $85,000. The productive endowment to-day is not over $60,000.

2. The College is a most important agency for the Reformed Church—more important, perhaps, than is generally believed, but the fact cannot be gainsaid.

3. It cannot possibly succeed and accomplish its agency without the $100,000 at interest. And remember how seriously the rate of interest is becoming reduced.

4. With strictest economy the annual expenses must be $10,000. Even with $100,000 this would require not less than $1,500 from the Board of Education.

5. At the present time there is no means of paying a President except as a professor, which is injurious both to him and the institution.

6. Friends of Christ and of Christian education in every denomination are devoting their thousands for school and college endowments. We pray and hope for and may expect the same grace in our Reformed Zion. And among the legacies of our dead, whose good works follow them, why may not our cause be heard and our needs be sometimes remembered?

7. As to congregations,—one year's interest and effort, such as is made often for foreign missions, would bless us. Cannot the churches thus bear us once on their heart, now a little one, indeed, but with great possibilities. CHAS. SCOTT, Pres.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION.—The Rev. G. D. Hulst read on Monday, April 12th, a paper on the subject, "Can Our Church Standards be Changed?"—the paper and the following discussion being favorable to such change when necessary. Monday, April 19th, Mr. Louis F. Post, of New York, represented Mr. Henry George, who had been unable to keep his appointment with the Association, and gave his views on the rights of property, replying to many questions by the members, and receiving at the close a vote of thanks for his kind presence and statement of Mr. George's position. Next Monday Dr. R. Terry will read a paper on the "Resurrection."

....THE LADIES' MISSIONARY SOCIETY of the Classis of Newark held its anniversary last week in the Clinton Avenue Reformed Church. Nearly every church was represented by delegates. By request of the President, the Rev. R. W. Brokaw, of Belleville, the missionary agent of the Classis, conducted the exercises. Mrs. O. W. Dunham, of Plainfield, was appointed Secretary pro tem. An appropriate memorial of the late Secretary, Mrs. James Browe, of Belleville, was read by her pastor, the Rev. Mr. Brokaw, and ordered to be inscribed on the records and published. An admirable paper on "Help for Heathen Women," by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, of Brooklyn, Foreign Corresponding Secretary of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church, was read by the Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor. The contrast between the condition of women in heathen and Christian lands was vividly drawn, and four principal methods of helping them were set forth, viz., Girl's schools, Zenana work, female medical missionary service, and the Christian press. This was followed by the reading of several recent and touching incidents of city evangelization, narrated in a letter of the Rev. Graham Taylor, of Hartford, Conn. The address of the Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Easton, pastor-elect of the First Reformed Church, of this city, teemed with interesting experiences of his own work as a home missionary for twelve years at the West, and with excellent practical advice to ladies for the preparation of missionary boxes and other matters within their sphere of coöperation. Written and verbal reports were received from delegates of the congregations, showing much interest and progress in the work. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. W. J. R. Taylor; Vice President, Mrs. J. A. Davis; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Mary W. Duryee; Treasurer, Miss McKissack, of Plainfield; Executive Committee, Mrs. David Waters, Mrs. George S. Bishop, Mrs. C. C. Hine, Mrs. T. C. Easton, Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Hawkins. The next anniversary, by invitation of Dr. Easton, is to be held in the First Reformed Church of Newark.

....SOUTH CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The "Band of Hope," the missionary society of the Sunday-school of this church, gave a very successful entertainment in the lecture-room on Wednesday, April 7th, as a result of which thirty dollars were sent to the Domestic and twenty five dollars to the Foreign Board of our Church.

The "Ladies' Auxiliary" Society has also lately forwarded thirty dollars to be divided equally between the two Boards, making a total of eighty-five dollars contributed since January, 1st, 1886, by these two societies to the missionary work of the Church. And the end of our giving is not yet. M.

....ELLENVILLE, N. Y.—At the recent communion season eight more were added to the membership on confession. This makes fifty-seven in all who have made profession of their faith since the Week of Prayer. The work of ingathering has progressed most graciously and is still going on. Those who have found the Saviour have told their experience to others and are taking up the work of the church in earnest. The Pastor's Wednesday evening Training Class gathers the new converts into a service for themselves and is proving a means of healthful development. We have proved and are proving how large are God's tender mercies. H.

....TWELFTH STREET, BROOKYLN, N.Y.—Special services were held in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church, Brooklyn, last week. Rev. W. W. Clark, of Staten Island, gave a Bible Reading in the afternoon and preached in the evening, beginning on Monday and continuing until Thursday. Mr. Charles L. Gunn conducted the singing, assisted by Mr. Moffat and a quartette and chorus from the young people of the church.

The attendance was large and the interest deepened during the progress of the meetings. The Bible readings were especially helpful to Christian life and were warmly appreciated by those who heard them. The evening services were evangelistic in character. The singing was stirring, the sermons searching.

The closing meeting on Thursday evening was peculiarly impressive. The testimony of those who had been spiritually helped by the services, the large number of requests for prayer—personal and for families, for Sunday-school classes, on the part of teachers and others, and the decision expressed for Christ, indicated the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

The mission of our brethren has been greatly blessed. The clear, logical, forcible presentation of Gospel truth, has made its profound impression upon many hearts, and the impulse given to our work will long be felt. At our communion season on the first Sunday in April sixteen were received into the Church—seven on confession of faith. Others are now ready and our prayer and expectation is for a great harvest.

U. D G.

....THE THEE KRANSJE.—The Happy Hour Association of the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church, corner 5th avenue and 29th street, gave a "Thee Kransje" on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, April 8th, in the Sunday-school room of their church. Unique invitations were sent to the members of the church and others, about a week prior to the date of the "party," and the untiring efforts of the young people seemed to have been duly appreciated by the congregation, as the invitations met with a large and generous response.

The Sunday-school room was tastefully decorated by the members of the association. The mottoes of the Church, viz.: "Een Dracht Maakt Macht" and "Nisi Dominus Frustra," appeared in large orange letters on a black background, the former hanging quite appropriately over a Dutch flag and the latter over an American flag.

Tea, coffee, lemonade, cakes, tulips and chinaware could all be purchased at the various tables at which the charming young ladies of the association, costumed as Dutch maidens, officiated as waitresses. The young men acted as ushers and wore orange neckties and badges, and in some cases miniature Dutch flags.

The choir of the church kindly contributed their services to make the evening pass pleasantly and their selections were highly appreciated, as the applause they received testified.

The whole affair was pronounced, on all sides, a decided success in every way, and all who had the privilege of being present seemed to enjoy themselves exceedingly. The proceeds will be used by the association in mission work. ORANGE.

....KALAMAZOO, MICH.—We are allowed to make the following extract from a private letter from Rev. Mr. Vennema, pastor of the Second Church, consisting chiefly of families of young Hollanders, and in which the services are in English:

"Our consistory has just adopted a schedule of collections, in which we remember all the benevolent Boards and Funds of the Church. I have been here long enough to feel warranted in saying that our gifts, however small in themselves, will yet be comparatively large. I have plainly seen in my people a disposition to support every department of usefulness in connection with the church. We are yet without a church building site or parsonage. Our membership has increased from 33 on June 30th, 1885, when we were organized, to 74 now; our Sabbath school from 40 in July last to 129 now. The people have contributed for congregational purposes during the nine months of their existence $788.95. If we succeed in securing a church home of our own—a temple rather than a tabernacle—I have every reason to believe that we will soon gain a position of numerical strength seldom equalled within the same time in a community as small as this. Our people are poor but willing.

....THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON met April 13th in the Church of Rosendale, N. Y. All the churches were represented except one. The pleasure of the occasion was enhanced by the kind attention given by pastor Oliver and his people.

The sermon was preached by Rev. John B. Church, from Romans 11: 29, "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance."

Reports on the State of Religion from all of the fourteen churches were read and indicate a general awakening in our congregations. The number received on confession of faith during the year is 185. Last year it was 105, and two years ago 60.

A call to the pastorate of the New Paltz Church upon the candidate Abel H. Huizinga, was approved.

The following brethren were appointed delegates to the Particular Synod of New York: Primarii, Revs. DeWitt B. Wyckoff, John B. Church, Wm. H. Vroom, Calvin E. Lasher; Elders Edward Le Fevre, Cornelius Kortright, Thomas C. Harnden, Josiah Le Fevre. Secundi, Revs. Wm. W. Schomp, Richard P. Milliken, M. N. Oliver, James M. Compton; Elders James Sahler, Wm. Smith, George W. Rhodes, John Blansham.

The Rev. James M. Compton was nominated for the Board of Superintendents of the Theological Seminary.

Classis adjourned to meet in fall session in the Church of Rochester.

STATED CLERK.

....THE CLASSIS OF MONMOUTH met at Holmdel, Tuesday, April 13th. Rev. I. P. Brokaw presided. Rev. Theodore W. Wells preached the sermon, and Rev. Charles D. Buck read an essay on the Principles and Modes of Systematic Benevolence.

The reports from the churches were encouraging, giving evidence of growth and showing an increase over last year in benevolent contributions of $33.

Measures were inaugurated to secure if possible the settlement of Rev. Henry G. Boggis, a Wesleyan Methodist from England, as pastor of the Church of the Highlands, where he has been laboring for a year past under the supervision of the Classis with remarkable success.

An overture was sent to the General Synod urging organic union with the Reformed (German) Church in the United States.

The encroachments of the Romanists upon the religious liberties of the people at the State Reform School called forth the following:

Resolved, That this Classis condemns the management of the State Reform School at Jamesburgh, in permitting a Roman Catholic priest to teach the peculiar tenets of the Roman Church, to celebrate the mass and to maintain the confessional in direct violation of the Constitution and laws of the State of New Jersey, and that in the opinion of this Classis it is the duty of the Legislature of the State to impeach the public officers who are responsible for this breach of the laws and disregard of the rights of the citizens of New Jersey.

The following were chosen delegates to the Particular Synod of New Brunswick: Primarii, Revs. Elias Mead, Charles D. Buck, D.D., Isaac P. Brokaw, W. H. Ballagh; Elders G. S. Luyster, Henry V. Luyster, C. Holmes Ellis, David Harvey. Secundi, Revs. G. W. Labaw, Cyril Spaulding, William Reiley, D.D., Theodore W. Wells; Elders D. D. Hunt, Thomas Smith, H. G. Cooke, Lafayette Schenck.

Cyril Spaulding was nominated delegate to the Board of Superintendents of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick.

S. C.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14.—The Porte has sent to the Powers a circular declaring that, as Bulgaria has settled its dispute with them, it becomes necessary to put a stop to the bellicose conduct of Greece, as it is compeling Turkey to support an enormous military outlay....It is reported that Gen. Guzman Blanco, "the illustrious American" who was recently elected President of Venezuela, has declined the office....The Earl of Shaftesbury killed himself while riding in a cab in London yesterday. The Earl had been ill for some time and complained of mental depression....Dennis C. Wilcox, a wealthy manufacturer, living in West Fiftieth street, New York, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself in the temple. It is thought he was insane on account of financial losses....The Broadway, N. Y., Arcade Railway Company's bill passed by the Senate....Eleven Aldermen of this city of 1884 were arrested, indicted and bailed. ....The New Jersey Senate passed the House bill providing for the rebuilding of the State House at Trenton, at a cost of $225,000....Lightning struck the flagstaff on Washington's Headquarters at Newburg, N. Y., and split it from top to bottom....A freight train on the Cairo Short Line was stopped by strikers at Belleville, Ill., and the cars uncoupled. The conductor was beaten nearly to death.

THURSDAY, 15.—An emissary is believed to have left Khartoum for Cairo with a proposal of peace from El Mahdi's successor. ....The Ohio General Assembly has been the first in America to commend Gladstone's measure of relief for Ireland....Mr. Gladstone says that American opinion affords Great Britain moral support....Women voted at St. John, N. B., for the first time for city officers....A train on the Republican Valley Railroad running from Omaha to Marysville, Kan., was thrown into the Blue river, killing one child and injuring a number of persons ...A tornado visited St. Cloud, Minn., and neighboring towns, yesterday afternoon. Many buildings were blown down and it is reported that fifty or sixty persons were killed or injured in two towns. Cars loaded with freight were blown half a mile and rails wrenched from the track. Several horses were killed.... Charles H. Reilly, the last of the "boodle" Aldermen of this city, was taken into custody yesterday....J. L. Biggs, a clerk in the Auditor's office of the Lake Erie & Western Railroad, was arrested at Bloomington, Ill., and charged with stealing from $7,000 to $10,000....Efforts were made without success to compromise the labor troubles in St. Louis....The engagement of President Cleveland to Miss Folsom, of Buffalo, has at last been confirmed, and they will be married quietly at the White House in June.

FRIDAY, 16.—The French Government proposes to give 200,000 francs to the fund to M. Pasteur for the establishment of a hospital for the treatment of persons who have been bitten by mad animals....William Hickey, a tramp, died at Troy, N. Y., to-day, and around his waist was fastened a belt containing $440 in bills, and a bank book found in his pocket showed a deposit of $1,091. His last act was to grasp at the belt....A destructive tornado visited a portion of Wise County, Texas, sweeping everything before it. Twelve persons were injured and ten houses swept away ...The price of ice this year will be 25 per cent higher than it was last year. The president of the Knickerbocker Ice Company says the cause of this is because it has cost more to house the ice this last winter than the one before....The cars of the Capitol City street railway in Montgomery, Ala., began running by electricity yesterday. The trips were made regularly and everything works perfectly....It is estimated that 400 houses were blown down in and near St. Cloud, Minn., during the tornado and the loss will probably reach $60,000....Philip H. Asher, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., hanged himself in his barn yesterday. He had been ill all winter.

SATURDAY, 17.—Mr. Gladstone explained his Irish Land bill to the House of Commons. There was not much excitement.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

About the Ninth Hour.

BY WILLIAM WHITE.

CAN this be Mercy's primal hour,
The heavens so dark, and earth in gloom;
When all about His cross do cower,
As quaking nature comes to doom?

The helmèd guard, the gathered throng,
The prince of hell with all his host,
All witness to the mighty wrong,
While Nature shudders at Death's boast.

The guarding cherubim no more
Brood o'er the sacred mercy-seat;
The temple veil is rent, before
The one, great, Sacrifice complete.

The day fades out, night shews no rift,
There shines no Day-star from on high:
Great God, sin's darkening curtain lift,
Love's new creation magnify.

Our crimes have nailed Christ to the cross,
We see the mystery begin,
And standing there bewail our loss,
Before the tragedy of sin.

Thou Man of love! Thou God of love!
On Calvary uplift to die:
Let light shine on us from above,
We cannot bear that dying cry.

Hark! "It is finished." Love unpriced
Expires upon the cross in shame:
Though crowned with thorns, "Thou art the Christ,"
The rising dead proclaim Thy name!

Before the cross we stand in tears,
Our Christ is dead, our hope is gone;
Unshrouded mystery appears,—
Let heaven in pity on us dawn.

Love's requiem we cannot hear,
Our ears are dull, our hearts are sad;
Ope Mercy's vestibule anear,
With glimpse of heaven to make earth glad.

Maple Lawn, White Plains, N. Y.

A Modern Sir Galahad.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER III.

"I loved the woman; he that doth not, lives a drowning life."

THE next day the minister received a note from the woman he had saved, requesting an interview. He read it carefully, then laying it beside him upon the window ledge, his eyes wandered away to the beach, of which his window afforded a sight, and his thoughts went back to the adventures of the night before. It was a very natural thing to be called to service; and to womankind was he not a sworn knight? But the after-scenes—he felt a peculiar repugnance for these. He could not explain his dread of receiving thanks from the old lady. Whilst his thoughts were hovering around the subject, there came a knock at his door and the voice of his friend, Andrew Haynes, called to him. He laid the note upon the table and admitted the cheery caller.

"Ah, well! so the knight of the wave is none other than Sir Galahad! I thought so last night! Well," the young man went on without seeming to heed the protest in the eyes of the minister, "while it is true that there are people whose lives are worth more to the world then the life of the old lady Eaton, yet saving her may prove your opportunity—that is, she may be willing that you should, unchallenged, look upon the face of the maiden. I have told you what I think of this maiden. She only is second to one. Reserved and womanly, she has a wealth of love to bestow upon the right one."

Then Laurence Bowles, taking up the note he had received without seeming to notice his friend's banter, remarked: "I have just received word from Mrs. Eaton; she wishes to see me. She has received quite a shock, I fear. She seems as impatient as a child; wants me to come at once."

"I think you'll not go in ministerial garb," said Andrew with a dancing light in his eyes. "I do hope the old lady will see that the ruined garments are replaced before you shake off the dust of Shoreton from your feet," he persisted. Then changing his tone he remarked: "But really, Laurence, the old lady has the reputation of being quite an ogress around here. Perhaps, however, it is the old story—given a beauty, a beast must always be supposed for contrast." There was a long pause after this sally, so long that the minister's thoughts had an opportunity to soar to far-away possibilities for his church, and the caller, knowing that the rapt look upon the fine features did not promise conversation, rose and took his leave.

The yard of the old mansion house seemed even more attractive when the minister entered it in answer to the call of the "ogress" than it had on that morning when he first had a view of it. He felt a trembling in his limbs as he followed the path which led to the front door. He tried to assure himself that his visit was entirely subject to a perfunctory ministerial purpose. It had never before seemed so difficult to convince his consciousness that there was no recognition of side issues. It was well that the way was short from the gate to the door, otherwise he might at the very last have failed in the courage necessary to keep to his purpose of meeting the lady of the stately house. As it was, he walked quickly to the face of the cannon and saved his ministerial honor. He was shown to the parlor and then, after a minute's waiting, the message came that Mrs. Eaton would like to see him in her room. He followed the serving-woman through the long hall, then through the family sitting-room until she opened a door wide where a graceful figure, white-robed and to his Sir Galahad vision like the form of an angel, stood before him. She met his bow with a bend of her shapely head and an involuntary smile of welcome; and saying, "This is the gentleman whom my grandmother is expecting, I presume," led him forward to an invalid's chair, where reclined the woman he had saved.

She half rose and said, "I sent for you to thank you. I have a deep sense of my obligation to you, which I can never free myself from. I would not if I could. I think I am not considered a genial woman here; but at least no one can say that I have ever proved myself ungrateful for a kindness done me." She paused, and looked into the minister's face with an intense expression. It was some minutes before Laurence spoke, and then he said in quiet, unassuming tones, "I simply did my duty, Mrs. Eaton. I thank you for your expression of gratitude. Please do not speak of it more."

The deep rich tones of his voice, its sympathetic quality, that rare grace which we are told is a legacy from an ancestry of refinement, but which we have proved to ourselves has, like genius, no discoverable precedent often, but seems an especial endowment; these did not fail to make an impression upon the old lady, and observed in connection with his manner of modest authority, awakened in her mind a sense of awe and of admiration that put patronage or tyranny out of the question with respect to the interview.

She watched carefully his manner towards her granddaughter; she mentally compared it to that of other young men and was perplexed. She was, it must be confessed, slightly disappointed at the absence of the signs of admiration which others had manifested who had been given the chance of meeting her cherished Miriam. "If," she argued within herself "this young minister recognizes her attractions, it is in a lofty way, quite beyond the power of crude swains."

She could not prove her gratitude to this man in ways of which she had thought before the interview—a present of books, of statuary, or any of those gifts which had been by custom made appropriate, as tokens of gratitude were not to be thought of. When she offered her hand at parting she said, "I should like to see you again; our minister is taking his vacation, and it would comfort me to talk with you often. While you stay will you not drop in when you find it convenient?"

It was the Sir Galahad instinct of Laurence Bowles which exacted a promise to follow the wishes of the old lady, but it was another instinct, of which he was not really conscious, which made the thought of such a compliance a delightful one.

"I think," said Alice Compton to her lover as the two walked together that evening, "that your Sir Galahad has made an impression upon my friend Miriam. Of course I do not mean that she has spoken anything with regard to it, but when I called upon her this afternoon Mrs. Eaton spoke in high terms of him, and Miriam said, 'I think Mr. Bowles a gentleman of rare refinement.' It was not her words so much as her manner. One thing I am sure of, your friend will have a chance which no other young man has been allowed—a chance to make her acquaintance, and that being granted the rest must follow, for I think the dear girl irresistible."

And the lover answered as he pressed the little hand that lay within his arm close to his heart, "I should consider Sir Galahad very fortunate if he could win the lovely girl and save himself from general diffusion by particular absorption. To become a perfect man, to my thinking, he needs to recognize one star among women. What I fear for him in the matter, is that even if he marries he may regard the woman he has chosen as so much a factor in his great life-purpose that she will be offered up as a part of the ministerial sacrifice. Tom Hyr, you have heard me speak of him, first put the idea into my mind; and I must confess, the more I have observed Sir Galahad, the more reasonable Tom's view of the possible situation seems. Large-hearted, genial, glorious Tom! I wonder what woman will gain him as a prize. Such a worship as he had for his ideal woman! He never will marry until he meets her."

"Or thinks he meets her," supplemented the gentle Alice.

Andrew Haynes pressed again the dear hand, but was silent.

At last he remarked, "I think as Tom does, that these men who are born to take the world into their hearts, prove themselves almost heartless toward the one woman whom they have chosen and all the while are perfectly unconscious of any neglect or injustice toward the one nearest to them. People who have missions sometimes in the world are blind to their first duty."

"Why, Andrew, do you not believe that every living being has a mission?" asked Alice.

"Yes, in a sense," replied Andrew, "but they do not all know it exactly; that is, one may fulfill his mission unconsciously. Now there is Tom Hyr, if anyone ever had a mission to the world he has, and as I understand it, it is to interpret beauty and truth and power to the world, through the exaltation of natural gifts, graces and convictions. He thinks that Sir Galahad's home-training is responsible for the repression of many rich qualities. And, by the way, I'll give Tom a few points in the case, and I'll suggest to him a mission to Laurence when he gets settled in his new field." The conversation upon the subject here merged into particular love matters, as the two promised ones walked on in the twilight.

Laurence Bowles that same evening took his favorite walk along the seashore. The beach was deserted of its bathers as he wandered slowly on; the breakers as they spent their force strangely affected him. The sea as it lay under the lighted heavens had new voices for him. As usual the vision of his future scene of labor rose before him, but it was in some way changed. Among the upturned faces of his congregation was one that insisted upon his notice—a new face like a revelation—a sweet, spiritual face. He tried to analyze the new mental conditions, and the more he tried, the more mysterious they seemed. It was late when he turned his feet toward the hotel, trembling from the effect of his new and peculiar experience.

When the old lady Eaton was left alone with her granddaughter, after the minister's departure, she turned to her charge and said with much emphasis, "Poor, proud, original, and absorbed in his purpose! He's one that it would be worth while to encourage substantially if one knew just how to get at him. An attractive man, too. Altogether too attractive to remain long without admirers!" The piercing eyes regarded the pure face of the maiden searchingly, as their owner uttered the last sentence; but receiving no satisfaction from her scrutiny the old lady turned to her book which lay near, while Miriam left the room and went out to find a place among the flowers where she might think.

Like the knightly visitor, the maiden had been peculiarly affected by the call. She began to chide herself and to ask of her disturbed soul, the "why?" which others had asked in like circumstances so many times before her and had received no answer. It seemed as if for the first time in her life she had been blessed by the sight of a true man.

So it will be seen that the three who came out of the water on that eventful night of the rescue, came, all of them in a sense, to a new life.

Laurence Bowles made several calls at the ancient house after his first one. They were, as far as the purpose of the minister was concerned, purely in its interest. Yet try to put it away as he would, there was a strange longing and expectancy connected with these visits which had nothing to do with his talks with Mrs. Eaton. At last he made his final visit, and found it more embarrassing by far than he had anticipated. The invalid spoke much of her health, of the uncertainty of her life, of her care and thought of Miriam. She took the young man's hand at parting, told him again of her obligations to him, of the help and comfort he had given her since the night he saved her life, and exacted a promise that he would write to her, and would, when he took his next vacation, make her house his home.

"And if I write may I expect a letter from you also, Miss Miriam?" he asked. "This visit will give me food for thought, and may suggest many a text for forthcoming sermons," he added, relieving the maiden's embarrassment somewhat before she shaped in words the answer of her heart to the request of the minister. It is needless to say that the old lady was quite overjoyed at this outlook for her hopes.

When Laurence Bowles went back to his childhood's home for his farewell visit of a week, the waiting two met him with words of love and of congratulation on account of his improved appearance. When he told his mother in the privacy of her room about his adventure in the water and of the results of it, she whispered, as mothers may, "My son, do you love the young lady?" Laurence blushed and answered, "I cannot say, mother, but I have thought her worthy to be a companion in the great life-work to which I have been called." With the rubbish of tradition above her own early love-memories, she answered, "My dear boy, that is after all your first thought in taking a wife. The Lord help you to choose a true companion, who shall be consecrated to your work."

Why did not Laurence Bowles allow his heart to lead? Why did he not allow the sun of love to illuminate all the chambers of his soul and find itself in harmony with the large purposes toward the Church of Christ? Why could he not have allowed the claims that were insisting for God-given rights, and have thus found his manhood enlarged? This "why" is echoed all along the way where there are wrecks of manliness, because there is a lack of comprehension of the laws which govern a true equilibrium of character. Laurence Bowles on his knees, alone in the privacy of his room, asked this "why," as he supposed, of his God, but asked it really of his environments, and heard only the voice of tradition in answer, heard it to the stultifying of his best instincts, heard it to agonize at the answer and then to beat himself into obedience to what he had made himself believe was the mandate of Him who had called him to the high service for His Church.

When Laurence Bowles crossed the threshold of his childhood's home to do the bidding of the voice that had called him, he went with a single purpose and without a stain upon his honor, offering all upon the altar of service.

(To be continued.)

Feasibility of an Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System.

A Paper Prepared and Published at the Request of the Pastoral Association of the Reformed Church in America.

BY WILLIAM J. R. TAYLOR, D.D.

THE subject assigned me is not the necessity, desirableness or advisability of union, but its practicability. It relates to the Reformed churches throughout the world holding the Presbyterian system of faith and government, and yet divided, and sub-divided, and sub-sub-divided almost infinitessimally. Can these churches be so united as to dwell and work together in love, and to present a solid front before the world?

To clear the way I premise a few postulates upon which most of us agree.

1. Present and past separations are not valid reasons for their continuance henceforth and forever.

2. The immediate causes and occasions of previous and existing divisions, which were severally controversial, ecclesiastical, reformatory, national and local have passed away.

3. Existing differences have been minimized; some are weakening daily, others remain apparently fixed, but not insurmountable by faith, hope and love, by the silent changes of time and by the grace of the Holy Spirit.

4. The tendency of religious and churchly movement toward visible unity and actual coöperation among all branches of the Christian Church is gradually becoming stronger. The Pan-Episcopal, Pan-Methodist, Pan-Congregational, Pan-Presbyterian and Pan-Reformed drifts of the times point toward higher tides of spiritual power which will sweep away many of the barriers to closer union.

5. These movements are quickened and strengthened by the combinations of anti-Christian unbelief, misbelief, heresy and apostasy with the rage of Satan and the ungodly world. The hosts of God will be forced to combine against these foes.

6. No optimistic theories of the unhappy divisions of Christendom can justify their continuance for one day longer than is absolutely necessary. They are diseases of Protestantism which need skilful treatment, and will ultimately vanish at the touch of the pierced hand. There are, indeed, certain "laws of disorder" in Satan's kingdom, and in the growing creation and in the rent Church of the Redeemer. But there is a higher law of unity, peace and power, which is the normal condition of the kingdom of God, and will be the glory of Messiah's reign. But why wait for the millenium to give it sway? Is it not the way of the Spirit for bringing in the millenium? Can our Lord's twice-told prayer, that they all may be one, be answered too soon? Will the world ever believe that His Father sent Him until His people shall be "perfected into one?" Is the present divided state of the Christian Church in agreement with that prayer? May we do nothing but endure the distraction and wait and die without the sight, as did the illustrious Hooker, whose great soul went heavenward, saying, "I am going from a world disordered and a Church disorganized to a world and a Church where every angel and every rank of angels abides in the very place which God has appointed them?"

In view of these postulates, we are now to consider the question of the Union of the Reformed churches holding the Presbyterian system.

1. According to the statistical returns published in the proceedings of the Belfast Council of 1884, which are quite incomplete, these churches throughout the world are separated into sixty-five distinct ecclesiastical organizations, ranging in extent from single Presbyteries to the largest Synods and Assemblies. The entire group, so far as reported, embraces 1,208 Presbyteries, 186 Synods, 23,821 pastoral charges, 13 384 separate congregations, 1,561 mission stations, 21,251 ministers enrolled, of whom 10,015 are in active service, with 101,130 elders, 58,610 deacons, 2,044 licentiates, 6,750,460 communicants, and 8,610,469 adherents, with 1,901,184 in Sunday-schools.

Can these sixty-five branches of the Reformed churches be practically united together in any way?

A visible, tangible, and important answer is found in the constitution and working of "the Alliance of Reformed churches throughout the world holding the Presbyterian system," whose three general Councils have been held at Edinburgh in 1877, at Philadelphia in 1880, and at Belfast in 1884. This great organization is good as far as it goes, and it has gone as far as it can go safely under its limited constitution. Its powers are neither ecclesiastical nor legislative. It has not yet succeeded in formulating its own consensus of the creeds of its many branches. But it has found large scope for discussion and action in matters of common interest, in the promotion of closer fellowship and sympathy, and of joint action in missions and benevolent and reformatory work.

The organic reunion of the Old and New School Presbyterian churches a few years ago, and the bodily incorporation of a Covenanter Presbytery, with its distinctive peculiarities intact, by the General Assembly of 1885, indicate what may be done elsewhere by wise counsels and a Christlike spirit.

There are good indications also of a reunion of the Presbyterian churches, North and South. The bloody chasm of the Civil War will be filled up with the love of Christ, and they will fall upon each other's necks with tears of gladness, and great shall be the peace of the long-sundered households.

Is there any near possibility or probability of an union of our own Reformed Church in America with one or more of the sisterhood that holds the Presbyterian system?

The branches with which we might be expected to unite are the Presbyterian churches, North and South, and the Reformed Church in the United States, (formerly known as the German Reformed Church).

What separates us from them? On our side the principal dividing lines are: 1. Our historical starting point, and our later development as an independent Church in this country. 2. The strong ancestral attachments of many of our people and ministers. 3. Our traditional customs, usages, and methods of church government and public worship which are our "goodly heritage" from the mother Church in Holland. 4. Orthodoxy and fidelity to our standards of Christian doctrine. 5. Legal questions and principles involved in pecuniary endowments and sacred trusts of our colleges, theological seminaries, benevolent agencies, and individual congregations. 6. Aversion to change, fear of entangling alliances, unwillingness to make new unions that may require the giving up of things that are dear by long usage and of sacred associations.

Are these difficulties insuperable? There are some signs that a closer, if not an organic union, is approaching.

1. Our Church, by reason of its growth from other denominations, in the number of families, communicants, and ministers, especially in mixed communities where there is little or no Dutch element, is gradually becoming more and more cosmopolitan, like other denominations. About half of our present ministry and membership have come to us from other folds; and very naturally they form connecting links between us and those churches; while many of our own people and clergy have gone and are constantly going over into other pastures where the Good Shepherd calls and feeds and leads them.

2. As to doctrinal issues. The standards of Westminster, Dordrecht and Heidelberg, and the Belgic Confession are the common stock of the orthodox Evangelical Reformed churches of this country. Suppose now, what is possible, if not immediately probable, that a basis of Federal Union should be formed between our own Church and the German branch, and the Presbyterian Churches, North and South, by which each of the now separated communions shall come into one organization retaining its own devotional standards and its order of worship, with its theological seminaries and their curriculum of studies. Would that be essentially more impracticable than the late reunion of the Presbyterian Churches in the United States and Canada, and in Scotland and Ireland?

3. Legal questions concerning rights of property, administration of trusts and institutions of each denomination would necessarily be remanded to the eminent counsellors for advice, and to the courts for adjustment, by consent of the contracting parties, under conditions which would conserve vested rights and privileges, and practically carry out the designs of founders and donors. Continuous litigation could only be avoided by the spirit of conciliation and justice to the dead and the living, in the interests of peace, prosperity and Christian unity.

4. The governmental differences between us and these churches are only circumstantial. Essentially the same in principle, they might readily be adjusted under a wise plan of union, and their variety would add to the attractions, the liberties, and the power of the United Church. Our system of rotating eldership, and the diaconate are making rapid progress among Presbyterian churches. The trusteeship, which obtains among only a few of our churches, is not an essential of Presbyterianism, and need never be a requisite nor a bar to union between any branches of the family; and it were better entirely out of the way of all.

5. The fences have gradually been lowered all along the lines, and in some places they are scarcely visible. We shake hands across them, we pass over them freely, and they seem to be only what are needful for good fellowship. The new people and ministers who come to us, and our own younger clergy and families, will go with the tides that sweep toward that catholicity and unity which the times portend.

6. This tendency will increase with the discouragements and failures of some of our denominational efforts in the large cities, and with the difficulty of sustaining our growing Domestic and Foreign Missions by the voluntary contributions of the churches. We have been overburdened by the successes of these movements at home and abroad, which sooner or later will bring us to a crisis that must be met. The reports on the State of Religion, and on the condition of the Boards of the Church, which were made to the last General Synod, deserve careful study in relation to this whole subject. Should we be obliged to abandon any large part of these whitened harvest fields to other hands, we shall have to face other serious issues involving the future of the whole denomination, for a Church that has lost its missionary spirit has seen its best days, and may have to pass a fiery ordeal for a new probation by Him who walketh among the golden candlesticks and who holdeth the stars in His right hand.

7. The tentative efforts that were made a few years ago for closer union with the Presbyterian Churches, North and South, and with the Reformed Church in the United States, failed because of conditions that have been either modified or removed since then. The concordat between our General Synod and the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church is still of force and will yet bear good fruit. The difficulties that then prevented union with the German Reformed Church have been settled by and among themselves. New proposals for organic union with our Church and the Northern Presbyterian Church have been made by the Mercersburg Classis and the Pittsburgh Synod to the Triennial General Synod which is to meet in May, 1887. Other movements of the kind may follow, and they will all test the spirit of these churches, and the need and practicability of closer union.

The main question now repeats itself. Is an union of the Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian system feasible? I answer finally and emphatically,

(Continued on page twelve.)

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

FOR EASTER.

....“LILIES AND VIOLETS FOR EASTER DAY,” by May Riley Smith, is a collection of delightful verses, very tastefully printed, covered and tied together with pure and becoming simplicity. (A. D. F. Randolph & Co.)

....Of the Easter books which we have seen the one which pleases us above all others is “SILVER THOUGHTS OF GREAT MINDS,” collated by Louise S. Houghton. Everything about it is satisfying. The rough paper cover, its beautiful decoration on ivorine, the silk and silver cord which binds cover and leaves, the admirable selections from Madame Guyon, Thomas à Kempis, John Bunyan, Jean Nicolas Grou, St. Augustine, Molinos the Quietist, and Madame Swetchine, make up an Easter publication that is thoroughly captivating. (White, Stokes & Allen.)

....“EASTER MESSENGERS” contains a poem by Lucy Larcom, printed in fac-simile, illustrated in colors by Susie Barstow Skelding. The cover is of sateen, tied with ribbon, bearing on its front a lovely design of Azalea blossoms perfectly printed. We have a fancy for good press work, regard it as an art, and the printing of this design commands our admiration. The verses by Lucy Larcom contain passages likely to become household words. Take this for example:

> Uplift thy thoughts from evil!
> Shake off thy clinging sin!
> Unfold thy spirit's flower, and let > Christ's holy smile shine in!

Miss Skelding adds pictures of lilies, daisies and grasses, jonquils and crocuses, and sweet peas, true to nature and gracefully arranged. A very handsome book. (White, Stokes & Allen.)

....The current number of Harper's Bazar is an Easter number of rare attractions. The cover bears a rich design of roses and butterflies by Mr. W. H. Gibson. Rose Terry Cooke writes the story, “Grandma's Easter,” to which Frederic Dielman adds three superior drawings; but who made, in the last, the boy's left hand so clumsy. Easter Morning, in which various emblems are combined, by Alfred Fredericks, is a very impressive composition. MRS. M. E. SANGSTER contributes the charm of verses, entitled “Easter.” We wish that Easter Morning had been printed on a separate leaf. We hope it will be.

....“THE LATE MRS. NULL.” By Frank R. Stockton. The design on the cover is a piece of network. It faithfully indicates the nature of what the reader encounters in the first chapter and enjoys through twenty-four chapters. The actors in this domestic drama are in Mr. Stockton's net. In every chapter they run against it and are thrown back. The snarl into which the network is gradually and steadily brought is surprising and amazing. The persons involved do astonishing deeds. The reader is amused through and through, and from his head to his heels. He seldom is prompted to laugh aloud, but he laughs all over, in every nerve, and is the better for it. The characters, Lawrence Croft, Mrs. Null, Widow Keswick, Aunt Patsy and Peggy, are original and are portrayed with a free but well-trained and accurate hand. In the twenty-fifth chapter Mr. Stockton indulges in some pages of idyllic writing, with a touch now and then of humor. It is surprising how that chapter remains in the memory. It is one of the most impressive in the book. With two or three that follow, it gives the reader a grateful period of repose, and prepares him for the astounding and intensely ludicrous final achievement of the Widow Keswick. The book is a piece of pure, clean fun, with admirable character drawing, and with now and again a vein of tenderness and subdued pathos. Does it surpass Mr. Stockton's previous stories? That question is not easily answered. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“A HARMONY OF THE FOUR GOSPELS IN ENGLISH.” By Edward Robinson, D.D. Revised Edition by Prof. M. B. Riddle, D.D. This book, first issued forty years ago, has long been known as the most judicious and trustworthy before the public. It appears now as revised by a most competent hand, a scholar as sound and careful as Dr. Robinson himself. The general arrangement is unaltered, save in a few places, representing the later views of the author or caused by the advances of modern criticism. The text of the Authorized Version is retained, but in foot-notes the chief of the changes proposed by the Revision of 1881 are given for the guidance of the reader. The Appendix contains all the matter of the first edition, and also numerous additions by the present editor, bringing the work down to the present condition of the controversy respecting the Gospels. Hence the volume may be warmly commended to every careful student of the English Bible. No one can go through its pages without a clearer conception of Christ's life, a higher appreciation of the credibility of his biographers, and a more complete comprehension of the truth uttered by the great Teacher. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

....“THE POET-SCOUT.” By Capt. Jack Crawford. We thought at first we had a new sort of dime-novel poetry when we opened the book. But “Capt. Jack,” who was for a time chief of Gen. Crook's scouts, is a man worthy of consideration for his heroic life of sobriety, courage and human sympathy, if for nothing else. He detests dime novels and gives advice to boys in a letter which is most admirable. His poetry is tender and true in rhyme and metre, and if it does not rank with that of the highest order it will touch many hearts. We confess ourselves careless about applying strict criticism to it, and only wish the author every success as he uses the power God has given him to throw his sympathetic thought into rhythmical form. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....The admirable edition of the works of Charles Lamb, edited by Mr. Alfred Ainger, is concluded by a volume entitled “MRS. LEICESTER'S SCHOOL, AND OTHER WRITINGS IN PROSE AND VERSE.” Among these are not only some of Lamb's more recently discovered papers, but some highly characteristic work. Most of them are trifles, but have the true and incomparable flavor of Elia. “Mrs. Leicester's School” and “The Adventures of Ulysses” were designed for children. Seven out of the ten chapters of the former are by Mary Lamb, but are in the same vein and not inferior to her brother's. Mr. Ainger's notes add much to the value of the collection. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

....“INITIALS AND PSEUDONYMS: A DICTIONARY OF LITERARY DISGUISES,” by William Cushing, is a work for which the toilers on the fields of literature will be grateful as long as they live. The first part gives the initials and pseudonyms, followed by the names of the authors, a characteristic literary performance, the place of publication and date. The second part gives the names of the authors, followed by the assumed or real initials or the pseudonym, and a concise biography. The list extends from the beginning of the 18th century to the present time, and contains 12,000 initials and pseudonyms and 8,000 real names. Mr. A. R. Frey, of the Astor Library, placed what he had gleaned at the disposal of Mr. Cushing. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“HAPHAZARD PERSONALITIES.” By Charles Lanman. This volume, as its title denotes, describes the personal trials of various distinguished persons whom its author met either in person or by correspondence. It is gossipy and interesting, and, we presume, entirely trustworthy. We notice in it a long and characteristic letter written by the late Dr. Bethune on the subject of fishing and the edition of Isaac Walton's immortal work, which he edited. (Lee & Shepard.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Reformed Quarterly for April opens with Prof. Gast's article on the General Character of the Old Testament Revision. He thinks that the Revisers erred in following the Massoretic text too closely, but “they have rectified many mistakes and cleared up many obscurities.” Dr. Chambers contributes a readable paper on Minucius Felix. Prof. Gerhart treats acutely of The Light of Holy Scripture, and Dr. De Baun answers the question, Why do Christians Die? The number closes with an elaborate discussion of the Future of the Temperance Reform. The author writes with good temper, but takes the extreme ground of legal prohibition, and falls into the common error of comparing it with the Abolition movement. The Notices of New Books are able and candid.

....The New Englander for March, besides its spicy paper on the Harvard Elective System, has a keen and just article on John Brown, riddling his biographer through and through, a fair account of Lotze's Microcosmus and a sensible view of the possibilities of Worship in Non-Liturgical Churches. There is also a calm and able notice of Shedd's Doctrine of Endless Punishment.

....The Lutheran Quarterly is well filled for this quarter. Its longest article is somewhat dull reading, but Prof. Fox treats judiciously the miracles of the New Testament, and Prof. Himes tells with discrimination Why We Study Shakespeare, and Mr. Guss vindicates Luther's relation to Religious Liberty against a recent, gratuitous assault. The Notices of New Publications are numerous, and for the most part able and candid. With reason they “counsel modesty” to the leaders of the “new theology” (p. 316), but it is to be feared, in vain.

....The American Antiquarian and Oriental Journal for March appeared promptly with its usual store of recondite information. We are glad to see that its editor, Rev. Dr. S. Peet, has been invited by the Victoria Institute of Great Britain to contribute a paper to the discussion in which Gladstone, Max Muller and others of like distinction have taken part.

...Christian Thought for March is unusually good. Dr. Gladden has a searching paper on the Relations of Art and Morality, and our Mr. Riggs of Bergen Point imparts novel and varied information in an article entitled The Bible for Mohammedans. Dr. T. A. Hoyt treats with vigor and rhetorical power the well-worn theme, The Fulness of Time.

....“Must the Chinese Go?” is the title of a searching and satisfactory examination of the Chinese Question by a lady (the wife of the eminent Methodist missionary, Dr. S. L. Baldwin) who has spent eighteen years in China, has resided in California, and knows whereof she speaks. Mrs. Baldwin holds a sharp pen and is able to put her views in very neat shape. Would that her pamphlet (to be had of Phillips & Hunt, 805 Broadway) might attain a large circulation. The worst evils of slavery were not so abominable as the outrages that have been perpetrated on the inoffensive and useful Mongols, and it is high time that the Christian sentiment of the nation made itself heard.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Persia. The Land of the Imams. A Narrative of Travel and Residence. 1871-1885. By Rev. James Bassett. With Map. 12mo, pp. 343. $1.50; also,

German Psychology of To-Day. The Empirical School. By Th. Ribot. Translated from Second French Edition by James Mark Baldwin. With Preface by James McCosh, D.D., LL.D. 8vo, pp. 307. $2; also,

The Country Banker: His Clients, Cases, and Work, From an Experience of Forty Years. By George Rae. With Preface by Brayton Ives. 12mo, pp. 320. $1.50; also,

Triumphant Democracy; or, Fifty Years' March of the Republic. By Andrew Carnegie. 8vo, pp. 519. $2; also,

Labor, Land and Law: A Search for the Missing Wealth of the Working Poor. By William A. Phillips. 8vo, pp. 471. $2.50.

Roberts Brothers: Madame Roland. By Mathilde Blind. (Famous Women Series.) 16mo, pp. 318. $1; also,

Talks With My Boys. By William A. Mowry, Ph.D. Revised Edition. 16mo, pp. 256. $1.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: Unwise Laws. A Consideration of the Operations of Protective Tariff upon Industry, Commerce and Society. By Lewis H. Blair. 12mo, pp. 178. $1.

Ticknor & Co.: The Prelate. A Novel. By Isaac Henderson. 12mo, pp. 350. $1.50.

Lee & Shepard: A Winter in Central America and Mexico. By Helen J. Sanborn. 12mo, pp. 321. $1.50; also,

Down the West Branch; or, Camps and Tramps Around Katahdin. Being an Account of a Trip Through one of the Wildest Regions of Maine, etc. By Capt. Charles A. J. Farrar. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 311. $1 25; also,

Exercises for the Improvement of the Senses for Young Children. By Horace Grant. American Edition. Edited by Willard Small. 16mo, pp. 157. 50 cents; also, Forgotten Meanings; or, An Hour with a Dictionary. By Alfred Waites, author of “The Student's Historical Manual.” 16mo, pp. 73. 50 cents.

The National School of Elocution and Oratory, Philadelphia, Pa.: Young Folks' Speaker. Designed for Children Ten Years Old and Younger, etc. Compiled by Mrs. J. W. Shoemaker. 12mo, pp. 100. Paper, 15 cents; also, Choice Humor, For Reading and Recitation. Compiled by Charles C. Shoemaker. 12mo, pp. 183. Paper, 25 cents.

Fords, Howard & Hulbert: Heavenly Recognition. Discourses on Personal Immortality and Identity after this Life. By Rev. T. M. McWhinney, D.D. 12mo, pp. 129. 60 cents.

White, Stokes & Allen: Silver Thoughts of Great Minds. John Bunyan, Madame Guyon, Jean Nicolas Grou, Thomas à Kempis, and others. By Louise S. Houghton. Rough paper cover. Design on Ivorine. Tied with Silk and Silver Cord. $1; also,

Easter Messengers. A Poem by Lucy Larcom in fac-simile. Illustrated in colors. By Susie Barstow Skelding. Sateen cover decorated in colors. $1.50.

Anson D. F. Randolph & Co.: Lilies and Violets for Easter Day. By May Riley Smith, author of “Sometime.” Poems. Rough paper cover with design.

John B. Alden: Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature. Presenting Biographical and Clerical Notices, etc. Vol. II. 12mo, pp. 478. 60 cents.

Cassell & Co.: The Education of the Artist. By Ernest Chesneau. Translated by Clara Bell. 12mo, pp. 324. $2.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Saint Gregory's Guest and Recent Poems. By John Greenleaf Whittier. 16mo, pp. 66. $1; also,

California, from the Conquest in 1846 to the Second Vigilance Committee in San Francisco. A Study of American Character. By Josiah Royce. (American Commonwealths.) 12mo, pp. 513. $1.25.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Doom! An Atlantic Episode. By Justin H. McCarthy, M.P. (No. 68, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 119. 25 cents; also,

The Choice of Books. By Frederic Harrison. (No. 69, Same Series.) 16mo, pp. 140. 25 cents; also;

Major Frank. A Novel. By A. L. G. Bosboom-Toussaint, author of “The English in Rome,” etc. Translated from the Dutch by James Akeroyd. (No. 520, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 45. 20 cents.

The Key of Doctrine and Practice. By the Rev. H. R. Haweis, M.A., author of “Thoughts for the Times,” etc. 32mo, pp. 281. 25 cents. Mr. Bumpus, 158 Oxford street, London.

King Solomon's Mines. By H. Rider Haggard, author of “Dawn,” etc. (Cassell's “Rainbow” Series of Original Novels.) 12mo, pp. 330. 25 cents.

Life and Adventures of Baron Trenck. Vol. I. (Cassell's National Library. Vol. I., No. 12.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

The Mark of Cain. By Andrew Lang. Authorized Edition. 12mo, pp. 173. 25 cents. Charles Scribner's Sons.

PERIODICALS.

April.—The Presbyterian Review.
May.—The Magazine of Art, Harpers, Cassell's Family Magazine.

A New Volume of SPURGEON'S SERMONS.

First Healing and then Service and other Sermons preached in 1885 by C. H. Spurgeon. 12mo..... 1.00
Return, O Shulamite, and other Sermons preached in 1884..... 1.00
Hands full of Honey, and other Sermons preached in 1883..... 1.00
Sermons, 10 vols.....$10.00
(Any vol. sold separately at $1.00)
Present Truth, recent Sermons... 1.00
Types and Emblems, (Sermons). 1.00
Sermon Notes, Gen. to Prov..... 1.00
" " Eccles. to Mal..... 1.00
Feathers for Arrows..... 1.00
John Ploughman's Talk..... .75
" " Pictures. .75
Talk and Pictures, In one vol... 1.00
Morning by Morning..... 1.00
Evening by Evening..... 1.00
Lectures to Students..... 1.00
Saint and Saviour..... 1.00
Gleanings among Sheaves..... .60
Commenting & Commentaries..... 1.00
Gems..... 1.00

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,
530 Broadway, New York.

 Any of the above sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

RECENT ISSUES
BY THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.00.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

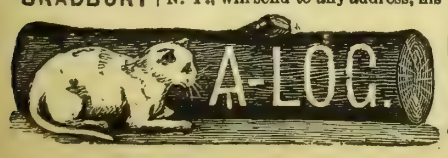
THE SPY OF THE REBELLION.
By the Great Detective, Chief of U.S. Secret Service,
ALLAN PINKERTON.

The "Spy" reveals many Secrets of the War never before told.

A graphic account of the first plot to assassinate Lincoln—How he was conducted safely to Washington—Early Battles of the War—The Secret Service—A Female Spy—A Trusted Officer's Treason—The "Knights of Liberty"—The "SPY" in Richmond—The "Loyal League"—McClellan and his enemies—The "SPY" journeys through the South—Defeat of Gen'l Pope—Battle of Antietam—McClellan's farewell address—Thrilling Narratives of Pinkerton's Spies—etc.

The "Spy" is the most thrilling War Book ever published. Endorsed by the Press and hundreds of AGENTS. A large handsome book; 688 pages; 50 illustrations. WANTED Sold only by our Agents. Can not be found in bookstores. Many of our agents are earning from $25 to $40 per week. We want agents everywhere. For full particulars and terms to agents address
G. W. CARLETON & CO., Publishers, New York.

BRADBURY
BRADBURY
BRADBURY
PIANO in the White House With GRANT, HAYES, ARTHUR, F. G. SMITH, Maker, BROOKLYN, N. Y., will send to any address, his



Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s NEW BOOKS.

St. Gregory's Guest, and Recent Poems.
By John Greenleaf Whittier. 16mo, parchment, $1.00.

Mr. Whittier has here collected the poems he has written since the publication of "The Bay of Seven Islands" in 1883.

Signs and Seasons.
By John Burroughs, author of "Wake Robin," "Fresh Fields," etc. 16mo, gilt top, $1 50.

Contents: A Sharp Lookout; A Spray of Pine; Hard Fare; Tragedies of the Nests; A Snow Storm; A Taste of Maine Birch; Winter Neighbors; A Salt Breeze; Spring Relish; A River View; Bird Enemies; Phases of Farm Life; Roof-Tree.

A delightful book of out-door and domestic life.

California.
From the Conquest in 1846 to the Second Vigilance Committee in San Francisco. A Study of American Character. Vol. VII. in series of American Commonwealths. By Josiah Royce, Assistant Professor of Philosophy in Harvard College. With a fine Map. 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

Dr. Royce is a native Californian, is acquainted with the State as a citizen, and by very careful research he has collected in a single volume the curious and remarkably instructive facts which the unique history of California offers.

 For sale by all Booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers,

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,
11 East 17th St., New York.

MUSIC BOOKS.

Three Holy Children, ($1), by Stanford, is a new Cantata of great power and brilliancy.

Richter's Harmony, ($2); Richter's Counterpoint, ($2), and Richter's Fugue, ($2), are three standard books on composition, by an eminent German Harmonist.

Operas. The best and most complete editions.
Aida ($2); Bells of Corneville ($1.50); Boccacio ($2); Carmen ($2); Catinitza ($2); Lakme ($2); Maritana ($2); Mefistofele ($2); Mignon ($2.50); Zenobia ($2); and many others.

Librettos, full and complete, of 50 operas, for 25 cents each. Cheap editions, 15 cents each.

Easter Music, in quantity. Send for Lists. Orchestral parts furnished when desired.

Winner's Ideal Methods, (each 75 cts.), are famous and really good cheap Methods for Violin, for Flute, for Accordeon, for Cornet, for Banjo, for Guitar, for Fife, for Clarinet and for Flageolet.

Mason's Piano Technics ($2.50), are constantly increasing in favor, as most valuable aids to practice. All teachers should use them.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

NOW READY!

FLOWER PRAISE
A FLORAL SERVICE
FOR
The Children of the Sunday School.
By Clara Louise Burnham and Geo. F. Root.
This little Service or Cantata is designed more especially for Children's Day, Flower Sunday,
AND
SPECIAL ANNIVERSARIES,
but it is also adapted for use on any occasion where children's voices can be utilized. The words are bright, pretty and instructive, while the music is written in Dr. Root's happiest vein and most strikingly illustrates the sentiment of the words. Bound in handsome heavy paper covers. Price 20 cts. each by mail, postpaid; $2.00 a dozen by express, charges not prepaid.
SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.
PUBLISHED BY
The John Church Co, Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for
PLATFORM ECHOES
or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,
By John B. Gough.
His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

The Newest Songs!
READY IN APRIL.
THE
GLAD REFRAIN.

Messrs. Lowry and Doane's NEW Book of Sunday School Songs. It is fully equal to any of their former popular works.

This NEW Song Book embraces a number of NEW features, and is gotten up on an entirely NEW plan, in a NEW shape, and is printed from beautiful NEW type. It is sure to please, and will create a NEW interest in the Song Service. It will be sold at a NEW price,

$25 per 100 Copies, in Boards.

Single copy sent as soon as published on receipt of price.

Specimen pages sent free on request.

An Edition in Aikin's Character Notes, at Same Price.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY
of the City of New York.
JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
American School Institute, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route
C.B.& Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from
CHICAGO TO DENVER,
Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.
It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to
SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO
It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.
From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between
Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,
For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.
Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.
For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address
T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
HENRY B. STONE, Asst. Gen. Mgr., Chicago.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, Gen. Pass. Agt., Chicago.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
New York Office, 51 Wall Street
Organized 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.
Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.
The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.
J. D. Jones, President.
Charles Dennis, Vice President
W. H. H. Moore, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. Raven 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. Chapman, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.
Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85

Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886. $5,177,478 99
This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.
H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.
Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD. Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, Jr., } Ass't Sec's.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address Home Mf'g Co., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

HALF A MILLION GARDENS
ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH
SEEDS Peter Henderson's PLANTS
EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

THE
Christian Intelligencer
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT 48 Church St., cor. Fulton, N. Y.,
BY THE
CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER ASSOC.
Editors:
REV. J. M. FERRIS, D.D.,
REV. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
Associate Editor:
MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

TERMS,
$2.65 per annum.
Ministers and Theological Students, $2.
SINGLE COPIES, 3 CENTS.

☞ Read these Instructions carefully. ☜

ALL COMMUNICATIONS pertaining to the literary columns of the paper must be addressed to the Editors; and those inclosing manuscripts to be returned must be accompanied with envelopes stamped and addressed. No attention will be paid to anonymous communications.

THOSE relating to the business department, to The Christian Intelligencer Association, Box 2117, N. Y. City.

SUBSCRIBERS, NOTICE.—The date following your name on the direction label informs you to what month and year your subscription is paid. If this date is not changed within two weeks after payment is made, drop us a postal card and we will investigate and reply. Please examine the date, and if in arrears, remit the amount due.

REMITTANCES ARE AT THE RISK OF THE SENDER, unless made by Draft, Check, or P. O. Money Order. These, if lost, can be readily replaced.

Checks, etc., to order of Christian Intelligencer Association.

IN CHANGING AN ADDRESS, it is necessary to send the OLD as well as NEW address. The change cannot be made unless this is done. And in order to prevent the loss of papers, it will be well to notify the office at least ten days before the contemplated change, as the mail lists are prepared that much in advance of each issue.

ALWAYS GIVE THE NAME OF THE P. O. where the paper is received.

SPECIMEN COPIES SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

The Easter Joy.

TO those who have neither part nor lot in the blessedness of the faith which alone makes possible the Easter gladness, what a mockery must it all appear! Possibly in the day of prosperity, the day of the unbroken household and the unclouded sky, they think little about it, tolerating with the smile of superior wisdom what they imagine to be the weakness of the Christian disciple. But when the day of adversity comes, then, too, comes the Lord's call to consider. And with no bright hope to beckon, no hand to lift the struggling form from

> "The breaking gulfs of sorrow
> Where the helpless feet stretch out,
> And find in the deeps of darkness
> No footing so solid as doubt."

what can Easter mean to the heart of the sceptic? For he, too, has his wounds which ache and bleed, so that for him there comes the desolation which, cheered by no heavenly vision, verges upon despair.

The Lord's resurrection is the pivotal point in Christian history, and belief in that fact the essential point in Christian comfort. If we doubt that He both died and rose again from the dead, we doubt also that He ever liveth to make intercession for us, and we can have no reasonable ground for anticipating the everlasting life and the ultimate re-union of all saints.

To take something more than an æsthetic interest in Easter, in the flowers, the music, the tokens of returning spring, is the privilege of all who love the Lord. True it is that every Sabbath is an Easter to the devout soul, in which it is a precious thought that it may join in the hymn,

> "Welcome sweet day of rest
> That saw the Lord arise,
> Welcome to this reviving breast,
> And these rejoicing eyes."

Yet the world-festival, with its tidal wave of blessed memories and triumphant hopes, is an event marked with a white stone.

"Wherefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." AUNT MARJORIE.

Individual Responsibility.

> "Little drops of water,
> Little grains of sand,
> Make the mighty ocean
> And the pleasant land."

AFTER all, when we question why the rules and requirements of religion have become so neglected or almost fallen into abeyance, we need not look for an answer in the immense influx of foreign population, in the increase and extension of trade that calls for increased labor, or to the development of ideas and knowledge. The real answer lies in this, the days are upon us when the Prince of this world reigns as was predicted, the spirit of anti-Christ whereof ye have heard that it should come.

Individual Christians, who make up the Church, forget their individual religious duties, the love of many waxes cold, we leave off constant prayer, reading of the Scriptures, attendance on Divine worship, self-examination. "He who intermits daily devotion," saith a pious writer, "returns like Samson shorn of his locks," and alas, how often have we found it true when any change from our ordinary routine has interfered with our daily habit, or the Prince of this world has lured us from our allegiance to the Prince of Peace! Let us turn our eyes upon ourselves, remember our vows, or responsibilities, and while doing our endeavor as much as lieth in us to live peaceably with all men, be it ours to let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works, and glorify our Father which is in heaven.

While we grieve to see the dear Lord so insulted, so disobeyed, so set at naught, let us remember that, after all, it is the individual piety of each follower of Christ that will leaven the lump, and we, by attending to our own hearts and minds, shall prove that we, at least, will show our faith by our own works and stand up for the truth as it is in Jesus.

K. M. S.

March 31st, 1886.

These are the last written words of one who has given many good words to "Aunt Marjorie's Corner." In less than twenty-four hours after their writing she had left this life on earth for the spiritual life which she has, long since, begun here. She has lived to her last day her life of usefulness, and has gone to her reward, possessing to the last moment every faculty made bright and full of lustre by constant and noble use. The call to leave her happy home in this world for the happier home of the other world found her ready. Her last words are given, as they have throughout her life been given, to try to help others to do right, and to bear witness for the truth and beauty of the Christian faith. K. M. J.

Not only in "Aunt Marjorie's Corner," but in the "Children's Portfolio," were gracious words often said by the dear friend who heard the Master's call, Come up higher, needing no time for preparation, since her earthly life was full of heaven. A bright, playful letter, full of sweet encouragement, lies on Aunt Marjorie's desk, in her hand, unanswered, because received very shortly before she laid her robes of mortality down and went over to join the shining ones who stood on the bank of the river to give her a welcome and lead her up to the city that hath foundations. Missing her as we must, let us who still remain here be faithful unto death.

"Lord, Thou Knowest All Things."

John 21: 17.

OH, could we only comprehend that He, our Lord above,
Has sent us all our suffering from out His boundless love;
Both that our pain and weariness have come to us from Him,
And that He knows we love Him, e'en though our light be dim.

"Your heavenly Father knoweth;" on these words let us rest,
Knowing that He will send us what in His sight is best;
Knowing that He who careth for His children here
Keeps them still in safety, so they need not fear.

Our heavenly Father knoweth; He sees our weakened frame,
And that undone duties still cause us many a shame.
He knows that we would serve Him, although our strength be small,
And that through all our service we wait His loving call.

So let us wait in patience through all life's out-stretched length,
Knowing that through our weakness is made his perfect strength.
And that through our suffering we may some brother win
Who otherwise would wander in darkness and in sin.

A Reflex Easter Light.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

IT is narrated of Fra Angelico that "he never took up his brushes without kneeling in prayer, and never painted a Christ on the Cross without his eyes being filled with tears."

Mrs. Heyne read slowly and with unusual emphasis from her weekly paper the call for competitive Easter designs, glancing with each sentence at the slight figure of her daughter, who was bending over her work. When she had finished reading aloud the offer of the prizes to be given the successful candidates for art honors, she gave the bent figure a long, searching look, which was followed by an expression of impatience as she saw no sign of interest in the subject; then she rose and left the room.

No sooner had the door closed behind the mother than the daughter rose, laid down her palette, and with her hands tightly clasped paced up and down the small room dignified by the name of studio. She seemed to see written wherever her eyes rested, "prize," "Easter prize," and to feel her own intense individuality at war with the idea. She thought of the possibility of being helped on in her art education by one of the prizes. The tempter urged, "Your pictures are praised for their uncommon delicacy of touch, as well as for their graphic effects. Why should you not try for this prize?"

She walked and thought, and the thoughts broke forth into ejaculatory sentences. She knew her mother's wish in the matter, knew by the sound of her voice, by the restless tap of her foot; knew that she desired her to compete for the prize. For an instant she felt her individuality, which day by day seemed to more distinctly assert itself, to be a curse. The question rose whether she ought not to follow her mother's wish in the matter. She was accustomed to follow her directions in cases that did not relate to her own calling; she insisted upon this one thing, that in following her art instincts she was subject especially to the highest leadings and not to the whims or even to the reasonings of those who could not understand the necessities of her soul with respect to her aspirations. "Oh, God, help me!" she whispered. She heard her mother's foot-fall again, and seated herself at her work.

Miss Heyne in pursuing art had entered that path which has few travellers; a toilsome lonely way it is in a sense, a way which has many a Slough of Despond, yet which has the Delectable Mountains always in view. Those who take this solitary path towards the heights do not always, perhaps do not generally, understand the difficulties in the way; they choose through their higher instincts and are kept faithful to their first conceptions through their growing aspirations. Miss Heyne was this kind of an art devotee.

Such artists, whether they work with clay, with the brush, or with the pen, must have time to prove themselves. At first their thought is too weighty for their untrained fingers, so they falter and stumble, and are unintelligible to the world which asks for decided effects. Mrs. Heyne had privately consulted her daughter's teacher, an artist of slowly growing fame, with regard to the chances for her child's recognition, and he had said with some hesitation, "Your daughter's conceptions are too high to insure early success, as the world understands its meaning; she has the true artist's soul that will be held from trying to prove itself prematurely." The mother had left the atelier with confused ideas of his meaning, but had, after much consideration, decided that the artist's real opinion of her daughter's talent was that it could not be turned to practical account.

Arthur Moyne, Miss Heyne's teacher, had himself stood in the same reverent attitude before art which he recognized in his pupil, but he had in a moment of discouragement yielded to an impulse in favor of swift fruition—had painted for the market a picture that only half expressed his conception, and although the picture sold well, he had never forgiven himself for his early impatience.

The artist had himself seen the Easter prize advertisement and had considered his own chances of success, had even traced a design without really having a serious purpose to become a competitor for the prize. He said to Miss Heyne during one of her lesson-hours, "I suppose you have noticed the Lay & Co.'s offer for Easter designs?"

She answered him quietly, "Yes, I have noticed it."

"Have you thought of competing?" he asked in a friendly way.

"There could be little hope for me, Mr. Moyne," she replied.

"But I cannot see why," he persisted; "you have a fine artistic taste, and a sense of fitness which could not mislead you with regard to an Easter symbol."

She answered not a word, but raised her eyes to his; and he saw in them such a pleading expression that he could not urge her further. He thought long upon her words after she had left him. A new feeling of reverence for the slight creature whose standard was placed too high to fall before temptations to low purposes, took possession of him. He knew her high ambition to succeed, her hope of being appreciated, when she should show herself worthy. But he did not know how truly her aspirations belonged to the domain of the spiritual, His own design grew, until at last he felt he could do no more for it. He was busy wrapping it carefully to send it away, when he heard a knock which he knew to be that of Miss Heyne.

His pupil had finished her lesson and was drawing on her gloves when the teacher asked, "And have you thought again of the Easter design, Miss Heyne?" The young lady answered, "Yes; I have thought and even dreamed of it;" then she hesitated, Arthur Moyne waiting in silence. "I do not know that I ought to speak of it," she continued, with an awed manner, "for it seemed like a vision. I thought I was climbing a mountain; darkness was at its foot and a glorious illumination at the top. The farther one ascended and felt the radiance the more he longed to be wholly illuminated. Somehow I could not help feeling that I had seen a vision when the morning came; and I thought if my hand could have followed my spirit I might possibly have expressed an idea of that Easter light."

Arthur Moyne looked upon the rapt countenance of the young artist and felt his soul thrilled. She rose and took up her painting materials, and he answered her "good morning;" then he went to his inner room, took the Easter design from its wrapping, and threw it among the coals. He watched it burning with a feverish eagerness and then went to his work with resolute step, as if moved by a strong inward force.

Arthur Moyne, one morning in March, when winter and spring seemed striving for their separate rights, met Miss Heyne, with a pale face and distraught manner, for he had learned of his Easter success. Miss Heyne had also heard of it.

"Miss Heyne," he began, "have you noticed that my Easter design that took the prize is your conception?" "My conception glorified, I think," she answered.

"It has been proved that two are needed for a perfect art effect," the teacher said, adding, "I need you, Miss Heyne. I have long felt it, I know it now through reflex Easter light."

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Hour of Comfort.

SOMETIMES there comes within the life,
This checkered life of ours,
So much of loss and pain and strife
That our sad eyes, with tear-drops rife,
Look up and see no flowers.

A sudden sorrow clouds the day
And the tired heart grows faint,
For strength and courage die away,
And lips that have been firm to pray
Can only make complaint.

And life becomes at such a time
An unattractive thing;
There is no sound of cheery chime,
The days move on in dreary rhyme
And bring no heart to sing.

If such a time should come to thee—
And somewhere in the years
For every one its pain will be—
Do not despair, but try and see
Some sunshine through the tears.

And know that he whom sorrows teach
Receives a gift from heaven;
His tenderness some hearts may reach
To whom the glad in vain might preach,
And joy through him is given.

Oh, then, be thou a comforter
To some more sad than thee;
And while thou thus dost minister,
Strange bliss in thine own heart shall stir
And grief forgotten be.

—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

An Easter Lily.

IT had been a long, long time in getting ready to bloom. Months and months ago Uncle James had brought the root to Nellie from the distant Bermudas. Her mother had carefully placed it in a pot, and together they had watched the growth of blade, stalk, leaf and bud, until, at length, they beheld a perfect flower.

Nellie had other plants, quite a variety of them, indeed. She was a delicate child, and because she had to stay in the house through so great a part of the rough, cold winter, her father had made her a window-garden. Geraniums, fuchsias, roses, heliotrope and mignonette made the family sitting-room to look like fairy-land, but among them all no flower was so admired and treasured as the pure white Easter lily. It had come to its blooming, too, in just the right time. The Sunday-school children were to make offerings of flowers and plants in helping to keep the festival in which we love to remember the resurrection of our Lord, and Nellie had been very anxious all the winter through, that her spotless lily might be among the offerings. What was her happiness, then, in watching the gradual unfolding of the bud which reached perfection at the Easter-tide?

It was the long-looked-for Saturday—the day on which the plants were to be carried to the church and placed upon the pulpit. While the family were taking breakfast a message came from a neighbor's house. Mrs. Loomis, a near friend, and the mother of Nellie's playmate, Willie, had suddenly been called from earth to heaven. It was sad news to those who had loved her and who must henceforth miss her from their lives, but to the loving Christian woman the angel of death had been also an angel of light. Though he came at an unexpected moment, he found her ready to enter into the joy of her Lord.

On receiving the message, Nellie's mother at once arose from her seat, saying: "I must go and see if I can do anything for the family?"

"May I go with you and see Willie," asked Nellie, "perhaps he might like to have me with him. And oh! mother, may I take him my lily? I am sure that would make him feel better. It looks so pretty to-day."

"Yes, my dear, you may give it to him if you wish. I think it will do him good to know that you feel for him in this great sorrow."

So the mother and daughter went out on their errand of sympathy, carrying with them the cherished flower.

They found little Willie in tears. Young as he was he was old enough to know that he had lost his best earthly friend. "Oh, Nellie," he cried, "my mamma has to be put in the grave."

"Poor Willie!" said Nellie, soothingly. "Do not cry. Try not to feel so badly. Your mamma is in heaven where she will be happy always. And see, I have brought you my lily."

"Yes, look at it, Willie," said Nellie's mother. "See how lovely and white it is, and yet the stalk is growing out of this dark, damp ground in the flower pot.

"We do not look much at the ground, but only at the beauty of the flower. So you must not think of the place where your mamma's body is to be laid, but remember that she will rise again 'in the resurrection at the last day.' This is just the time when everybody is thinking how Jesus rose from the grave. He was and is the Prince of Life, whom death itself could not hold in its power.

"He has taken the soul of your dear mamma—the part of her that thinks and feels—to a bright and glorious place. Some day He will raise her and all others from the grave. Then she will have a body far more beautiful than the one that must be laid out of your sight. It is something we cannot understand but that we must believe. Try to think of it when you look at Nellie's flower."

Willie listened quietly. I think the words of his friend gave him some comfort, for he kept the lily by him day and night until it faded. Then he watched the other buds that came out one by one upon the plant, and seemed to love them as though they had been able to speak to him themselves.

Thus the Easter lily fulfilled its mission—not the one for which it had been intended by its owner, but the one for which it had grown.

Nellie missed it a little from the particular spot on the pulpit where she had planned that it should be, but I know she was never sorry that she had taken it as a comforter to her playmate in his loneliness and grief.

COUSIN LOIS.

Never Get into Debt.

NOT many years ago a young man came in town to finish his studies at the office of one of our best lawyers. He was well educated, intelligent, agreeable and kind; but he was poor, and in order to support himself tried to get a class in French. A few scholars came, and the thing did not pay. After a while he paid his landlady, left his boarding-house, and took to the woods. On the side of a hill, in a thick pine grove, he pitched his tent, where he cooked his food, ate, slept, and studied. Of course, his strange conduct made a great deal of talk. One morning, after a terrible thunder-storm during the night, his friends hunted him up.

"You'll be sick of your bargain after this," they said, "and be glad enough to have a waterproof roof over your head."

"I did not take to the woods from choice," answered the young man. "I could not see my way clear to pay for lodgings, and I am resolved never to be in debt. I know too well the danger of being in debt—my scanty income will carry me through the summer, when I hope better times are coming."

Gentlemen offered to aid him, but he sturdily refused their offers, got through his studies, and has now a large business, which handsomely supports him.

Was not that pluck? And did he not well think that the danger of being in debt is a serious danger? I wish more people thought so. Getting loose in money matters is often the beginning of ruin. When a boy or a young man falls into the habit of borrowing money, spending freely, having things charged, neglecting to pay, dodging his creditors, promising to pay and not keeping his promise, he is in a bad way. He forgets, lies, loses his self-respect, and is slowly but surely letting himself down, down, down. The history of many a man shows how far down it may be, even to robbery and murder. Two of the worst murders ever committed in Boston were done by respectable men to hide their debts. One killed his intimate friend because he could not pay a debt which he was owing him. The other, a young man, shot in cold blood in broad day a young associate, that he might rob the bank he was in of a few thousands to pay his debts with. Both did their work coolly, and apparently without any twinges of conscience.

Both were above all suspicion. They had borne a character fair to the world; but there was a weak spot, a screw loose, a canker at the core. They were loose in their money matters. Debts were dogging at their heels. They had lost their uprightness; and having lost that, the devil can tempt a soul to anything.—Child's Paper.

'I Must Keep this Gate Shut."

AN English farmer saw a number of huntsmen coming on horseback. He did not want them to go over one of his fields because the crop was in such a condition that it would be injured and perhaps destroyed by the tramp of the horses. So he put his hired boy at the gate and told him not to open it. On came the hunters and commanded him to open the gate. He refused. They offered him money. He would not take it. Then a noble looking man rode up and said, "My boy, I am the Duke of Wellington, and I command you to open the gate." The boy took his cap off and said, "I am sure the Duke of Wellington would not wish me to disobey orders. I must keep this gate shut; no one to pass through but with my master's express permission." The Duke was pleased, and, lifting his hat, said, "I honor the man or boy who can be neither bribed nor frightened into doing wrong. With an army of such soldiers I could conquer not only the French, but the world."

Kerosene and Wax Candles.

ROCK-OIL, having been well refined for illuminating uses, leaves behind it in the stills a black, tarry substance termed residuum, because it cannot be advantageously distilled for illuminating oils. It is, therefore, converted into paroffine, wax and lubricating oils by processes entirely different from those employed in producing kerosene. Paraffine is made into wax candles, matches, chewing gum, candies, etc. Anthracite is the basis of the beautiful analine dyes. Heretofore it has been derived solely from the coal tar obtained by the dry distillation of bituminous coal. A process, however, has been patented for obtaining this anthracine from crude petroleum, or the petroleum tar obtained as a refuse product in the distillation of petroleum for the purpose of producing kerosene. Lubricating oil, for journals working under light pressure, is as good as sperm oil. In fact, such railroads as the London and Northwestern, the war ships of England and the cotton factories of Manchester and New England use paraffine oils in preference to animal or vegetable oils. The former will not spontaneously ignite. Mineral lubricating oil costs only a tenth as much as sperm oil.—Harper's Monthly.

Another Calculation.

AMONG the impressive accurate reckonings of the movements of the celestial bodies no one has awakened my admiration so much as the occultation of a star a few years ago by Jupiter. I do not now recall the year and it would consume more time than I can spare to look it up. Leverrier, who won immortal fame by announcing the place of Neptune, among his other calculations reckoned, about 15 years ago, that, on Feb. 8th of say 1882, the lower part of Jupiter, to observers in the southern part of Europe, would pass between the earth and a certain small star. Now Jupiter is a small object and the star was much smaller. Besides, there is an increasing error in the place of Jupiter in the sky. But the phenomenon occurred—the lower part of the planet passed between the earth and the star, occulting the star for a short time, and Leverrier's reckoning was incorrect only by a few seconds of time.

UNCLE JOHN.

Little Heads Together.

EASTER ENIGMA.

For Dame Playfair's Class.

1, 23, 6, 8, 3, 9, 1, 12, enemies of our Lord.
2, 13, 10, 5, 7, a king of the Jews.
24, 33, 4, 15, 20, 25, a governor of Judea.
30, 18, 31, 34, 19, 32, doubted.
24, 28, 1, 25, 10, was penitent.
11, 31, 18, 36, a loving friend.
9, 28, 26, 4, 13, 29—12, 20, 5, 16, 25, a vain trust.
1, 18, 13, 4, 31, 6, 17, 7, 33, 25, 17, what made the disciples sad.
18, 28, 8, 32, 27, 8, 12, 3, 14, what makes us rejoice.
21, 35, 12, 15, 36, 14, 22, 2, should be our song.

The whole was said to the eleven by two who talked with Jesus on the evening of the first Easter day.

SCRIPTURE ACROSTIC.

1. The first son of Samuel.
2. One of the four greater prophets.
3. A fortified town of Naphtali.
4. One of Cain's sons.
5. The sister of Moses.
6. The tribe that furnished counsellors for Israel.
7. The wife of Nabal.
8. A city of Judah.

Primals.—One of the greater prophets.

JOHN S. CHRISTIE.

DIAMOND.

1. In whosoever. 2. Has been. 3. Essential to life. 4. Consisting of No. 3. 5. In every river.

FANNIE STEFFENS.

Answers to Puzzles of March 31st.

Buried Authors.—1. Wordsworth. 2. Scott. 3. Drake. 4. Longfellow. 5. Poe. 6. Cary.

Double Acrostic.—

I — I
N o D
D u L
U s E
S o N
T i E
RootS
Y e S

Charade.—Windward.

Correct answers from Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh Rappie Bowne.

The "Little Heads" are requested to send puzzles and answers to COUSIN LOIS, at this office.

Easter Lines.

The Cross Bearers.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

THE bearers of the Cross achieve
On earth a heavenly renown.
The benedictions they receive
Are jewels in a coming crown.
Easy the yoke, the burden light,
When Calvary appears in sight.

Honor and gold they deem but dross,
Their pathway is the narrow road.
They win the crown who bear the cross,
And when they stoop beneath the load
They follow where the Master led—
With braided thorns upon His head.

With hope they climb the stony height
The Saviour trod, weary and faint,
Bearing the cross of appetite,
Of passion and of self-restraint.
And when they lay the burden down,
The Cross they bore insures the crown.

Their burdens are not borne alone
Along the path where lurks the snare.
The angels that surround the throne
Will guide the feet that stumble there.
They count all earthly gains but loss,
Who bear with faith and love the cross.

Cross bearers in all lands are found
Wherever shines the Gospel light.
The advancing Christian world around,
Bearing their stainless banners white.
Climbing the steps of Calvary,
Whose Cross has made salvation free.

The Christian martyrs of the past,
Unheeding calls of wealth and fame,
Bore their white crosses where the blast
Of fire, like chariots of flame,
The prophet saw in clouds up-driven,
Met their reward, their crown in heaven.

Feasibility of an Union of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System.

(Continued from page seven.)

Yes! By the grace of God, it is practicable, and it is as sure to come as our Lord's prayer is sure of answer for the oneness of His people that the world may believe that the Father hath sent Him. But union cannot be forced by ecclesiastical management and untimely legislation. It must and will ripen, as fruit in its season, and then it will be "the fruit of the Spirit." "For the vision is for an appointed time....it will surely come; it shall not tarry."

The most significant token of it is the powerful and widespread movement now in progress for union and co-operation in foreign missions, which is as certainly forthcoming as anything that is within the reach of faith and prayer. The next most needful step will be for similar co-operation in the conduct of home missions, to prevent interference, avoid sectarian collisions, and save money, time, men and service, and to multiply resources, efforts and good results for the peace and prosperity of Zion and for the salvation of our country.

I hope that we shall not require an eighty years of war as did our Holland ancestors to secure union and unity. It may come, as in a siege, by parallels and slow approaches and undermining and blowing up the works that cannot otherwise be taken. Its feasibility depends, under God, upon the Churches themselves. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power." There will needs be conferences, conventions, alliances, discussions, agreements and tests of practicable plans of union by ministers and church officers and members, by religious and benevolent associations, by sacramental communions, by pulpit exchanges, by the religious press, by books, by consolidation of forces against the common enemy, and by the spirit of prayer and Christlike love.

Thus we shall grow together in oneness by irresistible processes of gracious dispositions and habits of Christian fellowship. And our old Dutch motto, Een-draght maakt macht, shall be verified in its larger application to the might of the union of the Reformed churches. As we near the heavenly horizon things that are only relatively great and small change places. Difficulties that were magnified by imperfect sight vanish away,—ideals that seem unattainable become realities; the impossibilities of human blindness and weakness are the actualities of faith. When one of the field marshals of Frederick the Great tried to dissuade him from battle with a more numerous foe, the conqueror replied, "But how much do you count me for?" We must not "limit the Holy One of Israel" in our reckonings of the feasibility of church union.

When John Calvin was invited by Archbishop Cranmer to meet with Melancthon, Bullinger, Bucer and himself at London, in 1552, to frame an evangelical union creed, as a counterpoise to the decrees of the Council of Trent, that greatest of Reformers replied that he "would willingly cross ten seas for such an object, and that no labor and no pain should be spared to remove by a Scriptural consensus the distractions among Christians which he deplored as one of the greatest evils." Political and international disturbances prevented the conference, but had it been held, who can estimate its beneficent results for evangelical Christiandom during these last three centuries?

> "Our little systems have their day;
> They have their day and cease to be,
> They are but broken lights of Thee;
> And Thou, O Lord, art more than they."

We are but fourteen years from the opening of the twentieth century of the Christian era, which may be a turning point in the progress of the kingdom of God among the kingdoms of this world. Let us stand in our lot, as Daniel did, until the end of the days; do our whole duty to and within and through our Church to the Church universal and to the lost world; cultivate the spirit and habit of unity in faith and practice; pray down and live down all sectarian narrowness and bigotry; make more of our agreements than of our differences with other branches of the Church; embrace every opportunity for actual unity and co operation; keep step with the march of the King and the kingdom; and speed the coming day of the world's conversion to Christ.

Rev. A. H. Meyers.

THE Classis of Ulster at its late session took the following action in reference to the late Rev. A. H. Meyers:

Whereas, The Rev. Abraham H. Meyers, one of the venerated members of this Classis, has been called to rest from his labors since the last meeting of this body, and Whereas, we feel called upon to give expression to the sentiments of esteem in which this Classis held his character, and now regard the faithful and consistent services for the Master's cause to which his long life of 85 years was devoted, it is

Resolved, That we bear earnest testimony to the fidelity with which our deceased father performed the high and responsible work of the Gospel ministry for a period of forty-five years, to the usefulness of his life-long services, distributed among thirteen churches, to which he ministered respectively from 1830 to 1875, to the steadfastness of his labors to win souls, and the success which crowned his ministerial work in all the fields he cultivated, to the evangelical character and directness of his preaching, marked by "sound speech and uncorruptness of doctrine," and to the consistent Christian life, which showed him "in all things a pattern of good works," both before the church and the world. The Divine Master allotted to His servant an unusually long time to work and find delight in surveying its fruits in His vineyard, and when active labor could no longer be performed, bestowed upon the closing years of his well-spent life "God's peace which passeth all understanding," the foretaste and pledge of the final "rest that remaineth for the people of God."

Resolved, That we sympathize with the bereaved family of our departed father and commend them to His mercy and care whose promise is the support of all who trust Him in their hour of need, and that we transmit to them a copy of this minute, and one to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The Comets.

THE Comet Fabry is now in Andromeda about four degrees south and a little west of the great nebula. It passed perihelion on the 6th and is moving rapidly on a southeasterly curve. It will pass down through the head of Aries, across Taurus into Eridanus by the 30th, and as the sun will then be about midway in Aries, we cannot expect to see the comet until from the middle to the end of the first week in May. Somewhere about the 26th to 28th it passes over or very near the sun's place in the heavens, and there is some expectation that it may pass between the earth and the sun and be seen projected on the sun. That would be a rare sight. The published ephemeris has been repeatedly corrected, and is not close enough to warrant a definite prediction on this point. The comet is increasing rapidly in brightness. It will be 456 times brighter on the 30th than it was in December.

The comet Barnard is moving northwestward and on May 2d will be about half way between Beta and Gamma in Andromeda. It is 118 times brighter than it was in December, and is not at present visible here.

The spring is six days earlier than last year. The Forsythia blossoms in open ground began to unfold last Sunday, the 18th; last year they began to open on the afternoon of the 24th.

Financial.

TUESDAY, April 20th.

THE market is a waiting one all around. The shipment of about six millions of wheat from Chicago yesterday produces caution in dealing in that cereal. The unsettled labor question and unadjusted railroad differences, a new although small export of gold, uncertainty as to the effect of the possible issue of British securities to buy out Irish landlords, affect the Stock Exchange. But the bank clearances continue to show an increase over those of last year, and trade holds up wonderfully well under the strikes.

The bank report for the week shows an increase in loans of $429,000, in legal tenders of $845,400, and in deposits of $2,548,100, and a decrease of $801,600 in specie. The surplus of reserve was reduced $833,-225, chiefly by the increase in deposits, and became $14,722,650. The U. S. Treasury gained over a million in gold, and holds now $54,174,498 above the $100,000,000 held as reserve. The silver dollar is worth to-day 78 1 4 cents as bullion. Money on call was worth 2 per cent, the average rate on commercial paper was 5 per cent. The Bank of England rate remains at 2 per cent.

Imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $7,209 939, and exports at $5,097,796. Export of specie $440,350. Sterling exchange yesterday firm at $4.87 for 60 day bills and $4.89 for demand. The Bureau of Statistics reports exports of entire country for nine months ending March 31st, $357,212,909, against $425,749.306 in same period last year.

Quotations for grain yesterday were: May, wheat here 93 3-4, in Chicago 79 1-8; corn here 46 3-4, in Chicago 37 3-4; oats here 36, in Chicago 29 3-4. Foreign markets firm. Visible supply of wheat in this country reduced over 500,000 bushels. Growing wheat very promising, except in Kansas. Cotton yesterday: April 9.13-16, May 9.21-22, June 9.33-34. No. 1 hay in moderate supply and firm, lower grades in full supply and a little lower. No. 1 rye straw 95 cents to $1.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

A number of representative citizens from St. John, N. B., intend to send a memorial for the tomb of General Grant on Decoration day. It will be an evergreen shaft seven feet in height with immortelles and suitable inscriptions....Sixty-eight cases of cholera reported in Italy, ten of which have proved fatal. Great precautions are being taken to prevent the disease from invading France ...A son of a general has been arrested in St. Petersburg for engaging in a plot to kill the Czar with dynamite....The Third avenue cars in New York are "tied up"....Hail stones half as large as a hen's egg fell in Dakota yesterday....The loss of property in St. Cloud by the recent tornado is estimated at $70,000, in Sauk Rapids $280,000. Damage on the railroad is about $20,000. ...W. K. Douglass, deputy sheriff of Fannin County, was shot and killed at Fort Worth, Texas....Willlam H. Vanderbilt's sons have given $250,000 for a clinic hospital for the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York city. ....The First National Bank of Angelica, N. Y., closed its doors yesterday, and J. E. Robinson, the cashier, is a defaulter to the amount of $50,000.

MONDAY, 19.—The Bishop of Madrid, Spain, was shot while ascending the stairs leading to the entrance to the Cathedral by a priest who was recently dismissed from priesthood and had fruitlessly applied to the Bishop to be reinstated. After the arrest of the priest he attempted to commit suicide. The Bishop is still alive....The town of Stry, in Galicia, was almost destroyed by fire. Six hundred houses were burned. Hundreds of persons are missing. One hundred persons were killed in one street....All the street cars in New York city except Eighth and Ninth avenue cars will be "tied up" to-day. The company are acting under police advice ...The twenty-fifth annual parade of the Brooklyn Sunday schools of the Eastern District will take place May 27th. Over 20,000 children will be in line....The strike of the Baltimore & Ohio switchmen is ended....Cigar stores in Philadelphia which have been opened for years every day are now closed on Sunday. Dealers say they can afford to pay the fine, but cannot afford to have their names published as defying the law.

TUESDAY, 20.—All street railroads, except Eighth and Ninth avenue, "tied up" yesterday. Great crowd of passengers on Elevated. Short fight around one car sent out by Third avenue, while other cars made one trip in afternoon. All lines in operation this morning except Third avenue, an occasional car on that line, unmolested....Boycott of Mrs. Gray, the baker, seems abandoned. Her trade good....Switchmen on strike on Lake Shore R. R. at Chicago....Labor meeting at Washington last evening, one Senator and three Representatives made speeches favoring workingmen's unions and recent actions....Seventh regiment of this city, yesterday being 25th anniversary of its going to defence of Washington, yesterday visited that city and was received with great enthusiasm....Deficiency appropriation bill in Washington now amounts to $7,000,-000....Ice dam in the St. Lawrence, large part of Montreal under water; the worst flood that city has ever had. ..The Scotch Radicals forsake Mr. Gladstone....Bishop Isquierdo, of Madrid, shot by a priest on Sunday, died yesterday.... Temperature in this city yesterday rose to 80 degrees.

About May 1st the long-established and well-known religious weekly, The Church Union, will remove its business and editorial offices from the Tribune Building to No. 33 East 22d street, between Broadway and 4th avenue, New York city, where they will have more desirable and comfortable quarters.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, April 17, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 27,919 pks.; exports 407 pks.

The market for new butter is lower, and as soon as there is some further surplus prices will go down by the run. Strictly fancy N. Y. State butter sold today at 28a29c. for selections. Lines of Northern butter took a range from 25a27c., and there are little parcels accumulating among receivers unsold. The disposition throughout the country seems to be more toward the making of butter than cheese, and the outlook now is for a liberal season's make. On 'Change there were offerings of extra Western creamery June make, seller June, at 18¾c., and 18c. bid. We quote:

New butter, fancy creamery	29	@30
do do dairy (selections)	28	@29
do good to fine	25	@27
do poor to common	14	@20

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 9,508 boxes; exports 7,930 boxes.

This market has scored its extreme limit of price, and during the week there have been small transactions. Still stock is in small compass and the market bids fair now to go out clean. There are as yet trifling arrivals of new make. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	—	@11
" " white "	—	@11½
Good early useful cheese	8	@10
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 6

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 21,000 bbls. and 18,503 cases.

Two lots of 25 cases each Iowa eggs sold at 13c. Washington, D. C., cases were offered at 13c., and had 12¾c. bid. Duck eggs had 27c. bid. Three lots of 25 cases each, cases included, sold at 13c. Twenty-five bbls. Indianas sold at 13c One or two hundred Ohio cases, or any part, were offered at 13c. Twenty-five cases dirty Iowas were offered at 11¾c., and had 11¼c. bid. Fifteen bbls. of Western firsts sold at 13c. Twenty cases Michigan firsts sold at 13c., and 25 cases more at 13c. Western firsts new laid eggs, seller April, were offered at 12½c., and had 12¼c. bid; seller May 12¼c., and had 11¾c. bid, which is a record of transactions on the Exchange this day. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz	13	@13½
Southern and Western, per doz.	12¾	@13¼

MAPLE SUGAR.—This product of the sap of the mountain maple is plentiful and sells only slowly. We quote:

Prime new maple sugar	7	@ 9
Maple syrup, per gallon can	—	@75

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

Difficulty of breathing, a short, dry cough, a quick pulse, and pain in the left side are symptoms of approaching consumption. Relieve the chest and cure the cough with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. This remedy is swift and certain, at any drug store at 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Increase the appetite by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They cause the stomach, liver, and bowels to perform their functions properly, do not debilitate, by excessive stimulation, and are not irritating in their action. As an after-dinner Pill they are unequaled.

Every day adds to the great amount of evidence as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is unequalled for general debility, and as a blood purifier, expelling every trace of scrofula or other impurity. Now is the time to take it. Sold by all druggists.

Best, easiest to use and cheapest. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. By druggists. 50c.

MARRIAGES.

SARGENT—BOOTHE.—In Brooklyn, on Thursday, April 15, by the Rev. A. M. Quick, Mr. Stephen W. Sargent to Miss Barbara E. Boothe, both of Franklin, N. J.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

HARPEL.—Died at Wappinger's Falls, N. Y., April 10, 1886, Mrs. Anna M. Harpel, aged 78, formerly of New York city. Interment at Greenwood Cemetery.

WALBRIDGE.—George B. Walbridge died on Sunday morning, March 28, 1886, at his home in Plainfield, N. J., in the 43d year of his age.

A Christian has gone home. Pure in heart, he saw God. Few men have known more of the meaning of Divine Fatherhood. He rested in God, rejoiced in God, honored God. No disappointment or suffering drew forth a complaint. It seemed to him disloyal to question the goodness of anything God sent. In sublimest resignation he learned to say long ago after Christ, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and this was not the confession of an indifferent, purposeless nature, but rather of a peculiarly sensitive, aggressive, ambitious spirit, and so was a triumph of grace. His life was victory—his death peace. Everyone who knew him is better for it.

While originally a Presbyterian, he was a member for many years of the Church-on-the-Heights, Brooklyn, N. Y., where his work in connection with the Bethany Mission is still lovingly remembered by many. Later his membership was with Trinity Church, Plainfield, N. J.

No one in the Reformed Church knew her history better, gave her truer reverence, or was more devoted to her interests. He was never narrow in thought, affection or purpose, but intensely loyal in all his relations. Such loyalty is Christian manliness.

Seldom does one leave us whose character gives such glory to Christ, and whose memory is such a continual inspiration to faith and faithfulness.

A. V. V. R.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE COUNCIL OF HOPE COLLEGE will meet in regular session in the library of the college, at Holland, Mich., April 28th, 1886, at 10.30 A. M.

The Board of Superintendents of the Western Theological Seminary will meet at the same time and place as above, to conduct the annual examinations. The closing exercises of the seminary will be held April 29th, at 7.30 P. M., in the Second Reformed church of Holland, when Rev. P. Lepeltak will deliver the annual address to the students.

P. MOERDYKE, S. C.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF ALBANY will meet in regular session in the Reformed church at Herkimer, N. Y., on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 8 o'clock P. M. Delegates proposing to attend will please notify C. L Avery, Chairman of Committee of Entertainment. In the absence of the preacher elected for special sermon, the Rev. Dr. Wortman will by special request preach; subject, "AGAPE—The Christian Love."

J. W. BEARDSLEE, Stated Clerk.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF CHICAGO will meet in regular session in the First Reformed Church of Chicago, on Wednesday, May 5th, 1886, at 10.30 A. M. At 4 P. M. of that day Revs. J. S. Joralmon and J. F. Zwemer will deliver addresses on Domestic Missions, which will be followed by a free discussion of one hour. P. MOERDYKE, S. C.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in the Reformed Church of Lafayette, on Communipaw avenue, corner of Pine street, Jersey City, on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 3 o'clock P. M. Rev. Thos. C. Easton, D.D., will preach the Synodical sermon on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday evening Rev. E G. Read, of Somerville, will give a discourse on "Prevalent Forms of Sabbath Desecration and the Best Means of Arresting the Evil." Delegates will please send notice of intention to attend to Rev. Wm. R. Duryee, the pastor of the church, saying whether they expect to pass the night in Jersey City. Local trains on the N. J. Central R. R. stop at Communipaw station, near the church. Trains on the Newark and N. Y. R. R. stop at Lafayette station. Horse cars from Jersey City Ferry pass two blocks from the church.

CHAS. H. POOL, Stated Clerk.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF NEW YORK will meet in regular session on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 3 o'clock P. M., in the Reformed Church of Newburgh, N. Y. The retiring President, the Rev. Herman C. Berg, of College Point, L. I, will preach the sermon on the evening of the first day; the communion of the Lord's Supper to be administered after the sermon.

The following are the papers to be read: "The Relation of Miracles to the Laws of Nature," by Rev. John H. Oerter, D.D., of New York; "The Inspiration of the Scriptures," by Rev. Charles W. Fritts, of Fishkill-on-Hudson; "Probation,", by Rev. Stephen D. Noyes, of Kingston.

Trains leave New York for Newburgh as follows: West Shore R. R., from foot of Jay street, 11.05 A.M.; from foot of West 42d street, 11.25 A. M.; Hudson River R. R., from Grand Central Depot, 11 o'clock A. M. These trains will bring brethren to Newburgh in time for dinner at 1 30 P. M. There are trains also down on both sides of the river reaching Newburgh at about the same hour. DANIEL VAN PELT, S. C.

DELEGATES intending to be present at the session of the Particular Synod of New York will please send their names to John F. Van Nort, 48 Ann street, Newburgh, N. Y.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK made the following arrangements for the installation of Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., as pastor of the First Reformed Church of Newark: Service on the evening of Thursday, April 29th; the Rev. Dr. E. P. Terhune to preach the sermon; the Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor or Rev. A. V. V. Raymond to deliver the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Dr. David Waters or Rev. Henry Vehslage to deliver the charge to the people.

HENRY VEHSLAGE, Stated Clerk.

THE address of the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., of Nyack, N. Y., will be No. 1517 North 10th street Philadelphia Pa., after April 1st.

CORRESPONDENTS will hereafter please address Rev. Wm. Moerdyk at Pella, Iowa.

CORRESPONDENTS will address Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., at 15 Clinton avenue, Newark, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address the Rev. Abrm. R. Van Nest, D.D., at 208 Fifth avenue, New York.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the Bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, became greatly debilitated, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

IMPROVED

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored.—C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and, at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—Philip Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but gave me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK

BARLOW'S INDICO BLUE. Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. S. S. WILTBERGER, Prop. 239 N. Second St. Phil. Pa.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX 853 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

RIDLEYS'

Grand, Allen and Orchard Sts., N. Y.

Straw Goods.

Without doubt the largest stock in this city. One entire floor devoted to Trimmed and Untrimmed hats.

EVERY SHAPE AND COLORING

In Round Hats, Turbans, Small Bonnets, etc.

200 Dozen Misses' Fancy Variegated Milans, 59c.; elsewhere, 98c.

Fancy Bonnets in Tuscan and Italian Straws, 59c., 69c., 79c., and up.

Fine Assortment Beaded Bonnets, including Skeleton Frames, at 74c., 88c, 98c., $1.10, up to $5.50.

MISSES' TRIMMED HATS.

The Priscilla, in Plain and Mixed Straw, Trimmed Silk Velvet Ribbon and Pompon, at $3.49.

The Priscila, in Pearl Straw, Pompon and Cord Trimmings, $1.24.

The Belle, High Crown, Silk Cord and Satin Ribbons, $1.38.

The Rescue, in Mixed Straw, Trimmed Ribbon and Buckle, 89c. each.

Over 500 Styles in School Hats in Sailors, Pokes, and Round Hats, Fully Trimmed, at 25c., 35c., 49c., 59c., 69c., up.

DRESS GOODS

All the Novelties the Season has Produced can be Found in this Department. We are also offering the following inducements:

42-inch Wool-Filled English Serges with Fancy Side Band at 25c. per yard, that are actually selling at 40c.

Double-Width Fancy Plaids, 25c.

Wool-Filled Black and White Cheviot Stripes. 12½c.

40-inch Fancy Silk-Striped Momie Cloths, 49c.; worth 75c.

Combination Robes.

Combination Robes with Boucle Borders, $6; Regular Price being $8.

4,000 Embroidered Robes, White, Ecru, Fancy, and Neutral Colors, ranging in prices from $1.50 to $15; while the Prices will be Found Low, the Assortment will also be Found Superior to Any.

Handsome Assortment in all the Cotton Goods Novelties.

PARASOLS

In Almost Innumerable Number, showing all the New Styles for Spring and Summer, Carriage, and all the Different Mountings.

COSTUMES

For Ladies and Misses.

As was shown at our opening last week, the selection offered in this department excels by far that offered in any other suit department in this city. No other house displays the assortments to be found at all times, while a great difference will be discovered in prices and afford a large saving.

ALL-WOOL LACES,

In all widths and colors; also in combinations.

These goods were bought during the past week at auction, where the sale was peremptory, and we are now offering the various widths at less

THAN THE ACTUAL DUTY PAID BY THE IMPORTER.

Flouncings, widths that have been selling at $8.50 per yard, we offer at $2.50.

Ridley's Fashion Quarterly

And Price-List contains a full and complete catalogue of our entire stock.

SINGLE NUMBER, 15c., OR 50c. PER ANNUM.

ORDERS BY MAIL SOLICITED.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 311½ to 321 Grand St.,
56 to 70 ALLEN ST., 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST.,
NEW YORK.

The Church.

Show Us the Father.

SHOW! Can He show
To mortal eye
What mortal eye was never made to see?
Can man the Father of eternity
By vision know?

Crimson and gold
Of early dawn,
Topaz and emerald and amethyst,
In radiant flashes through the sunset mist,
He can unfold;

The stars of snow,
The pearls of dew,
Chalice of flower, cedar of Lebanon,
Mountain of lightning-riven rock whereon
The sun-rays glow;

In time of spring,
A dainty shred
Of sky, wrought deftly for the bluebird's vest,
A gleam of light where orioles make their nest,
And sit and sing;

Love's angel face,
The tender-eyed
And delicate, lit with the sweet soft rays
Of mother fondness, all life's weary days,
God's gift of grace;

These patiently
He showeth us.
What more? For that wild prayer, "Show me," he chid
The daring seer in the rock-cleft hid.
"Thou canst not see."

Yet mystery,—
Listen, O heart!—
"Not know me, and so long hast with me been?
He that hath seen me hath the Father seen."
Now dost thou see

That Christ hath trod,
With feet of love,
Wearily, our sad way on earth, that He,
By the dread sacrifice of Calvary,
Might show us God!

—Rev. Alexander R. Thompson, D.D., in Sunday School Times.

Celebration of Waldensian Emancipation.

ALMOST interesting meeting took place, on the 17th of February, at the (Scuola di Teologia) Theological College at Florence. The large hall or room was filled by an audience composed of Waldensians and members of the Church of the Valleys, brethren from other churches, and foreigners residing or staying in the far-famed city, to commemorate the emancipation of the venerated body who for centuries kept their lamps trimmed and burning, bright and clear, amid the Alpine fastnesses. The sight was a very animated one—one for mutual congratulation and full of hope for the future, as well as for profound gratitude for the past. All who know the history of these patriotic Christians will feel that the tri-colored cockade presented to them on the occasion by Miss Martin was an emblem which they richly deserved to wear. No Italian has been more enthusiastic for Italian unity and liberty than the inhabitants of the valleys of Piedmont. For their country and for true liberty did the Waldensians struggle and strive, when that very country almost denied them their very existence—civil and religious. The festival was opened by a company of students and ladies leading in the well-known hymn of Martin Luther, "Ein feste burg;" after which Professor Geymonat ascended the tribune, and briefly reviewed the progress that Italy had made in religious freedom and in the work of evangelization from the auspicious year of 1848 up to the present time. The choir then sang a hymn, very dear to the Valdesi, "Le retour de l'Exit," which was followed by the reading of a poetic composition entitled "Al Pra del Forno," centre and heart of the Waldensian Valleys. After refreshments, Doctor E. Comba, another of the professors, alluding to the meeting of district presbyteries which that very day had commenced sitting, and during whose conference the question of union was to be ventilated and discussed, said that it might well be stated at this moment that in times far back the old Waldensian Church had essayed the project of union with other churches in Rome which had ceased to be in communion with the Papal body. This fact, he said, authentic documents undeniably prove; and he likewise showed how these united efforts in matters of evangelization were productive of great good in the service of the truth. Sig. A. Mielle called to mind, very opportunely, that last year was the two hundredth anniversary of the "terrible year,"—a year in which the Valdesi were driven into exile by Victor Amadeus II., Duke of Savoy; and related, in touching words, the miseries and sufferings of the ancestors of the Waldensians of the present day, and how they were hospitably and warmly received by those countries beyond the Alps. Professor Revel said that there could be no doubt that the Duke of Savoy was urged on, and, as it were, forced into persecution, by French despotism, not daring to resist the will of that superstitious monarch, Louis XIV., seeing the unfortunate position in which he was placed in connection with him. For, as a matter of history, it is well known that when the Valdesi appeared before their sovereign after their restoration to their homes, that potentate said to them, "You have but one God and one Prince to serve; serve God and your Prince faithfully. Up to this time we have been enemies; henceforth we shall always be friends. Other causes than those supposed were the causes of your misfortunes; but if, from henceforth, you will be faithful to me, I will be faithful to you, and as long as I have a piece of bread, I will share it with you." This most interesting and delightful reunion was brought to a close by the singing of another Waldensian melody, called "Le Serment de Sibard." May God ever enable this noble band of Christians to celebrate the conflicts of the past under circumstances as merciful and gracious as they were on the evening of the 17th of February, 1886.—Evangelical Christendom.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

Lesson 5, Second Quarter.

M. Jesus at the Well.....John 4: 1-26.
T. The Wells of Salvation.....Isa. 12: 1-6.
W. Thirsting for God.....Ps. 42: 1-11.
T. A Thirsty Land.....Ps. 63: 1-11.
F. Living Fountains.....Rev. 7: 9-17.
S. The Water of Life.....Rev. 22: 1-21.
S. Incense and Pure Offering.....Mal. 1: 1-11.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

May 2d.—"Jesus at the Well."—John 4: 5-26.

Golden Text.—"God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."—John 4: 24.

Central Truth.—"Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."—Rev. 22: 11.

INTRODUCTION.

AFTER his first visit to Jerusalem as Messiah Jesus spent several months in Judea, teaching and working miracles. This opening of His ministry coincided with the close of that of the Baptist. The disciples of John who had not changed their allegiance to Jesus were jealous of His rising influence, although it was explained by their teacher. This jealousy and the commotion it was likely to arouse in Judea made it wise for Jesus to transfer His labors to the more remote district of Galilee. The direct route lay through the hostile territory of the despised Samaritans, and fastidious Jews took a longer way in order to avoid the contamination of contact with the enemy, or the dangers of assault from them. Jesus feared neither the contamination nor the danger; but took the most direct road in order to bring light to a darkened community.

THE LESSON.

I. JESUS THE SUPPLIANT.—VS. 5-9.

V. 5.—"Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar." This city, or more properly village, was situated near the foot of Mt. Gerizim, associated with the blessings pronounced upon those who should obey the law of God. Some have thought it the same as Shechem, but that town seems to lie too far from the well to agree with the details of the story. The Jewish tradition identifies this tract with the portion above his brethren which Jacob gave to Joseph.

V. 6.—"Jacob's well was there." This well has been found and is probably the best identified of all the localities associated with the life of Jesus. "Jesus being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well." The time was either noon, according to Jewish notation, or six in the evening, according to the Roman method, which John seems to have employed. In either case the long foot-journey of the earlier part of the day was sufficient to tire Him who was "very man."

V. 7.—"There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water." Of the district, not the city of Samaria. She may have been at work in a field near by, and have come for a jar of water to take home with her at the close of the day's work. "Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink" Are we to suppose that Jesus was so thirsty that He could not wait for His disciples to return? Rather does it seem that He asked this favor in order to prepare the way for granting a blessing. So Jesus stands at the door of hearts knocking as a suppliant that He may give as God.

V. 8.—"His disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat." This entire narrative seems to come from the pen of an eye-witness of the whole scene, and it is not improbable that John had tarried with the Master while the rest went after food.

V. 9—"How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me?" This query is emphasized by three considerations: this was a woman, and the Jewish prejudices forbade a Rabbi to be seen speaking even to his own wife in public; she was a sinful woman, although her own conscience had not yet been awakened, still Jesus must have known her character; and she was a Samaritan. No Jew would ask a kind office from a Samaritan, or grant one, no matter how needy the person might be. Yet Jesus was humbly seeking help from this sinful woman of Samaria.

II. JESUS THE GIVER.—VS. 10-15.

V. 10.—"Jesus answered and said unto her." Without stopping to argue concerning these prejudices, or to press His own request for water, Jesus hastens to take advantage of her aroused curiosity to place Himself before her in the light of one who had favors to bestow rather than as a suppliant. "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee give me to drink." The gift of God is the grace that bringeth salvation, through Jesus Christ. This moment was the golden opportunity of a life-time, and Jesus would have the woman profit by it. "He would have given thee living water." The term living water was applied to a flowing spring, but in the Gospel we have been made familiar with its spiritual meaning. To the woman it simply meant a pure and pleasant water, superior to that of even Jacob's well.

V. 11.—"Thou hast nothing to draw with." The apparent absurdity of Christ's statement aroused her interest more deeply, and she seeks further explanations.

V. 12.—"Art thou greater than our father Jacob?" The Samaritans claimed to be descendants from the patriarchs, and some of them doubtless had Jewish blood in their veins. She little imagined that the answer to her question was, A greater than Jacob is here.

V. 13.—"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again." Physical wants are constantly recurring, and renewed labor is necessary to meet them. No matter how refreshing the water may be, it can only relieve, can never destroy thirst.

V. 14—"Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never thirst." The spiritual needs of a believer are so effectually anticipated that he is not conscious of lack at any time, or if he is the fault is his own. "The water that I shall give him, shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." The indwelling Spirit furnishes the soul with an immediate supply of every want. This well is a springing fountain; its waters are ever fresh and satisfying, and always ready wherever the believer may be.

V. 15.—"Sir, give me this water." This woman, who a moment before hesitated about granting a favor, now asks a greater boon. Jesus had skilfully led her out of prejudice and indifference to ask something from Him. Behold she prayeth. Her request is for earthly good, but still it is a request directed to Jesus.

III. JESUS THE PROPHET.—VS. 16-19.

V. 16.—The time had come to direct this woman's thoughts to her spiritual needs, and no way was more direct than to disclose the festering spot in her life. "Go, and call thy husband." By these words Jesus recalled her to her true condition. He knew the story of unfaithfulness culminating in open profligacy which constituted the career of this woman.

V. 17.—"I have no husband." Something in the bearing of this stranger made it impossible for her to attempt to deceive Him, although she did not yet see the necessity for a full confession. "Thou hast well said, I have no husband." Her statement was true but not complete. Neither the changes of the past nor the iniquity of the present had been acknowleged, so Jesus proceeds to show her herself.

V. 18.—With the firm hand of a surgeon he lays bare wounds of sin that He may heal them. The thin veil of silence is removed and the woman sees herself a condemned sinner standing in the presence of One who needeth not that any should tell Him what is in man.

V. 19.—"Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet." Step by step she has been led from prejudice to inquiry, from granting to asking a favor, from the idea of an enemy to the recognition of a prophet.

IV. JESUS THE MESSIAH.—VS. 20-26.

V. 20.—"Our fathers worshipped in this mountain." The dead soul of this sinful woman has felt the quickening touch of the Son of God. To her mind the great religious question is that which was so bitterly disputed between Samaritan and Jew concerning the place and forms of worship. Her religion was external.

V. 21.—"The hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father." Religion was no longer to be associated with a sacred place, or confined to a certain ritual. The world was henceforth to be God's footstool, and all believers His priests.

V. 22.—"Ye worship ye know not what." The Samaritans received only the books of Moses as Scripture, and therefore were ignorant of all that God had revealed through His prophets. "We know what we worship" As between Samaritan and Jew Jesus decides in favor of His people, but does not dwell upon the mooted question. "Salvation is of the Jews." From Jerusalem shall flow the stream that shall water the whole earth.

V. 23.—"The hour cometh and now is." It was part of Christ's mission to break down all walls of separation except that between the evil and the good. From the time of His advent religion assumed a higher and more spiritual position in the world.

V. 24.—"God is a spirit." Although this was not a new truth, yet it had been sadly ignored, even by God's people. A spirit cannot be limited as to his blessings, and therefore his worshippers are not to be confined to place or ceremony.

V. 25.—"I know that Messias cometh; when he is come, he will tell us all things." The Samaritans were anticipating a Messiah, and had perhaps more correct ideas of the nature of His work than the Jews. It is possible that a wonder was beginning to arise in her heart, If this should be He!

V. 26.—"I that speak unto thee am he." Without hesitation and with the utmost clearness, Jesus declares a truth to this woman which none of His own countrymen had as yet been fitted to receive.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. The weariness of Jesus assures us of His sympathy.

2. The request of Jesus assures us of the possibility of serving Him.

3. The offer of Jesus assures us that we may have this living water.

4. The knowledge of Jesus assures us of the impossibility of hiding anything from Him.

5. The teaching of Jesus assures us that true worship is always acceptable to God.

6. The mission of Jesus assures us of eternal life through Him.

7. The success of Jesus assures us of a reward if we labor in His name and by His methods.

Giving and Living.

FOREVER the sun is pouring its gold
On a hundred worlds that beg and borrow;
His warmth he squanders on summits cold,
His wealth on the homes of want and sorrow.
To withhold his largess of precious light
Is to bury himself in eternal night.
To give
Is to live.

The flower shines not for itself at all,
Its joy is the joy it freely diffuses;
Of beauty and balm it is prodigal,
And it lives in the light it freely loses.
No choice for the rose but glory or doom,
To exhale or smother, to wither or bloom.
To deny
Is to die.

The seas lend silvery rays to the land,
The land its sapphire streams to the ocean;
The heart sends blood to the brain of command,
The brain to the heart its lightning motion;
And over and over we wield our breath
Till the mirror is dry and images death.
To live
Is to give.

He is dead whose hand is not open wide
To help the need of a human brother;
He doubles the length of his lifelong ride
Who of his fortune gives to another;
And a thousand million lives are his
Who carries the world in his sympathies.
To deny
Is to die.

—T. V., in The Sheltering Arms.

Sam Jones on Sunday Desecration.

THERE was never a more innocent game than baseball, but America hadn't run it six months until it was one of the most corrupt things in all this world. The best proof, to my mind, that America is rotten, is that it can't take anything and run it six months without rotting it. When a man can get more for playing baseball for a season than you preachers for preaching the Gospel the year round, "there is sometning otten in Denmark." We are almost a nation of Sabbath breakers to-day. There is more sin in fun Sunday than in work Sunday. I can sort of look over a fellow that is shoveling coal Sunday to get bread for Monday, but when a man will kick up his heels and run all over creation and desecrate the Sabbath day for nothing and board himself, he is mean sure enough.

About all America lacks now is a few more tails and a little more hair, and we could indeed have a nation of monkeys desecrating the Sabbath day.

THE warm sunshine and the gentle zephyr may melt the glacier which has bid defiance to the howling tempest; so the voice of kindness will touch the heart which no severity could subdue.—Herder.

THAT distinguished and excellent judge, Lord Mansfield, once observed "True popularity is not popularity which is followed after, but the popularity which follows after

Two Cases in Virginia.

IN 1884 the mails brought to Philadelphia a grateful letter from a gentleman of Lynchburg, Va., who told the story of the cure of his daughter by the use of the Compound Oxygen Treatment after being a sufferer from Inflammatory Rheumatism, beginning in her fourth year and lasting nine years. His letter was as follows:

"DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. Dear Sirs:—My daughter has been using your Compound Oxygen for five weeks. Within a week, she began to show signs of improvement; since then her recovery has been remarkable. I have never seen anything to equal it. The action of the heart is quiet and soft; there has been no sign of rheumatism; she sleeps sweetly all night; has a fine appetite; has gained many pounds of flesh, and has considerable color; can walk all about the house, and has paid two or three visits in the neighborhood.

"Very respectfully, C. V. WINFREE."

About the time this young lady was finding relief from her inflammatory rheumatism, another lady suffering from consumption began the treatment. She had tried other remedies without success, and the prospects for her future were gloomy indeed.

In addition to her lung troubles she was a sufferer from curvature of the spine. Now, she can write herself a comparatively healthy woman, and the happy wife of the mayor of that city. Her story is told partly by her husband and partly in a letter from herself. We give her husband's letter below:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, LYNCHBURG, Dec. 15, 1885.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. Dear Sirs—In stating what your Compound Oxygen treatment has accomplished for my wife, I am discharging a debt which I feel I owe to suffering humanity.

My wife has long been in delicate health, and since her seventeenth year has been suffering from a curvature of the spine. This greatly weakened her and occasioned much pain and excessive nervousness. Notwithstanding this she further exhausted her strength and prostrated her health by the usual round of pleasures of the fashionable world: late hours, parties, operas, and above all the german. The result of this course was that her health was completely prostrated, her vitality exhausted, and when on a Northern trip in the summer of 1882, she contracted a deep cold, it settled on her lungs, and consumption was soon after the result.

During the early fall of 1882, she began coughing considerable, and finding that she was fast losing her strength and flesh, early in January, 1883, Mrs. Manson, then Miss Field, set out from her home in Culpeper, together with her aunt and Dr. Rixey, for Philadelphia. She was then excessively nervous, could not speak louder than a whisper, and was unable to sleep at all. She saw one of the leading allopathic physicians of Philadelphia, who told her she had consumption, and that she must leave at once for Aiken, S. C. By the middle of the month she was on her way there, and did not return until May. Though seemingly benefited for some considerable period during her stay, she had repeated spells which threw her back so much that when she returned she was much worse than when she left home. Soon after her return she went on to New York and consulted an eminent physician there, who advised the phenic acid treatment, which she continued to use during the following summer, notwithstanding its extreme severity, for some time with apparent success, though in the Fall it seemed to lose its effect and she discontinued its use, returning to Aiken about the middle of November, 1884. It was then she first used the Compound Oxygen, and when I went to see her at Christmas I found her considerably improved. I was prejudiced against the remedy, and advised her discontinuing its use, which in a great measure she did. From the beginning of the year 1884 she lost ground, till by February she was ill. I was telegraphed for and found her suffering greatly from biliousness, fever and great weakness. I returned home to attend to some business after a six days' stay, only to be again telegraphed for. When she returned in May she was distressingly weak and thin, and though she improved some during the summer, she never was half so well as she had been the year before, and about the middle of September she took a violent cold, which confined her to her bed and promised very speedily to end her life. Indeed for one or two days we thought she would not live to see another; she did, however, rally slightly, and towards the end of the month insisted on going to Philadelphia to try the Compound Oxygen treatment. I opposed the plan because I thought she could only live a very little while longer, under any circumstances, and a trip to Philadelphia would only wear out the sooner her little remaining strength; besides I did not think the Compound Oxygen had done her any good at home, and I did not think she stood any better chance by going there, but she clung to the idea as though it were her last hold on life. Finally I consented to her going only because I thought she would be better satisfied, and not because I had the slightest hope of her improvement. In her first letter after seeing Dr. Starkey, (it was only a few lines scrawled with a pencil) she wrote me that Dr. Starkey said she would have to stay there two weeks before he could say whether the treatment would benefit her. Before the time had elapsed she was feeling much stronger, and her appetite was far better, and by Christmas she could walk a dozen blocks. She remained in Philadelphia till April, having during that time but one bad turn, which, however, threw her back considerably. Since her return my wife has used the Home Treatment with continued benefit. Her weight in January, 1884, when she had been with you three months, was ninety-five and a half pounds, and that was a great improvement on her condition when she went to you. The last time she was weighed here her weight was one hundred and fifteen pounds. When she went to Philadelphia she could scarcely walk across the floor without assistance: she can now walk a mile and ride horseback for five miles. She then coughed nearly all the time, with a good deal of expectoration. Her cough is now much better, though it still clings to her, and the quantity of expectoration is comparative small.

Her great improvement seems to me almost miraculous, and I attribute it to the Compound Oxygen, aided by a systematic, prudent life, and the abandonment of drugs.

I fear I have written much more fully than you desired I should, but I have hoped that what I have said would be of some benefit to suffering humanity. With kindly remembrance, I am

Very truly, your friend,
N. C. MANSON, JR.

There are very many people interested in the treatment which has done so much for these two ladies in Virginia. If you wish fuller information send to DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, for their treatise, which is sent free to every applicant.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

In Nervous Diseases.

Dr. HENRY, New York, says: "In nervous diseases, I know of no preparation to equal it."

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
CHURCH FURNITURE
INTERIOR DECORATIONS

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION,

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

Sanitary Science teaches us to promptly remove all decomposing materials from our dwellings; of more importance is the removal of the waste products of the human body by means of the skin, kidneys and bowels. The slightest irregularity in the action of these important organs should be at once checked by the use of TARRANT'S EFFERVESCENT SELTZER APERIENT. This valuable family medicine CURES CONSTIPATION by thoroughly cleansing the bowels and establishing a regular habit. It acts gently upon the kidneys, opens the pores of the skin and thus assists nature to throw off all morbid humors. It is economical in price, pleasant to the taste, gentle in action. Sold by druggists everywhere.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, known three times as much as I am and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years secured by Mortgage Loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N. Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin mounted for Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

"Like as it were a moth that fretteth the garment," so will the free alkali, to which many powerful soaps owe their strength destroy your clothing. Professor Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The Ivory Soap is of remarkable purity . . . . . as a laundry soap it has no superior."

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

O. D. CASE'S SONS,

837 BROADWAY,

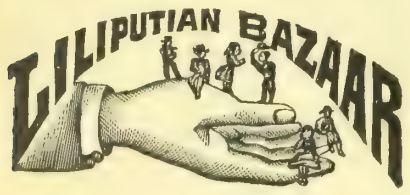
Corner Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK.

Previous to removal on May 1st, to No. 4 E. 20th St., (bet. Broadway and 5th Ave.), are offering a carefully selected stock of

WALL PAPERS

At Very Attractive Prices.

HATS AND CAPS.



A boy cannot be well dressed unless the style of his Hat or Cap is right, and as the Hat stores where men's goods are the predominating feature pay very little attention to the requirements of Boys, our large assortment of EXCLUSIVE STYLES and VERY LOW PRICES will be found particularly attractive.

Hats and Caps to match our Suits and Overcoats a Specialty. We keep the best assortment of EVERYTHING from HATS TO SHOES, for BOYS and GIRLS at very low prices for reliable goods.

BEST & CO.

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN

UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains n

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

Established Thirty Years.

CHAS. P. ROGERS & CO.,

246 and 248 Sixth Ave.,

Corner 16th Street, NEW YORK.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Fine Bedding, Spring Beds, Etc.,

Brass and Iron Bedsteads,

Down Quilts, Cushions, Etc.

Church Cushions a Specialty.

INSTITUTIONS FURNISHED.

Branch, 89 S. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

Guaranteed 7% Mortgages,

IN KANSAS, MISSOURI, IOWA, AND NEBRASKA.

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS

INVESTED IN A FOUR PER CENT. GOVERNMENT BOND

At the present market value will produce in five years, compound interest, $180.54, while the same amount invested for a similar period in our Seven Per Cent. Guaranteed First Mortgages will net the investor $402.55.

Twenty-five years' experience has proved them more than safe at all times when judiciously selected.

1. We invariably inspect the security before making a loan.
2. We never loan more than one-third the present cash value.
3. We loan only on first mortgages.
4. We accept none but perfect titles.
5. We loan only to good borrowers.
6. We keep all insurance policies in force.
7. We see that all taxes are kept paid.
8. Our loans are made only on well-improved farms.
9. Our loans net investors seven per cent., payable semi-annually without charge or expense to them.
10. We guarantee the prompt payment of interest.
11. Our coupons are cashed at maturity by the First National Bank of New York.
12. We guarantee the payment of the principal.

THE EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO.,

New York: 135 and 137 Broadway.—Boston: 23 Court Street.—Philadelphia, Pa., 112 South Fourth Street.—Kansas City, Mo.

CARPETS

The Most Complete and Elegant Line of Novelties Ever Offered to the Public at Prices to Suit the Most Economical.

This Entire Week

WE OFFER

Large Lines in all the Different Grades at Less than the Manufacturer's Cost of Production.

500 Pieces Best Quality Moquettes.
Pieces Best 5-Frame Body Brussels.
Pieces Best All-Wool Ingrains.

This Season's Styles, to Close Out Quickly, at the Lowest Prices Ever Known.

Remnants Sheet Oil Cloths, 1, 2, and 3 Yards Wide, and from 1 to 4 Yards Long, at about One-Half the Regular Price.

Novelties in

MATTINGS,

Just Landed, White and Red Check, from $5.00 per Roll. Fine Fancy Patterns from $8.00 per Roll.

UPHOLSTERY.

50 Pieces Silk Brocatelles from $4 per yard.
100 Pieces Silk Tapestries from $1 per yard.
50 Pieces Silk Plushes from $1.60 per yard.
200 Pieces Mohair Plushes from $1.25.
75 Pieces Petit Points from 85 cts per yard.

Great Reductions in All Kinds of Furniture Coverings.

Window Shades, [a Specialty.]

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,

SIXTH AV. AND 13TH ST., NEW YORK.

SILKS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

OFFER THIS WEEK IN FINE IMPORTED SILKS: 100 Pieces 32-inch COLORED GROS GRAINS AT $1 PER YARD; PRICE HAS BEEN $1.50. 75 Pieces of 21-inch GOLD SATIN RHADAMES AT 85c.; REDUCED FROM $1.25. 100 Pieces of 24-inch BLACK SATIN DAMASSES AT 85c.; MARKED DOWN FROM $1.25. 100 Pieces 24-inch FAILLE FRANCAISE AND SATIN PEKINS IN "TWO COLORS" AT $1.50; THEY ARE EXCELLENT VALUE FOR $2.50.

AN EXAMINATION IS INVITED.

Broadway and 11th St., New York.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.
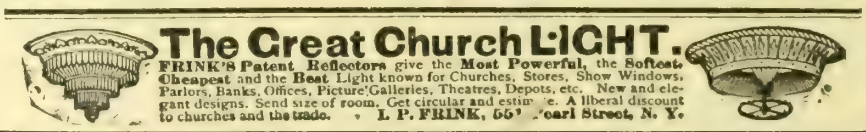
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa



The Great Church LIGHT.

FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 55 Pearl Street, N. Y.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. 7% INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity. 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

Arnold, Constable & Co

CHOICE PARIS STYLES.

Striped, Plaid and Figured Silks and Velvets, Beaded, Escurial, Lace Brocade and Tinsel Effects in Crepes and Gazes. Plain Colored Crepe de Chines in great variety. Colored Sicilliennes, Faille Francais and Black Silks of the best grades. Fresh assortments of Plain, Colored and Printed Pongees, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

WARREN WARD & CO

ARTISTIC AND RELIABLE AND DURABLE

Furniture

6 & 8 East 20th St. N.Y.

To meet the demand for Cheap Goods for Country Homes, by increasing the capacity of our warerooms, we have added a special line of LOW PRICE SUITES for BED-ROOMS, PARLORS and DINING-ROOMS. At the same time will maintain our reputation for GOOD GOODS. We also call special attention to double cane goods for piazzas and sitting-rooms in Seaside Houses and Country Hotels

First class goods of our own exclusive designs and manufacture, in unique pattern and fine finish, at moderate prices.

WARREN WARD & CO.

6 and 8 E. 20th St., New York.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

Still Leading.

We show above the latest addition to our line of ranges. Unique in design and construction; large ovens; Duplex grate.

Send for our illustrated Catalogue and prices of Ranges, Furnaces, etc. Also our pamphlet "Fireside and Kitchen, Ancient and Modern."

BARSTOW STOVE COMPANY,

230 Water Street, New York.
56 Union Street, Boston.
Providence, R. I.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 17. WHOLE No. 2909. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE GENERAL CATALOGUE OF RUTGERS COLLEGE has been received. This reminds us of some singular articles that appeared in one or two of the daily papers of this city a few weeks since, which reflected severely upon the management of the institution. We have inquired of a number of the Trustees, and learn that there is no foundation whatever for the offensive statements referred to. The College was never in a better situation in respect to finances, numbers or esprit de corps. The President and the Faculty are a unit in administration and discipline, and both have the entire confidence of the Trustees. The friends of Rutgers, therefore, need have no apprehension as to its welfare. It is doing its work with efficiency and success.

PROHIBITION has received a significant popular endorsement in Rhode Island. The Constitution requires that an amendment shall receive the vote of three-fifths of the citizens. The State has been carried for Constitutional Prohibition by one thousand votes over the necessary three-fifths. The correspondent of the Congregationalist writes: "The movement has been conducted outside the lines of all existing political parties. The Prohibition party was not allowed, as a party, to put itself forward as the special champion of the amendment. For the first time, therefore, in the history of the temperance reformation in the State, every voter felt at liberty to act as his judgment and conscience prompted, and that, whether he voted 'approved' or 'not approved,' it would have no effect upon the success of his party ticket." Just such an opportunity is desired by many citizens in other States, and is exceedingly desired in the State of New York.

Petitions, signed by thousands of citizens, have been sent to the legislature of New York, for an opportunity to vote for Constitutional Prohibition. Why is not the request granted? What right has the legislature to refuse it?

But in Rhode Island a Republican was nominated for the office of attorney-general by a majority of one. It was claimed that he owed the nomination to the liquor interest, which he had favored. The Democrats nominated a decided and tried temperance man, and, although long in the minority, elected him by the help of the temperance men. The people were outraged by the failure of the courts to deal with men violating the license laws.

A PAPER on the things learned from the evangelistic services of the past winter appears on the fourteenth page. The hope is cherished that it will prompt other pastors and also induce laymen to write their experience and conclusions for the INTELLIGENCER. One column and a half, containing 1,280 words, will be cheerfully set apart for this theme. Brevity in communications is desirable in order that the largest possible number may have an opportunity to contribute their opinions and reasons for them. Whoever writes too much deprives somebody else of his right. But the theme is very important, and a collation of experience is the first step toward correct conclusions. The religious aspect of the past year is peculiar. There has been a genuine revival here and there, the localities receiving a gracious benediction being widely separated. In some towns and cities, where judicious evangelists have labored faithfully, the results are small, have been a great disappointment. Why, it is hard to say. There is need of something also on the question, "How can the Church reach the non-church-going multitude?" Has any church succeeded in attracting that large portion of the population? If so, how was it done? This is one of the great matters it becomes the Church of this day to consider. The Church is here to win souls to Christ. Her duty is to convey the offers of Divine grace to every man and woman in this land, to lead each one to accept them, and to induce men to comply with the conditions on which they can become new creatures in Christ.

THE REV. SAM JONES, as a temperate correspondent of a contemporary testifies, uses frequently the slang of the street corners and of the bar-room. Mr. Moody, as is well known, received only a narrow education in his boyhood, and in his addresses makes disagreeable errors in pronunciation and grammar. To neither evangelist are these peculiarities an advantage. Their success is due to vivid presentations of truth, to their intense earnestness, to their definite and settled convictions, and to their evident devotion to the work in which God has engaged them. The common people heard our Lord gladly, and He spake as never man spake. It is said of the Earl of Shaftesbury, who was so beloved by the common people of Great Britain, that "he never forgot or allowed anyone else to forget that he was the Earl of Shaftesbury." Furthermore, Norman Lockyer has been lecturing successfully on astronomical themes to workingmen in London and has used scientific terms with considerable freedom. He had something to say, said it well and earnestly, and men listened.

A Chapter of History.

IN forming a judgment upon the strife between capital and labor, many men, whose memories go back to the events which made a profound impression forty-five years ago upon the hearts and consciences of those then active in public affairs, cannot divest themselves of the history of the struggle. They will estimate the action of both capital and labor now, by the action exhibited by each in the past and by its results heretofore. Now, the larger part of that history is discreditable and disgraceful to capital, much more so than to labor. Labor has been guilty of excesses, of rioting, of acts of violence and cruelty, but in many instances was driven to desperation by the oppression of capital, and by the protracted failure of every effort to obtain relief.

We are not writing to stir up strife or to embitter a conflict now in progress, but to produce facts which have been characteristic of the long contention and which ought not to be forgotten. The present is the child of the past. Human nature is the same in all periods. Labor and capital, like everything else, in their relations, their endeavors and their nature, are now very much what they have been.

It was only fifty-three years ago that Lord Shaftesbury became the champion in Parliament of the Ten Hours Bill. It had been introduced by Mr. M. T. Sadler and Mr. Richard Oastler in 1830, but the former lost his seat in 1833 and the charge of the bill came upon Lord Shaftesbury. The Earl died only last October, and the events now to be recalled are within the memory of many now living. To link the events with the present still more closely it is only necessary to say that Mrs. Browning's touching poem, "The Cry of the Children," was a truthful account of the terrible condition of the working classes in Great Britain, which the Ten Hours Bill was designed to relieve.

The wages paid in British factories were so inadequate that the husband was unable to support his family and it was necessary that the wife and children should also become operatives. So stern and bitter was the pressure imposed by capital that very young children were forced to engage in work which taxed their strength beyond endurance. They were constantly maimed and injured by work and the machinery. Lord Ashley visited the factory districts and made an investigation for himself. He wrote of one district,—a fair sample of many: "In Bradford especially the fruits of long and cruel toil were most remarkable. The cripples and distorted forms might be numbered by hundreds, perhaps by thousands. A friend of mine collected a vast number together for me; the sight was most piteous, the deformities incredible. They seemed to me, such were their crooked shapes, like a mass of crooked alphabets." Wages were at a starvation point, and a family could not live without the work of the mother and children. Nor were these physical evils and sufferings the greatest. They were surpassed by the moral degradation of the operatives. A family occupied one room. The pay of all able to work did not enable it to hire more than one room. Not infrequently and of necessity a married son or daughter also lived in this one room, with the father and mother and brothers and sisters. The deep moral degradation to which these groups descended cannot be described. The London Times, speaking of the condition of these people in an obituary of the Earl of Shaftesbury published last October, said, "There were everywhere a dreadful reality of oppression and a fearful sense of injustice, of intolerable misery and of intolerable wrongs, more formidable than any causes which ever led a people to insurrection."

In 1840 Lord Ashley took up the wrongs of the women and children employed in the coal mines of Great Britain. Their condition seems now almost incredible; in recollection it seems like a bad dream, a torturing nightmare. But it was a fearful reality. Nothing more disgraceful, no record of more diabolical cruelty, can be found anywhere in human history. In the collieries wages also were so low that the women and children were compelled to work with the men in order to secure a very meagre living. Women and children were harnessed with chains to the cars and trucks as beasts of burden. Children as young as four years old were put at work. The destruction of life was fearful. The colliers were worse than savages. Their moral condition was still lower than that of the operatives in the factories.

This was what capital was doing in Christian England only forty years ago, in the country which was at that very time producing such men as Chalmers and Moffat and the Earl of Shaftesbury. And capital resisted to the utmost the endeavor to make the Ten Hours Bill a law. It said then just what it is saying now, and the remembrance of the arguments then used has led to this article. Capital said it could not afford to pay higher wages, it censured the attempt to meddle with its business, it demanded the right to manage its own affairs in its own way, it argued that to pay higher wages would be the ruin of trade, it made the most of every outbreak which resulted from the brutality which it had produced and was stubbornly maintaining. And the men concerned in these corporations were intelligent, refined, esteemed members of society, and, alas! too many of them were members of Christian churches

What is more strange, more incredible than all else, it was not until 1847 that this Ten Hours' Bill, somewhat curtailed in its beneficent provisions, obtained a majority in Parliament and became a law. Even then the provision confining the labor of children of tender years within the hours of six in the morning and six in the evening, was omitted, and it was not until 1853 that this humane clause became the law of Great Britain. In the light of such a history is it a wonder that when the Earl of Shaftesbury visited Manchester in 1859, seven thousand persons crowded upon him and actually kissed his hands.

Such an extreme injury is not now inflicted by employers and every man will hope that it never will be again among any Christian people. The power of the Golden Rule, "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them," and of the example of incarnate and crucified and atoning Divine Love has extended. But while observing the wrestle now in progress, it is impossible to banish from our minds the remembrance of the long conflict of twenty years in Great Britain.

A series of judicious editorials has appeared in successive numbers of Harper's Weekly, treating all sides with even-handed justice. That of the 24th, after describing the boycott as it deserves, as "the annihilation of individual freedom," a "new form of terrorism" seeking "to destroy its victims," a "crime against freedom, an outrage upon the American principle," concludes with these words:

"We are not saying that the boycotters are the only offenders. Public condemnation ought to fall upon combinations of capital against the public welfare quite as much as upon those of labor. A pool of great corporations to raise the price of any necessary article—bread, or coal, or salt, or sugar—is a crime against society as heinous as the combination of some workingmen to prevent other men from working. The power of organized and consolidated capital is one of the most threatening perils of modern society. The arbitrary will, whether of an individual or of an association, of a corporation or of a labor union, which is so situated that it can enforce its decrees, is simple tyranny, and justly alarms all thoughtful men. It is, therefore, a fact of the highest significance and encouragement that the leaders of the most extensive and powerful labor organization in the country declare that their methods are absolutely peaceful, and that they condemn violence and injustice. They will command general sympathy if in any emergency they add wise and timely warning to avoid the paths that lead to violence and injustice, and if they punish peremptorily and adequately all offenders. Corporate combinations of capital, on the other hand, are not tempted to break the law. Their offence is corrupting legislatures and courts. Their offence may be plainly much more dangerous to society than the open violation of the law. The strikers upon the Broadway Railroad may have been hasty or wrong. We do not say that they were. But we certainly say that their offence was venial compared with that of Sharpe and his confederates."

SCHOLARSHIP.—We have received from T. Whittaker a pamphlet entitled "An Easter Study in St. Peter," by Dr. Fuller, a professor in Berkeley Divinity School. It is on the much vexed text concerning "the spirits in prison," and is very remarkable for its tone of confident assurance. Most critics of reputation speak modestly, confessing the difficulties of the interpretation, but Dr. Fuller writes as if he had forever settled the question in favor of the view taken in the Authorized Version. His competency in the matter may be inferred from this specimen of his dialectics. On page 12 he quotes Paul's words to the Corinthians, "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and the spirit," and adds several "explanations." Two of these run thus:

"3. Flesh and spirit are, therefore, our whole humanity.

"4. As a consequence, 'flesh' includes 'spirit.'"

Which is just as if one should say, Before the war the free States and the slave States made up the United States. As a consequence the free States include the slave States.

The pamphlet is full of such atrocious non sequiturs. And yet at the end of it ten bishops unite in commending Dr. Fuller's previous discussion of this text as able and conclusive. If such be the accuracy of the teachers, what are we to think of the taught?

SCIENCE.—A modern writer says that the only effectual way to reconcile science and religion is to give religion a scientific basis. But religion has such a basis already. It rests upon divine revelation, and the fact of such revelation is abundantly proved. And this proof in its sphere is just as "scientific" as any branch of Physics is in its domain. If it be claimed that Biology or any other department of investigation gives results at war with Revelation, all that is necessary is to establish this claim, and the interpreters of Holy Scripture will see to the reconciliation. But there is no call to do this in the case of mere theories. Demonstrate your case first, and then it will be attended to. In the meantime put aside the nonsense about the war between science and religion.

"Old Colony" Papers.

AN OLD ORGAN.

III.

IT must not be inferred that Dr. Brownlee was a bigot, because he insisted that our Church should "be up and doing its own work in its own way." He was, on the contrary, a man of unusually broad sympathies and progressive spirit for that day towards moral and social reform. Some years before any temperance society had been formed upon a total abstinence pledge, and thirteen years before the Washingtonian movement began, the Magazine of the Reformed Church was advocating the entire disuse of liquor. It anticipated Mr. Bergh in denouncing cruelty to animals, and one of the first numbers published Dr. Chalmers' famous sermon on that subject, recently preached at Edinburgh. The Indian question was handled in a spirit as practical as it was philanthropic. Slavery was deplored and condemned, and the colonization method for its extinction was earnestly advocated. The secularizing of the Lord's day was as earnestly combatted as alas! it has still to be in this paper. Duelling, which was still fashionable, and almost imperative in public life,—Henry Clay and John Randolph having fought in that year (1826) and President Jackson being a notorious duellist,—was condemned in unsparing terms. On the amusement question among Christians, this trumpet gave no uncertain sound.

The undue facility of marriage, rather than of divorce, needed in those days to be antagonized. Gretna Green was then an actual institution,—or rather the "famous old Blacksmith," who acted as witness in the sole ceremony required by the Scottish law (namely, that "the man take the woman by the hand and say, 'This is my wife'"), and undertook to have the marriage attested before a magistrate. "This" (says our magazine) "makes the affair of a marriage of minors very easy, and gives every possible facility to those who elope with young boarding school misses, or young heiresses from England." It is needless to say that our Scotch "Domine" trains his Dutch gun upon this monstrous abuse and scandal. He keeps up a constant rattling discharge upon the communistic crusade of Robert Owen and Fanny Wright, which at that time seemed to be making great headway in this country and to be working much social demoralization. The theological world was violently exercised in those years, and for a great many later years, on the propriety of marriage with a deceased wife's sister. A large amount of space in the Magazine is taken up with the discussion, for it was long a burning question in our denomination till the Church had the wisdom to leave the disputed matter to the individual conscience of its members. It is rather amusing, however, in the light of results to read the lurid pictures, drawn by an almost frantic terror, of the consequences of letting down the Synodical bars. "We shall hear tales that will make our ears tingle,—of a lovely and accomplished girl rushing as she thought into an asylum opened to her by heaven itself, and finding too late that she has fallen into the clutches of a demon .. of a wife dying of a broken heart, her children weeping about her bed, not well knowing what has taken place yet feeling that some desolating whirlwind has come over them!"

There is an amount of purely theological matter, didactic and polemic, which would be fatal to a popular periodical to-day. Among the doctrines discussed are Antinomianism, Baptism, "Hopkinsianism" (Dr. Brownlee's bête noir, apparently), the Extent of the Atonement, the Second Advent, Episcopacy, and even Transubstantiation. The Editor had a pet animosity against what he calls the "heathenish and foolish" and even "idolatrous" form of taking a judicial oath by "kissing the book," and is able to show that both his natural and ecclesiastical ancestry (the Reformed Churches of Scotland and of Holland) know nothing of the kissing mode. The condition of all the Bibles I ever happened to see employed for such a purpose certainly sustains the good Doctor's position, on the ground of cleanliness if not of godliness. He gave a great deal of zealous attention to the movement of those days growing out of a revived interest in the people of Israel, and resulting in the "Society for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Jews." This seemingly absurd title will appear less circumlocutory when we are informed (as I have been from the pages of this magazine) that the original and special design of its incorporation was to protect converted Jews from insult and injury, both from their own brethren and from what we would now call the "anti-semitic" prejudices and wrongs of European nations. It was originally proposed to gather them into a colony in this western "asylum for the oppressed of all races."

We find the same old question discussed, which still exercises the wits and hearts of pastors and missionary societies: "How to add interest to the Monthly Concert, so that our people may not only be induced to come out but to take pleasure in attending." Dr. Brownlee's italics abound here. "Something ought to be done to stir us up in our concert of prayer.... ah! We often make a harangue on these occasions, without feelings, without ideas. We talk; and we say nothing. We pray; and the petitions come cold from out hearts; and fall, as bolts of ice, on the hearts of our hearers." There can be no doubt that we have improved on that deplorable state of things!

I have given the concluding sentences of the above extract partly to illustrate Dr. Brownlee's singular system of punctuation, as lavish as the journalistic punctuation of the present day is deficient. He perfectly reveled in colons and semi-colons, and dashes—sometimes written as a dotted line (....)—and exclamation points, and sowed his commas broadcast. I have seen single breathlessly unpunctuated sentences of the N. Y. Times, which in the Dr.'s "pointed" style would have drawn upon the "Rutgers Press" for at least a dozen marks illustrating the entire scope of the printer's case.

The Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church could hardly be called a literary magazine, and yet it was not a review, and certainly not a newspaper. It managed to give a pinch of every journalistic ingredient in its monthly dish of thirty-two pages. There was an occasional poem.* Dr. Brownlee himself wrote for it a striking poetical paraphrase of Job 4: 13–20. A favorite contributor of verses was "A. R. of New Jersey," wife of the late Rev. Dr. Benjamin C. Taylor. Other poems were signed "Moyren," understood to be by Mrs. Taylor's brother, the late Theodore Romeyn, Esq., of Detroit, the nom de plume being an anagram on the name "Romeyn." There was an interesting series of biographical sketches, both of famous historical characters and of

* A well-known hymn of Bishop Heber, who died at the very time when the first number of the magazine was published, is given in a form which shows how greatly improved it has become by shortening the second and fourth lines, and in other ways:

"By cool Siloam's shady fountain,
How sweet the lily grows;
How sweet the breath on yonder mountain,
Of Sharon's dewy rose!

"Lo! such the child, whose young devotion
The paths of peace has trod,
Whose secret soul's instructive motion
Tends upward to his God.

. . . . . .

"A little while, the bitter morrow
Of man's maturer age
Will shake the soul with cankering sorrow
And passion's stormy rage.

"Oh Thou! whose every year untainted
In changeless virtue shone,
Preserve the flowers thy grace has planted,
And keep them still thine own."

leading divines of our own Church, and a great many personal anecdotes. An admirable feature (and one much too rare, because difficult to obtain in our religious papers of to-day) was the narratives of pastoral and religious experience. Two of the most valuable articles in the four volumes are graphic histories of the Churches of Kingston and Schenectady, then about 170 and 150 years old respectively.

"Col. V." contributes some interesting reminiscences of public worship in the Dutch Church of New York sixty years before, deploring the "deviations from the practices of our good old Dutch ancestors." Among them were these. The morning service began at 10 o'clock, the bell having also been rung at 8 and 9 o'clock. The "fore-singer" commenced by reading a chapter and the Ten Commandments, and by singing a Psalm. During the singing, the Domine was expected to appear. After a "short mental prayer" with his hat before his eyes at the foot of the pulpit stairs, he would take his seat; and if he came late, the singing would proceed till he was ready to go on with his part. This was first a sentence or two of invocation, followed by the Salutation, and then the Exordium remotum—a sort of sampling of the good things to come in the sermon, which followed after a prayer. The discourse was again interrupted, after the introduction and statement of the divisions, by another invocation of the divine blessing and by the "collection." This latter was prefaced by a formal and godly appeal to the liberality of the people, during which the deacons stood before and facing the pulpit with their poles and bags in their hands.

After the collection, the Domine swung back to his sermon, which was now considered as fairly begun, for the fore-singer at this point set out the hour-glass. It might have been a relief if the preaching could have been still farther broken up, for provision had to be made for the turning of the glass and the setting it down in another spot as a testimony to the same. I can imagine the agonizing experiences of Young Holland as they watched those slowly wasting sands, if so be the lids had not closed over their bright eyes. But it was a resource, anyhow, to watch it, and make nice and curious calculations how near the hour-glass was to getting through!

Perhaps, if my audience are not tired out by these rather monotonous "organ" notes, I may occupy another paper in rummaging in the old magazine for some "Church News." F. N. Zabriskie.

The Hard Old Man.

"A hard old man," the townsfolk said,
"Yea, a hard old man is he;"
And sighed for the doleful life he led
In his lonely house by the sea.

A hard old man, with searching eye
And flowing beard of snow;
With never a kind word in reply
To the greeting of high or low.

With never a word or smile for any,
He lived to himself as a miser may;
And gave of his cheer not even a penny,
To enrich the world from day to day.

One night a gallant barque, storm-driven,
In winter's cold and gloom,
Her stout old timbers rent and riven,
Came onward to her doom.

Then up he rose, that hard old man,
With iron face and form:
And launched his boat upon the wave
In all that blinding storm.

And through the midnight, and the roar
Of breakers on the sand,
He rescued all that drowning crew
And brought them safe to land.

"'Twas a noble deed and nobly done,"
'Tis thus the townsfolk say
And the hard old man of yesterday
Is the "brave old man" of to-day.

—Helen Keith, in The Traveller.

A Spring Trip to Virginia.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

LEAVING Washington for Richmond, a fast train takes me in three hours over the battle-fields which it took our Union army more than that number of years to cross. Few scars of war remain. One brick building stands near the track with several great wounds in its side. The house where Stonewall Jackson died is pointed out. The woods of "the Wilderness" are still there. But the old battle-fields are now mostly cornfields, and scarcely a breastwork remains of the many that billowed all this region during the tempest of war.

The wounds of war are mostly healed in the hearts of the people also. In Richmond I dined with two Southern preachers, one an ex-Confederate. The other showed me through Libby Prison. They told me that not one in a thousand of the former slave-owners would have slavery back if they could. An old tobacco-planter at the hotel said, "Not one in ten thousand." It is fair to say, on the other hand, that a colored woman's comment on this remark was, "I wouldn't trust them." But the colored people of Virginia, as I saw them and conversed with many, are a jolly and contented people—their worst foe being the whiskey that has bound very many of them in a new slavery.

I rode for miles through their little farms, one of 250 acres owned by the negro himself, but most of them rented at about $1 per acre for farming land (with log cabin and corn bin) from the Old Dominion Land Company. Their crops are chiefly corn and peanuts. Those who work by the month get from $8 to $12 per month and board. I visited one of their schools in the woods, where a colored graduate of the Worcester High School was the sole teacher of all grades, from beginners to young women of twenty, to the number of one hundred and forty at the fullest, for which (five months in the year) he gets $25 per month and pays his own expenses.

The Hampton Institute supplies many of these teachers, who are taught a trade or two to use the other seven months of the year. The Institute is indeed "a school of civilization," which aims to lift up the young negroes of the country, far off from city schools, and the Indians also, by means of three great forces,—religion, education and industry. A military organization of all the young men gives an erect carriage, a firm step, a habit of prompt obedience, and by its court-martial provides for all cases of discipline—the students thus ruling themselves. The plan is, for the first year, for students to work by day and attend evening school; then in the second year there are four days at school and two at work each week. The need of negro education was emphasized when, at Yorktown, in sight of the monument, the capable negro who was managing Ford's great farm, where I saw the first growing vegetables of the season, in response to my question whether a shell wound in a neighboring chimney was made in the Revolution, asked: "How long ago was the Resolution?" Well, there was some "resolution" as well as revolution in those grand days, and similar resolution is needed in the fight which is raging on Virginia soil to-day—for local option.

Having seen the beginning of the Revolution, as far as the South was concerned, in the pew at Richmond, where Patrick Henry blew his bugle blast, not fearing to speak against a great evil because it was political and he was in a church, I saw the other end of the Revolution at the beautiful Yorktown monument. The town is equally interesting in connection with the late war, as it contains the most extensive earthworks I have seen anywhere, entirely surrounding the city as an earthen wall. At Newport News the battle of the "Monitor" and "Merrimac" rages again before one's imagination, and thence the traveller goes to Fortress Monroe and the Hampton Institute, taking all in one week, which seems a month, in the great historic scenes it calls up again to thought.

Itinerary for a week's Southern trip: Leave New York 8 A.M. Monday, by Penn. R. R, arriving in Washington in early afternoon; walk or ride to Washington Monument, then to Capitol and see both houses of Congress in session, and other parts of the Capitol; in the evening call on your representative, etc.; Tuesday forenoon visit Treasury and Dead Letter Office; at 11 A.M. leave for Richmond—getting brakeman, by a fee, to point out battlefields; arriving in Richmond shortly after noon; take carriage and go to church where Patrick Henry made his famous speech; then to Vanheen House, where many prisoners who escaped from Libby Prison were hidden; then to Libby Prison; then to Capitol; on Wednesday morning go from Richmond by Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. to Lee Hall; thence by carriage to Yorktown; then on to Newport News for Wednesday night and Thursday forenoon; then to Old Point Comfort at 11.20 A.M., visiting Hampton Institute for remainder of Thursday; Friday visit Fortress Monroe and take baths at Hygeia, and come back by Bay Line at 7 P.M. Friday, arriving in New York Saturday about 1 o'clock. Unlimited ticket from New York to Old Point Comfort, via Richmond, $14. Return by Bay Line, $8.50. Carriage hire and hotels will cost as much as one pleases to make them, making whole trip cost from $40 to $50.

"The Star; the Cross; the Rising" was written by Anna M. and not Emma M. Tooker

Another Side of the Strike.

REV. E F. FALES, pastor of the Congregational church at Palestine, Tex., gives the following facts, presenting a somewhat different aspect of the great strike from what is usually found in the papers:

1. There are 600 Knights of Labor in this city, of whom, in spite of all agreements on the part of railroad officials, some white laborers get only ninety-two cents a day in wages.

2. The colored people are among the most loyal Knights of Labor.

3. The saloon keepers have no use for the Knights of Labor.

4. The published reports express the first thoughts of merchants directly interested in the railroad.

5. The Mayor says that no single case of drunkenness or disorderly conduct has been brought before him during the past four weeks.

6. The citizens in mass meeting assembled unanimously desired concessions on both sides, but were told that the railroad company "would not arbitrate," and that the shops would be "closed up entirely unless protection was given."

7. Four hundred deputies were armed and paraded to keep the peace. The State Attorney-General was present, and arrangements were made to bring many more deputies on to the ground, although not so much as a finger had been raised in personal violence. I was asked to use in my pulpit the Riot Act to quiet a flock of which a trustee, deacon and the Sabbath-school superintendent were prominent Knights of Labor, as well as active, praying Christians. Many peaceable citizens were arrested. A colored man, member of the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor, was knocked down, kicked, and barely escaped being shot by deputies in the middle of the city.

8. Spite of all published statements to the contrary, Knights of Labor under present discrimination are discharged as such, or refused employment as such.

9. While all trains have been unmolested for five days, only three striking workmen are reported as having returned to work. They are not hindered, but the shops remain empty.—The Congregationalist.

THE ROOSEVELT HOSPITAL makes a detailed report of its work last year, the fourteenth year of its life, which proves that it is managed with excellent administrative ability, with faithfulness to the trust committed to the Directors by Mr. Roosevelt, and with great benefit to the sick and injured. At the beginning of the year there were 113 patients remaining under treatment, during 1885 the number received was 2,259, making the total number ministered to 2,372. Of these 1,602 were males and 770 females; 953 were Americans, 820 were born in Ireland, and 347 were Germans, the remainder being of various nationalities. Again, 306 patients paid full or part board, and 55 had private rooms. Of the patients 731 were cured, 1,005 improved, 218 received no real relief and 260 died. Besides 1,825 persons were treated in the Accident Room. The practice in the hospital included 937 surgical cases. The institution has also an Out-patient Department, and the new patients of the year in the medical division numbered 7,020, and those in the surgical division 6,473. It is plain that the hospital is doing a great deal of work, which is sufficient evidence that it has a good reputation or, in other words, is doing its work efficiently, for the sick and injured do not flock in such numbers to an institution not successful. The expenses of the year amounted to $79,723.56, or each patient cost $1.66 per day. But this total includes $10,691.26 spent on unusual repairs and $5,065 95 expended on the Out-patient Department. If these amounts are deducted, the outlay of the hospital proper is reduced to $63,966.35, or an outlay of $1.33 per day per patient. These figures show careful management, for in a city like this many of the hospital cases are severe ones, demanding constant attention. A number of pages of the report are filled with tables of cases, the diseases and injuries, the surgical operations, and the results of treatment. Many of our readers will feel a special interest in the Roosevelt Hospital because it has been created and endowed by a member of one of the old Dutch families of this city. And other such families may with propriety consider the increase of its usefulness, by an enlargement of the endowment. Five thousand dollars entitles the donor to nominate patients to a free bed in perpetuity, and three thousand dollars entitles the donor during life to nominate patients to a free bed. Adrian H. Muller is President; John M. Knox, Vice-President; James A. Roosevelt, Secretary, and Merritt Trimble, Treasurer. Rev. Alexander R. Thompson, D.D., is the chaplain.

Our Church.

Sad News.

Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef, D.D., last Sabbath evening attended the closing service in the First Reformed Church of Jersey City, which is here after to be incorporated with the Second Church, of which Dr. Van Cleef has been the faithful and beloved pastor since 1849. At that last and somewhat sorrowful service Dr. Van Cleef delivered an admirable address, one of the best of his life, judicious, tender and sympathetic, and marked by Christian and therefore wise counsel for the future. After the service was over he did not leave his seat in the pulpit, and was found to be somewhat unconscious. Physicians were summoned, he was carried to his home, and the decision was made known that he was partially paralyzed.

It is not necessary to say how Dr. Van Cleef is esteemed among us. As Stated Clerk of the General Synod, as a member for many years of the Board of Domestic Missions, and as a member year by year of important committees he has become well known by a large proportion of the members of our communion and by nearly if not quite all of the ministers, and the more thoroughly he has been known the more he has been esteemed. He is universally beloved and confided in without reserve. The desire and prayer that he may recover will be general and earnest.

Theological Seminary.

The students of the Seminary have been enjoying greatly the visits of the gentlemen invited to talk to them from their own experience; and certainly they have derived no little profit from them. The name alone of each one has been sufficient to arouse large expectations, which have been realized. The programme, as announced, has been closely followed, Dr. Robinson being the only lecturer who has asked to be excused; and he has sent, as a substitute, two volumes of his very instructive sermons upon texts taken largely from the Old Testament, to each member of the Seminary.

Dr. Theo. L. Cuyler's talk on "Contributions to the Press" was the first occasion upon which he had ever spoken upon the subject. He emphasized the importance of using the religious press as a means of exerting a good influence; and gave many valuable suggestive hints as to the manner in which this should be done.

But perhaps no address so abounded in rich thought, valuable suggestion, and real instruction as that of Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia. His own person, backed by intense convictions and large and fruitful experience, gave great force to what he said. The students were greatly stimulated and heartily wish a repetition of his visit.

The course will be concluded by addresses on the "Workingman's Relation to the Churches," by the Rev. Washington Gladden, D.D., on May 6th, and by Rev. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor on May 10th, on the "Heroic in the Ministry," which will be the last lecture. C.

....Trailing Arbutus.—The orders have so multiplied that the Mission Band of the Church of Kerhonksen will not be able to fill any more after May 1st.

....The Abraham C. Wood Memorial S. S.—To the Sunday-school of the church at Port Richmond, so long ministered to in Gospel fidelity and love by the venerable Dr. Brownlee, their correspondent, a missionary of the American S. S. Union in Georgia and Florida, reports that last May he organized for them a mission school bearing the above title, in loving memory of one who was for so many years their beloved elder and superintendent. He writes that it was planted in very hard soil; but a new meeting house is built and a church organized there. He says his last five years of this missionary work has been the best—wonderfully blessed. He was engaged in several precious revivals in Sunday-schools, in which there were over 200 conversions. In Liberty County, Florida, for a school organized by him in a miserable shanty, $100 have been raised toward building a new meeting house. The first school organized by him on his field, held for a time in a private house, has moved into a church that never had a school, but adopted this, and it has prospered greatly.

In nine months he organized 46 schools with 334 officers and teachers and 1,450 scholars, and aided othe schools in 91 instances; delivered 221 sermon and addresses; visited nearly 400 families; distributed 344 Bibles, 284 Testaments and $700 in Sunday-school publications. B.

....St. Thomas, West Indies.—The Rev. Andrew Du Bois, D.D., has resigned the pastorate of the Reformed Church, now connected with the South Classis of Long Island. He expects to leave St. Thomas early in June. The church extended a call to the Rev. M. G. Hansen. This is the second time Mr. Hansen has been called to this charge. Again he is compelled to decline it, his physician deciding that certain conditions of the climate of St. Thomas render it inexpedient for Mrs. Hansen to reside there.

At the recent meeting of the Classis the Rev. Charles Romondt, of Washington, D. C., was, by request of the church, approved as the stated supply.

....Western Items.—The preaching on Sunday evenings is now in English at the Second Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., and the Church of Milwaukee, Wis....The Rev. P. Moerdyke, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been granted a leave of absence for three months, to visit the Fatherland....The Rev. H. Borges was installed on March 21st as pastor of the church at Greenleafton, Minn. Rev. A. Wormser, of Cedar Grove, Wis., and Rev. S. Rederus, of the Presbyterian Church of Greenleafton, assisted in the services....The Rev. F. Rederus, on account of old age and poor health, has resigned the pastorate of the Third Church, Pella, Iowa....Rev. R. H. Joldersma has accepted the call of the Fifth Church, Grand Rapids, Mich....The Second Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., has formed a Young Men's Christian Association.

....Classis of Bergen met at First Church of Hackensack. The report on the State of Religion showed a marked spiritual awakening in many of the churches. The Rev. I. E. House was released from the First Church of Hoboken on account of failing health, and the pulpit will be vacant after May 1st. The Rev. John W. Freund was received from the M. E. Church after satisfactory examination, and arrangements made for his settlement as Rev. Dr. Mohn's successor. Classis will meet in adjourned session on Monday, April 26th, to complete arrangements for the settlement of Rev. H. Vanderwart over First Church of Hackensack. Stated Clerk.

....The South Classis of Bergen held their spring session in the Second Reformed Church of Hudson City on Tuesday, April 20th, and was delightfully entertained. The reports of the churches showed a healthy growth, though the First Church of Jersey City announced that in a few weeks it would be consolidated with the Second Church. No special business was transacted. The following were appointed delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. James F. Riggs, W. W. Knox, Gottlieb Andreae, C. F. A. Klein; Elders T. P. Sherwood, Albert Cheesbro, Jacob Ringle, Herman Brüns. Secundi, Revs. W. Westerfield, Jr., P. T. Pockman, Cornelius Brett, E. A. Meury; Elders Tunis Vanderveer, Christian Knerr, C. C. Van Reypen, Isaac I. Vanderbeek.

....The Classis of Hudson, presided over by the Rev. Geo. Le Fevre, had a pleasant meeting at Gallatin. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm. J. Leggett. The Classical report shows an increase over last year's in nearly every particular. A call by the Church of Gallatin on the Rev. John M. Reiner was approved, and arrangements were made for his installation on the 11th of May at 7.30 P. M. The President of Classis is to preside and read the form. The Rev. I. S. Hartley, D.D., of Utica, N. Y., has been invited to preach on the occasion. His secundus is the Rev. Wm. Veenschoten, of Greenport. The following were appointed delegates to the Particular Synod of New York: Primarii, Revs. Wm. J. Leggett, Geo. Le Fevre, H. P. Blair, John G. Gebhard; Elders Peter Hoffman, Wm. F. Crofts, Horace Fingar, Geo. P. Philip. Secundi, Revs. Wm. H. Gleason, D.D., Wm. Veenschoten, T. S Dusinberre, Jas. C. Garretson; Elders Chas. F. Leggett, Andrew Hallenbeck, S. H. Shults, Ezra Lynk.

The Rev. T. S. Dusinberre was nominated a delegate to the Board of Superintendents of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. S. C.

....The North Classis of Long Island met in the Reformed Church of Jamaica on April 20th with a full attendance of members. The Rev. John H. Smock was elected President. The retiring President, Rev. A. I. Martine, preached the sermon from Acts 5: 42. It was an admirable discourse.

At the urgent request of Rev. J. M. Wagner his consistory consented to unite with him in an application to Classis for a dissolution of the pastoral connection, Mr. Wagner's health being such that he felt he could no longer perform the work required in his large congregation. Classis dissolved the connection, to take effect May 3d, 1886, and adopted the following:

Resolved, That Classis express its very profound regret that circumstances have compelled this separation.

Resolved, That the Classis bears its witness to the faithful service of Brother Wagner—a service which has made the church to which he has ministered these many years one of the largest and most successful in our denomination.

In regard to the overture to the General Synod proposed by the Classis of Westchester, relating to the increase of the inadequate salaries of pastors, Classis decided that it would be "inexpedient at the present juncture to ask for the establishment of another Synodical Fund."

On the recommendation of the Committee on Sunday-schools, the following was adopted:

Resolved, That the churches and pastors be enjoined to the just view of the Sabbath-school as the Church of Christ in one of her most important functions.

Resolved, That in all our Sabbath schools the true relation of the baptized children be presented to their consideration, and their privilege so commended that, by the grace of God, they may early avail themselves of a right to a full participation in her communion.

The following were appointed delegates to the Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. W. H. Ten Eyck, D.D., A. Hageman, Lewis Francis, Alexander Shaw; Elders A. J. De Bevoise, Peter Van Dyck, John J. Bruder. Secundi, Revs. Chas. I. Shepard, Geo. D. Hulst, O. E. Cobb, J. M. Wagner; Elders James L. Van Alst, H. H. Shook, Thos. S. Shepard, John Baussman. S. C.

....The Classis of Illinois met in the Church of Irving Park on April 13th. The sermon was preached the evening of the first day by Rev. Zigeler, of Havana, from 2 Cor. 1: 20. Rev. Gamble, of Pekin, preached on the evening of the second day.

Classis rejoiced in the addition of one new church to the roll. Bethany, not far from Pella, was organized a few weeks ago. Rev. S. Gamble was received from the Classis of Schenectady. A call from the First Church of Pekin upon Rev. Mr. Gamble was presented, and a committee appointed for his installation.

We make the following extract from Classical report to Synod:

"The reports received from the churches show that our Classis is in a hopeful and encouraging condition. A great deal of earnest and prayerful work has been done during the past year....Two churches, which last spring seemed languishing unto death, have been revived, and others which were vacant are now regularly supplied. There is a decided advance in contributions."

The following overture was unanimously adopted:

To the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America: The Classis of Illinois respectfully renews the expression of its desire that in the Baptismal Form for Adults the words "incapable of any saving good and prone to all evil" be substituted for the words "incapable of any good and prone to all evil." The expression we desire used is from Art. III. of the third and fourth heads of doctrine adopted by the Synod of Dort. This fact should, we think, relieve us from the suspicion of heedless innovation. We do not desire an expression originating with ourselves, but one which can rightly claim to represent the ripest thought of the Church of the Netherlands. The renewal of this request is occasioned by the necessities of our missionary work. We are anxious to save those who are prejudiced by our Baptismal Form, and do not hesitate to deny its truth. They will not stop to consider metaphysical explanations, but enter other denominations, or what is much more serious, turn aside from the services of God's house. The expression of the Canon seems to us most happy. It appeals directly to the conscience, and cannot be denied by those who have any perception of revealed truth. Nor can we feel that by making this change we shall sacrifice any portion of saving truth. We hope you will consider the matter earnestly, and in case it be found beyond the statutory provisions as to amendment, that you will make arrangements for a convention empowered to act in the matter. Our delegates are instructed to present the subject at length.

A communication was received from the Classis of Westchester concerning pastors' salaries. It was

Resolved, That we unite with the Classis of Westchester in presenting said overture to the General Synod.

Stated Clerk.

....The Classis of New Brunswick met in Bound Brook on April 20th. Rev. Alexander McWilliam preached the sermon from Heb. 5: 2. The Classis modified the suggestion of the Classis of Westchester as to an overture to the General Synod on the subject of Ministerial Support, by suggesting that a Sustentation Fund be established under the care of the Board of Direction (instead of the Board of Domestic Missions), with a view to raise the inadequate salaries of pastors to a minimum rate of $1,000 per annum, collections therefor being authorized and recommended by General Synod.

The pastoral relation between Rev. A. F. Todd and the Church of Bound Brook was dissolved, to take effect May 1st. The report on the State of Religion has a general tone of gratefulness for the mercy and lovingkindness of the Lord. Peace and prosperity prevail. The state of religion is healthful and hopeful. There has been but little general awakening.

The Classis sends also the following overtures to the General Synod.

1. "That the Classis of Arcot be permitted and advised to initiate such measures as shall tend to bind together the churches of the Presbyterian polity in India."

2. That inasmuch as the original draft of the Van Beenschoten bequest, which has recently come to light, reads as follows in the following clause: "....to prepare not only for heaven, but also for the approaching millennium, the commencement of which may be farther distant than the present living," therefore,

Resolved, That the General Synod be requested to take action to have the records of the several Ecclesiastial Bodies corrected accordingly. Many of the records of this bequest insert the word "no" before the word "farther" in the above clause. See note on page 370 of the "Seminary Centennial," for explanation.

The Classis recommends the systematic use of missionary boxes or mite chests to increase collections for foreign missions.

The following were chosen delegates to the Particular Synod of New Brunswick: Primarii, Revs. E. T. Corwin, H. D. B Mulford, James LeFevre, James Cruikshanks; Elders Joseph V. S. Van Doren, Theodore Skillman, Jacob Wyckoff, Dr. C. H. Andrus. Secundi, Revs. A. McWilliam, M. H. Hutton, T. S. Doolittle, W. H. Campbell; Elders G. T. Garretson, H. Garretson, John H. Van Cleef, Cornelius Bergen

....The Classis of New York met in regular session on the 20th day of April in the chapel of the 5th avenue and 29th street Church, and devoted the day to the transaction of the usual business.

The report of the Committee on the State of Religion, while mentioning some reasons for discouragement, was generally hopeful in its character, pointing out some decided marks of progress made during the past year. Among these latter are to be noted the dedication of the Bloomingdale Church, the erection of a similar church of equal promise in the upper part of the city—"the Second Reformed Church of Harlem,"—and the organization of the Grace Reformed Church, at the corner of 7th avenue and 54th street. The gain made during the year in the total number of communicants is 82; in the total enrollment of Sabbath-schools 367. The special religious services held during the winter were noticed by most of the churches, and were generally spoken of as having proved helpful to the spiritual life of the Church's membership, and a means of ingathering of precious souls.

Classis resolved to overture the next General Synod to take the necessary steps to exempt our Foreign Missionary Classes from the operation of the 6th Sec. of Art. II. of the Constitution, as this rule subjects them to great inconvenience and needless delay in the licensure of candidates.

An adjourned session will be held on the afternoon of May 4th to receive the reports of several special committees appointed.

S. C.

....The Classis of Orange met on April 20th in the Church of Montgomery. The day was fine, the spirit of the meetings excellent, and the hospitality of the people all that heart could wish.

Rev. Samuel Willett was received from the Classis of Passaic and arrangements made for his installation over the Church of Wurtsboro, May 19th.

Delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. A. Westveer, J. H. Gillespie, E. O. Moffet, W. B. Darrach; Elders R. B. Innis, A. Deyo, M.D., W. H. Woodruff, M.D., R. B. Dunn. Secundi, Revs. G. Lane, H. Miller, S. W. Mills, M. V. Schoonmaker; Elders C. N. Clark, George Weyranch, D. S. Mapes, J. C. Scofield.

The report on the State of Religion was very cheering and encouraging. The number received on confession is more than double that of last year. Churches have also increased in benevolent contributions.

The following minute was made of the death of Rev. J. B. Wilson:

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Head of the Church to remove from His field and work His under-shepherd and our brother in the ministry, Rev. J. B. Wilson, while he held the office of President of Classis; be it therefore

Resolved, That in this dispensation we recognize the kindness of that Fatherly Providence which honored him so much and led him so long and graciously.

That while we mourn our loss we rejoice in his gain and in the loving hand that has translated him from the Church militant, with its cares and labors, to the Church triumphant, with its rest and rejoicing.

Resolved, That our tenderest sympathy is hereby extended to his sorrowing household and friends, and that a copy of these resolutions be published in The Christian Intelligencer. S. C.

....The Classis of Poughkeepsie met in stated session in the Second Church of Poughkeepsie on Tuesday, April 20th. The following were appointed delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. C. S. Hageman, C. H. Polhemus, A. Mattice, M. B. Thomas; Elders Benson Van Vliet, H. B. Rosa, H. L. Young, M. E Curtiss. Secundi, Revs. A. P. Van Gieson, J. E. Lyall, C. W. Fritts, J. Elmendorf; Elders Isaac Riggs, D. R. Thompson, D. C. Merritt, A. J. Ketcham. S. C.

....The Classis of Rensselaer met in the Schodack Church on the 20th inst The sermon by the retiring President, the Rev. Theo. S. Brown, on Christian Nurture, was of great interest.

The report on the State of Religion revealed a hopeful increase in contributions for religious and benevolent purposes, and a state of general prosperity. Castleton, Schodack Landing and Kinderhook have had reason to rejoice over great spiritual blessing; though in the case of the last named the gracious revival was so recent that none of the results will appear in the statistical table for the present year.

Revs. Hendrickson and Drury were reappointed Classical Agents for Foreign and Domestic Missions, respectively.

The Church of Schodack, now vacant, is expecting to obtain the services of Rev. Norman Plass, a member of the Senior class in the Yale Divinity School. Though without a pastor, the church gave a most hospitable reception to Classis.

The delegates to the Particular Synod of Albany are these: Primarii, Revs. I. S. Schenck, John Steele, D.D., E. A. Collier, D.D., J. H. Bertholf; Elders Philip Engle, Stephen Miller, W. H. Rainey, Thomas N. Lape. Secundi, Revs. H. A. Hendrickson, Elbert Nevius, Jacob I. Gulick, Alan D. Campbell; Elders G. P. Ten Eyck, Philip Williams, G. Vandenburgh, Horton Harder.

S. C.

....Classis of Westchester held its regular meeting at Elmsford on April 20th. Rev. Henry DeVries gave a well received address on "The Distinctive Peculiarities of the Reformed Church," which Classis asked the Board of Publication to print as a tract. The report on the State of Religion was hopeful and encouraging—financially and spiritually the churches have prospered.

A committee was appointed to inquire into and protest against the matter of enforced Sabbath work along the line of the new aqueduct to New York. A resolution that hereafter on the Sunday after the pastoral dissolution in any church the Classis, by one of its members, shall formally declare the pulpit vacant, was carried. The Rev. J. Joseph Rankin was received from the Presbytery of Buffalo and arrangements made for his installation at Bronxville, May 18th, 1886.

Rev. Henry DeVries was nominated to the Board of Superintendents.

All the churches in this Classis are now supplied with pastors.

The following are delegates to the Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. John K. Allen, Wm. A. Dumont, W. F. Anderson, Henry DeVries; Elders James H. Lent, Samuel Keeler. Charles Dunlop, Smith W. DeVoe. Secundi, Revs. James Bolton, E. J. Runk, J. A. Harper, W. Anderson; Elders J. B. See, J. S. Van Court, T. Burwell, J. B. Gregory.

A resolution of sympathy with the Rev. J. E. Lang, who, upon his recovery from pneumonia, on his first walk had been run over by a street car, was passed by Classis.

S. C.

....The Classis of Ulster met April 13th in the Church of Plattekill, N. Y. Not a full attendance; several of the churches being vacant, were not represented. The sermon was preached by the retiring President, Rev. B. C. Lippincott, from 2 Timothy 4: 2.

Reports on the State of Religion from thirteen churches were read, and in the main indicated a cheering state of things. Blue Mountain, Flatbush, Kingston and Saugerties reported large accessions to their communion, while none were destitute of any evidence of the presence of God's Spirit among them.

In the evening devotional exercises were held, which were of a highly interesting character, and a large and appreciative audience was present to participate in the services.

The following brethren were appointed delegates to the Particular Synod of Albany: Primarii, Revs. W. L. James, J. N. Voorhis, C. Van Santvoord, J. G. Van Slyke; Elders Tunis P. Osterhoudt, Jacob Snyder, P. M. Gillespy, John V. Winfield. Secundi, Revs. N. F. Chapman, B. C. Lippincott, A. A. Zabriskie, W. A. Wurts; Elders Christopher Fiero, J. L. Hutchings, David Griffin, C. L. Shufeldt. S. C.

....The Classis of Schenectady held its spring session in the First Reformed Church of Schenectady, April 20th. All the churches were represented. The report on the State of Religion was full of encouragement and hope. By a revision of some of the church rolls the report gave 55 families and 50 members less than last year, yet the churches were all professedly stronger than a year ago. In the matter of benevolence the Classis has made a gain of one thousand dollars.

A paper was read in the afternoon by Rev. N. F. Nickerson, on "Our Lord's Observance of the Sabbath." Matt. 12: 1–12.

The following brethren were appointed delegates to the Particular Synod of Albany: Primarii, Revs. J. C. Lowe, Robert Doig, P. E. Kipp, B. A. Bartholf; Elders L. Ellwood, M.D., P. G. Brown, Martin Ham, Andrew Van Denberg. Secundi, Revs. C. P. Ditmars, J. K. Rhinehart, N. F. Nickerson, L. Vanderveer; Elders A. S. Bradt, W. T. L. Sanders, Joseph Wormer, John Young.

The Rev. P. E. Kipp was nominated for the Board of Superintendents for the unexpired term, and Rev. J. K. Rhinehart for the full term. Stated Clerk.

....The Classis of Paramus met in the Second Church of Lodi, N. J., on Tuesday, April 20th. Rev. J. L. Stillwell, President. Rev. W. W. Stitt preached the Classical sermon. The report on the State of Religion showed a good degree of encouragement. Some churches had been decidedly refreshed, while others were confidently expecting a blessing. The Rev. J. H. Whitehead was received from the Presbytery of Morris and Orange, and arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the North Church of Passaic. The following resolution was adopted: "The Classis of Paramus, believing that the drift of the times is toward coöperative or organic union between the Churches holding the Augustinian Theology and the Presbyterian form of government, hereby declares its pleasure in the fact, and records its conviction that our own Church will not be found holding back when a wise way is found to accomplish the object."

Delegates to Particular Synod of New Brunswick: Primarii, Revs. W. W. Letson, John C. Van Deventer, John H. Duryea, D.D., C. E. Crispell, D.D.; Elders John Fox, Charles W. Miller, Wm. Millar, Cor. I. Blauvelt. Secundi, Revs. W. N. Todd, John Gaston, D.D., W. H. Williamson, D. G. Jongeneel; Elders Jacob Snider, David Campbell, Abr. C. Holdrum, Jacob Cruson. S. C.

(Continued on page twelve.)

News of the Week.

Wednesday, April 21.—It is reported that the British Government is communicating with the Powers on the subject of taking decisive steps to prevent Greece from making war on Turkey. France supports the English proposition, Russia hesitates to join, and the rest of the Powers are still undecided....Fifty followers of Myingzaing Prince set fire to Mandalay, Burmah, and hundreds of houses were burned and many persons killed....There are 7,000 homeless persons encamped around Stry, Austria, without food. The work of relief is slowly going on....Another of the wolf-bitten Russian mujiks, treated by Pasteur, has died of hydrophobia....Flood in Montreal is subsiding. The damage is estimated $1,885,000....Forest fires reported on the mountains in Pennsylvania....All the cars are running in New York excepting Third avenue, and there is little prospect there of settling the trouble soon....Lake Shore tracks in Chicago are blocked by strike.... It is reported that if Jay Gould buys the Wabash road next week at a mortgage sale a strike will take place on the entire system. ....Charles E. Loew is considered dangerously ill....Two hundred school boys in Boston, Mass., struck for shorter hours ... The dam of Mud Pond Reservoir, Mountain Lake, gave way yesterday and nine persons were drowned at East Lee, Mass. The loss in property is about $200,000.

Thursday, 22 —The Bishop of Madrid, who was shot and fatally wounded by a priest last Sunday, was buried yesterday. Gallote, who killed the Bishop, will be tried about the end of May....A conflict on the Greek frontier is expected. An ultimatum of the Powers to Greece is momentarily expected to be issued. The British Minister at Athens thinks that advice and warning have been wasted on Greece....Large fire reported in London. Twenty-three engines at work....Struggles for food at Stry have resulted in bloodshed. Sixty-eight bodies have been taken from the ruins of the fire, but impossible to recognize them. Twenty deaths in the fields since Sunday of invalids who who were taken out of Stry to escape the flames....No trains moving on the Lake Shore Railroad at Chicago. Both sides are firm and the sheriff has been appealed to for aid....Two more mail bags washed ashore from the lost steamer "Oregon" ...The bodies of three boys were found buried in a sand bank at Quincy, Ill. They had been missed from home several months....Two thousand, three hundred men employed in the sugar houses in Williamsburgh, Brooklyn, are on a strike....Charles E. Loew died yesterday at the residence of his mother, East 58th street, N. Y....A part of the building known as Old Libby Prison, at Richmond, Va., collapsed yesterday from overburdened floors.

Friday, 23.—A large mass meeting was held at St. James' Hall, London, of Liberals and Radicals. Thousands were unable to gain admittance....The Irish Land Purchase bill was issued yesterday. It is divided into five parts and covers twenty-six pages, has also fifty-three clauses and four schedules....At a meeting of Liberals and Conservatives in the Belfast Chamber of Commerce resolutions were passed condemning measures proposed by Gladstone for the future government of Ireland.... The fate of Mr. Nourse, Treasurer of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, is still a mystery....The corner-stone of the new building for the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the gift of Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, will be laid to-morrow....A large fire took place yesterday on Broadway, N. Y. Loss over half a million dollars. ... More mail bags have been washed ashore belonging to the lost steamship "Oregon." ....Four little girls living in Lindenville, Ashtabula County, Ohio, were bitten by bulldogs and terribly mangled....The capstone of the pedestal of the Bartholdi Statue was laid yesterday by General Stone on Bedloe's Island. The unveiling of the statue will take place September 3d, 1886. ....The Grand Jury rendered indictments for conspiracy against seven men who bribed the Aldermen of 1884 to grant the Broadway Railroad franchise

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

A Modern Sir Galahad.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER IV.

"One morn of autumn lords it o'er the rest."

THE sensuous season of early autumn had been passed and the month of October, which holds the deeper meanings, had come, when Laurence Bowles on one of its perfect days entered the long elm-shaded way of the principal street of the town that was to witness his mistakes, his successes, and to pass judgment upon him day by day, week by week, on until the last hour of service to his church. It was a day when a philosopher might have said that nature, with its mature purposes, seemed to be surveying its resources, whilst complacently reviewing past achievements. The minister thought it a perfect day, and its repose was singularly in harmony with the human side of the picture, for, as far as the activities of life were concerned, the people seemed to have rested long ago from them.

He reached the house which was to be his home for months; was shown the large room over the parlor which awaited him with a hospitality of freshness and home-likeness due to certain feminine touches here and there which fought against the stiffness of the general furnishings. The practical, unbeautiful woman who showed him the room, he felt could not have been responsible for the air of refinement which these touches lent it. He looked around after the woman had gone out and a feeling of thankfulness took possession of him that his study—the place where he might commune with high thought and might even entertain angels—was not unworthy of the purpose to which it was to be consecrated. As he looked closely at the fancy articles, he noticed that use and beauty held equal rights, and that, unlike much of the ornamental work of women, conventionality in design and frippery in the make-up were not noticeable. He remembered that the Widow Marshall, into whose home he had come, had a daughter, a slight pale girl, who, he recollected, seemed of a different race than her mother. To her he gave the credit of beautifying his room.

He was kept busy until evening putting away his clothing and placing his books upon the long shelves that had been made for him by a thoughtful member of the church. When the supper-bell rang he looked around and smiled with satisfaction upon his home, and then giving a glance at the dressing-table mirror went down. He was introduced to "Anise" as "my child," and as the young lady spoke in gentle tones he thought the voice a very sweet one. During the supper-hour he had a chance to notice the delicacy of the features, and as the young girl lifted her eyes to his he recognized an expression of appeal which, seen in the eyes of any woman, never fails to attract the attention of any knightly-souled man. When he went back to his room he lighted his lamp and opened a book; but he could not read; his thoughts were busy with the wonder that the plain uninteresting woman should own such a lovely, delicate blossom. Then he thought of a remark of one of the church to him during a previous preaching visit—a remark that implied that Squire Marshall had been a power in Danton and that his death had meant a great loss to the town. The young lady is like her father, he decided, and he was right. But the young minister had no time for dreaming. The next day was to witness his ordination and installation; and authorities in the church felt it to be not only their duty, but privilege, to have a little season of conference and prayer with the pastor-elect. It had been the custom since the church was founded thus to greet a new pastorate and there seemed to be no reason why the last one should not be so honored.

The burden of the remarks and of the prayers was complete consecration. "Keep thy servant from a false oath, O Lord!" was the cry of one of the faithful deacons. "Hold him even now from taking upon him the oath if he fails to comprehend the act of self-consecration!"

Laurence Bowles, bowed by his side, felt that his own prayer to the same effect had been answered by a true assurance of perfect consecration, and his soul shrank with horror at the thought that such a prayer should seem necessary for one who had stood even once in a sacred place to proclaim the Gospel riches. In later years, when his soul had "built for itself more stately mansions," looking back upon his limitations he grew faint at the thought of the consecration of his undeveloped self to God's service. It was a holy hour for him; he heeded not the quaint, gruff speech of exhortation, and received its spirit for his own need. When the church lights left the pastor's study they said to each other, "A young man of a proper spirit, though a trifle worldly in his make up." "A little too good-looking for a minister I'm thinking," remarked the deacon whose good looks were not of that order of beauty that proves fatal to spiritual modesty. "I'm a leetle afeard of a minister who is called so perfect by the weemen folks as he is," remarked a layman whose authority in church matters was due chiefly to the fact that his ancestors had been leading men in church matters.

"Why, don't you remember that Saul was a tall 'goodly' man and that he was called the 'beauty' of Israel? The Lord called him to be king and I rather think thought that his beauty would be a help," replied another.

"Yes, Brother Smith, I know," answered the sceptical church conservator, "I know, and I know too that he had a sort of madness in his nature that brought him into trouble; you must remember that; not that I meant to even hint a thing of this sort about the new minister. It's all well enough if the weemen will keep level-headed. Adam must have been a pretty fair sample of a good-looking man, and you know what happened to him on account of Eve's losing her head."

Whilst this conversation was being carried on by the departing brethren, Laurence Bowles was upon his knees before his God, pleading that the Searcher of hearts would try his motives and would refine him even by fire, for the service to which he had consecrated himself; and this God before whom the heart stands open had already kindled the fires which were to transmute that which was precious in His sight.

The morning which heralded the eventful day for Danton's Church came. The minister rose early, dressed himself with care, and went out. He followed the road that led away from the town, then took the path that ran to the woods; he followed it until he reached the heart of the forest; he was absorbed beyond the reach of the influence of the wonderful beauty about him—color and song and breath of forest-verdure were as nothing compared to the working of the forces within his soul. He threw himself at last upon the mossy ground. He clasped his hands and lifted his eyes towards the heavens; his earthly vision was intercepted by the festooning vines; wild clematis and bitter sweet displayed feathery beauty and brightness in harmony. Sir Galahad knew nothing but the burden of his prayer. There came no sound from his voice to mingle with the soft sigh of the autumn leaves as they fell in glowing showers about his uncovered head; the tears rained from his eyes, blinded to nature's charms. He knelt while the sun mounted higher and glinted through the forest. "I will not let thee go until thou bless me," his soul insisted. Suddenly, as if a hand had been laid upon his head in benediction, a promise came to him, Behold, I am with thee. Then as if the outer and inner world were in especial harmony, a strong breeze shook the tree above him of its crown, and the voice of a bird sent forth upon the willing air a strain that seemed almost an inspiration. The kneeling minister who had received heaven's benediction opened his eyes and his ears to find it emphasized about him. He rose and faced the aspect of the forest. It seemed almost like a new world of beauty; he glanced down at the spot where he had kneeled; the moss still bore the impression of his knees; he knelt again, this time to examine the velvety turf; he noted each little pink cup set among the gray lichens He looked up and noted the hanging vines in their graceful loveliness. For the first time in his memory he was giving himself over to the beautiful in nature without trying to reason the relationship of such worship to his calling. The minister for a few moments was lost in the man; it gave him an indefinable sense of freedom. His old self at last asserted itself, and he opened his spiritual eyes upon these new experiences to feel something like a shock, and a certain sense of guilt took possession of him, yet he could not account for this sudden inward expansion; it was as if a summer breeze had blown freely through avenues hitherto shut up from air. With bared head he went out of the forest in a sense a larger-souled man than when he went in.

At his boarding place breakfast had been waiting an hour and the methodical housekeeper's patience was nearly exhausted.

"I declare, Anise," she remarked in no very amiable tone, "the coffee is entirely spoiled, and the meat will be dried and the muffins are nearly sour, and this was my first breakfast, and on ordination morning, too! I have repented of taking him to board. I might have known that anybody with the kind of look that he has in his eyes wouldn't be up to time in taking his meals. Your poor father always tried me in such ways; when he got into a book, or went off to the woods for a walk, he never knew there was any need of eating."

Anise' face flushed with the pain she felt at her mother's words with reference to her dear father, whose life she had worshipped and whose memory was very sacred to her. She was silent for a few minutes, while her mother could not help wondering if her husband, who seemed to care so little for the material comforts of home, found heaven more congenial in all respects than he found earth. Poor woman! It was a cause for mental discomfort with her that, according to certain spiritual authorities, the home talents which she had so carefully cultivated could be of no possible use in the world to which her husband had gone, and that he probably never would miss her ministrations.

At last Anise remarked: "I think Mr. Bowles has gone to the woods; I saw him take the road that leads to them. He must have found everything there so beautiful that he could not leave them. Father used to be so charmed with the woods in autumn. Do you remember, mother?"

"Yes, I remember, and I remember, too, that he used to come back from them looking kind of unearthly. I'm always put out by such a look. I can't tell why. I believe it kind of frightens me," replied Mrs. Marshall.

Anise was placing a vase of dahlias upon the sitting room table when the minister entered. She looked up as his "good-morning" greeted her, and saw the lifted expression upon his face, a look that was not of the world. The thought thrilled her, that the home-life was again to be glorified by the signs of that spiritual communion which had made her father's life so different from that of other people whom she had known. She wondered if her mother would notice the "unearthly" look upon the minister's face, as she had noticed it in days that were past upon her husband's face.

Yes; she knew by her mother's awed manner that she had perceived it. The breakfast was passed almost in silence, for each was busy with thought. Anise was glad when it was over, and when she had taken her share of the morning's duties, which was a light one, for the competent housekeeper had made a rule years before that "to have things well done she must do them herself," and then there was a secret dislike to having Anise about with her abstracted manner when thorough work was to be done; for like many another absorbed housekeeper she could not believe that housework could have justice done it where even one faculty was held apart from its service.

"You make me kind of nervous," was the only excuse she would give her daughter for preferring to exempt her from household duties.

So Anise, according to her own sweet will, had read and sung and communed with nature, living upon the memories of the days when her father had helped her, in his delightful way, to see nature and to learn of the minds of great men through their written words.

"She's her father's child," had always been her mother's explanation of her ways and of her appearance, and she surely was her father's child in a deeper sense than this practical mother could possibly understand. As the young girl went to her room to dress for the ordination services, she found her thoughts dwelling more than usual upon her father. The minister's eyes reminded her so much of the dear eyes that could no longer look love upon her. Then with a pang she whispered, "My father might have made as much of himself as the minister has if he could only have had the chance." She brought to mind what she had heard of the dear father's sacrifice when he was a young man. After his father's death he had given up his college course, upon which he had just entered, in order to take care of his mother, who clung to him as a child might in her sorrow and weakness. She could not forget his words, so many times repeated, "My dear Anise, I shall expect you to be all that your father missed." This had been long her purpose and her inclination. She delighted to read the books he had read with her, to think of the things he had thought of. She longed to grow like him. It had been very hard for her, without the help of anyone, to try and keep to her ideal; but now the help that she needed for her onward course seemed to be promised in the coming of the new minister, who seemed to fulfill her father's ideal, and therefore her own. She felt that this fulfilled ideal was given her from God as a pattern. She would accept it and sacredly use it for her inspiration.

When the church bell sounded she went down to the sitting-room to find her mother waiting for her appearance. The morning service was one for the examination of the minister upon doctrines, as they were recognized in all their bearings upon the past and the present by the denomination to which his church belonged. It was a dry service to the average church goer, and Mrs. Marshall found her concession to custom a greater sacrifice than she had anticipated, for the thought of the chickens that lay stuffed and trussed ready for the oven, would insist upon a place in her mind in spite of her efforts to admit only thoughts in keeping with the tone of the meeting. To Anise the interest of the meeting centered in the minister. His dignified yet unassuming bearing, his earnest words with regard to his views of the Gospel revelation, the sound of his rich voice, as he joined in singing, "I love thy kingdom, Lord,"—all this impressed her with the belief that not only Danton Church was to be blessed beyond measure, but their own home-life was to be lifted.

The chickens lost nothing in waiting for the oven, and when, two hours after the close of the morning session, the minister came, bringing with him two ministerial brethren, the fowls came upon the table, juicy and steaming with the odorous stuffing which Mrs. Marshall seemed to hold a patent right for making, as others had tried the same receipt time and again, and could never make it "come out quite right," as they acknowledged not without a little disgust of tone and a suspicion down deep in their minds that the famous cook had somehow managed to hold its essential secret from them. But the dinner, so far as Sir Galahad was concerned, would have passed without an acknowledgment of its perfection. It was well that the two other divines who had accepted of her hospitality were in the body, and doing justice to the savory meal by partaking freely of it, offered also their praise to the satisfaction of the hostess. Sir Galahad himself echoed their "very nice indeed!" but as Mrs. Marshall declared afterward to Anise, "It might have been a crust for all he seemed to care about it, with that unearthly look of his."

The church was crowded in the afternoon, and there were not hitching posts enough around the edifice to accommodate the horses of the parishioners, to say nothing of those of the townspeople generally, who having no particular interest, had come because it was an event to settle a new minister. (This was before short pastorates had become common in Danton.) Not that there was a necessity for hitching the majority of horses that brought their owners and their families to the church from the outer districts of the town, for they had learned patience through experience and would no more have been tempted to disturb the quiet of a Danton Sunday by indulging in a fractious or frisky spirit than would their masters. Small boys and flies might tickle and tease, yet the poor animals were always found at the spot were they were left; thankful of course, when the sermon was over, for were not their masters sometimes thankful when the long Sunday service was over and their Sabbath day duties honorably discharged, that supper and rest awaited them a few miles beyond?

But the ordination services were of unusual interest; nobody nodded, and from the first hymn to the last words of benediction, as one lady declared, "you could have heard a pin drop." All eyes were upon the young minister as an aged divine from a neighboring city laid his hands upon the head of the kneeling candidate and uttered a consecrating prayer. The most devout forgot to bow the head; their gaze was fastened upon the pulpit as if it were a holy mount where a transfiguration scene was about to be enacted. Laurence Bowles in those moments was in spirit upon the mount communing with his God, and his people with worshipful hearts were, many of them, fashioning an idol whose image was in the likeness of their pastor.

(To be continued.)

"Prohibition Again"

EDITORS CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: You had the kindness to publish an article of mine under the above caption in your columns of March 3d, to which the Rev. George Le Fevre has replied in your issue of March 31st. I have also received by mail from some friend a printed slip cut from The Voice, a prohibition journal, as follows:

A PARTY OF ONE IDEA.

JUDGE H. P. ALLEN in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, March 3d, on The Prohibition Party:

"I regret that any real friends of temperance could have been so far beguiled as to join in such a lamentable display of ignorance and credulity ....in believing, or even harboring the thought, that in such a nation or State as ours (where so many different and momentous subjects, embracing all interests, domestic and foreign, must combine to form a good, wise and stable government), any political party of one idea only could possibly be successful, and, in a one horse chaise, ride into supreme power."

William H. Seward in his celebrated Rochester speech in 1858, on The Republican Party:

"The secret of its [the Republican Party's] assured success lies in the very characteristic which, in the mouth of scoffers, constitutes its great and lasting imbecility and reproach. It lies in the fact that it is a party of one idea; but that idea is a noble one, an idea that fills and expands all generous souls."

I have no doubt the sender really thought the second extract was a logical and forcible answer to the first one quoted; but let us place the two ideas represented side by side, and the wide difference between them will be apparent to every reflecting mind, not warped and twisted by some "one idea."

The distinguished statesman, William H. Seward, in advocating the principles of his party, was in the above extract alluding to the one grand, expansive and comprehensive idea of political freedom. This was the very corner-stone of a Republican and Democratic form of government, and was embedded in the "Declaration of Independence" itself, which declared that "all men are created free and equal, and endowed with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The idea itself, therefore, was a strictly political principle, and was properly associated with, and under the then existing circumstances, was very prominent among all the political questions affecting the very life and stability of our government. And it took rank as such, when, at the next general election in 1860, Senator Seward's party, without reference to what men ate or drank, or what clothes they wore, was swept as by a whirlwind into supreme power.

Now, on the other hand, what constitutes the "one idea" of this political prohibition party? Why, simply this—stop making, vending and drinking whiskey and other intoxicating liquors. Its boundary line on every side is solely "Prohibition," and if, when interrogated, a man says "shibboleth," he is accepted, whatever his opinions may be on any or all other subjects affecting the State or National Government. But if he says "sibboleth," he is an alien, and however otherwise upright, honorable, respected and capable, he cannot be supported by this exclusive third party, even though, by "voting in the air," they help to elect the very worst rum candidates in the field. And this, they seem to think, is very like to what U. S. Senator William H. Seward advocated "in his celebrated Rochester speech in 1858."

The Rev. Mr. Le Fevre says in his reply that I charge "the third party with 'ignorance' and 'credulity,' in believing that a 'party with one idea only can or possibly could be successful;'" and, as a reply to the charge, he points "to such men as Joseph Cook, Talmage, Cuyler, Deems, Neal Dow, and many others equally intelligent who are third party men."

The four persons first named are eminent "ministers of the Gospel," widely known, and highly honored and successful in their "sacred calling." But they know vastly more of "Theology" than of "Politics;" and it is a great honor to them that they do. A man may be a distinguished astronomer, and yet a blacksmith may justly laugh at his ignorance and credulity if he undertakes to make a horseshoe, as he would surely make a blundering botch of it. But this would be no reflection whatever upon his intelligence or high standing as an astronomer.

As to the Rev. Mr. Le Fevre's other witness to refute what he calls my charge, there is no doubt that Mr. Neal Dow is an earnest, indefatigable and well-meaning man, and has spent a long life in trying to accomplish what he thought was right. But whose memory runs back to the time when some cranky idea did not act upon him "like a bee in his bonnet," in respect to political action?

My critic could not have been a close observer, if he did not notice that in my article I most directly and pointedly referred to the action of the political Prohibition party, in the national election in 1884 and the State of New York election in 1885, and giving the votes that party received in this State and in this city of New York. And, if getting only 24,999 out of 1,171,263 votes in this State in 1884, and only three per cent out of 1,000,000 votes in this State, and only 1,215 votes in this great city in 1884, did not prove "a lamentable display of ignorance and credulity," they proved what would be still more to that party's discredit—duplicity.

The Rev. Mr. Le Fevre says, "With us prohibition is a sine qua non. That is just what makes it purely and simply a political party of "one idea," and all that he says of their platform having "as many ideas as any other party," are mere bubbles blown in the air, and leave the "sine qua non" in full possession of their entire platform.

Again, he says, "The Republican party came into power on a single issue, viz.: the abolition of slavery." And further on he says, "For the Republican party once organized itself as a purely political party, and at the same time went into the pulpit and into the prayer-meetings, and sought thus to advance their party interests by praying God to help them abolish slavery."

How utterly and astonishingly mistaken my reverend friend is! Who that remembers the political events of those years does not know that the Republican party was maligned and vilified by the then third party of "one idea" for not making "Abolition" a plank in its platform, in almost the same identical terms now used by the present third party of "one idea" for not adopting "Prohibition" as one of its issues with its great antagonist—the Democratic party.

When the Republican party was organized the slave power was endeavoring to force slavery into free territory. It was a political question, and was hotly contested. There were tens of thousands of "Free Soilers," (a branch of the great party then in power,) who were opposed to the extension of slavery, but who from long antagonism could not readily join the old Whig party, and so it came to pass that they and the great body of the Whig party merged together and formed the Republican party; not, however, for "the abolition of slavery," but to limit it to where it then existed, and to save our free territory to free States. The great battle ground was "Kansas." The Abolition party then, as a third party, occupied the same ground that the Prohibition party does now, and freedom, without its help, barely won after a doubtful and terrible contest, and Kansas came in as a free State.

It was not until after many States of the Union had seceded; Fort Sumter had been fired upon; many bloody battles had been fought; lives and money had been poured out like water, and the very life of our Republic swayed in the balance and was in deadly peril, that the Republican party and the government then under its control, with the approval of tens of thousands of their political opponents, made the first move for "the abolition of slavery;" and then President Lincoln, as a dernier ressort, issued his famous Proclamation, by which slavery was abolished. But this was not done as a party, but expressly as a war measure. It may, therefore, be readily seen that there is no more similarity between the Republican party and the Prohibition party, than there is between a mountain and a mole-hill.

Now, as to "high license," my reverend friend says: "Its moral effect on the community is worse than free whiskey." What blind ultraism this is! It is virtually saying that to build strong and high barriers to keep a great and terrible river in its channel, and narrow and limit it as much as possible, is worse than to let it have free course and overflow its banks and make a sea of desolation as wide as its unobstructed highest level can reach. Such logic can never make anything more than a skeleton of a "third party."

The prohibition of the manufacture, sale and use of all intoxicating liquors is impracticable. From the time that "Noah" and "Lot" got shamefully drunk and disgraced themselves down through all the ages, intoxicating liquors have been made and drank, and it needs not "a prophet nor the son of a prophet" to predict that they will continue to be made and used until all sin is prohibited and the glorious millennial morning is ushered in. The fountains which supply this awful death stream have their rise in the great and deep mountains of sin which cover the whole earth. And their mouths cannot be effectually plugged by all the political stopples which any political organization can invent or apply. But much can be done to limit the stream of intemperance and greatly lessen the evils, ruin and death which flow from it.

First. Seek not to cleanse and purify one out of a great number of moral evils by dragging it through the mire of politics.

Second. Get aid, by moral suasion, from all parties and people to build the strongest and highest barriers possible to restrict and limit the stream. Remember the vast dykes along the Mississippi river, and what wide seas of ruin they have prevented, and take lessons of practical wisdom from them.

Third. Unite in pressing legislation to stop the sale of drugged and adulterated liquors of all kinds, similar to that in regard to "bob-veal," diseased meats, spoiled fish and fruits, and the adulteration of all kinds of food. This would eliminate a thousand per cent of the most deleterious elements which constitute the greater part especially of the common and cheap liquors, and make them so fearfully effective in producing woe and death throughout the land.

Fourth. It seems to me that "high license," with stringent provisions, connected with or following the last mentioned legislation, faithfully carried out, would raise the most effective barriers against the liquor traffic that human laws can devise.

And Lastly. Let common sense teach the utter folly of supposing that either of the two great political parties of the nation or of the State of New York will disband or fall into the ranks of such a political skeleton as the Prohibition party.

H. P. ALLEN.

NEW YORK, April, 1886.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“American Diplomacy.” By Eugene Schuyler, Ph.D., LL.D. Few politicians in the United States are as thoroughly acquainted with the history, the needs, and the grave defects of our diplomatic system as the scholarly author of this book. He has studied his subject not only as an outsider, but for seventeen years he honored his country while discharging duties as Consul, Secretary of Legation, and Minister Resident. The contents of the volume comprise lectures delivered before two universities, with an enlargement on the fishery question and commercial treaties.

The whole consular system, and our general representation in foreign countries, are questions about which the greatest misapprehension exists. Mr. Schuyler presents the debates which have arisen and gives his own views fully and frankly. He shows the application of diplomacy in various conflicts of opinion which have divided us from other nations, and how war has again and again been averted. The different treaties affecting our commerce are considered, and their importance urged upon the reader. Certain lines of reform in reference to salaries and duties are indicated, and we rejoice to know that our present Congress seems disposed to advance in the direction indicated by the author.

The publishers have presented this work in excellent style, with the best of paper and print. We commend the volume not only to students of political economy, but to all interested in the standing of our country among the nations. Those who travel in Europe sometimes display an amount of ignorance in reference to the duties of Consuls and Ministers which is simply disgusting. A careful study of the subjects contained in this work would help our representatives abroad, whether official or in private station. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“Manual Training,” by Charles H. Ham, is a complete exposition of the rationale, the history, and the practical workings of an important move ment in modern education, of which the author has been a chief mover. His treatise includes a strong argument for the value of “tool practice” for both mental and moral development. One need not go as far as he in this theory, in order to be made very thoughtful, and to realize afresh how partial and one-sided our ideas of education have been. Perhaps the best argument for the adoption of “manual training” is the results already achieved. A full account of the proportions and quality of the educational work now doing in this direction, both in Europe and in this country, is given with many illus trations. This part of the book goes quite minutely into the processes and improvements in every form of working in wood and metals, and gives an amount of information which it would be difficult to find so compactly presented elsewhere. We commend the book not only as one which is worth consulting, but which demands earnest consideration. It has an important bearing upon the social and industrial questions, which are preparing to sift our civilization like wheat.

We must not neglect to add, that it is one of the best-indexed volumes we have ever seen, their being thirty-nine finely printed pages of index to 363 of text, in large, clear type. This index, moreover, is so fully expressed as to constitute quite a cyclopædia of information in itself. (Harper & Brothers.)

.....In numbers 8–10 of Mr. Ruskin's “Præterita,” we are told of some more of the early influences which moulded and developed his character and genius. He speaks of three cities as his art “tutresses,” viz.: Rouen, Geneva and Pisa. He distinctly speaks of Carlyle as “my master,” and dilates upon the influence of Byron in the matter of “truthfulness” in statement and description, and of “reverent love of beauty.” Chapter VIII. is almost taken up with his analysis of and tribute to Byron, and quite out-Ruskins even Ruskin in its dogmatism and one-sidedness. In point of fact, he seems to us at times a great bundle —shall we say, porcupine?—of prejudices. Chapter IX. is a record of a Swiss journey in 1835, taken for his health. Chapter X. gives us a very amusing account of his first love affair, and leaves him just as he has entered Christ Church College, Oxford. (Wiley & Sons.)

....“The Mormon Problem.” By Rev. C. P. Lyford. Mr. Lyford was for four years a missionary in Utah, and records what he learned from actual contact with Mormonism. He quotes also freely from the sermons, speeches and publications of the Mormon leaders. He writes temperately, avoiding abuse, but writes boldly, plainly and with vigor. His chief purpose is to show that Mormonism is treason to the government of the United States, that it claims to be of Divine origin, superior to other existing governments and under no obligation to obey any laws but those adopted by its own hierarchy. The ferocity and defilement of the system is also exposed. Four original stories of Mormon life and an account of the Mountain Meadows Massacre are added in an appendix, as illustrative of and confirming the positions taken in the preceding chapters. The book ought to be read by all patriotic, righteous and virtue-loving citizens. (Phillips & Hunt.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The readers of Harper's Magazine for May will be specially attracted by “Portraits of our Saviour,” in which the subject is treated with taste and thoroughness, and the twenty illustrations constitute a choice gallery of sacred art. The “types” of the Christ-face extend back to that of the “Abgarus” picture, dating probably from the fourth century. “Sap Bewitched” is a fanciful and delicate sketch for the spring-time, by Gibson. “The London Season” is also a timely article, but gives some of the deeper shadows as well as gayer lights of London life. “With the Blue-coats on the Border” is one of R. F. Zogbaum's graphic sketches. Instalments of six serials are given, and we congratulate Harper on the conclusion of “East Angels,” and hope it “won't do so any more.” A year and a half is really too long for any one story, and that not a very exciting one, to have the floor. Mr. Curtis, in his Easy Chair, gives some pleasant reminiscences of Columbia College, and of Mr. Gough as a lecturer. Mr. Howells, in his “Study,” points out the tremendous moral significance of Stevenson's ingenious story, “Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.” He, of course, takes the usual occasion to advocate his realistic theory of novel-writing, and his pessimistic view of poetry.

....The Sidereal Messenger for the month is largely occupied with papers on meteors, which are occupying the minds of many thoughtful observers. Mr. S. J. Corrigan contributes equations for settling the Relation Between Meteoric Orbits and Radiants, Mr. W. F. Denning discourses on The Cometary Meteor Showers, Mr. O. C. Wendell adds a table of Orbits of Meteors and briefly discusses it, and T. W. Backhouse reviews the Proposed Maps for Tracing Meteor Paths. Prof. David P. Todd advances a plan for The Prediction of Fine Seeing. Prof. Asaph Hall gives his experience in securing good Images of the Stars and concludes that observatories will be located at the best places for seeing, with less regard to social advantages than at present. The number contains also the usual variety of interesting short paragraphs on current celestial events.

....The Atlantic for May opens with one of John Fiske's admirable historical articles, treating of the early confederation of the United States. Sarah Orne Jewett tells a pathetic New England story in “Marsh Rosemary,” and William H. Bishop begins “The Golden Justice,” with its scenes laid in Chicago, the city thinly veiled under the name of Keewaydin. The two serials, “The Princess Casamassima” and “In the Clouds,” hold the reader's interest without advancing the development of the final catastrophes to any marked extent. There are other excellent articles and full reviews of recent publications. In the “Contributors' Club” we notice a theory that the settlement of the Huguenots in England introduced the misuse of the “h,” which is most pronounced in the counties where the French emigrants settled.

....The Expositor for April opens with a paper by Prof. Godet on Paul's Gospel to the Romans, after which Canon Driver has an instructive comparison of Two Hebrew New Testaments. Canon Westcott continues his Lessons from the Epistle to the Hebrews, and Dr. Maclaren his admirable exposition of Colossians. Sir J. W. Dawson treats of Recent Discussions of Genesis, chap. 1, in a very conservative way. The Brevia are interesting.

...The Presbyterian Review for April compensates for its late appearance by the excellence of its contents. Dr. Herrick Johnson writes of the Silence of Scripture a Proof of its Divine Origin. The topic is old, but it is handled with freshness, force and a rather florid rhetoric. Sensible exegetes do not hold that Job's “He hangeth the earth upon nothing” refers to the Copernican astronomy, or that the circularities of Ecclesiastes 1: 6, 7 imply acquaintance with modern meteorology. An accidental coincidence of ancient poetry with recent science is no basis for logical argument. Dr. Morris's article on the Unities of Mediation does not seem to make any substantial addition to current theology. The Salvation Army, by Dr. Donald Fraser, furnishes a very clear, fair and just view of this remarkable development of our day, giving full credit to what is praiseworthy and at the same time emphasizing the serious deficiencies and dangers of the enterprise. The article on the Reorganization of Christian Giving, by Dr. Yeomans, aims to show the need and wisdom of resting appeals for money upon Christian, not humanitarian principles. It is weighty and just, and yet not popular enough in style to affect most readers. Prof. Francis Brown contributes a very valuable monograph on the Hittites, giving in a condensed yet lucid form what is known respecting this people, the Sphynx of ancient history, and referring to all the sources of information on the subject. It is a pity to see so fine a scholar referring to the early books of Scripture not as other people do, but as the Hexateuch, A, B, C, R, D—which is either an affectation or worse. The next article, the Critics of the Revised Version, is by Prof. W. Henry Green. It canvasses the points made by a variety of writers, British and American, but especially those of Prof. Briggs in the slashing article published in July last. It is characterized by the learning, insight and judicial poise for which the Professor is famed, and is destitute of even an approach to asperity or ill temper. To us it seems a very satisfying defence of the Revision. But it is not so to Dr. Briggs, who, in a subsequent department of the Review, uses his privilege as managing editor to reply to criticisms made on him as a contributor—which certainly gives him an advantage over all other contributors. It is right to say that he apologizes for the tone of his July article. He however maintains the correctness of all his criticisms (save two). Persons interested in the matter will of course read what he has to say. We mention only two things. One is that he says that Dr. Green charges upon him “by conjecture” a certain opinion concerning Canticles. Yet this opinion is fairly deducible from the language used by Dr. Briggs in his article (VI., 520) which Dr. Green quotes and comments upon. Of course if Dr. Briggs denies any such opinion, that settles the point now, but it does not affect the fairness of inferences legitimately drawn from his former utterances. The other in his objection to Dr. Green's reference to the alleged “discovery of the Poems of the Creation and the Fall.” But in his July article Dr. Briggs said of the first chapter of Genesis, it “is poetry, as we have arranged it,” which of course means that the Revisers were in error in not knowing this, and arranging the lines accordingly. The department of Notes contains a very strong paper on the Mormon Question by the late Dr. Eels, and Dr. Blaikie's views of the Relations of the Three Presbyterian Churches of Scotland, written in an admirable spirit and with much clearness. The Reviews of Recent Literature are as usual numerous and carefully executed. We specify only two. One by Prof. Croskery, of Derry, on the last work of the late Principal Tullock, is exceedingly rich and instructive. It is kindly and charitable, yet faithful to the truth. The other, by Prof. Calderwood, of Edinburg, on Progressive Orthodoxy is lamentably deficient in insight and boldness. It speaks of a book as “healthy,” which yet it admits to be far astray on important points. This is no way to deal with deadly error, and one naturally expects better things from the Presbyterian Review. If it gives an uncertain sound upon vital points now at issue before the Christian public, then it had better cease to exist.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Funk & Wagnalls: The Marriage Ring. A Series of Discourses in Brooklyn Tabernacle. By T. De Witt Talmage. 12mo, pp. 192. Cloth, $1.

Cassell & Co.: Rubainah: A Story of Afghan Life. By Evan Stanton. 16mo, pp. 272. $1; also,

Sent Back by the Angels; and Other Ballads of Home and Homely Life. By Frederick Langbridge, M.A. 12mo, pp. 126.

Dodd, Mead & Co: The Midnight Cry. A Novel. By Jane Marsh Parker. 12mo, pp. 238. $1.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Mabel's Summer in the Himalayas. By Mrs. Helen H. Holcomb. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 192. 85 cents; also, Griffen Alley Folk; or, Pearls from the Slums. By Ernest Gilmore. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 256. $1.

White, Stokes & Allen: Bugle-Echoes: A Collection of Poems of the Civil War, Northern and Southern. Edited by Francis F. Browne. 12mo, pp. 336. $2.

S. C. Griggs & Co.: Kant's Ethics. A Critical Exposition. By Pres. Noah Porter. 16mo, pp. 249. $1.25.

American Tract Society: The Tall Chestnuts of Vandyke. By the author of “Ruthie's Venture,” etc. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 395. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Marriage Ring. A Series of Sermons on the Duties of the Husband and Wife, and on the Domestic Circle By Rev. T. De Witt Talmage. 12mo, pp. 204. 25 cents. J. S. Ogilvie & Co.

Aunt Rachel. A Rustic Sentimental Comedy. By D. Christie Murray. (No. 70, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 196. 25 cents; also,

Goethe's Faust. Translated from the German by John Auster, LL.D. With an Introduction by the Rev. Hugh Reginald Haweis, M.A. (No. 71, Same Series.) 16mo, pp. 196. 25 cents; also;

War and Peace. A Historical Novel. By Count Léon Tolstoi. Translated into French by a Russian Lady, and from the French by Clara Bell. Revised and Corrected in the United States. The Invasion, 1807–1812. (No. 521, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 79. 25 cents.

The Life and Adventures of Baron Trenck. Translated by Thomas Holcroft. Vol. II. (Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 191. 10 cents.

The New Church: Its Ministry, Laity and Ordinances. With an Appendix on Intoxicants and our New Church Periodicals. By John Ellis, M.D. 12mo, pp. 124.

Why Do Christians Die? By Rev. J. A. De Baun, D.D.

War and Peace. A Historical Novel. By Count Léon Tolstoi. Translated into French by a Russian Lady, and from the French by Clara Bell. The Invasion, 1807–1812. Two volumes. 50 cents per vol. William S. Gottsberger.

Beyond the Vail. By Alice Williams Brotherton. 12mo, pp. 14. 20 cents. Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago.

Minutes of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the Twelfth Annual Meeting in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 30th to Nov. 3d, 1885. 8vo, pp. 144 Appendix, pp. 210 and 26. 16 East 14th street, New York.

Report of Agricultural Colleges and Experimental Farm Stations, with Suggestions Relating to Experimental Agriculture in Canada. By Professor William Saunders. 8vo, pp. 80. Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Canada.

PERIODICALS.

April.—The Lutheran Church Review, The Atlantic Monthly.

May.—Wide Awake, St. Nicholas, Our Little Ones and The Nursery, The Popular Science Monthly, American Agriculturist, The Domestic Monthly.

JUST PUBLISHED.

RUHAINAH.

A Story of Afghan Life. By EVAN STANTON, 1 vol., 16mo, extra cloth. Price, $1.00.

"This new romance of Afghan life is by a new novelist but an old writer, who has spent several years among the people whom he describes in such vivid colors."

New Volumes in

Cassell's Rainbow Series.

King Solomon's Mines.

A Thrilling Story founded on an African Legend. By H. RIDER HAGGARD, author of "Dawn," "The Witch's Head," &c. 1 vol., 12mo, illuminated cover. Price, 25 cents.

A Prince of Darkness.

By FLORENCE WARDEN, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc. Price, 25 cents.

New Volume in the Fine Art Library.

The Education of the Artist

By ERNEST CHESNEAU. 1 vol., 12mo. Extra cloth, gilt top. Price, $2.00.

Complete Catalogue sent free.

Cassell & Company, Limited,

739 and 741 Broadway, New York.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.
ANNETTE L. NOBLE.
16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.
MRS. E. R. CHURCH.
16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.
MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.
MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.
12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.
REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.
16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.
Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.
Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.00.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

The Newest Songs!

READY IN APRIL.

THE

GLAD REFRAIN.

Messrs. LOWRY and DOANE'S NEW Book of Sunday School Songs. It is fully equal to any of their former popular works.

This NEW Song Book embraces a number of NEW features, and is gotten up on an entirely NEW plan, in a NEW shape and is printed from beautiful NEW type. It is sure to please, and will create a NEW interest in the Song Service. It will be sold at a NEW price,

$25 per 100 Copies, in Boards.

Single copy sent as soon as published on receipt of price.

Specimen pages sent free on request.

An Edition in Aikin's Character Notes, at Same Price.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

Sunday School Books!!!

BEST BOOKS. BEST TERMS.

Catalogues free.

N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St., New York.
N. B.—Fine Stock of Easter Goods.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE

For MAY begins a volume. It contains:

Striking Illustrated Articles.

The Flour Mills of Minneapolis, by E. V. Smalley,—ten pictures; A Californian's Gift to Science, Lick Observatory,—eleven illustrations; American Country Dwellings, by Mrs. van Rensselaer,—sixteen illustrations; Breeding of Fancy Pigeons,—eleven delicate engravings.

General McClellan's

Posthumous Notes on the critical period between "The Peninsula" and "Antietam;" accompanied by two other war articles,—"McClellan at the Head of the Grand Army," a private's recollections; and "The Battle of South Mountain," a stirring narrative by Gen. D. H. Hill, all profusely illustrated by battle scenes, portraits, etc.

Fiction.

Short stories by Brander Matthews and Geo. A. Hibbard; chapters of Mr. Howells's novel, The Minister's Charge; and a delightful illustrated story of a search for Don Quixote's helmet.

Notable Essays.

"Evolution and the Faith," a thoughtful and forcible paper from Rev. T. T. Munger, D.D.; and "Hawthorne's Philosophy," by Julian Hawthorne, a valuable literary study, with portraits.

Further Contents

Comprise "Zweibak; or, Notes of a Professional Exile"; editorial comments on the Labor Question, etc.; open letters from George W. Cable, and others; poems by Sidney Lanier, R. L. Stevenson and others; Bric-à-Brac, etc. Sold everywhere. Price 35 cents. THE CENTURY CO.

MUSIC BOOKS.

THREE HOLY CHILDREN, ($1), by Stanford, is a new Cantata of great power and brilliancy.

RICHTER'S HARMONY, ($2); RICHTER'S COUNTERPOINT, ($2), and RICHTER'S FUGUE, ($2), are three standard books on composition, by an eminent German Harmonist.

OPERAS. The best and most complete editions.

AIDA ($2); BELLS OF CORNEVILLE ($1.50); BOCCACIO ($2); CARMEN ($2); PATINITZA ($2); LAKME ($2); MARITANA ($2); MEFISTOFELE ($2); MIGNON ($2.50); ZENOBIA ($2); and many others.

Libretti, full and complete, of 80 operas, for 25 cents each. Cheap editions, 15 cents each.

EASTER MUSIC, in quantity. Send for Lists. Orchestral parts furnished when desired.

WINNER'S IDEAL METHODS, (each 75 cts.), are famous and really good cheap Methods for Violin, for Flute, for Accordeon, for Cornet, for Banjo, for Guitar, for Fife, for Clarinet and for Flageolet.

MASON'S PIANO TECHNICS ($2 50), are constantly increasing in favor, as most valuable aids to practice. All teachers should use them.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

NOW READY!

FLOWER PRAISE

A FLORAL SERVICE
FOR
The Children of the Sunday School.

By CLARA LOUISE BURNHAM and GEO. F. ROOT.

This little Service or Cantata is designed more especially for

Children's Day, Flower Sunday,
AND
SPECIAL ANNIVERSARIES,

but it is also adapted for use on any occasion where children's voices can be utilized. The words are bright, pretty and instructive, while the music is written in Dr. Root's happiest vein and most strikingly illustrates the sentiment of the words. Bound in handsome heavy paper covers. Price 20 cts. each by mail, postpaid; $2.00 a dozen by express, charges not prepaid.

SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY
The John Church Co, Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled, 3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BARNES' NATIONAL INK.

As you read on you say, not, "THIS IS LIKE LIFE," but "THIS IS LIFE."

ANNA KARENINA.

By Count LEO TOLSTOI. Translated from the Russian by Nathan Haskell Dole. Royal 12mo, 750 pages, $1.75.

(Fourth Thousand in Press.)

"The effect of the whole is stimulating and elevating. The book is certainly one of decided genius."—N. Y. Tribune.

"It is difficult to speak of this noble book without incurring the suspicion of extravagance."—N. Y. Examiner.

"Will take rank among the great works of fiction of the age."—Portland Transcript.

"Characterized by all the breadth and complexity, the insight and the profound analysis of 'Middlemarch.'"—Critic, New York.

"It is not undue praise to say that since the publication of Goethe's Elective Affinities no such relentless analysis of the human emotions and of the action and reaction of social relations has appeared as is shown in Count Tolstoi's novel, 'Anna Karénina.'"—Boston Traveller.

ALSO, BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

MY RELIGION.

(Third Thousand in Press.)
12mo, $1 25

For sale by all booksellers.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,
13 Astor Place, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for
PLATFORM ECHOES
OR LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,
By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. No Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY
of the City of New York.
JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York

AGENTS wanted for PINKERTON'S SPY of the REBELLION, the most thrilling war book ever published. PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED. ABSOLUTELY THE EASIEST BOOK TO SELL EVER KNOWN! For full particulars, special territory and terms to agents, Address G. W. CARLETON & CO., Publishers, New York.

DURKEE'S
GAUNTLET
WARRANTED PERFECTLY PURE
TRADE MARK
GAUNTLET
E. R. DURKEE & CO.
BRAND
SALAD DRESSING

UNEQUALLED FOR EXCELLENCE.

Without a rival as a dressing for all Salads, and as a sauce for Cold Meats, etc. It is prepared with extreme care; all its ingredients are of the purest and best; and will keep good for years.

BEWARE OF ALL IMITATIONS.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,

The Care and Feeding of Infants

Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

-MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

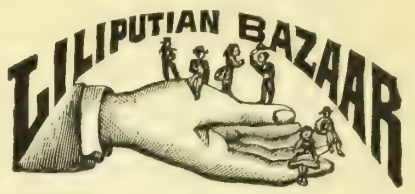
THINGS FOR CHILDREN

that can only be found at the



OUR EXCLUSIVE STYLES

in BOYS' CLOTHING, SHIRT WAISTS, HATS AND CAPS. NECKWEAR, etc., MISSES' AND GIRLS' CLOAKS AND DRESSES, MILLINERY AND INFANTS' WRAPS AND DRESSES.

We invite comparison of the styles and finish of our goods with those ordinarily sold ready made, and the prices must convince the most economical buyers of the advantages our establishment offers in the outfitting of Children with everything, from Hats to Shoes.

Illustrated Catalogue sent free on application.

BEST & CO.

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

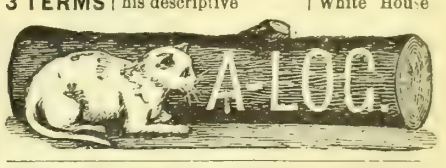
CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 12
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,683 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., Ass't Sec's.

3 TERMS	BRADBURY Piano	White House
3 TERMS	F. G. SMITH, Maker, Brooklyn, N. Y., will send to any address,	White House
3 TERMS	his descriptive	White House



BARLOW'S INDICO BLUE.

Its merits as WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. A. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 239 N. Second St., Phila. Pa.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve, no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Spring.

SPRING dressmaking, spring gardening, spring house-cleaning, spring planning for the summer,—how busy the days are just now with the duties, cares and pleasures of the spring. Let none of us be too busy to hear the voice Divine that cries to us in sweet appeal, "Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away! For lo! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone. The flowers appear on the earth. The time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land!" Too seldom in our day does the meditative type of piety flourish. Too few of us are ever ready or willing, in the multiplication of engagements, to come "away" from everything, not merely at morning or evening, but often, into the presence-chamber of the Most High, into the secret place of prayer and praise.

A Significant Sight.

TO those who turned aside from the crowding cares of the season to sit in heavenly places with the great Presbyterian sisterhood who gathered in Dr. Cuyler's church for the Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, on April 14th, there can have been no more significant sight than the presence and address of the high caste Brahmin lady, the Pundita Raniabai of Madras, India. Many of you have read of her wonderful attainments, are aware that she has studied Sanskrit, the sacred language of the Hindoos, and is a professor of that language and literature in England. She crossed the Atlantic to be present at the graduation, a few weeks ago, of her young relative, Anandibi Joshee, who has studied medicine at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania, and who returns to her people a fully equipped physician.

The Pundita is a beautiful and dignified woman of graceful and dainty appearance, and, standing beside our ladies in their Western costume, she had distinctly the advantage in the individuality and beauty of her flowing white robes, so spotless, so sheer, so charming. The fabric of her gown, whatever it was, lent itself obligingly to the service required of it, and one loop or scarf of the soft material was disposed veil-fashion over her dark hair, forming a tasteful substitute for a bonnet. As with modest self-possession she faced the immense congregation, comprising women of all ages, from silver-haired grandmothers to girls scarcely in their teens, and in fluent English, touched with a foreign accent and idiom, but perfectly intelligible, told the story of woman's life in India, no Christian heart could help a throb of praise. What hath God wrought! Memory went back to Harriet Newell, Sarah Boardman, and Ann Hasseltine Judson, brave women who crossed the sea to tell the heathen of the Divine Redeemer, and as their heroism and self-sacrifice was reverently recalled, it seemed as though at last the harvest was being gathered in. Here stood a lady of social position and thorough education, with the courage of her convictions, owning in the hearing of a great multitude the Saviour who died for her. It seemed as if there were enough encouragement in this fact, this sweet womanly witness from the distant East, to answer all the objections which unbelievers in foreign missions could possibly raise. AUNT MARJORIE.

Prejudice.

DO we realize how entirely we are at the mercy of our prejudices, in many instances forming on very insufficient bases opinions for or against a person or a line of action, and then refusing to consider the other side. There is almost always another side, with arguments more or less cogent, but prejudice so narrows the view that we can see nothing except what we have determined to look at. S. D.

Our Debt.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: The statements which from time to time we read in the INTELLIGENCERS and Sowers, concerning the finances of our treasury, impress me with the idea that we have allowed ourselves to form an unfortunate habit, namely, in speaking of it as the debt, and not our debt, when the latter expression is simply the truth. General Synod, through our representative delegates, passed that resolution urging the raising of the $100,000, consequently the debt is ours, unmistakably. Ours, each member of our beloved denomination; but we have grown accustomed to think of it in an indefinite, mystical way, and not as an individual responsibility. In the family, when debts are incurred we would consider ourselves disgraced if we evaded the honest payment of the same. This is our debt, and a measure of obligation already assumed that must be loyally discharged. If each one of us would adopt the Psalmist's language and put it into effect, "I will pay my vows unto the Lord," the balance on our treasurer's books would be more than met.

In one household of my acquaintance there is annually taken a collection for our debt, albeit everyone of the family is a member of the Church Missionary Society. The tenths are given to the Lord, for they belong to Him, but this other contribution is a free-will offering.

The "Lord loveth a cheerful giver," but it is not so much a matter of out-and-out giving when the question that ought to come to each and every one of our hearts forcibly and with importunity, "How much owest thou?" M. G. R.

Practical Hints Upon Dressmaking.

THE home dressmaker is frequently called upon to make over old clothes, in fact that is her special province, and with care much can be done with little. At this season of the year the looking over partly worn clothes, with a view of renovating them so that they will have a semblance of their former freshness, is an anxious period to the busy mother who is forced by the state of her purse to turn to account every available piece of material. It is surprising how much can be accomplished if the ways and means are understood. Garments which have long laid in oblivion in some old chest or store closet, under the manipulation of skilful fingers can be made to assume a freshness and fashionable appearance that at a first glance would not be considered possible. The first thing to be done to a garment that is to be made over, is to rip it to pieces, and carefully select all the best parts for use, remove all threads and brush it thoroughly. If the material is woollen, but little worn, and not much if any soiled, a good brushing and pressing are all that will be needed. Pin the pieces upon an ironing table, and brush thoroughly, first across the goods, then lengthwise. Wring a cloth out of water and put it over the goods, ironing until it is dry; treat all the material alike. When one piece must be moistened and pressed all should be similarly treated to make their appearance uniform. If the goods are much soiled, a thorough brushing is also the first step in the cleaning process. Some materials and shades will stand washing. Bran water is good for this purpose and can be prepared by putting the bran in a bag, and boiling in clear water for one hour. After this it should be strained and the goods washed through it without any soap, then rinsed through clear water, and hung up to partly dry without wringing, as such creases cannot be pressed out. A suds made of white castile soap and tepid water is well adapted for delicate shades, no soap being used upon the goods, and carefully rinsing after the washing. To wash black materials nothing is better than soap bark; four ounces of the bark (to be purchased at a druggist's) should be soaked in a pail of water over night. Strain the next morning, and use the same as for ordinary washing, omitting soap; it restores the color and makes the goods look almost equal to new; it is also well to have some of this kept on hand in a bottle, as it is very useful in removing spots that so frequently gather upon different garments. If it is not desirable to wash the fabric after brushing, it is first necessary to remove all grease spots. This can be done by carefully rubbing the spots with turpentine upon a woollen cloth. Pipe clay is also a good cleaner; moisten the clay with water to the consistency of thick cream, spread it over the spot, and let it dry. After it has been on several hours, scrape it off with the blunt edge of a knife, and dust off all the fine powder with a soft brush; this can be applied to the most delicate fabric. To remove paint spots, apply turpentine until the paint is softened; then sponge repeatedly with alcohol. Oil, wax and resinous substances can be removed in the same manner. An excellent cleaning fluid to sponge off goods after the grease spots have been removed, is composed of two ounces of white castile soap, cut in small bits and dissolved in one quart of warm water; after the soap is entirely dissolved, add four ounces of ammonia, four ounces of alcohol, two ounces of ether, one ounce of glycerine, three quarts of soft water. Mix and bottle. The fluid should be kept in bottles with glass or rubber stoppers. Put the goods to be cleaned down upon an ironing table over a rubber blanket; apply the fluid with a sponge, using enough to wet the stuff thoroughly, and drawing the sponge over it always in one direction. As each piece becomes nearly dry, press it with a hot iron, laying a piece of muslin over the goods and being careful that there are no seams or creases in the ironing blanket or cloth, or a shiny streak in the goods will be the result. The rubber blanket must, of course, be removed before pressing. If the stuff to be pressed is light colored, the cloth must be white, but if dark colored or black, a black cloth must be used, as the white leaves a liberal supply of lint, which is difficult to brush off. Black silk can be made to look almost as good as new by sponging on the right side with weak tea or coffee, and pressing on the right side, with a thick flannel between the silk and the iron. When the silk is very much wrinkled, sponge on the wrong side with weak gum arabic water, and when nearly dry iron between two woollen cloths. The creases can be taken out of velvet and the pile raised by drawing it across a hot iron over which a wet cloth has been spread. If there are pin marks over which the pile refuses to rise, brush it up with a stiff brush and steam it, repeating the operation several times. Narrow velvet ribbon can be ironed by dampening the back and drawing it across the flat face of an iron set upright on a table. When the nap is worn off of cloth it can sometimes be restored thus: soak the goods in cold water for an hour, then with a pin or needle gently pick up the nap; after the nap is raised, brush it the right way with a soft brush.

This excellent article is selected from that old favorite, "Godey's Lady's Book," an honored visitor still in many households. The query is pertinent, why does not some practical woman, who needs to earn her livelihood, establish herself in every neighborhood as a renovator of ladies' clothing? She would have no difficulty, if tasteful and painstaking, in establishing a business at once remunerative and agreeable. Many women of means have partially worn gowns and wraps which they would prefer to new ones for another season if they were tastefully made over, the money thus saved going to purchase other luxuries,—books, pictures, or drapery, or perhaps being spent in charity. A thoughtful woman never likes to give away a dress which is out of repair; she likes it to be whole and in order if bestowed on a protégée. Mothers of several girls, with hems to be let out, drapery to re-arrange, seams to change, a half dozen little wardrobes to alter at once, would be relieved if they might have at hand an efficient, capable person, who could give them the benefit of skill and experience in making over old materials.

"Ye Gave Me to Eat."

THE deepest gratitude is due to those Christian men and women who form themselves into a society, and, through the generosity of the public, come to the aid of the innocent and destitute.

A conspicuous and pleasing instance of such noble generosity is the Glasgow Poor Children's Dinner-Table. It is under the superintendence of a society, which is composed of seventeen gentlemen, and a number of ladies of good position and name. This work of benevolence had, like many other undertakings of the same kind, a small and unpromising beginning; but in the course of time it has developed into a large charitable institution, and is the means of accomplishing incalculable good among the waifs of the city. It is more than sixteen years ago since these dinner-tables were commenced. At present there are twelve, and they are open every day, excepting Saturday and Sunday, during the winter months. They are spread over the worst and most necessitous parts of the city, and thus meet the wants of as large a number of poor and destitute children as possible. They are meant for all young people, from three to twelve years of age, who are in destitute circumstances. The dinner, which consists of soup and bread, or rice and milk, is prepared in one place only, and is carried off in vans to the different halls in which the children assemble. Each dinner-table is under the superintendence of two or more ladies, according to the number of children likely to be present. Long before the dinner-hour arrives, large numbers of ill-clad, starved, and miserable-looking younsters assemble around the doors of the various halls, all scrambling with eagerness to rush in at the appointed time. Many of them, however, especially in times of severe distress, when the number of needy ones is large, cannot find admittance, and have therefore to go without their dinner for the day. It is sad to observe the doleful expression that marks the countenances of those who are thus disappointed of their long-wished for meal, especially as those who are in that unfortunate position are generally the youngest, who are rudely set aside by their elders. But there is no help for it, however regretful the fact may be. Here the race is to the swift and the battle to the strong.

Stimulated with a desire to see these dinners, I made a visit to several of them, in company with one of the principal office-bearers of the society. It was a cold winter day—such a day as induces one to keep within doors, where the blazing fire diffuses its genial warmth and creates a kind of household summer. The sleet was driving with merciless fury, blinding the eyes of the hasty passengers, and compelling them to wrap their coats closely round them. The eaves of the houses were dripping at such a rate that they seemed to be alive with the spattering rain; business men were standing at their shop doors with despairing looks, eager to welcome reluctant customers; horses were dragging their vehicles wearily along, and casting a wistful glance at every opening, if happily they might find some shelter from the pitiless storm. It was such a day as made one think piteously of the poor, whose "unfed sides and loop'd and window'd raggedness" are unable to "defend them from seasons such as these." We arrived at the first dining-hall at the time when the children were entering it. Some had come from school, some from their homes, others had come from loitering on the streets, as their wet clothes and shivering frames but too plainly indicated. With the greatest despatch and order they took their places on long rows of seats, placed in different directions of the hall. No time was lost in supplying with the homely but welcome meal, and as little time was lost in its consumption. The two women who distributed the soup and bread among this hungry family went about their work with the greatest heartiness, speaking a kindly word to all, and especially to the younger portion of the company. The children, who numbered, perhaps, between two and three hundred, had all a starved-looking appearance, while on many of their faces you could detect the incipient lines of sorrow, showing the dark and painful history of their lives. Going to a decent looking girl, who was feeding an infant on her knee, and who, although apparently hungry herself, was mindful only of the want of the little one, I asked her name. "Mary ——, sir," she at once replied. "And are your father and mother alive?" I inquired. She looked at me with the tears glistening in her eyes, and said, with a half tremulous voice, "My mother's dead, and my father's in the 'firmary with a broken leg." "And how do you live?" I asked. "I sometimes sell papers and go messages when Johnny keeps in" (meaning the child); "but he sometimes will not keep in." "Poor girl!" I ejaculated, "how hard is thy lot. Thy mother dead, thy father in the infirmary, and thou thyself compelled to eke out a miserable livelihood by such precarious means, and with the consent of thy capricious little brother, as hungry as thyself!" There were others to whom I spoke in the different halls which I visited, and they all told a tale of poverty and distress. It is not to be expected, however, that all these children will state the whole truth in reference to their homes, especially if their parents are addicted to drinking habits, or otherwise lead dissolute lives. But whatever may be the truth regarding their parents, they are themselves true objects of charity and compassion. And in this light they are regarded by the Poor Children's Dinner-Table Society, and by the community in general.—The Quiver.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Maud's Easter Offering.

BY EMMA J. GRAY.

IT was the Thursday evening before Easter. The darkness was gathering fast, and not yet had brightness come with the evening lamp, because Maud, at once the petted child and autocrat of the Sinclair home, had begged to wait for this until she could see the first star. Her big brother, Henry, was at home for the holidays, and this made her reign with all the more authority, as is sometimes the way with little sisters. This brother was a Rutgers' student, and within the last year had determined to devote his life to the work of the ministry. At this home coming he seemed particularly tender and thoughtful.

At the hour of which we write Maud was seated in his lap, the favorite place for both brother and sister, and they were watching the coming of the star together. While waiting they talked of the star that had many years ago marked the birthplace of the One whose resurrection was so soon to be celebrated. With each new year the birth, death and resurrection of Jesus seem to be remembered with increased emphasis in every Christian home.

But already the star had come for which Maud waited. Lamps were then lighted, and as the evenings were yet cool, a blazing log lay on the hearth—thus making the room very attractive. The merry voices of the entire family made happiness complete. During the evening Henry, whose love for music made song easy, sang:

"There is a green hill far away
Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified
Who died to save us all."

Every one was thrilled as this beautiful composition of Gounod was given, telling the lesson better than anything else might have done of the pain indescribable which gave us the gladness of the Easter festival.

Poor little Maud was heart-broken, and implored her brother to sing an Easter anthem. In this request the entire family joined. So ever do we like to hear notes of joy.

After this the hours passed rapidly, until it was indeed Easter morning. Then Maud could have been seen walking to church, her little hand holding close to that of her big brother. Her delight was inexpressible as she saw the azalias, hyacinths, roses and lilies. When the sweet voiced choir sang "Christ the Lord is risen to day," she knew she had never before felt so happy.

Very eloquent was the good pastor that morning. His words seemed so earnest, his manner so magnetic. And as he closed he tenderly talked of the Easter offering which he hoped all had given or would give before the day should close—the best offering which any one could make. All felt how true and powerful were his words, and none were more impressed than little Maud, quietly listening in her pew.

The service had closed. The music of the Easter morning had ceased, and yet Maud waited.

"I want to tell my pastor about my Easter offering," were the words she spoke to her brother, and he too, waited. After what seemed a long time the good man, with thoughtful face, came down the aisle. He was wondering whether he had chosen the right words for the people whom he loved. Seeing Maud and Henry he advanced to meet them.

"I waited to tell you," Maud said, "about my offering." Then reverently she added, "I have given myself to-day to Jesus."

Can anyone measure the joy that came with these unexpected words? No longer did the pastor doubt whether he had spoken rightly that morning. As for the brother and little Maud, to them the fulness of Easter had come.

Trades Carried on by Birds, Beasts and Insects.

"PLEASE to tell me something to amuse me, uncle, will you, for I am so tired?"

"But if you are so tired, Henry, what likelihood is there of your listening to me with attention?"

"O, I will not lose a word. I should never be tired of hearing you talk."

"Well, if I am to talk to amuse you, it must be about something entertaining. Suppose I tell you of the trades which are carried on by the lower creatures?"

"Trades! Why, how can they carry on any trade? Do you mean to say that beasts and birds and such like carry on trade?"

"You shall hear. The otter and the heron are fishermen, though they neither make use of a line or of a net. It is not very often that we catch sight of the otter, for he carries on his trade for the most part under water; but the heron is frequently seen, standing with his long thin legs in the shallow part of the river, suddenly plunging his lengthy bill below the surface and bringing up a fish. You cannot deny that the heron and the otter are fishermen."

"No, that I cannot; but never should I have thought of it, if you had not told me."

"Ants are day-laborers, and very industrious too in their calling; they always seem in earnest at their work. Catch them asleep in the daytime if you can. They set us an example of industry.

"'Ants freely work without disguise:
Their ways consider, and be wise.'"

"Go on, uncle; I am not half so tired as I was."

"You seem all attention certainly, Henry. The swallow is a fly catcher, and the number that he catches in a day would quite astonish you. Often have you seen him skimming along the surface of the brook and the pond?"

"Yes, that I have; and swallows are as busy as ants, I think."

"The beaver is a wood-cutter, a builder and a mason, and is a good workman in all these trades. He cuts down small trees with his teeth, and after he has built his house, he plasters it skilfully with his tail."

"Well done, beaver! He seems to outdo the rest."

"The wasp is a paper-maker, and he makes his paper out of materials that no other paper-maker would use. If ever you should examine a wasp's nest, you will find it all made of paper."

"How many curious things there are in the world that I never thought of."

"Singing birds are musicians, and no other musicians can equal them in harmony. Hardly can we decide which has the advantage—the lark, the blackbird, the throstle, or the nightingale.

"'On feathery wing they freely rove,
And wake with harmony the grove.'"

"I am afraid that you are coming to the end."

"O, never fear. The fire fly and the glow-worm are lamp-lighters. Fire-flies are not seen in this country, but abroad they light up the air, just as the glow-worms do the grassy and flowery banks in country places here."

"Yes, I have seen them. I shall not forget the lamp-lighters."

"The bee is a professor of geometry, for he constructs his cells so scientifically, that the least possible amount of material is formed into the largest spaces with the least waste of room. Not all the mathematicians of Cambridge could improve the construction of his cells."

"The bee is much more clever than I thought he was."

"The caterpillar is a silk-spinner, and far before all other silk-spinners in creation. For the richest dresses that we see, we are indebted to the silk-worm. With what wonderful properties has it pleased our heavenly Father to endow the lower creatures."

"I shall be made wiser to day, uncle, than I have ever been before."

"The mole is an engineer, and forms a tunnel quite as well as if he had been instructed by an engineer. The nautilus is a navigator, hoisting and taking in his sails as he floats along the water, and casting anchor at his pleasure."

"I should never have believed that anyone could have made these things out so clearly."

"Let me finish them by observing that the jackal is a hunter, the hawk an expert bird-catcher, the leech an excellent surgeon, and the monkey the best rope dancer in the world."

"Well done, uncle, you have amused me indeed. I could listen an hour longer without being tired."

"Whether you remember what I have told you or not about God's goodness to His lower creatures, you will do well not to forget His greater goodness to mankind, in His gift of reason, His gift of His holy Word, and His gift of the Saviour, by whom alone a sinner can be saved. And now, as you are learning all you can as a scholar, let me advise you to set up at once the trade or calling of a school-master, by teaching with humility and kindness those around you who may happen to know less than yourself. We all should be carrying on the calling of a schoolmaster, teaching others by precept and example,

"'Without a rod or angry word,
To love and glorify the Lord.'"

—Child's Companion.

Little Heads Together.

ENIGMA.

A proverb of Solomon composed of 27 letters.
27, 3, 14, 7, 16, 12, an insect.
19, 9, 24. 22, crooked.
20, 18, 1, 5, a pronoun.
23, 6, 17, 10, 11, a fluid.
4, 25, 2, 26. firm.
8, 21, 13, 15, 26, 10, 24, to loiter. L. P. C.

CHARADE.

My first in many a field doth grow—
Most easy 'tis to guess;
Without it we should come to woe,
To trouble and distress.
My second in a farmer's barn
You very oft may find;
And when I say 'tis made of yarn,
It may come to your mind.
My whole is but my second, too,
And used to carry in
My good and wholesome first, so you
To guess may now begin. S H J.

SQUARE WORD.

1. Bends. 2. Existing in thought. 3. Physical force. 4. A boy's name. 5. Useful in winter. V

Answers to Puzzles of April 7th.

Double Acrostic.—
J ehoiad A
E glo N
R am A
Evangelis T
M anoa H
I dd O
A rara T
H ezekia H

Enigma.—One swallow does not make a summer.

Diamond.—
B
A R E
B R E A D
E A R
D

Correct answers from Rappie Bowne, Emily C. Field, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh.

Original puzzles for this department are solicited. Address COUSIN LOIS, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Our Church.

(Continued from page five.)

....The Pastors' Association met at Synod's Rooms, April 26, 1886. Dr. R. Terry read a paper on The Resurrection, dwelling upon the nature of the resurrected body. A discussion followed, opened by Drs. Taylor and Chambers. Later, Dr. Taylor announced the sad news of the paralytic stroke which had befallen the Rev. Dr. Van Cleef, of Jersey City, and the Association engaged in prayer in behalf of their afflicted brother, led by the Rev. Dr. Chambers. The officers were instructed to prepare and send to Mr. Van Cleef a letter of sympathy. Next Monday Dr. Chambers will read an exegesis of 1 Cor. 15: 29, on Baptism for the Dead.

....Fourth Church, New Brunswick.—This young enterprise dedicated their new house of worship last Sabbath afternoon. The venerable pastor, Dr. Wm. H. Campbell, read the dedicatory service, and Drs. W. V. V. Mabon, M. H. Hutton, John Woodbridge and Rev. James Le Fevre made addresses. There was a congregation of six hundred people present at the services, which were very impressive. The church was organized about eighteen months ago with 14 members. Since then it has grown steadily, and funds sufficient to build a neat edifice have been raised. The building now completed and dedicated, is of Gothic architecture, and is situated on Suydam street. It is constructed of rough, red brick, trimmed with white. It has a tower 14 feet square, with a spire and gilded ornamentations, reaching 70 feet into the air. The pews, furniture, communion table and pulpit are of solid white oak. The church has a seating capacity for 425 persons, and by slightly altering the situation of the pews 700 people can be accommodated.

....Want of space prevents us from giving this week more than these appointments from the following:

Classis of Albany.—The delegates to the Particular Synod are as follows: Primarii, Revs. Joseph P. Davis, Clarence M. Perlee, Jacob F. Neef; Elders Daniel P. Winne, J. V. S. Shafer, Wm. Mansert. Secundi, Revs. A. M. Arcularius, J. A. H. Cornell, Wm. E Faulker; Elders Isaac Beach, Horace S. Bell, George W. Clark.

Classis of Geneva.—The following delegates to the Particular Synod were chosen: Primarii, Revs. Matt. Kolyn, C. P Murray, D. J. De Bey; Elders Peter A. Brokaw, G. J. Donnanold, J. Van Der Berg. Secundi, Revs. G. W. Baas, F. W. Ruhl, W. H. Nasholds; Elders M. D. Die, E. J. Schoonmaker, B. B. Dumont.

South Classis of Long Island.—The following were appointed delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. A. DeW. Mason, W. H. Ford, John S. Gardner, John M. Van Buren, D.D.; Elders A J Newton, John L. Ryder, Joseph Pool, Frank E. Williams. Secundi, Revs. Jacob West, D.D, C. L. Wells, D.D., John M. Ferris, D.D., A. P. Stockwell; Elders James Swain, John B. Ditmas, George Kissam, C. D. Stryker.

Classis of Montgomery.—The following were appointed delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. Daniel Lord, M.D., F. S. Hames, James Demarest, Jr., D.D., J. R Kyle; Elders P. S. Wiers, C. Winne, Thomas Cunningham, Isaac D. Hoover. Secundi, Revs. A. D. Minor, T. A. Beekman, S. O. Lansing, F. V. Van Vranken; Elders Oliver Suits, John Kilts, Jos. Spraker, Abm. Van Horne.

Classis of Philadelphia.—Delegates to Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. E. Hill, C. T. C. Suckow, E. Birdsall, J. E. Crane; Elders J. E. Porter, Danl. Bohl, G. W. Craven, Garret Voorhees. Secundi, Revs. N. I. M. Bogert, C. W. Pitcher, W. B. Voorhees; Elders D. S. Jones, L. S. Blackwell, Jos. B. Anderson, Wm. A. Weart.

Classis of Schoharie.—The following persons were appointed to the Particular Synod of Albany: Primarii, Revs. J. H. Van Doren, D. K. Van Doren, E. Miller, J. G. Smart; Elders Wesley Posson, P. S. Danforth, James Hays, Bradley Smith. Secundi, Revs. Wm. H. Carr, Philip Phelps, Jr., John G. Fagg, J. S. Lott; Elders S. K. Campbell, John Hager, Jared Van Wagnen, Wm. Hayes.

Rutgers College.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of the General Catalogue of Rutgers College with the compliments of the President and Trustees of the Institution. This catalogue has been prepared by the direction of the Trustees, by Mr. Irving S. Upson, the Librarian of the College. It contains 132 pages. The paper and print are all that could be desired. Mr. Upson has performed a vast amount of work and carried on a most extensive correspondence in the preparation of this catalogue, and he may well be pleased with the result. It contains a full list of all who have ever been Trustees of Queens College, and of Rutgers afterward, for the name, it will be remembered, was changed in 1826; also of all the Secretaries and Presidents of the Board of Trustees, sketches of all the Presidents from the beginning, and the names of all Vice-Presidents, Librarians, and of the Professors from the beginning.

This catalogue is mainly occupied with the names of the graduates, arranged in the order of the classes, in which the present residence of every living alumnus is given, and the residences at the time of decease of those who have died, also the occupation and so much of the record of each one as could be inserted consistently with the scope and design of the work. The difficulty of obtaining full and accurate information in all cases in preparing a work like this, only those who have been engaged in it can appreciate.

We call attention to the following

Compiler's Notice:

"After diligent efforts to secure full information respecting every name in this catalogue, the compiler finds his knowledge in many cases still imperfect. He most earnestly calls upon every one interested to aid in completing the record and in correcting any errors, by sending specific notice of the same at an early day to the Librarian of the College, so that the next issue of the Catalogue may be as accurate as possible."

Financial.

Tuesday, April 27th.

The imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $8,020,190, and the exports at $5,793,089 The export of specie amounted to $2,236,482 The Bureau of Statistics reports for the whole country exports of merchandise for March $53,690,308, and imports $60,037,627; export of specie and bullion $12,265,350 and import $2,600,713 For the nine months ending March 31st, exports of merchandise $515,492,350, and imports $470,981,670; export of specie $46,120,598, and import $35,170,963. Of the specie exported during the nine months $25,658,715 was gold. The export of last week was chiefly to France, which is buying gold. Sterling exchange yesterday sold for $4 86 3-4 for 60 day bills and $4.88 3-4 for demand.

The Associated Banks last week increased loans $975,100, lost in specie $1,939,800, gained in legal tenders $151,700, lost in deposits $1,556,000, and reduced the surplus of reserve by $1,399,100, making it $13,323,550. The average rate for loans was 2 1-2 to 3 per cent. Money was in good supply yesterday at 1 1-2 to 2 1-2 per cent. Time loans and commercial paper average 5 per cent. The U. S Treasury gained last week $2 512,571 in legal tenders and $629,822 in gold.

Stock Market still unsettled by strikes and railroad differences. Securities generally firmly held, under belief that prices must improve.

Grain quotations here yesterday: Wheat, 91 1-2; corn, 45 1-2; oats, 40 3-4, but No. 1 white sold at 45 cents. Provisions quiet and weak. Cotton closed, May 9.20-21, June 9.33-34, July 9.44-45. Hay and straw in full supply and prices a little lower. Best timothy 85 to 90 cents, and No. 1 rye straw 90 to 95.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

Several fights took place between the police and the strikers of the sugar workers in Williamsburgh yesterday and a number were injured.

Saturday, 24.—An attempt was made by an explosion to destroy the church of San Luis in Madrid....The Greek question still unsettled. It is reported that France will join the other Powers in the issue of an ultimatum insisting on Greece's abandoning her warlike preparations, but will refuse to join them in any naval demonstration intended to coerce Greece....A body was exhumed from an old burying ground in Philadelphia a few days ago in a perfect state of preservation and completely petrified. The corpse had turned slightly yellow and was as hard as marble and weighed about 1,000 pounds. It was buried thirty-eight years ago....The Pan-Electric investigation still going on....Lake Shore strike ended and the men return to work....The Nickel Plate shops in Cleveland, O., closed yesterday on account of the switchmen's strike in Chicago....An insane mother at Harmony, New Jersey, killed her four children with an axe and then took rat poison; it is impossible for her to recover....About 3,000 men are on a strike in the sugar factories in Brooklyn, Eastern District; most of the factories are to be closed....The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been sued by Janeway to recover damages amounting to nearly a quarter of a million of dollars resulting from the burning some time ago of the Janeway wallpaper factory at New Brunswick, N. J. The fire was caused by the collision of an oil train on the bridge over the Raritan river....The new bridge over the Harlem river will be eighty feet wide with boulevard driveway and sidewalks for pedestrians. It is to be finished in two years from June 1st.

Monday, 26.—A fight is reported between Orange and Catholic societies in Glasgow. ....Greece is expected to disarm....The peasants of Galicia fear a massacre....Eight thousand members of the Civil Service in Ireland have appointed a committee to watch the progress of the Home Rule bill and to try to secure an improvement of the provision in the bill which relates to themselves....Archbishop Croke delivered an eulogy on Mr. Gladstone at Thurles, Ireland, declaring that the Premier was Ireland's greatest friend....A contest is expected between the Knights of Labor and the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers in Pittsburg....Cars running on the Third avenue line in this city under petty annoyances ...Ferdinand Ward has been sending letters to friends outside Sing Sing prison, but was betrayed by a supposed accomplice by the name of Morgan, who was serving a term for grand larceny. The letters were handed to Morgan through the ventilator, but Ward says he "did not know" he was doing wrong....A tornado visited Killeen near Galveston, Texas, destroying property. Hail stones fell as large as hens' eggs ...Ex President Arthur's condition is improved a little, but his physicians say there is little hope for his recovery. ...The little boy and girl who were badly bitten by a dog some weeks ago at Red Bank, N. J., showed signs of hydrophobia yesterday....The Mississippi river is rising very fast and lacks eleven inches and a half of the highwater mark of 1882.

Tuesday, 27.—The strikes continue on the Third avenue road of this city, in the sugar refineries of Brooklyn, and on the Missouri Pacific. Spikes were drawn from a rail on the Missouri Pacific, a train wrecked, and two lives lost. It is claimed that the road is doing more business than a year ago. Workingfolk uneasy all over the country....Roosevelt's organ factory in this city burned out yesterday....Breaks in levees along the Mississippi reported. Water up to mark of 1882....Geronimo's Apaches committing outrages in Mexico ... Mrs. Wendell Phillips died yesterday.... Ex-President Arthur said to have had a relapse....The reply of Greece, to demand of Powers to disarm, not satisfactory.... Division in Liberal party on Home Rule becoming more serious. John Bright hesitating. ..Another Austrian town, Lisko, three fourths burned up ...Tennyson's son, Hon. Lionel Tennyson, died on voyage from London to Calcutta.

One of the greatest annoyances to mothers in the care of children, is to find it necessary to sew buttons here and there on their undergarments, at most inconvenient times. The pleasure of advoiding this trouble, is caused by using The Good Sense Corset Waist. These waists, suitable for persons of all ages, are perfection, as regards make, beauty, health and comfort. The buttons are fastened with tape and cannot be pulled off. Messrs. Ferris Bros., the manufacturers of these goods, make a full line of Good Sense Corsets. The immense demand for their goods proves conclusively that for elegance of finish, shape and comfort, Ferris Bros. goods are unequaled. Sensible mothers buy their Comfortable Nursing Corset, which combines all the improvements that can be put in to make it popular. All the leading stores keep their goods.

Indigestion, Dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York.
Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by David W. Lewis & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

New York, April 24, 1886.

Butter.—Receipts for the week, 28,122 pks.; exports none.

Warm weather, increased receipts and a demoralized market with a decline of 5a8c. per lb. all through the list, were the features of the market. This early make spring stock will not carry, and holders are compelled to take bids as offered and clear the arrivals. Grass is reported splendid, and the local make in New England and New Jersey lessens all the near-by demand materially. There were sales of finest N. Y. State creamery make at 23a24c. Selections of finest Delaware dairies at same price and lines of Chenango, Cattaraugus and Cortland at 20a21c.; Northern Welsh sold at 19a20c., and some clearing sales were made at the close at 17a18c. Western makes of all kinds are arriving more freely, and our market closes with considerable stock being carried over and prices weak and irregular. We quote:

New butter, fancy creamery	23	@25
do do dairy (selections)	21	@23
do good to fine	17	@20
do poor to common	10	@15

Cheese.—Receipts for the week, 12,280 boxes; exports about 12,000 boxes.

There are more cheese than wanted. Trade is light and prices lower. There were some arrivals of new cheese which sold at 10a10½c. for finest, while the bulance, which were more or less skimmed, sold at a range of 5a9c. We quote:

Choice full cream colored cheese	10	@10½
" " white "	10	@10½
Good early useful cheese	7	@ 9
Skimmed cheese	2	@ 6

Eggs.- Receipts for the week were 29,937 bbls.

There has been a tame market for Easter week, and fair marks of Western and Canadas have been kept at 13c. with some difficulty. Sales on 'Change to-day were 70 bbls. extra Western at 13c., 75 bbls. at 12½c., and 17 bbls. Western firsts at 12½c. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz.	—	@18
Southern and Western, per doz.	12	@13

Maple Sugar in large supply, light demand and lower prices. We quote:

Choice new sugar	7	@ 8
Dark sugar	6	@ 6½
Syrup, per gallon can	—	@75

Marriages.

Howell—Blackwell.—At Blackwell's Mills, N. J., April 14, 1886, by Rev. H. D. B. Mulford, assisted by Rev. A. McWilliam, Lewis A. Howell, of Chicago, Ill., and Anna Wilson Blackwell.

DEATHS.

CUSHMAN.—At Roseville, Newark, N. J., March 25, 1886, David Cushman in the 92d year of his age.

VAN DEUSEN.—At Kingston, N. Y., on April 25, Jacob B. Van Deusen, aged 70 years, after a short illness. He was the head of one the largest drug houses in the State, outside of New York city. It was established in 1850, and has a branch in Saugerties and another at Danbury, Conn. Mr. Van Deusen was born in Albany and was the son of Jacob L. Van Deusen, M.D. The cause of his death was an injury received by a lurch of the steamer while going down a stairway, on his return from Florida, where he had been spending the winter.

Publisher's Department.

Difficulty of breathing, a short, dry cough, a quick pulse, and pain in the left side are symptoms of approaching consumption. Relieve the chest and cure the cough with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. This remedy is swift and certain, at any drug store at 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

In consequence of winter diet and lack of open air exercise, the whole physical mechanism becomes impaired. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the proper remedy, in the spring of the year, to strengthen the appetite, invigorate the system, and expel all impurities from the blood.

Catarrh is a very prevalent and exceedingly disagreeable disease; liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh. 100 doses $1.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THE COUNCIL OF HOPE COLLEGE will meet in regular session in the library of the college, at Holland, Mich., April 28th, 1886, at 10.30 A. M.

The Board of Superintendents of the Western Theological Seminary will meet at the same time and place as above, to conduct the annual examinations. The closing exercises of the seminary will be held April 29th, at 7.30 P. M., in the Second Reformed church of Holland, when Rev. P. Lepeltak will deliver the annual address to the students.

P. MOERDYKE, S. C.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF ALBANY will meet in regular session in the Reformed church at Herkimer, N. Y., on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 3 o'clock P. M. Delegates proposing to attend will please notify C. L Avery, Chairman of Committee of Entertainment. In the absence of the preacher elected for special sermon, the Rev. Dr. Wortman will by special request preach; subject, "AGAPE—The Christian Love."

J. W. BEARDSLEE, Stated Clerk.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF CHICAGO will meet in regular session in the First Reformed Church of Chicago, on Wednesday, May 5th, 1886, at 10.30 A. M. At 4 P. M. of that day Revs. J. S. Joralmon and J. F. Zwemer will deliver addresses on Domestic Missions, which will be followed by a free discussion of one hour. Rev. W. H. Phraner will preach the Synodical sermon on the evening of the first day. P. MOERDYKE, S. C.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in the Reformed Church of Lafayette, on Communipaw avenue, corner of Pine street, Jersey City, on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 3 o'clock P. M. Rev. Thos. C. Easton, D.D., will preach the Synodical sermon on Tuesday evening On Wednesday evening Rev. E. G. Read, of Somerville, will give a discourse on "Prevalent Forms of Sabbath Desecration and the Best Means of Arresting the Evil." Delegates will please send notice of intention to attend to Rev. Wm. R. Duryee, the pastor of the church, saying whether they expect to pass the night in Jersey City. Local trains on the N. J. Central R. R. stop at Communipaw station, near the church. Trains on the Newark and N. Y. R. R. stop at Lafayette station. Horse cars from Jersey City Ferry pass two blocks from the church.

CHAS. H. POOL, Stated Clerk.

THE PARTICULAR SYNOD OF NEW YORK will meet in regular session on Tuesday, May 4th, 1886, at 3 o'clock P. M., in the Reformed Church of Newburgh, N. Y. The retiring President, the Rev. Herman C. Berg, of College Point, L. I., will preach the sermon on the evening of the first day; the communion of the Lord's Supper to be administered after the sermon.

The following are the papers to be read: "The Relation of Miracles to the Laws of Nature," by Rev. John H. Oerter, D.D., of New York; "The Inspiration of the Scriptures," by Rev. Charles W. Fritts, of Fishkill-on-Hudson; "Probation," by Rev. Stephen D. Noyes, of Kingston.

Trains leave New York for Newburgh as follows: West Shore R. R., from foot of Jay street, 11.05 A.M.; from foot of West 42d street 11.25 A. M.; Hudson River R. R., from Grand Central Depot, 11 o'clock A. M. These trains will bring brethren to Newburgh in time for dinner at 1.30 P. M. There are trains also down on both sides of the river reaching Newburgh at about the same hour.

Stated Clerks of Classes will please to give the P. O. addresses of the Elder delegates to General Synod, both primarii and secundi, in the official lists sent to Stated Clerk of Particular Synod.

DANIEL VAN PELT, S. C.

DELEGATES intending to be present at the session of the Particular Synod of New York will please send their names to John F. Van Nort, 48 Ann street, Newburgh, N. Y.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK made the following arrangements for the installation of Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., as pastor of the First Reformed Church of Newark: Service on the evening of Thursday, April 29th; the Rev. Dr. E. P. Terhune to preach the sermon; the Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor or Rev. A. V. V. Raymond to deliver the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Dr. David Waters or Rev. Henry Vehslage to deliver the charge to the people.

HENRY VEHSLAGE, Stated Clerk.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK appointed the following supplies for the Church of Bound Brook: May 2d, Rev. D F. Williams; May 16th, Rev. T. S. Doolittle; May 30th, Rev. H. D. B. Mulford; June 6th. Rev. R. Willis; June 20th, Rev. E. T. Corwin; July 4th, Rev. J. Le Fevre; July 18th, Rev. M. H. Hutton; August 1st, Rev. A. McWilliam; August 15th, Rev. Jas. Cruikshanks; August 29th, Rev. Jacob Cooper; September 12th, Rev. A. G. Van Aken. These brethren will be notified by the church if their services are needed at the above dates.

E. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in adjourned session on the fourth day of May, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in the lecture room of the church, 5th avenue and 29th street.

OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE appointed for the installation of the Rev. Samuel Millett at Wurtsboro, on May 19th, at 3 P. M.: Rev. G. Talmage, D.D., to preside and read the form and charge the pastor, Rev. H. V. S. Myers to charge the people, Rev. W. S. Brown, primarius, to preach the sermon and Rev. E. O. Moffett, secundus. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PARAMUS appointed May 13th, at 8 P. M., for the installation of Rev. J. H. Whitehead as pastor of the North Church of Passaic; the Rev. J. Stillwell to preside and read the form, the Rev. A. R. Thompson, D.D., to preach the sermon, by request, the Rev. Dr. John Gaston to conduct the devotional exercises. STATED CLERK.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA selected May 11th, at 8 P. M., for the installation of Rev. W. H. Clark, D.D., as pastor of the Second Church of Philadelphia, and Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D, to preach the sermon, Rev. W. B. Voorhees, secundus; Rev. Geo. H. Bishop, D.D, to charge the people, or Rev. J. Hart; Rev. S. Streng to charge the pastor, or Rev. C. Schenck. STATED CLERK.

THE CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER made the following arrangements for the installation of the Rev. J. Joseph Rankin at Bronxville, on May 18th, 1886: The Rev. W. R. Duryee, D.D., to preach the sermon, Rev. J. G. Johnson, D.D., to charge the pastor, Rev. C. K. Clearwater to charge the people.

STATED CLERK.

THE address of the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., of Nyack, N. Y., will be No. 1517 North 10th street Philadelphia Pa., after April 1st.

CORRESPONDENTS will hereafter please address Rev. Wm. Moerdyk at Pella, Iowa.

CORRESPONDENTS will address Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., at 15 Clinton avenue, Newark, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address the Rev. Abrm. R. Van Nest, D.D., at 208 Fifth avenue, New York.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR MARCH, 1886.

From Church of Greenport, L.I., $30.76; 2d Freehold, N.J., 42.80; 1st Newark, N.J., 34.15; 2d Pella, Iowa, 4.09; 4th Grand Rapids, Mich, 5; 3d Hackensack, N.J., 2; Newtown, L.I., 8; Syracuse, N.Y., 12.25; Collegiate Church, New York, add., 5; East Millstone, N.J., 11.22; Preakness, N.J., 3.81; German Ev. Church, Houston st., N.Y., 50; Melrose, N.Y., 5; S. S., 1st Hackensack, N.J., 15; Montgomery, N.Y., 15.84; 2d Raritan, Somerville, N.J., 31.93; Centerville, Mich., 6; West Farms, N.Y., 2.57; 34th st., N.Y., 30; 1st Bethlehem, N.Y., 19; 1st Poughkeepsie, N.Y., 24.15; Henry S. Young, Poughkeepsie, N.Y., 25; Catskill, N.Y., 15.20; Centerville, Athenia, N.J., 11.53; S. S., Flatlands, L.I., 20; Ramapo, N.J., 5.50; Metuchen, N.J., 9.02; 2d Pekin, Ill., 2; Middle Church, Brooklyn, L.I., 13.50; West Leyden, N.Y., 1.35; 2d Schenectady, N.Y., add., 4.25; Members of 1st Kingston, N.Y., 50; Prospect Hill, N.Y., 19.73; East Greenbush, N.Y., 22.02; 2d Jersey City, N.J., 11.70; Schoharie Mountain, N.Y., 2; 4th Church and S. S., Philadelphia, Pa., 10; Boonton, N.J., 1; High Bridge, N.Y., 14.09; Saugerties, N.Y., 26.43; Stuyvesant, N.Y., 3.61; Bedminster, N.J., 46; Madison ave., N.Y., 32.41; Fordham, N.Y., 8.20; 1st Bayonne, N.J., 32; Harlem, N.Y.. 25.83; Owasco, N.Y., 3.25; Hope Church, Holland, Mich., 5.25. Total, $779.44.

SPECIAL FUND.—Sunday donations for a student, $13; 1st Holland, Paterson, for Hope College, 5.02; Broadway Church, Paterson, for Northwestern Academy, 10.

FOR PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.—West Newark, N.J., $9.

F. J. HOSFORD, Treasurer,
34 Vesey Street, N. Y.

AGENTS coin money with our Amateur Photo outfit, and collecting family pictures to enlarge. Special 30 day offer. Empire Copying Co., 381 Canal St., New York.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S
PEARLINE
The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

SCROFULA

Humors,
Erysipelas,
Canker, and
Catarrh,
Can be cured by purifying the blood with

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofulous Humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lindale, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 909 Albany st., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt-Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Millie Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS.

RIDLEYS'
Grand, Allen and Orchard Sts., N. Y.

Spring and Summer Merino
UNDERWEAR
FOR LADIES, MISSES, AND CHILDREN.

LADIES' GOSSAMER MERINO VESTS, HIGH NECK AND SHORT SLEEVES.. } 25c.

Ladies' Summer Merino Vests, High Neck and Short Sleeves; also, Long Sleeves and Pants, Handsomely Finished, 50c. and 63c. the Garment.
Ladies' Gauze Merino Vests, High Neck and Short Sleeves; also, Bodies without Sleeves, 25c.; Very Fine at 38c.
Ladies' Balbriggan Vests, High Neck and Short Sleeves, 39c. Children's Super Merino Vests, 16-inch, at 10c. and up, according to size; also, Gauze Vests at same prices. Children's Summer Merino Vests and Pants; also, Drawers, 18c. to 40c., according to size.

MEN'S.

Men's Spring Weight Merino Shirts and Drawers, at 29c, 38c., and 48c.
Men's French Balbriggan Shirts, 65c.
Men's Fancy Balbriggan Shirts and Drawers, 47c. each.
Fancy Cotton Half Hose, 13c., 15c., 18c., and 21c.
French Lisle and English Fancy Half Hose, 35c., 43c. a pair.
Men's Neckwear, Silk Scarfs, &c., 19c., 23c., 38c., 48c. each.

Custom Shirts.

Wamsutta Muslin Shirts, Made to Measure, 3-Ply Linen Bosoms and Bands, Hand-Finished, First-Class Make..... } SIX FOR $6.75.

SUMMER SILKS.

240 Pieces Summer Silks in Checks and Stripes, at 39c., 49c., 59c., and 65c.; Fully One-Third Less than Actual Value.
Black and White Check and Stripe Summer Silks, 24c., 39c., 49c. a yard.
68 Pieces 20-inch Pekin Stripe Velvets in all the Leading Shades to Match, Surahs, Rhadames, and Gros Grains.

Pongee Dress Patterns.

All Silk, each Pattern Containing 19 to 20 yards, at $2.78, $3.25, $5.50, $6.75, $7.50, $8.95 the Pattern
Combination Moire Stripe Satins, 49c.; worth 80c.
23-inch All-Silk Velvet Grenadines, in Black and Steel and Black and Red, at $1.48 per yard; have been sold at $4.
23-inch All-Silk Black Brocade Satin, 89c.; elsewhere $1.25.
24-inch Black Satin Brocade Velvets, 23c. per yard; worth 40c.

Ridley's Fashion Quarterly

And Price-List contains a full and complete catalogue of our entire stock.

SINGLE NUMBER, 15c., OR 50c. PER ANNUM.

ORDERS BY MAIL SOLICITED.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,
309, 311, 311½ to 321 Grand St.,
56 to 70 ALLEN ST., 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST.,
NEW YORK.

FOR A FEW DAYS ONLY.

Moquette Carpets
AT
$1.15 per yard.

NUMEROUS PATTERNS, SUITABLE FOR ALL KINDS OF FURNISHING, TO SELECT FROM.

JOHN & JAMES DOBSON,
40 and 42 West 14th St.,
New York.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

The Church.

Some Day.

BY MRS. SARAH E. EASTMAN.

Some day all doubt and mystery
Will be made clear;
The threatening clouds which now we see
Will disappear.

Some day what seems a punishment,
Or loss, or gain,
Will prove to be God's blessing sent
For very gain.

Some day our weary feet will rest
In sweet content,
And we will know how we were blest
By what was sent;

And looking back with clearer eyes
O'er life's short span,
Will see with wondering, glad surprise,
God's perfect plan;

And knowing that the path we went
Was God's own way,
Will understand His wise intent
Some day, some day.

—Selected.

The Practical Teaching from the Past Revival Work.

THE past winter and fall have been seasons of marked spiritual activity, and great results have been accomplished. This spiritual activity has been characterized by the introduction of new methods in Christian work and consequently new opinions have been formed as to what may constitute the wisest course in future work.

A general belief must have gained a hold on the Church of Christ that revival work is part of its legitimate and regular duty. This belief has had emphasis given to it by the successful efforts of the missions of the Episcopal Church, of the various evangelists in other denominations, and the individual work of pastors. No longer does it seem to be the opinion that revivals occur at irregular intervals, but, since the Holy Spirit abides with the Church, an outpouring of the Spirit may be looked for hopefully throughout the year.

What, then, we can ask, are the new conceptions the Church has gained as to its duty? What are the practical lessons the past has taught us? In trying to answer these questions we will find that there have arisen new ideas. That such conceptions have been formed as to give a totally different realization of the methods in relation to church work. Let us consider only three views, and in giving these it is not to be supposed the subject is exhausted. These are only the more prominent features that present themselves:

1st. More of an emphasis and character are given to the prayer meetings. In a vast majority of churches the prayer-meeting has been a burden to the people and an anxiety to the pastor. Nothing could be made of it. The faithful church member felt he must go to it, but could not see the advantage in so doing. The pastor prayed that the meeting might at last benefit the church, but his prayer seemed never to be answered. It was something no one felt ought to be given up, yet no one could see the advantage of it. I think that the new conception given to this meeting will result in making it one of the most important factors in church work.

The view is, that it is the place to quicken or revive or generate spiritual vigor and faith among the members of the Church. This, it is true, is the old view, yet there is a new idea in it. An illustration will suffice to explain my meaning. All the postal cards are made where I live. There are different rooms in the building for the various processes of making these cards. At the rear of the building is the engine room which generates the power for all the works. Now the prayer-meeting bears to the Church the same relation that the engine room does to this factory. That all may go right in the engine room the proprietors would spend time, money and labor. No effort would they think too great to ensure success there.

The same view is now held as to the prayer-meeting. Every plan must be tried to cause its success, as it is the place where spiritual power is generated for the Church.

2d. There is more significance attached to the evening service. An agitation was made lately over the question whether the evening service ought not to be abandoned. The reasons for and against such a step were so clearly presented then that there is no occasion here to mention any of the sorrowful facts about it, which every church can bear testimony to. The general opinion is that it is most difficult to sustain the evening service successfully. Many plans have been tried, and while they did well for a time, the most of them have proved failures.

Now it is recognized that it is the best time for services of an evangelistic character. The heavier part of the work, as preaching on abstruse topics, discussions on weighty themes, is done in the morning. For the evening the question is how to reach the masses; how best to promote evangelistic work.

It would not be advisable to suggest plans or methods as to this service, since circumstances, surroundings and location must determine these. What our attention is directed to is the fact that the experiences of the past winter and fall teach the lesson that the evening service must be positively characterized as evangelistic.

3d. A death blow has been given to the prevalent belief that revivals could only occur during the Week of Prayer, or the first week in January. This week, while it has done much good, has really stood in the way of the spiritual success of many churches. A church, feeling that this week was the best time for extra effort, would wait until then. If the week brought no result then all effort would cease. Hence a church would go to sleep again until the next Week of Prayer occurred, and then the same performance would be gone through as before.

Now a time that would suit one place for a revival would be absolutely impracticable to another. Many things might transpire in a congregation that would cause any interest to be impossible. Yet so bound by the traditions of this week have the churches generally been that they thought no other time than this was right to make a special effort.

One of the best lessons then that we have learned is, that we ought to make special efforts whenever there seem any indications for them. The injunction given by the Independent a little while ago to gather in the net as often as we put it into the water, must become the regular method of the churches. The Week of Prayer may be observed as before, but the Church of Christ must realize that revival work must be kept up continuously throughout the year.

A. D. C.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 6, SECOND QUARTER.

M. Sowing and Reaping.....John 4: 27-42.
T. The Sower and the Seed.....Matt. 13: 1-9.
W. The Harvest Plenteous, the Laborers Few...Matt. 9: 32-38.
T. Laborers Together with God.....1 Cor. 3: 1-9.
F. Sowing in Tears, Reaping in Joy.....Ps. 126: 1-6.
S. Reaping if we Faint Not.....Gal. 6: 1-9.
S. The Gospel in Samaria.....Acts 8: 5-25.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

May 9th.—"Sowing and Reaping."—John 4: 27-42.

Golden Text.—"One soweth, and another reapeth."—John 4: 37.

Central Truth.—"The field is the world."—Matt. 13: 38.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS lesson is so closely connected with that of last week that it needs no particular introduction other than to recall the conversation up to the time when the disciples approached the well. Jesus had gradually led the woman up to the point where she saw herself revealed to her own conscience as a condemned sinner, and her Teacher as the Messiah, or the Saviour of sinners. Before she had time to ponder these wonderful truths, and to feel their real import, the disciples returned from their marketing, and so made a break in the conversation. The special lessons for the disciples, and the broader results of this wayside talk are indicated in the passage now before us.

THE LESSON.

I. ASTONISHMENT.—VS. 27-30.

V. 27.—"Upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman." The cause of their astonishment was threefold, viz., that the woman should have found anything to draw her into such an interested conversation with the Master; that He should thus overlook the barriers separating the Jews from the Samaritans; and that He should be giving time and attention to a Samaritan woman. All of their Jewish prejudices were thus rudely shocked, and their eyes opened to look for a revolution in spiritual things through the teachings of Jesus. This entire incident seems to have been designed in the Providence of God for the enlightenment of the disciples as much as for the immediate results among the Samaritans. They were speechless in their astonishment and did not question either Jesus or His auditor.

V. 28.—"The woman then left her waterpot." Jesus had evidently had time to call her to Him, and she seized the opportunity which the coming of the disciples gave her to go and proclaim to others what she herself had just heard. She left her waterpot in order to go the more quickly, and by this act indicated without words her intention to return.

V. 29.—"Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did." The form of this invitation indicates an earnest call, as from a distance. She could not wait until near the neighbors to whom she called, but shouted to them her wonderful news. The single ray of light which Jesus had sent into her darkened conscience had illuminated her whole sinful life, so that she could say that He had told her all that she had ever done. "Is not this the Christ?' The rendering in the Revised Version is more literal, "Can this be the Christ?' She is convinced for herself, yet does not dare to state her conviction positively.

V. 30.—"Then they went out of the city, and came unto him." The eagerness of this woman, her evident rapt enthusiasm took the place of further argument, and her quickened soul quickened theirs.

II. INSTRUCTION.—VS. 31-38.

V. 31.—"In the meanwhile his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat." When they left Him, perhaps an hour or more before, He was weary and hungry. The natural inference was that His physical wants must have become greater by the delay, especially as He had not been permitted to enjoy a season of rest during their absence. Their love is manifest in that they put aside their curiosity about the woman until they should have served their Master.

V. 32.—"I have meat to eat that ye know not of." His body had been refreshed, and instead of feeling the pangs of hunger more forcibly than when they left, He felt them less. It is not necessary to suppose, however, that in saying this Jesus entirely refused to share in the meal with His friends, but He wished to turn their attention from earthly to heavenly things. The conversation which follows has been well called a choice bit of table-talk. We would be wise, if we could make our meal times seasons of spiritual as well as of physical refreshment.

V. 33.—"Hath any man brought him aught to eat?" They were not prepared to understand the spiritual significance of the words. They understood Him as literally as the woman had taken His words about the water.

V. 34.—"My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." With Jesus spiritual necessities overbore all temporal concerns. To be in communion with His Father, or to be actively engaged in doing His work was more than meat and drink. In these words we have the keynote of a lofty, devoted and successful life.

V. 35.—But He was not the only one who had work to do. He had chosen these disciples, not simply that they might receive from Him, but that they might impart to others. They were to be channels of blessing to the world, and the events of this day were to teach them something of the breadth and urgency of their commission. "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.' There was no necessity for a long period of waiting, as in the earthly harvest, but the Word was already springing up in hearts before apparently sterile, and the work of sowing and reaping was to be carried on simultaneously. While Jesus had, no doubt, immediate reference to the people of this village, who were now approaching, yet we may well believe that He also contemplated the larger field of the world, into which these disciples were soon to thrust the sickle.

V. 36.—"He that reapeth receiveth wages." Spiritual labor has a most generous compensation. The work was to be hard, but the reward would be glorious. "That both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." We may take this clause as describing Christ as the sower, and His disciples as the reapers, in which case the intimate sympathy between the Master and His servants is set forth; or as describing successive generations of workers, bound together by an unseen but indissoluble bond of love and service.

V. 37.—"One soweth and another reapeth." Instead of being cause for discouragement and discontent, this fact is full of encouragement and inspiration. If I faithfully sow the seed the harvest will be gathered into the Lord's garner, whether I be permitted to fill my bosom with the sheaves or not. We are gathering the accumulated harvests of all the past.

V. 38.—"Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors." The present strikes its roots deeply into the past. The disciples in their successful work gathered the results of the teachings of Jesus and the Baptist, of the Prophets and of Moses.

III. ENCOURAGEMENT.—VS. 39-42.

V. 39.—"Many of the Samaritans believed on him for the saying of the woman." These came to Jesus with minds all ready made up to accept Him as their Teacher and Saviour. This woman was one of the earliest laborers in this harvest field, and the Lord gave her a blessed reward.

V. 40.—"They besought him that he would tarry with them." Awakened souls feel the need of instruction, and these new converts would have Jesus build them up in knowledge and faith. "He abode there two days." Those were days of blessing to the Samaritans and of great encouragement to Jesus and His disciples. If Pharisee and Jew reject the Gospel against themselves, the outcast and despised will gladly enter the kingdom.

V. 42.—"Now we believe." The faith of these men rested, not simply on the witness of others, but upon personal intercourse with Christ and experience of the power of His grace.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Be a prompt and hearty witness for Jesus.

2. The experience of others ought to quicken our faith.

3. A revived soul refreshes a tired body.

4. To do God's work while we live ought to be more to us than mere getting a living.

5. White fields are all around us waiting for reapers.

6. Whether sowing or reaping, we are doing God's work.

7. The most unpromising fields often yield the most abundant harvests.

8. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

Waiting to Grow.

LITTLE white snow-drops, just waking up,
Violet, daisy, and sweet buttercup;
Think of the flowers that are under the snow,
Waiting to grow!

And think what hosts of queer little seeds,
Of flowers and mosses, of ferns and of weeds,
Are under the leaves and under the snow,
Waiting to grow!

Think of the roots getting ready to sprout,
Reaching their slender, brown fingers about
Under the ice and the leaves and the snow,
Waiting to grow!

Only a month, or a few weeks more,
Will they have to wait behind that door;
Listen and watch and wait below,
Waiting to grow!

Nothing so small, and hidden so well,
That God will not find it, and presently tell
His sun where to shine and His rain where to go,
Helping them grow!

—Selected.

Acknowledge the Debt.

A VENERABLE clergyman of Virginia said lately: "Men of my profession see much of the tragic side of life. Beside a death-bed the secret passions, the hidden evil as well as the good in human nature, are very often dragged to light. I have seen men die in battle, children, and young wives in their husbands' arms, but no death ever seemed so pathetic to me as that of an old woman, a member of my church.

"I knew her first as a young girl, beautiful, gay, full of spirit and vigor. She married and had four children; her husband died and left her penniless. She taught school, she painted, she painted, she sewed; she gave herself scarcely any time to eat or sleep. Every thought was for her children, to educate them, to give them the same chance which their father would have done.

"She succeeded; sent the boys to college, and the girls to school. When they came home, pretty, refined girls and strong young men, abreast with all the new ideas and tastes of their time, she was a worn-out, commonplace old woman. They had their own pursuits and companions. She lingered among them for two or three years, and then died of some sudden failure in the brain. The shock woke them to a consciousness of the truth. They hung over her, as she lay unconscious, in an agony of grief. The oldest son, as he held her in his arms, cried:

"'You have been a good mother to us!'

"Her face colored again, her eyes kindled into a smile, and she whispered, 'You never said so before, John.' Then the light died out and she was gone."

How many men and women sacrifice their own hopes and ambitions, their strength, their life itself, to their children, who receive it as a matter of course, and begrudge a caress, a word of gratitude, in pay ment for all that has been given to them.

Boys, when you come back from college, don't consider that your only relation to your father is to "get as much money as the governor will stand." Look at his gray hair, his uncertain step, his dim eyes, and remember in whose service he has grown old. You can never pay him the debt you owe, but at least acknowledge it before it is too late.—Youth's Companion.

THE very core of healthy and happy discipleship is the willingness to deny self and to let the Master have His way. This principle runs through all the deepest, richest experience of the blood bought and consecrated believer.—T. L. Cuyler.

The Oldest Methodist Minister in Philadelphia.

"I AM the youngest old man in New York," said the Hon. William E. Dodge, a short time before he died. Mr Dodge was indeed one of the sprightliest of old gentlemen. He was as active as most men of fifty, although he was about seventy-five. Up to the time of his death, which came very suddenly, he was able to accomplish more work in a day than almost any of his partners or clerks could get through with.

In Philadelphia lives another "young old man," one of the most venerable of Methodist ministers. He is as active, as hearty and as cheery as was Mr. Dodge. He is the Rev. Anthony Atwood, honored and beloved not only by Methodists, but by good people of every persuasion. Mr. Atwood might pass for a man of about sixty, but he is eighty-five. About fifteen years ago he told the writer that he hardly expected to do much more work, and that he thought a man of seventy might be considered to have rendered all the effective service he would be capable of. Yet, since that time Mr. Atwood has done more ministerial work than many a younger man has accomplished. Some years ago he had a partial stroke of paralysis, which for a while disturbed his general health. He also suffered from a bronchial difficulty which threatened to be serious. From both of these disabilities he has now entirely recovered. With his snow-white hair in its ample fulness, and his clear and ruddy complexion, he is the picture of a model patriarch, both in health and good nature. Although it is some time since Mr. Atwood has been in pastoral charge of a church, he preaches frequently, and is regularly at the Green Street Methodist Episcopal Church on Communion Sundays; taking part in the sacramental service.

The writer recently called on this venerable clergyman at his home, No. 809 North Seventeenth street, Philadelphia, and found him as cheerful and vivacious as in former years

"Well, Mr. Atwood, it looks like old times to see you looking so vigorous and hearty; but years do not seem to make you an old man; and you appear to enjoy quite as good health as most of the younger men."

"My health," said Mr. Atwood, "is all I can expect, considering my age, which is now close to eighty-five. Since the stroke of paralysis, which I had several years ago, I have not been able to preach with my former vigor. I find that I am not capable of a prolonged pulpit effort as of old. Words do not follow my thoughts as quickly as they used to. But with this exception I am about as well as I have been for many years."

"When I had that stroke of paralysis," continued Mr. Atwood, "I resorted to a treatment which I found had been of great value to many others who were similarly affected. I had for many years known Dr. Palen, of Messrs. Starkey & Palen, who have done so much good with their Compound Oxygen, and I consulted him in reference to my case. I took the treatment at the office, which was then in Girard street. At once I began to receive benefit. For some time I visited the office regularly and frequently. I took inhalations of the Oxygen until my health was so fully restored that I was in no further need. It gave me a new vitality, restored my general health, and put my whole system in renewed good order."

"You had some bronchial difficulty, did you not, Mr. Atwood?"

"Yes; I had an irritation in my throat which was quite troublesome, and threatened to be more so. I tried Compound Oxygen for this also, and was surprised not only to find the completeness of the relief it afforded me, but the readiness with which it acted. I procured a 'Home Treatment' in order to cure this bronchial trouble at my leisure; supposing the irritation would be slow to go away, as it is in the case of many clergymen, who, after long years of pulpit service, are attacked with soreness of the vocal organs. But I had occasion to use only a small portion of what was contained in the 'Treatment.' My throat became so much better that I had no occasion again to resort to the use of Oxygen."

"And have you, since your recovery, had much occasion to use this remedy, Mr. Atwood?"

"Not a regular thing, at all; only at long intervals. Once in awhile, if I need a general toning up of my system, I call at the new office of Drs. Starken & Palen,—which, by the way, is an exceedingly beautiful and convenient place—and I take a few inhalations. From this I always receive benefit and strength."

"You are, then, a firm believer in this method of treatment?"

"Yes, very, very firm. You may say that I most heartily and thoroughly approve the treatment and endorse Drs. Starkey & Palen as gentlemen whom I have known for years, physicians of repute and ability, in whom I have entire confidence. They have done incalculable good with Compound Oxygen. I am glad that so many invalids have been brought to health by this means. I am glad, too, that people are becoming more generally acquainted with it."

The experience of Mr. Atwood is an evidence that the virtues of Compound Oxygen are not only for the advantage of the young and those in middle life. There are many other instances on record in which persons advanced in years have received, by means of this great vitalizer, renewal of health and prolongation of life. For further reference to these and for better acquaintance with the merits of Compound Oxygen write to Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., for their pamphlet-treatise, which will be freely mailed to any address.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

In Seasickness.

Prof. ADOLPH OTT, New York, says: "I used it for seasickness during an ocean passage. In most of the cases the violent symptoms which characterize that disease yielded, and gave way to a healthful action of the functions impaired."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a manner peculiar to itself, the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. You will find this wonderful remedy effective where other medicines have failed. Try it now. It will purify your blood, regulate the digestion, and give new life and vigor to the entire body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me great good. I was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

"I suffered three years from blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Y^e Costumes of finest fabrick are Cleansed or Dyed without injury at

LEWANDO'S FRENCH DYEING AND CLEANSING ESTABLISHMENT,

17 Temple Place, Boston, U. S. A. | Fifth Ave. cor. W. 14th St. New York.

Price List Sent Free.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON, Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS

CHURCH FURNITURE

INTERIOR DECORATIONS

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. FOR OIL.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION, Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Sanitary Science teaches us to promptly remove all decomposing materials from our dwellings; of more importance is the removal of the waste products of the human body by means of the skin, kidneys and bowels. The slightest irregularity in the action of these important organs should be at once checked by the use of TARRANT'S EFFERVESCENT SELTZER APERIENT. This valuable family medicine CURES CONSTIPATION by thoroughly cleansing the bowels and establishing a regular habit. It acts gently upon the kidneys, opens the pores of the skin and thus assists nature to throw off all morbid humors. It is economical in price, pleasant to the taste, gentle in action. Sold by druggists everywhere.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

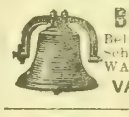
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.



BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 1500 TESTIMONIALS
CINCINNATI BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

It is safe to assert that nine families out of ten lose one hundred dollars' worth of apparel every year by the use of poor soap. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says: "I am "surprised to find a "laundry soap of such "remarkable purity as the 'Ivory.'" Hold fast to that which is good.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

Ovington Brothers

Fulton and Clark Sts.,

BROOKLYN, N. Y.,

IMPORTERS OF

FINE CHINA AND GLASS,

CALL SPECIAL ATTENTION TO

A beautiful decorated French China Dinner Set, comprising 96 useful pieces daintily gilded and ornamented with graceful sprays of field flowers. Price, $28.00.

COMPRISING THE FOLLOWING PIECES:

12 Dinner Plates.
12 Tea Plates.
12 Sauce Plates.
12 Butter Plates.
12 Soup Plates.
1 Medium Platter.
1 Small Platter.
2 Covered Dishes.
2 Vegetable Dishes.
1 Soup Tureen.
1 Gravy Boat.
1 Pickle Dish.
12 Tea Cups and Saucers.

96 PIECES.

CATALOGUE SENT ON APPLICATION.

The same goods may be found in our Western house,

145 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

Please mention this paper.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains n

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

O. D. CASE'S SONS,

837 BROADWAY,

Corner Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK.

Previous to removal on May 1st, to No. 4 E. 20th St., (bet. Broadway and 5th Ave.), are offering a carefully selected stock of

WALL PAPERS

At Very Attractive Prices.

WARREN WARD & CO

ARTISTIC RELIABLE AND DURABLE

Furniture

6 & 8 East 20th St. N.Y.

To meet the demand for Cheap Goods for Country Homes, by increasing the capacity of our warerooms, we have added a special line of LOW PRICE SUITES for BED-ROOMS, PARLORS and DINING-ROOMS. At the same time will maintain our reputation for GOOD GOODS. We also call special attention to double cane goods for piazzas and sitting rooms in Seaside Houses and Country Hotels

First class goods of our own exclusive designs and manufacture, in unique pattern and fine finish, at moderate prices.

WARREN WARD & CO.

6 and 8 E. 20th St., New York.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

CARPETINGS.

In addition to our

EXTRAORDINARY

Attractions

in the finer qualities of Carpetings, we are showing the largest assortment of the Cheaper Grades of Tapestry and Body Brussels ever offered. To secure the choicest patterns we advise an early selection.

W. & J. SLOANE

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

Degraaf and Taylor

LEADING FURNITURE MAKERS AND UPHOLSTERERS

47 and 49 W. 14th st., and 48 W. 15th st,

BETWEEN 5TH AND 6TH AVES.,

NEW YORK.

CARPETS

500 Pieces Best Quality Moquettes.
Pieces Best 5-Frame Body Brussels.
Pieces Best All-Wool Ingrains.

This Season's Styles at the Lowest Prices Ever Known.

1,000 Pieces Velvets, a Manufacturer's Entire Stock Just Received, to be Closed Out Quickly Regardless of Cost.

Novelties in

MATTINGS,

Just Landed. White and Red Check, from $5.00 per Roll. Fine Fancy Patterns from $8.00 per Roll.

UPHOLSTERY.

Our Immense Stock of Silk Brocatelles, Silk Tapestries, Petit Points, Silk and Mohair Plushes, etc., have been Reduced to such Prices as Cannot Fail to Please.

Lace Curtains, comprising all the Different Varieties, in Select Patterns, at Importation Prices.

Window Shades, in Transparent and Opaque Cloths, Cambrics, Hollands, etc., Plain and Embroidered, a Specialty.

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,

SIXTH AV. AND 13TH ST., NEW YORK.

Established Thirty Years.

CHAS. P. ROGERS & CO.,

246 and 248 Sixth Ave.,

Corner 16th Street, NEW YORK.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Fine Bedding Spring Beds, Etc.,

Brass and Iron Bedsteads, Down Quilts, Cushions, Etc.

Church Cushions a Specialty.

INSTITUTIONS FURNISHED.

Branch, 89 S. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent. Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

UNDERWEAR DEPARTMENT.

LADIES' SILK UNDERWEAR. Pink, Sky Blue, Scarlet, &c. Also, Best Manufactures in Cashmere, Merino, Balbriggan and Lisle Thread.

GENTLEMEN'S AND BOYS' Gauze and Medium Merino Shirts and Pants. Also, the finest PURE SILK manufactured.

NATURAL COLORED WOOLLEN UNDERWEAR in light and medium weights.

NOVELTIES in Gentlemen's Half Hose.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

BLACK SILKS.

James M'Creery & Co.

offer their friends and customers in City and Country the following makes and qualities of Black Dress Silks at specially attractive prices, viz.:

100 Pieces Black Imported Surahs at $1, our regular $1.25 quality.

100 Pieces Black Satin Rhadames at $1; marked down from $1.25.

150 Pieces of Black Rhadames and Tricotines at $1.25; good value for $1.65.

75 Pieces of Black Satin Damasses, 24-inch, at 85 cents; reduced from $1.25.

Rich Novelties in Watered Silks, Moire, Francaise, Satin and Moire Pekins, Cluny Stripes, Crochet Figures, etc., suitable for Combinations and Wraps, at very low prices.

An examination is invited. Orders by mail carefully filled, and satisfaction guaranteed.

James M'Creery & Co.,

Broadway & 11th St.,

New York.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,
469 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

Send for Circular.
WHY DO MOTHERS
Put stiff corsets on their growing Children? Don't do it, but BUY FERRIS'
PATENT
GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS
Fit all ages.
All Physicians recommend them. Ask your merchants for them. Take no other.
FERRIS BROS., Manuf'rs
81 White St., New York.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mfd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 18. WHOLE No. 2910. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE LADIES hold their annual missionary meetings next Tuesday in the Collegiate Church on 5th avenue and 48th street. It promises to be an unusually interesting day. A lunch will be furnished during the intermission.

LET NO ONE neglect "Aunt Marjorie's Corner" through a notion that it is only for the gentlewomen. There is a piece there this week on Fugitive Poetry that is very pleasant reading.

THE APPEAL mailed by one of our ministers, urging the payment of the debt of the Board of Foreign Missions during this month, is worthy of coöperation. The debt is about as it was at the beginning of the year—$9,000. This is a better result than was anticipated a month ago. If this important work can be relieved altogether from the embarrassment of debt it can be carried forward with fresh vigor and success.

LEAFLETS on the lesson upon the miracle at Cana contained the rendering of the Revised Version by the side of that of the King James's Version, and therefore had these words: "This beginning of his signs did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested his glory." The word "signs" is objected to. We approve and commend it. The Greek word is "sémeion," it means "a sign." It does not mean a miracle; so rendered, it is mistranslated. St. John said and meant to say, this first sign or indication, evidence, proof of his Divine glory did Jesus. And so every version ought to say.

THE VOICE replies to our paragraph on "Prohibition or Nothing":

That is a perfectly correct statement as far as our attitude is concerned; but we regard it as no "improvement" of the license laws to make the license fees higher, and to make the State more dependent than ever for its revenue upon the prosperity of the liquor traffic. We say "Prohibition or nothing"; but we do not say prohibition by wholesale or not at all. We are willing to take and to fight for prohibition for one county or one town or one ward. We think a half-loaf better than no bread. Any restriction that is not coupled with a permission, we can indorse. Any law that promises to close even ten of the saloons of New York meets our approval, provided that same law does not make as a condition of closing the ten that the other 8,990 receive legal recognition and protection. It seems to us this position is the only one that can consistently be held. The fact that "reputable persons" do not agree with us doesn't change our conscience in the matter.

We are then with The Voice heartily if it will advocate the County Local Option bill now before the legislature at Albany. But good men, speaking from what they have seen, are divided in regard to the effect of high license. Their testimony is exactly contradictory. Besides, the traffic is now licensed. We are convinced that prohibition cannot be carried in this city and Brooklyn. Is it not wise to restrict the license and get what we can?

LET US BE JUST.—The workingmen are in revolt against the conditions which, in their judgment, are oppressive. They have been guilty of some acts of violence. The most is made of those acts. But never before in this country or in Europe has a strike so extensive been attended with so few acts of violence or passion. Never before have the workingmen practised so much self-restraint and exhibited so much regard for the rights of others. The wrongs of which they have been guilty are inexcusable. That interference with the brush-making of the crippled boys a few days ago, was a cruel thing to do. But who can recall a strike here or in Europe, at all comparable with the present revolt, when the number of such acts has been so small?

Let us be just again in recognizing and granting the right of the workingmen to organize associations. Let us recognize their right to negotiate through their representatives. A clear right they have to do this very thing, whether it is in the letter of the law or not. In Great Britain the Unions have received legal recognition and standing. They are just as much entitled to it as capital is to organization and incorporation. Capital is organized and acts through its representatives. Why should not workingmen be allowed to select their best men as their representatives? The denial of this right or privilege produces the intolerance by organized laborers of non-union men. They feel the necessity of organization. The non-union men thwart their endeavor to bring about that result. Do they not need organization? Singly are they not powerless? And are there not reasons and many reasons why the workingmen should seek to better their condition? If any man is ignorant of the reasons let him read Mr. Hudson's The Railways and the Republic, recently published. Let him remember that the miners and engineers in the anthracite region earn on an average less than $500 a year; that the average earnings of the operatives in American factories, as given in the last census, are $367 a year; that car drivers and conductors on the street railways were earning $520 a year for working fourteen hours and over a day. Let him remember that the capital of railroads has been largely inflated, and the capital of not a few manufactories also, and that a profit is made on this inflation. Let him remember that the Commissioner of Massachusetts, a State officer, reports that married workingmen in that State average earnings of a little over $500 a year, and that it costs each one over $700 a year to live in moderate comfort and decency.

Let us be wise and remember history. This is no new conflict. Not to go farther back, it existed in the 15th century, when the Free Towns and the Guilds united in resisting the aggressions and oppressions of the feudal system. What service they rendered in the long struggle for constitutional liberty! Now look back over the conflict from that day to this. There has been a great deal of turbulence about it, frequent wild and destructive work, often fighting and bloodshed, and many lives are to be counted in the cost. But which has made the most creditable record, capital or labor? And who has been most to blame in bringing about the conflict, capital or labor?

The Authority of the Old Testament.

A RECENT pamphlet entitled "Our Position," issued by the people known as Disciples of Christ, gives some interesting information. They "repudiate all human authoritative creeds," yet they give a list of things in which they agree with evangelical bodies, and also of those in which they differ from all or from some of these bodies.

One point of the creed of this creedless sect is stated as follows: "We accept the Old Testament as true; . . . . but as a book of authority to teach us what we are to do the New Testament alone, as embodying the teachings of Christ and His Apostles, is our standard."

But they forget that in thus denying the authority of the Hebrew Scriptures they fly directly in the face of the teaching of Christ and His Apostles. When the Saviour repelled the tempter in the wilderness it was by quoting the Old Testament. He said again and again, "It is written;" but if the words written had no authority why were they cited? In the Sermon on the Mount our Lord said that He came not to destroy (= abrogate) the law and the prophets, but to fulfil them. But if the law and the prophets were not abrogated by Him, then they are of binding authority still. When He was asked what was the great commandment He answered, quoting the words of the Pentateuch which enjoin supreme love to God and to love our neighbor as ourselves, words which are unlimited either in time or place, and therefore are authoritative now and evermore. When He was asked about marriage He quoted from Genesis the passage which settles the question for all time. When He was asked about the resurrection He referred to the Old Testament as deciding the point not for Jews only but for all men. When He was asked about the way to eternal life He gave the most explicit sanction to the decalogue, saying, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." It follows, then, that to deny the authority of the Old Testament is to deny the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Apostle Paul throughout his epistles cites the old Scriptures, not simply as illustration, but as confirmation of his utterances. Not only so, but he affirms that "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope," and again that "they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." He said also that "every Scripture inspired of God is profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness;" but how could it be this unless it were authoritative? In the conference at Jerusalem the Apostle James quoted from the prophets as a means of settling the question which caused the assembling of the council, and in his epistle he refers to "the royal law according to the Scripture" as a decisive rule of action. The Apostle Peter not only quotes the Old Testament as authority, but tells his brethren that they do well to take heed unto it as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, since they knew that its authors "spake from God, being moved by the Holy Ghost."

It is clear, then, that they who restrict authority to the teachings of Christ and His Apostles run counter to those very teachings. And they cut themselves off from three-fourths of the rule of faith which God has given. They also greatly disparage the Divine wisdom. It pleased the Most High to make His revelation of Himself gradual. Through a long course of years the disclosures were made, the later never superseding, but supplementing the earlier, and the whole together constituting the Divine directory for men. The Bible, the whole Bible, is one book, and it is all needful in order to accomplish its purposes; but to deny authority to the greater part of it is sadly to mutilate the inspired rule of faith and practice. If the Old Testament has and was designed to have no grip upon the conscience of Christians its use and advantage to them is wofully abridged. In fact, it is reduced to the level of uninspired productions. It may contain many excellent things, but the reader is to sit in judgment upon their value to him just as he would in the case of any merely human production. Whatever it be, narrative, proverb, psalm, statute, or prophecy, he is to accept it if it commends itself to his mind, otherwise not. To all who hold such views one may well repeat the incisive words of our Lord, Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures.

THE REVISED VERSION.—Dr. Samuel Cox, in his recent volume of "Expositions," has three discourses on this subject. He subscribes to the general verdict upon the Old Testament, "a literary success, but a critical failure." Still he says that in a thousand passages it has given for the first time the true meaning of the original, making that which was obscure in the Authorized plain and that which was crooked straight; correcting blunders, supplying defects and bringing light into darkness at the slightest possible cost of change. He thinks, indeed, that there were many other passages now indefinite and obscure which the revisers might have made clear, but for their fear of making too many alterations. But, so far as they have gone, he commends their work and says that people now, for all the larger purposes of study and devotion, have a much better, a much more accurate and helpful translation of the Bible than their fathers had. He sustains this judgment by detailed instances of alteration, especially in the Psalms, which we have no room to quote.

CORRECTION.—It has often been said that the Westminster Assembly decided against immersion as the mode of baptism only by a majority of one, and even so learned a man as Dr. Schaff fell into this error in the first edition of his work on the Didache. But the fact is far otherwise. What the Assembly thus decided was whether immersion should be allowed at all. This appears from the following extract from Lightfoot's narrative:

2. On August 7th, 1664, there was a hot discussion in the venerable body "about baptizing of the child, whether to dip or sprinkle him. . . . . whereupon it was fallen upon, sprinkling being granted, whether dipping should be tolerated with it. . . . . After a long dispute it was at last put to the question whether the Directory (for public worship) should run: 'The minister shall take water and sprinkle or pour it with his hand upon the face or forehead of the child,' and it was voted so indifferently that we were glad to count names twice, for so many were unwilling to have dipping excluded that the vote came to an equality within one, for the one side was 24, the other 25; the 24 for the reserving of dipping and the 25 against it." The question was adjourned until the next day, when it was decided that the Directory should read: "He (the minister) is to baptize the child with water, which for the manner of doing it is not only lawful, but also efficient and most expedient to be by pouring or sprinkling water over the face of the child, without any other ceremony." Such was the main point of this famous discussion and vote, as given by Dr. John Lightfoot, a member of the Assembly of Divines.—Lightfoot's Whole Works, XIII., 300–1.

"Old Colony" Papers.

AN OLD ORGAN.

IV.

IN exploring the news columns of the Magazine of the Reformed Dutch Church, let me first give an idea of what was going on in the world in those years (1826–30), so far as it came within the ken of the magazine.

In the first number we are informed of the accession of the Emperor Nicholas to the Russian throne, with a pledge to follow the steps of his brother Alexander in his system of religious and political oppression, which the editor thought would bring his government to "the edge of a volcano about to produce a terrible eruption." The Greeks were gallantly contending for their independence, and gained it before the magazine came to an end, at which time the Russo-Turkish war had also been fought out. The South American Republics were likewise engaged in their long and brave strike for liberty from the oppression and imbecility of Spain.

An Irish crisis is recorded in a later volume, hardly less exciting than that which Parliament recently witnessed when Mr. Gladstone presented his plan of Home Rule. Daniel O'Connell had been elected, but was unable to take the oath as a Roman Catholic. Hence arose the famous struggle, ending in the passage of Sir Robert Peel's Catholic Emancipation Bill in 1829, and O'Connell's taking his seat to begin the great parliamentary agitation which Mr. Parnell seems likely to bring to a successful close after sixty years of England's shame and Ireland's desolation. The elections for the new parliament had been scenes of shameless bribery; "one elector had received a thousand pounds, and a hundred each day during the election which lasted five days." The poet Southey was elected, but the "infamous Cobbett" (a special object of Dr. Brownlee's aversion) was defeated. The Duke of Wellington had been fighting a duel.

The British were engaged in a war with Burmah,—a conquest which has just been consummated by annexing the territory of King Theebaw. The frightful sufferings and perils of the missionary Dr. Judson and his heroic wife, resulting in the death of the latter, are detailed. The beginnings of African and of Arctic exploration are reported. The Sultan Mahmoud had massacred his 15,000 janizaries, Dr. Brownlee indulges in some interpretations of prophecy concerning the fall of the Turkish Empire, which he thinks is predicted in Daniel 11: 44, 45. He does not think that the Turk will "slowly waste away," but will "make a last and tremendous struggle," which "is not far distant. . . . The earliest calculation, we have said, and now repeat it, is A.D. 1842, or 1847, when the Ottoman power shall be annihilated, and the ancient people of God brought home, together with the fulness of the Gentiles." But the Turk has slowly wasted away, and the end is not yet.

The deaths of Adams and Jefferson are reported in the August number of 1826, as having occurred on the same day, and that day the previous Fourth of July. It is farther noted that Jefferson died at the same hour and minute in which fifty years before he had affixed his name to the Declaration of Independence, and Adams at the precise time when it was announced to the public in the yard of the State House in Philadelphia. William Morgan had just disappeared, and the anti masonic agitation was at a height which would have cheered the hearts of some of our Holland seceders in the West. Labor riots in England, and Bank failures and defalcations in this country, were as alarming as anything in the industrial and financial situation of to-day. The U. S. imports for 1826 are reported at $96,340,075, and the exports $99,535,388,—the customs revenue being twenty-four millions! The population of New York city is given at 150,000, and the number of churches at one hundred. The University of the City of New York was announced as projected on an immense scale and "under happy auspices." The population of the United States is given at twelve millions, in connection with the statement that they were bestowing $120,000 a year to save six hundred millions of heathen, and expending $60,000,000 a year for ardent spirits with the result of "destroying the souls and bodies of thirty thousand persons."

I find an item which looks as if the tricycle were not so recent an institution as we supposed. A Dublin coach-maker had constructed a vehicle with three wheels, propelled "with much ease" by "levers alternately acted upon by the hands and the feet of the occupant," and "making an angle with much greater celerity than a coach drawn by horses." It is expected that it "will supersede the present system of mail coaches drawn by horses."

Those who remember the excitement caused in 1853 by the discussion, "Have we a Bourbon among us?" will be interested in an incidental missionary notice of the Rev. Eleazar Williams, whose claim to be Louis XVII. was so vigorously championed in Putnam's Magazine twenty-six years later. He is spoken of as "a grandchild of a daughter of the Rev. John Williams, who was minister at Deerfield when that town was destroyed by the Indians in 1704. His mother had been carried to Canada when she was seven years old and had married a Sachem." He himself was doing missionary work among the Indians at Green Bay on Lake Michigan.

The most notable persons whose deaths are announced in the magazine are those of Red Jacket, the famous Indian chief; Lindley Murray, the grammarian; Robert Pollock, author of "The Course of Time;" Dr. Morse, "the father of American geography;" Col. Rutgers, Dr. Edward Payson of Portland, and Dr. John M. Mason of New York; Gordon Hall, the first missionary of the American Board, and one of the original "haystack" students of Williams College. Of the clergymen of our own Church who died in those days we have notices of the venerable Domine Gebhard of Claverack, the saintly John Cornelison of Bergen, the scholarly Jesse Fonda of Montgomery, the devoted and eloquent Peter Studdiford of Readington, and the accomplished and beloved Matthias Bruen of the Bleecker Street Church in New York. The latter was only thirty-seven years old. Affecting accounts are also given of the deaths of Garrabrant Van Riper, a student in the Theological Seminary; of Theodore Abeel, who had just graduated at Rutgers College; and Stephen Van Brunt, a deacon of the Gowanus Church. All these were young men of great promise. And the pathos of these deaths is increased by the fact that the fathers of both the latter followed them in about a fortnight.

We have also obituaries of some truly venerable men, such as Laurance Proodfoot, Isaac Heyer and G. Janeway of the Collegiate Church, John Knickerbacker of Schaghticoke, and Rem Van Pelt of New Utrecht,—whose memories are still precious in the Church. Other interesting notices (which I regret that I have no space to dwell upon) are those of John A. Beekman of Griggstown, Mrs. Peter D. Vroom, and the young, accomplished and pious Maria C. and Ann Vredenburgh, whose deaths occurred within a few weeks of each other. The contemporaries of all these have almost all followed them, but there may still be those in whose hearts the mention of these names will stir up sacred and sweet remembrances. At any rate, it is good to be reminded, as we turn over these old and time-stained pages, that "such as these have lived and died."

It is instructive too to note, in looking back over these records of Church life, how the names of honored and useful laymen are constantly recurring, some of whose descendants have carried on their labors of love and maintained the ancestral "good report" in the churches.

Some of the principal items of Church News are as follows. The General Synod of 1826 at New York (Dr. Ludlow, President) felt the need of urging the "formation of Sunday Schools in every congregation." Rutgers College, ("our theological college," as it is called) reported, through its Board of Superintendents, a faculty of five Professors (strengthened shortly after by the accession of Dr. Theodore Strong to the mathematical chair). There was no Senior Class. The other classes numbered respectively five, thirteen, and eighteen; thirty-six had already applied for admission for the next year. The Presbyterian General Assembly (Dr. McAuley, Moderator) reported 1,775 churches and 1,135 ministers, and nearly 600 vacant charges. The basis of representation was fixed at one for every twelve ministers.

A meeting was held to initiate a church at Utica, which place "will in fifteen or twenty years probably be the Capitol of the State of New York," with the staunch "belief that our money would be laid out for what is in reality a Dutch Church." The laying of the corner-stone of the Williamsburgh Church (the fore-runner of the Bedford Avenue Church of Brooklyn) is reported; also, the dedication of the "new and beautiful edifice of the Greenwich Church" in New York. Those who to-day look upon this building, corner of Bleecker and Amos Streets, will be rather startled to be told that it is described as "one of the finest specimens of modern architecture and an ornament to that part of the city."

Among the installations of that time were those of Revs. George W. Bethune at Rhinebeck, Benjamin C. Taylor at Bergen, Gustavus Abeel at Belleville, Edwin Holmes at Linlithgo, James B. Hardenbergh in Orchard Street, and Dr. Brodhead in Broome Street, N. Y., Cornelius Van Dyke at Marbletown, Gilbert R. Livingston at Philadelphia, Thomas Dewitt in the Collegiate Church, Peter Rouse in Brooklyn, Philip Duryee at English Neighborhood, Charles Whitehead at Hopewell, H. B. Stryker at "Albany Bush," and of Dr. Milledoler as professor of theology at New Brunswick. We notice incidentally that Rev. Messrs. Hutton, S. B. How, and Messler were missionaries in New York, and I. S. Demund at Walpack, N. J. The death of Dr. Solomon Froeligh receives a passing notice. He was a very able, scholarly, and earnest man, to whom was due the reactionary and now almost extinct movement known as "The True Reformed Church."

Among the "Book Notices" are Scott's Napoleon, Stuart on The Hebrews, Mrs. Sherwood's "Lady of the Manor," Lingard's (Roman Catholic) History of England, Morrell's History of Philosophy, Jacob's Greek Reader, and Webster's "American Dictionary." The completion is also noted of Carey's Dictionary of the Bengalee Language, which had occupied him for ten years. Charlotte Elizabeth was sending out her books with the fertility of a Mrs. Oliphant. A "torrent of novels" was issuing from the press; the critic would probably have considered our present visitation as nothing less than a Noah's deluge! The Waverly novels are "denounced" for their "dangerous political tendency;" and their "irreligious tendency excites the holy indignation of every sensible Christian." The critic does not believe that Sir Walter Scott is to be "charged with their authorship,"—in fact, he considers him to have declared himself not their author. This was in October, 1826. Dr. Gunn's "Life of Dr. Livingston" is announced in the summer of 1829, and on the first of October the accomplished author himself died, at the early age of forty-four.

An interesting little literary fact is mentioned,—that a prize being offered by the Am. Tract Society for the best treatise on "The trite objections against the Bible," it was adjudged that two were of such equal merit that the premium was divided; and on opening the envelopes, the names were found to be those of Dr. Brownlee and Prof. Dewitt of the Theol. Seminary.

The final announcement is made, that the magazine had earned for the Missionary Society an average of $500 for each of the four years. An ingenious advertising dodge was practised on it by the inventor of an agricultural machine, who offered "a tithe" of all his profits to the cause. We do not discover, however, that he ever succeeded in bring any tithes into the storehouse. F. N. ZABRISKIE.

HEIDELBERG CASTLE, April 12th, 1886.

"There Shall Be No Night There."

WHEN I walk out beneath the starry skies,
And feel night's solemn beauty o'er me steal,
I question oft what meaning underlies
The words that yet so much to us reveal:
No night in heaven? No calm and silent night,
To heal the fret and fever of the day,
Distil its balm upon the restless heart,
And bear us on Sleep's shadowy wings away?

No far, mysterious stars; no changeful moon
With light more grateful than the glare of noon;
No night to mark the time when toil should cease,
And weary hands could lie in folded ease?
What wondrous realm is this that knows no night?
Where eyes grow never weary of the light,
Nor hearts that ache with sorrow and distress
E'er long to welcome sleep's forgetfulness?
What boon to blest immortals can be given
To take thy place, O night, sweet night, in heaven?

The deepest meaning, if I read aright,
Is that in heaven they have no need of night!

—Mrs. M. K. Buck, in The Congregationalist.

Edinburgn Echoes.

THE various halls of learning in this city are now closed till next winter. This has been a session of unusual mental activity. The recent Tercentenary celebrations have had a good effect on the University students; they have stirred them up to a sense of their responsibilities and of the traditions they are called on to preserve. The new Principal, Sir William Muir, is making his influence felt. He gives a fine moral tone to the academic life he superintends. His words carry weight, and they are ever on the side of goodness and truth. He is ably supported by the movement among the students inaugurated by Professor Henry Drummond, the celebrated author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." That movement steadily progresses. On the Sabbath evenings crowded meetings were held in a large hall, to which none but those who could produce matriculation cards were admitted. The addresses then given were practical and powerful. Professor Drummond was usually the chief speaker. He knows how students think and feel, and speaks accordingly. His fresh way of putting old truths and red hot earnestness told well. Many men have turned a new leaf and begun a better life. Others, who were already decided, have been roused to do more for their Master and to live Christlike lives. This happy state of matters forecasts a bright future for the country. It promises to infuse a Christian spirit into the various professions.

The theological seminaries have also been helped by the blessing experienced in the University. Divinity studies often hinder more than they advance spiritual life, because the problems they deal with are so absorbing that students forget to look after their growth in grace and their enthusiasm in Christian work. Such a calamity has been averted this winter by the zeal born of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. A deep interest in Foreign Missions has been awakened. There is no lack of candidates for uninviting fields. There is less talk than usual about "desirable vacancies," and a stronger desire to be or do anything that will advance God's glory and the salvation of souls.

The Disestablishment agitation still convulses the Scottish churches. Ministers, devoted to their work, are tired of the calls made upon their time and energy in connection with it. They long for peace in which they can throw themselves into the duties that lie nearest their hands. But such peace seems to be in the distance. The leaders of the agitation have struck the warpath and seized the tomahawk. They are resolute in their determination to take no rest till all the denominations in the country are put on the footing of religious equality. So manifestoes, full of strong language (if not strong arguments) and impassioned appeals, and meetings at which practised speakers seek to lash up popular feeling against the Established Church are the order of the day. Those on the other side are not idle. They, too, issue manifestoes and hold meetings. The result is far from satisfactory. Those who are in reality brethren are turned into foes, and those who should be found fighting shoulder to shoulder against the common enemies of Christianity fight against one another. Religious activity is sadly hindered.

Edinburgh will soon have its May meetings, when the Assemblies of the different Churches convene. It is feared that the ecclesiastical strife now going on will enter them and work its blighting work; but we hope that the members will sink lower considerations in their anxiety to promote the best interests of the congregations they represent. It should be so specially in the Free Church Assembly, over whose deliberations the venerable Dr. A. N. Somerville is to preside. His devotion to evangelistic work is well known, and his opening words, which will doubtless bear on the subject lying close to his heart, should have a good effect on those speaking after him. He was for forty years a highly successful minister in Glasgow. In his old age he sought rest in change of occupation. The pastor and preacher turned evangelist. He has gone through Spain, Portugal, India, Canada, Germany, France, Italy, Australia, New Zealand and Greece in succession, to declare the unsearchable riches of the Gospel, and everywhere his labors have been crowned with tokens of Divine approval. His elevation to the Moderatorship of the Free Church is both a tribute to a consecrated life and a sign of the value attached to evangelistic work in that denomination.

The Assemblies always draw crowds of country cousins to Edinburgh during the month of May. There will be another attraction this year. The International Exhibition will be opened on the 6th prox. by Prince Albert Victor. It will be a sight worth seeing. The buildings in the meadows are rapidly approaching completion, and exhibitors are even now beginning to put their things into the places allotted them. SCOTUS.

EDINBURGH, April 10th.

A Curious Case.

THE Society for Physical Research has under consideration a patient in the Rochefort Asylum. Dr. Myers gave a very careful summary of his various and singular conditions in the Journal of Mental Science for January, and the Spectator publishes the following outline of the chief points:

The patient in question, who is called "Louis V.," and who was born in 1863, is said in the summary of his case to have six different states of consciousness, all of them more or less accompanied by distinct physical conditions; but only in one of these six states is his memory something like that of an ordinary man,—that is, able to recall the larger number of the various phases through which his life has passed. Even in this sixth state there are a few blanks in his memory; but in all the others he appears to remember only a few discontinuous portions of his history, and to forget completely those years in which his physical state was quite different from that in which he then finds himself. Thus, when he has paralysis of the right side,—which is connected with a morbid condition of the left side of the brain,—nearly twenty-one years of his twenty-three years of life are entirely wiped out for him. But even then a certain application of soft iron to his right thigh restores to him the memory of the greater part of his life, dispels temporarily all paralysis, and leaves only a few comparatively small gaps in his memory of his career. Again, under certain magnetic conditions, the hysterical paralysis,—for the origin of the whole complaint seems to be a kind of hysteria,—can be transferred from the right side (which involves a morbid condition of the left brain) to the left side, involving the same inertia of the right side of the brain; and this change, which is quite sudden, is accompanied by a very curious change in the apparent aspect of his character. From being arrogant, violent, and profane, with indistinct utterance and complete inability to write (owing to the paralysis of the right hand), "Louis V." becomes instantaneously quiet, modest, and respectful, speaking easily and clearly, and able to write a fair hand; but the greater part of his life is still a blank to him. In a word, the change from "Louis V." with paralysis of the right side, to "Louis V." with paralysis of the left side, is not very different from the change which Mr. Louis Stevenson has described in the weird tale called "The Strange Story of Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," when Mr. Hyde is suddenly transformed into Dr. Jekyl,—except, of course, that there is no alteration in the general bulk or stature of the body. The hysterical paralysis of the right side (involving the opposite side of the brain) leaves him a rude, presumptuous, illiterate boor; while the paralysis of the left side (involving the right side of the brain) finds him a docile, respectful, respectably educated young man. The other five states of consciousness, induced by different physical means, though in some cases, indeed, not by physical means at all, but merely by authoritatively telling the young man that he is in one of his other states, are more or less intermediate between these two; and in one of them,—the sixth described in the Journal of Mental Science,—the man's character, though not apparently so good as in his best state,—when the left side of the brain, the side supposed to be most frequently exerted in thinking and speaking, is active, and the right side is passive,—is much better than in his worst, while his memory commands the greater part of his life, and the paralysis vanishes altogether; but in this state, apparently, it is not possible to keep him long, for his normal condition is at present that in which he forgets all the best part of his life, and is violent, arrogant, and profane.

....."THREE MARTYRS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY." By the author of "The Cotta Family." It was a happy thought of Mrs. Charles to bring together in one book sketches of her three hero-martyrs,—Livingstone, Gordon and Patteson. The sketches are sketches merely—not biographies,—and of course leave much to be supplied by those who seek detailed information concerning the career of these remarkable men. But they are written with taste, feeling and discrimination, by one who is evidently well informed, and has most complete sympathy with them, with the ruling principles and purposes of their lives, and with the cause of Christ and human welfare to which they were all, though in different spheres, equally devoted. It is a good thing to have the inspiration of such lives brought into the home and the school. We are specially glad that, by being linked with the more noted and public services of the first two, the less known but no less noble career and character of Bishop Patteson should become more widely known and honored. We heartily commend the book. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

...."THEISM AND EVOLUTION." By Jos. S. Van Dyke, D.D. With an Introduction by Prof. A. A. Hodge, D.D. This is an examination of modern speculative theories as related to theistic conceptions of the universe. The author writes with calmness and clearness, eschewing hard words and mere vituperation. His book covers the whole ground and shows a wide acquaintance with the literature of the subject. We are most pleased with the chapters which discuss the bearings of the theory on man's physical, intellectual, moral and spiritual nature, but the closing portion, asserting that there is no conflict between Science and the Bible, is very able and satisfying. The introduction by Prof. Hodge is all that one would expect from the man who so worthily fills the chair once held by his honored father, the late Charles Hodge. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

...."SAINT GREGORY'S GUEST, AND RECENT POEMS," is a collection of eighteen poems by John Greenleaf Whittier. Any addition to the venerable and beloved writer s works would be a treasure. But these poems—including, besides the one mentioned in the title, "Revelation," "The Wood-Giant," "The Two Elizabeths," "The Re-union," and "An Artist of the Beautiful"—are characterized by the mellifluous versification, the close study of nature, the pure and simple sentiment, and the deep religious spirit of this true poet. We feel that the following tribute, from the last of the poems named above, can be peculiarly applied to himself, with the single change of the word "painter" to that of poet:

"Teacher! thy lesson was not given in vain.
Beauty is goodness; ugliness is sin;
Art's place is sacred; nothing foul therein
May crawl or tread with bestial feet profane.
If rightly choosing is the painter's test,
Thy choice, O master, ever was the best."

(Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Important.

ON account of the severe illness of the Rev. Dr. Van Cleef, the Stated Clerk of the General Synod, it is requested that all communications pertaining to his office be forwarded to the Permanent Clerk, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Ten Eyck, at New Brunswick, New Jersey.

J. HOWARD SUYDAM, President of Synod.

The Ladies' Meetings.

THE Twelfth Anniversary of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions will be held on Tuesday, May 11th, at eleven o'clock A. M., in the Collegiate Church on 5th avenue and 48th street, N. Y. The reports will be read and the Rev. Dr. Chamberlain and Rev. A. V. V. Raymond will deliver addresses.

At half-past twelve o'clock the exercises will close and a collation will be served.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, at the same place, the Woman's Executive Committee of Domestic Missions will observe its Third Anniversary. Reports will be read and it is expected that Mrs. F. E. Haines and Mrs. C. E. Walker, of Colorado, will deliver addresses.

To the Alumni Association of Our Seminary.

THE committee appointed at the annual meeting of the Association, held at Syracuse, consider it impracticable to arrange for a meeting this year at the time of the Seminary Commencement without consultation with the Board of Superintendents. The annual meeting will be held this year, and the address delivered at New Brunswick in connection with the meeting of General Synod as formerly. A report will then be presented by the committee concerning the time and place at which it will be deemed advisable to meet in the future. COM.

A Great Loss.

MR. GAMALIEL G. SMITH died last Friday morning at his residence in this city, of pleuropneumonia, in his 73d year. In October, 1862, he became the Treasurer of our Board of Foreign Missions. It was at the beginning of a period of severe financial trials such as foreign missionary boards in this country had not experienced in their previous history. The high premium on gold and exchange, continued until about 1878, the years of commercial disaster and depression which followed the financial ruin of 1873, tested, perplexed and burdened those in charge of the financial management of Christian missions to the heathen, to the uttermost. During this long period, covering almost a quarter of a century, Mr. Smith was faithfulness itself—no man could have been more faithful. His opinions upon the policy and duty of the Board were always conscientiously and clearly expressed. When the Board decided contrary to his opinions, he carried out the decision to the letter, heartily, with energy, and by his personal solicitations often obtained a large portion of the money needed to maintain that which at the outset did not receive his approbation. Many men would have resigned or would have threatened to resign. He never suggested the possibility of an attempt on his part to throw off the burden. He would say at the annual election of officers that if the Board could find a better man for his position, he wished it to feel free to make a change. But the Board knew of no better man. No man had a greater dread or dislike of debt. It grieved and troubled him by day and night that the missionary treasury was in debt. Still he remained steadfastly at his post, giving his influence, his efforts, his credit to the maintenance of the work entrusted to him. And for this he received nothing, except the esteem and confidence and appreciation of those associated with him. He had no salary. He served the Church and carried what was often a heavy burden gratuitously. Not only did he serve for nothing, but he gave generously to the funds and gave his credit to sustain a treasury repeatedly greatly in need of such support. This noble service was prompted by a settled belief in the Word of God, a hearty interest in the souls of men, and a spirit of unquestioning obedience to the Saviour's last command. He was deeply interested in the accomplishment of the work of redemption, the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom over the whole world.

During the last ten years Mr. Smith has been called to endure frequent returns of painful illness. Almost every winter he has been confined for weeks to his room and has suffered. All who have been intimate with him have seen his nature, under Divine grace, become more tender, and kind, and sympathetic, and become more and more beautiful, as he passed through affliction and suffering. Never was he so much beloved as during these last years of his life. They were not years of infirmity. His work was performed as promptly and energetically as when first called to his office, and his natural vivacity continued until seized with the last and fatal sickness.

For many years Mr. Smith has been an honored elder in the Collegiate Church of this city.

....THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS, at a special meeting on Monday last, elected Rev. John M. Ferris Treasurer, in the place of Gamaliel G. Smith, deceased. For a few years he has been Assistant Treasurer under Mr. Smith. Will those who remit to the Treasurer kindly comply with the change and prevent delay and embarrassment? As the fiscal year is just closing it is especially desirable that this request be granted. The books of the Board, for the present at least, will still be kept at 85 Elm street, N. Y. No inconvenience, of course, will result from checks or Post-office orders payable to Dr. Cobb, the Cor. Sec., and those accustomed to remit in that form need make no change.

....NEW YORK.—The German Evangelical Mission Church on Houston street made an Easter offering of $288 for foreign missions in response to an earnest statement and appeal from the pastor, Rev. J. W. Geyer. This is in addition to their annual contribution, made in March, of $175 from church and Sabbath-school.

....HOBOKEN, N. J.—The German Evangelical Church, Rev. Dr. C. F. A. Klein, supply, on Sunday, the 18th ult., received 48 young people into the membership of the church on examination and confession of faith. The service was very impressive, the Rev. Dr. C. F. A. Klein charging the new members with the words, Colossians 2: 6, 7.

The church has called the Rev. W. F. Freund, of the Methodist Church, as their pastor, and the same will be installed Thursday, May 13th. May the Lord bless both the church and the newly-called shepherd.

COM.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The Rev. Ame Vennema was installed as pastor of the Second Reformed Church of Kalamazoo on the 27th ult. The Rev. Bastian Smits, of Constantine, preached the sermon. The Rev. V. M. Hulbert, D.D., of Battle Creek, read the form of service and delivered the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. N. H. Dosker, of Kalamazoo, gave the charge to the people. The Rev. Dr. Hunting, of the First Presbyterian Church of Kalamazoo, read the Scriptures, and the Rev. Mr. Rossiter, of the Second Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Mr. Goulds, of M. E. Church of Kalamazoo, offered prayers. The services were held in the First Reformed Church, which was entirely filled by an appreciative audience.

The occasion was one of special significance, as marking an era of transition—an evolution of an English speaking church from one worshipping in the Holland tongue; showing how, through our Holland brethren, our denomination is growing and kindly assimilating in the West. The magnanimous part taken by the pastor of the First Church in this enterprise will embalm his name in the history of this new organization. Other church centres among Hollanders in the West are inclined to follow the example of Kalamazoo, but are waiting to see the result of this experiment,—how it is regarded and countenanced at the East.

A special Providence has seemed to govern this enterprise from its incipiency to the settlement of a pastor in every way adapted to the position, who has sacrificed an eligible position to espouse the work of building up this church. Shall not material aid from the Church Building Fund and liberal donations from the benevolent, help to assure the speedy success of this hopeful branch of our Zion?

V. M. H.

....THE CLASSIS OF MICHIGAN met at South Bend, Ind., April 13th. In this enterprising and flourishing city, whose growth during twenty years has quadrupled its size, we have an organization reporting 44 families and 69 communicants.

The church building is in good condition, as is also the parsonage, and the congregation contains devoted Christians attached to their venerable pastor and their denomination. They carry on a Sabbath-school enterprise in the suburbs in addition to the church school, and have there, in their judgment, the nucleus of another organization. Rev. David McNeish began his labors in South Bend in 1849. His successors in the pastorate have been Revs. Beidler, Evans, Van Doren (W. T.), Peeke (G. H.), Skillman and Williamson, the latter beginning his labors there in 1872. The town has grown in 36 years from a small village to a city of twenty thousand inhabitants. The church is not yet self-sustaining. Still the labors of those successive brethren have done more good than statistics represent.

The Classis conducted its business with expedition and conscientiousness. The attendance of ministers with charge was full. Church extension and the appropriation of missionary funds in seemingly hopeless fields received much serious and earnest discussion. We were cheered by the announcement that this Classis, made up entirely of churches with English preaching, would receive as an accession the hopeful young enterprise at Kalamazoo.

The reports from most of our churches are very encouraging. Large accessions, praiseworthy generosity and vigorous life characterize them. The dawn of greater prosperity is indicated in the Americanizing tendencies in the neighboring Classes in Michigan and the West. This, like the millenium in the bequest of Rev. Van Bunschooten, "may be at a farther distance than the present living," and we may yet take Holland. What prophets have so long waited for and "died without the sight" may yet greet our vision, as Mahomet at last resolves to go to the mountain which has so long stubbornly refused to come to him. This circumstance gives a better outlook and hope; prosperity and great increase may yet be seen in the landscape at all points as the eye of loyal Dutch faith and determination sweeps the horizon.

A. P. P.

A Church in Danger.

IT is the North Reformed Church of Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. It may have to pass out of the denomination, but it need not, and it is the object of this article to show how it may be retained, alive, and self-supporting.

This is our present situation: We have a commodious church building, with lecture-room and church parlor in the rear. The whole is valued, for its purpose, at from $35,000 to $40,000, and could not be replaced for that sum. The land alone is worth $15,000 or more. The location is desirable. The Twentieth Ward, in which the church is situated, has a population of over 22,000, and the seating capacity of all the churches in the ward does not exceed 6,000. Here would seem to be a field for church work, if it be true that the Gospel is to be preached to men. The ward is a residence ward, and one of the best in the city as regards the church-going habits of its citizens. This church was one of the first in this field, and now has fully as good a chance for future prosperity as any other here. It has a united and earnest membership of 115. The attendance last Sunday, April 25th, was 112 in the morning and 129 in the evening. The Sunday-school numbers over 200; attendance April 25th, 157. Attendance at the prayer-meeting on the evening of April 21st, 52. The money contributed by the congregation during the year, April 1st, 1885, to April 1st, 1886, when the church was without a pastor, was $2,267.08. Of this sum more than half was paid for interest, for we have a debt, and it is this which threatens the life of the church.

The new pastorate practically began March 1st, 1886. We held earnest council and commenced by asking ourselves what portion of the debt we could safely undertake to carry with our present resources and without any outside help. We have a first mortgage of $14,000 and a second mortgage of $6,000, $20,000 in all. After organizing our work we found that in our present condition we can safely assume half this debt, or $10,000. Our Sunday school buys the fuel and pays the sexton. Our Young People's Association pays the gas bills. Our music is furnished by a volunteer organist and choir. The pastor was called at a salary of $1,500 without a parsonage.

When our debt is reduced to $10,000 it can be placed at three per cent, and thus our total expenses will be: Salary, $1,500; interest, $300; a total of $1,800, leaving a margin of $467 (on our present receipts) for incidentals. Of course, a fully organized church has a right to expect growth, and any future growth increases this margin, but these estimates are based on present facts.

We now need $4,000 to reduce our debt to $10,000, when we can be self-supporting. To secure the full reduction of interest the money must be in hand by June 1st. After its recent earnest efforts the North Church cannot undertake to now raise more than $500. Can the denomination furnish us with $3,500? If it can the church can be saved beyond doubt. So long as success is uncertain, people will stay away from us; that is human nature. Once make success so probable as to be almost certain, and we will have friends in plenty. Our hearts are cheered by unmistakable evidences that our work is growing. Shall it continue to grow, or must it struggle along to finally die? We have made an appeal by letter to the ministers of our Church for small sums, and if this is generally responded to the church will be saved. We now appeal to the Church at large, and we abide by your answer to our appeal, Shall we keep the church or let it go? Talk with your minister about it! Any sum, however small, will be gratefully received and immediately acknowledged.

If it were a question of establishing a new church with such an organization in such a field and with such a property as ours for $3,500, I think the money would be found. Can it not be obtained when it is a question of saving a church?

WILLIAM D. PERRY, Pastor.

....FRANKLIN FURNACE, N. J.—Rev. Gilbert S. Garretson was installed pastor of the Reformed Church on the evening of April 29th. Rev. Wm. E. Bogardus preached from the text, "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard." The President of Classis read the form. The attendance was good, the music well-rendered, and the brother enters upon this field with the prospect of a useful pastorate. S. C.

....REV. T. J. KOMMERS has accepted an invitation to take charge of the "Knox Memorial Chapel," N. Y., and expects to close his labors at Pompton, June 13th.

....PEEKSKILL, N. Y.—On Sabbath, April 11th, seven persons were added to the church—five on confession and two by certificate. Nearly every communion season enlarges the membership.

....NEWARK, N. J.—The Second Church was crowded on Sunday, April 25th, at the children's Easter service. The floral decorations were suggestive, and far more so was the Cross-building by members of the school. This consisted of a cross built of many pieces and erected before the audience as each scholar who presented a part recited Scripture selections, the school joining now and again in singing appropriate hymns. Not less interesting was the Easter offering by the school of more than $200 for the new church building fund. This, however, is not the first contribution by the school to that purpose.

The Sabbath-school of this church has grown to the limits of its room. Long since the primary department outgrew its space, and now the larger department does not know where to find room for new classes. A removal is becoming a necessity for the sake of the school, if for no other reason. While the church has not kept pace with its nursery, it has, in face of great difficulties, made progress. During the past three years it has raised about twelve thousand dollars, nearly one-sixth of the amount for benevolence. Though its losses by removal have been great, it has more than made up such losses in certain lines. When one family who had contributed nearly $150 a year moved, the young people of the church responded to a call for aid, and added more than $200 the past year to the income of the church, one young man working on a salary, and not a very large one either, subscribing $60 a year. The young people are becoming more and more active, not only in the social and spiritual, but the financial work as well, of the church. During the past year the net gain in membership has been sixteen, making up for all numerical losses and placing the church in point of numbers eleven ahead of what it reported seventeen years ago. The whole secret of holding its own and progress lies in the fact that the people have a mind to work.

The East Church, Rev. D. Charles Preyer, pastor, observed Easter with appropriate services. The decorations were profuse and tastily arranged, and all the exercises deeply interesting. The music also was excellent. In the afternoon the Sabbath-school took part in the services with hymns, recitations and responsive readings. The pastor preached a children's sermon on Job's question, "If a man die shall he live again?" The day was also in another sense a festival day. A few weeks ago the announcement was made to the congregation that all the bonded and floating debt of the church had been paid off, and the pastor suggested that a thanksgiving offering should be made toward the purchase of a bell for the church, that the congregation might have a constant reminder of the fact that they were "free of debt." The people responded liberally to this appeal, and on Sunday for the first time the bell was rung.

...BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The German Evangelical St. Peter's Church has had a blessed time at Easter. Twenty-six new members who had been received on Good Friday on confession of their faith, several heads of families and young Christians celebrated the Lord's Supper with us on Easter Sunday.

But the 2d of May was a sad day for pastor and people. The pastor, compelled through ill-health, resigned this charge and preached his closing sermon in the morning to a large and deeply affected congregation, from Acts 20: 32. He stated that the heavy work had worn his health and strength so much that he could not carry it on effectually, that he needed perfect rest for a time and now gave them an opportunity to call a young and strong man to carry on this work for the Lord successfully. He stated further that he had preached during his pastorate of nearly 20 years 1,898 sermons himself, delivered 576 lectures, preached 2,262 funeral sermons, performed 2,725 marriage ceremonies, and taught 2,500 catechumens, devoting 2,050 hours to their instruction.

About forty members were left in the almost broken-down church when he took charge in December, 1866, and a debt of over $4,000 rested on the poor old building. He leaves them now with 515 members, two Sunday-schools with 1,000 children, a well-regulated parochial school and three active associations—Frauenverein, Youths' Society and Helping Hand—and a beautiful new church worth $40,000, with only $3,500 debt on it. OBSERVER.

....THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND met at New Lots, April 20th. Rev. Jacob Weber became President. Rev. Maurice G. Hansen was received from the Classis of Greene and Rev. A. M. Quick from the Classis of Westchester, who is to take charge of the Ocean Hill Church, Brooklyn, which was received as a church into the Classis.

Rev. M. G. Hansen resigned his position as stated supply of the Flatbush Mission.

The Classis resolved to unite with the Classis of Westchester in its overture to General Synod on the subject of Ministerial Support.

The committee appointed last fall to inquire into the administration of the affairs of the Board of Education reported that the work was conducted by the Board in the best manner possible under the circumstances. Expenses being at the lowest rate consistent with the proper administration of the affairs of the Board, the high ratio of expenses arising from the fact that the income is small compared with the amount that should be raised for the Board. Commendatory resolutions concerning the Board of Education were passed.

A deep interest in the subject of religion has pervaded the churches of the Classis. Two hundred and one have professed their faith in Christ. Contributions to benevolence reached $26,739.98, an increase of $1,504.39 over last year.

An emphatic resolution was passed commending the consistory of the Second Flatbush (German) Church for resisting one Heinle, who has endeavored to steal their church and usurped the authority of consistory and Classis. The consistory were directed to use all means in their power to dispossess said Heinle and prohibit him from occupying their pulpits. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE met April 20th, in Union Hall, Cobleskill, N. Y. Nearly all the churches were represented, and reports were received from all. These show an increase in benevolence over that of last year, amounting to nearly $400.

Rev. Philip Phelps, Jr., D.D., was received into Classis. Calls from the Churches of North Blenheim and Breakabeen upon Dr. Phelps, were approved. John G. Fagg, a licentiate of the Classis of Wisconsin, was examined for ordination and installation over the Churches of Lawyersville and Cobleskill.

The ordination and installation of Brother Fagg took place on Tuesday evening in the presence of a very large congregation.

Rev. Wm. Ormiston, D.D., of New York, preached the sermon, by invitation. Rev. Philip Phelps, Jr., D.D., delivered the charge to the pastor, and Rev. D. K. Van Doren that to the people. The new organization at Cobleskill already reports fifty families, and expects soon to erect a house of worship. Brother Fagg is enthusiastically supported by his people.

....THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY met on the 20th of April. All the churches were represented except that of Union. Rev. Andrew Parsons was received from the Classis of Schoharie and arrangements were made for his installation over the Churches of Knox and Second Berne on the 22d of June. Rev. John Scarlet is to be installed over the Church of Jerusalem on the 12th of May. Rev. Edwin F. See was dismissed to the Third Church of Albany and a letter given him to the South Classis of Long Island. He is to labor in the Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn.

An appropriate minute was entered on the records of Classis in regard to the death of Rev. A. C. Millspaugh.

Two young men, Philip T. Phelps and Howard W. Ennis, from the Second Church of Albany were examined for entrance upon studies with a view to the ministry.

The reports of the churches on the State of Religion were full of encouragement and cheer. There is a record of earnest and successful work done for the year past. The benevolent contributions show a large increase over past years.

The change in the Constitution, Art. 8, Sec. 1, making six ministers and six elders a quorum for the transaction of business in the Particular Synods was unanimously approved by the Classis. S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA held its spring session April 20th, at Neshanic, N. J. Reports from the churches were the most encouraging that have been received for years; accessions have been made in all, and in some the number was notably large Two hundred and six have been received on confession, and yet, owing to revised lists, the total of membership shows a number less than last year.

Benevolence has had to struggle against adverse conditions in most of the churches, yet shows increase. Its interests received careful attention, and the purpose is to reach a higher standard in the year to come.

Classis adopted an overture to General Synod in fraternal recognition of the late action of the Synod of Pittsburg (German) proposing union between the denominations. Unfermented wine was recommended for the communion where consistories might deem it prudent.

The call of the Second Church of Philadelphia on Rev. W. H. Clark, D.D., was approved, and arrangements were made for his installation. S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA met at Greenwich. Rev. E. A. McCullum became President. The report on the State of Religion is very cheerful. Arrangements were made to install Rev. Theodore Shafer at Schaghticoke, May 12th, at 7.30 P.M. The following are delegates to the Particular Synod: Primarii, Revs. E. A. McCullum, J. L. Southard, Ira Van Allen, A. G. Cochran; Elders G. T. H. Knapp, Daniel Hilt, D. H. Van Auken, Edward W. Johnson. Secundi, Revs. George I. Taylor, J. W. Bailey, Theodore Shafer, J. W. Beardslee; Elders George C. Kingsley, H. Thompson, Robert Campbell, Samuel Sheldon. S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY met at St. Johnsville, N. Y., Monday evening, April 19th. At the evening service the following subjects were discussed: The Work of the Holy Spirit, by Revs. Dr. Lord and J. R. Kyle; How to Deal with Inquirers, by Revs. F. V. Van Vranken and S. O. Lawsing; The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, by Revs. James Demarest and F. S. Haines.

The business sessions of Tuesday showed that the year had been one of average prosperity among the churches. Fonda and Glen have enjoyed a revival season, and the tone of the reports from the churches is hopeful for the future. S. C.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL, 28.—All the foreign representatives except the French Count de Mouy met and discussed measures to be taken in the event of Greece's not complying with the ultimatum of the Powers. Greece's reply is expected at the end of this week. ....Three bills introduced in the Assembly about the new capitol of this State; one by Mr. Batcheller stopping the work on the building for three years, and one by Mr. Chase appropriating $1,500,000 to continue the work, and another by Mr. O'Brien appropriating $1,000,000 for the work and authorizing a new commission, consisting of James Shattuck, Republican, and Robert Boyce, Democrat, to direct the laborers.... Ex-President Arthur is improving in health. ....The thirteenth day of the Third Avenue railroad strike in New York city seems no nearer a settlement than when the trouble began....Coal miners at George's Creek, Penn., are still holding out for an advance. ...Mrs Smith, living at Harmony, N. J., who attacked her four children with an axe and afterward took rat poison, died yesterday....The Guion steamship "Nevada" landed at New York yesterday 175 Mormon recruits ...Thirty-four tailors in New York were arrested for boycotting....The fund for Mrs. Hancock now being raised in Boston, Mass., is about $10,000.

THURSDAY, 29.—It is reported that the Greek Government insists upon the withdrawal of the ultimatum. If it is maintained the Ministry will resign as a protest against the menace to the independence of Greece implied by the ultimatum of the Powers ...Jessie Collings has made another attack in the newspapers on Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule bill, and says the scheme is only a "thinly-veiled measure of separation." ....Indians in Arizona attacked and killed the Owens brothers, prominent ranchmen, and a wife and child and niece of Mr. A. L. Peck. The district had been free from such troubles for many years, and the attack was not expected....The sugar refiners in Williamsburgh refuse arbitration....An attempt was made to burn three hotels at Far Rockaway, L. I....Jaehne's trial will take place May 10th....A striker in St. Louis was shot and killed by a switchman; who in turn was chased by a mob, but was finally rescued by the police....A hail storm at Baton Rouge destroyed 300 acres of corn and 300 acres of cotton. Hail stones fell to the depth of three inches....New strikes reported in Chicago....A great day of rejoicing at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. Jeff. Davis, with his ex-Confederates, were greeted by thousands of Southerners. Dr. Davis said a number of unwise things.

FRIDAY, 30.—It is reported that Colonel Marzomichallis, Greek Minister of War, has resigned. Premier Delyannis will assume the duties of the War Department for the present....Count de Moüy has been instructed to inform the Greek Government that France is not disposed to be dragged into the present dispute and that the French Government intends to avoid isolated action. ....There is trouble in the Spanish Cabinet, due to the refusal of the other Ministers to yield to the demands of Señor Camacho, the Minister of Finance, for economy in the budget which he insists is necessary.... Another attempt has been made to burn Mandalay, Burmah....The labor organizations in Chicago ask for more pay and eight hours work....A riot reported in East St. Louis by strikers....Great damage done by a whirlwind in Mississippi....Disturbances in Pennsylvania in trying to replace the striking miners....Mr. Cantor's Half-Holiday bill was signed yesterday by Governor Hill....Some Third avenue strikers in New York arrested on bench warrants... There is a petition in circulation in New York for the pardon of James D. Fish. It is reported that nearly all the 900 depositors of the Marine Bank have signed the petition and the names of many other bank officers appear on the petition.

SATURDAY, MAY 1.—A dispatch from Berlin says that the Powers have decided to reject Greece's reply to the ultimatum and insist upon an unconditional disarmament. The fleet remains in readiness for action.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Boreas and the Sailor Boy.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

THE ruffian wind came blustering in glee;
His stealthy hand was fumbling at the door
And at the lattice, till the brittle glass
Pealed out like tiny bells the fairies ring.
He thrust his arms unseen through broken panes,
Rattling the blinds and scaring sleep away;
Piping a low bass on the chimney's flute.
Then, with his lips upon a thousand tubes
At once, he blew a universal blast
Which woke a rose-lipped maiden from her dreams.
Then from the bent mast shook her sailor boy
Into the watery grave he scooped for him.
Returning then, on wings invisible,
Shrieked in her ears the story of his death.
O cruel wind, depart and wail for ave
Above the dead of the complaining sea,
Whose bosom swells indignant at thy touch.

A Modern Sir Galahad.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER V.

"No, no," she cried, "I care not to be wife,
But to be with you still, to see your face,
To serve you, and to follow you thro' the world."

THE First Church of Danton had put off much of its heaviness under the spiritual force of the man who held convictions and was full of enthusiasm. His influence from the pulpit was not his chief power, perhaps; his personality was so marked that he never made the most common remark but it seemed full of vital meaning. Wherever he went he bore this marked individuality that impressed all in the same degree, if not in exactly the same way. He seemed to be young with the young, old with the aged, sorrowful with the sad, and happy with the joyous, so far-reaching and deep were his sympathies. And with the gift of sympathy he had that rare genius for expressing it which is so often lacking in generous, sympathetic souls.

He had also that peculiar power of seeming abstraction from all other sympathies but the one in hand, which impressed the object of sympathy, when at all susceptible, with the idea that he was the favored of all others. Throughout Danton homes began to be peculiarly affected by the new pastorate, and, perhaps it should be said, hearts likewise. Young girls changed their manners, their habits, and I would like to say their life-purposes; if it did not require something beyond psychological influence for the formation of true purpose, it might be said, but habits and purposes are not formed in one mould.

It might seem irreverent to speak of spiritual experiences as being born of a worship of the God of the new minister, rather than of a God interpreted to them through a self-consecration. Yet, after all, not being able to grasp the Divine character and its attitude to man in all its fulness, were they not being prepared to receive the true Christ when, through the failure of earthern vessels bearing to them the water of life, they should be led through need to the fountain's head?

To Anise Marshall a revelation of her higher capabilities had come. Books were not the same books that she tried to read with only the memory of her father's thought of them before the minister came. He advised her in her selections, talked with her of what she was reading, even read to her when a spare hour gave him the opportunity. It was not possible for one to hear the deep, rich tones of Laurence Bowles, to look upon the fine features whose expression changed with each sympathetic thought, and not be affected by his magnetic influence. Anise Marshall was affected, but not in the way in which we usually conceive of results of such peculiar influences. It seemed to be her father's spirit breathing through all. The man who seemed so perfect was her father without his many limitations. To get into the atmosphere of this new guide and interpreter of the best things was her heart's hope and aspiration. To one of her temperament and spiritual longings this was a natural and an easy thing, and she gradually began to think with the minister and to sympathize in his Sir Galahad aspirations.

It is said that two souls in sympathy grow so alike that the likeness is stamped upon the face oftentimes. Anise Marshall's always spiritual face began to take on a look which Mrs. Marshall explained as "unearthly, more so than her father's was." The observation was a source of foreboding to the anxious mother, and she predicted invalidism, or worse, an early death for her child. She made up her mind to do all in her power to bring a little scheme about. A marriage with the minister would be the proper thing. When once a wife new duties and cares would bring her down more nearly to the world's level, she reasoned, and then who was so fitted in character to fill the position which had been so honorably filled in the past? It was her husband's wish that his "darling Anise" should have a chance. She would send her away for a year to a good school to finish her education. In perfecting this project the mother's heart was directed from the idea of immediate danger to her child.

Laurence Bowles was a very busy man. A large congregation made large demands upon his pastoral energies, whilst the high standard he had set for his pulpit ministrations made it impossible for him to ever offer a weak effort to his people. Like many another young minister who, full of enthusiasm, holds some of his powers in reserve, he was finding the first months' of his service a conquering march, as he believed, over sin and the foes of the Christian Church.

Danton's church was quite astonished at itself. It was having an experience unparalleled in its history. It had hitherto been ministered to by D.D.'s, had been given food seasoned by pulpit prestige, but here was a man without experience, without clerical ancestry, without doctrinal method, who had early inscribed "victory" upon his banner, who made the way of the Lord seem a delight as well as a duty!

Danton's church was singularly unanimous in regarding the minister as a success in his calling, but as there are no perfect churches, if there are perfect ministers, here and there the gossips had begun to search for new material to keep their propensities in food. They had noticed that the always "peculiar Ansie Marshall" seemed to be taking on "new airs," and that the minister seemed to think she was a little better than the daughters of other old families. "There was Jerusha Holdridge; if he had talked with her he would have observed what a good mind she had, and if he had taken pains to inquire he would have found that her mother's side of the house had furnished several minister's wives, besides no end to spouses for deacons. One aunt had even written a sermon, which her husband had delivered, and no one would have thought that it was not composed by himself. It was after he had gone to his rest that the truth leaked out."

It was known, at least among the sisters of the church, that Jerusha's education and home influence had been in view of church honors. Her mother held this purpose close to her heart, against fate, almost. It was not Jerusha's fault that she had long seemed to be in a waiting attitude before the possibility of an offer of partnership from a minister, for she, if allowed her own way, would have been the happy, useful wife of Hiram Pritchard, a "well-to-do" farmer's son who had loved her truly, but being only one of the sheep of Danton's First Church, and not its shepherd, Jerusha was forbidden by her ambitious mother to give her heart or her hand to the worthy layman.

Early in his ministry, Laurence Bowles received an invitation to this home, to meet, the note read, "my sisters, Mrs. Rev. Philetus Clark and Mrs. Deacon Ives."

The November day was a chilly one when the Holdridge parlor was opened and the fire lighted to make it ready for the minister's coming. The room had that charnel-house atmosphere so common to the shut-up parlors of those times, and poor Jerusha remembered with a pang the last time a fire had been kindled there by her own hands. She called back the gloomy December afternoon when Hiram Pritchard came to know his fate from her lips. She shuddered as she recalled his parting words: "Jerusha, if you loved me, you would not keep me waiting year by year to satisfy a whim of your mother's. Either you are mine, or you are not mine! I cannot, in honor, be hanging around here—sometimes to receive encouragement, sometimes discouragement. I am the laughing-stock of the town. I don't mind that. God knows that I mind nothing but you and my honor! I mind both so much that I must have my answer to-day." The words, the tone, the almost fierce gesture of the man who had been patient so long, all came to her. She stood in the very spot where she had refused her, "Yes," that should have been the answer to her lover's vehemence. She looked out upon the gray sky. The awful sense of loss was upon her, which was burnt in upon her consciousness when she watched her lover go forth to leave her forever to her cowardly fate. She might have forgotten the minister's tea-party and left the newly lighted fire to burn itself to ashes, had not her mother, who went to a closet next to the chimney, heard the roaring, and put her head in the doorway to surprise her daughter at her dreaming and to rouse her by her sharp "Jerusha Holdridge, what do you mean burning up all the kindlings before putting on the solid sticks?"

Thus prodded back to her duties, the poor girl took them up with a dull pain at her heart and a dread of the minister's coming, which made her part in the preparations exceedingly distasteful to her. When the parlor had been made ready for the visitor, she went out to help in the kitchen. "I'm sorry I had any soda and cream o' tartar cake made, Jerusha," said the mother. "I remember the last time I had a minister's party, that the Rev. John Forbes said, 'Your cookery resembles your conversation, Mrs. Holdridge, in that it is well seasoned and palatable.' I never forgot those words of the poor, dear minister. He's been enjoying the food and the conversation of heaven for many years now, whatever that may be. He'll be a great addition to heaven's society, I'm sure. He was what you might call rooted and grounded in faith. You couldn't have moved him a hair's breadth from the old views."

There seemed to be nothing in particular required of her in the kitchen, so Jerusha, following her mother's wish, went out to gather a few asters which, in a protected corner, had kept their fresh beauty from the ravishing visit of the frost. Mrs. Holdridge went on with her talk of company edibles. "It stands to reason that quick-raised cake can't have the substance and flavor of yeast-raised. I've really thought this layer-cake that they talk so much about lately, fits the tea-table talk of some people now-a-days. You remember, sister Ives, when we were invited to take tea at Mrs. Marshall's last spring, she had this flummery kind of cake, and you remember, too, that the conversation was of the same kind of lightness."

"I wonder how the new minister gets along there," remarked Mrs. Rev. Philetus Clark.

"I've been wondering myself how he can manage to keep in a proper frame of mind boarding with a woman like Mrs. Marshall. She's well enough in her way, but her people, you know, were different from our sort of people."

Jerusha's footsteps were heard then, and Mrs. Holdridge was silent until she heard the sound of the opening of the parlor door, and knowing that her daughter was beyond the reach of her words, she went on in low tones, in which those of the sister's were occasionally mingled, until the old clock struck two; then surveying the goodly array of "tea things," she declared that it was high time that she was dressed.

At last the three sisters were arrayed in their best and sitting in state to await the coming of the minister, each with company work and company manners, discussing with unusual interest church aspects as related to their little corner of the world. Meanwhile Jerusha, in her room, was sitting with the box which held her small store of seldom-renewed ribbons, trying to select one for the occasion. Suddenly she came upon a little knot of blue, and then her purpose seemed to fail her. She dropped the hand which held the tiny bow; the tears rushed to her eyes; she had worn the trifle last on that fateful afternoon. Blue had been Hiram's favorite. "It is a beautiful shade," her lover had said, "but not to compare with the beauty of your eyes, Jerusha."

Ah! the color of her eyes; she knew they were no longer the eyes her lover had worshipped. She heard at last the clang of the front-door knocker, and, bathing her face, she dressed herself, and taking a look into the glass to be sure that the signs of her grief had disappeared, went down to meet the Rev. Laurence Bowles. As she entered the parlor the rapt sisterhood were being edified by the words of their pastor. Upon Mrs. Holdridge's face there were evident signs of the importance with which she regarded the entrance of her daughter that she might take part in the conversation.

But Jerusha was a disappointment to her mother from first to last. At the tea-table the minister, in speaking of his prayer-meeting interest, remarked that Mr. Pritchard seemed to be a young man of growing spiritual power. "I look upon him as one who has had a refining experience. You, of course, know him well," he said to Mrs. Deacon Ives. The frightened little woman cast a furtive glance at Mrs. Holdridge, then one at Jerusha, to find the face of the poor girl scarlet, then answered faintly, "Yes, he was brought up in our society." "You think him a very exemplary young man, do you not?" he persisted, looking from one to the other of the silent women, and even his Sir Galahad eyes noticing the confusion of the youngest lady of the company.

Mrs. Rev. Philetus Clark felt called upon in the interest of the family's reputation to give an answer; what it was she never could quite recall, and I doubt if she completed her sentence, for the minister suddenly changed the subject, much to the relief of all.

It is needless to say that the tea-party had not accomplished hoped-for results. Indeed, to the mind of Mrs. Holdridge and her sisters there was a hopeless feeling with regard to Jerusha's matrimonial prospects minister-ward. And it would always be connected, this hopelessness, with the idea of a tea-party, and would thus take from their monotonous experience the pleasure from that one event. The tea gatherings which, before this one which had been the occasion of such unpleasant suggestions, had been seasons after the sisters' own hearts.

Laurence Bowles, on his return, found Mrs. Marshall alone in the sitting-room and inclined to talk. He asked no questions, said nothing but in commendation, but when he went up to his room he was in possession of Jerusha's secret, so far as her mother's will and it's power over the daughter were concerned. But what could he know, what could anyone know of the workings of that sorrowful experience in the heart and mind of the girl who had sacrificed her sacred instinct to a mother's tyranny?

Alone in her room she thought of the minister's words with regard to her discarded lover. She had never put her conception of the growing power of the man she had adored into that form of words as had the minister, but from the first sign of the refining process going on within his soul she had been conscious of it. It seemed to her on this night, as she lay alone in the darkness, that having missed the high privilege of becoming his wife, she longed to give her life in service to him. She thought of his fretful, unloving, invalid wife, of his two little children, and asked the great Healer of sorrows and Adjuster of purposes to circumstances to give her some opportunity to make the life of the man she still worshipped, though as one might a god, happier. To serve Hiram Pritchard was henceforth her heart's desire.

Anise, on the same night, closed her book and thought of the weeks of delightful companionship which she had enjoyed with the minister. In her reverie there was nothing but the white light of soul-worship, and if at that moment Sir Galahad had offered her wifehood she would have cried:

"No, no; I care not to be wife,
But to be with you still, to see your face."

Jerusha Holdridge and Anise Marshall, each in her way, had experienced the sacred passion and had found it transmuted for the glory of their lives.

(To be continued.)

Boston Letter.

APRIL 20th, 1886.

IT was a joyous day, Thursday, April 15th, in the history of the Shawmut Church, Boston, when to its pastorate the Rev. Dr. W. E. Griffis, late of Schenectady, was set apart. At such a time the best thoughts and best purposes in the life of a congregation come to the surface, and while it is a very serious moment, still it is a gala day. It may be winter, but still the flowers seem to blow, the birds sing, and all winds are westerly. There are the "fathers" and "brethren" who have come from all the neighboring Zions. Their chatty wives may have come with them, and all bring congratulations to church and minister.

Possibly Pastor Over-Zealous may have brought a nice little thumb-screw in his pocket that he purposes—politely but firmly—to clap on to the theological opinions of the pastor elect. There are brethren who are not only interested in the church and its new minister but in one another, and they go for "a button hole" promptly, to make appointments for "association," "conference," a "Board meeting," and perhaps a little innocent spring fishing in the brooks among the dewy, fragrant hills. Especially in the country is an ordination or installation magnetic. There are those who anticipate with keen interest the doctrinal examination. They like the intellectual excitement. It stirs them to hear Achilles' sword smiting Hector's shield. There are others who enjoy the fellowship feature of the gathering. Over the breezy country roads jolt the loaded teams whose four-footed motive power understand well on such occasions what juicy fodder awaits them in Deacon Smith's barn and Squire Brown's stable. And for human kind there is the collation between the "examination" in the forenoon and the "exercises" in the afternoon, a feast for which a hundred stoves have been puffing and roaring, may be, day after day. What a social centre this is where the theological slips of the morning are forgiven and business, ecclesiastical and civil, may be done for a year.

Thursday, April 15th, was certainly a busy day at the Shawmut Church, Boston. The prominent position of the church ensured a large congregation, and all the proceedings were in old-fashioned Congregational order. There were the messengers of the churches far and near who organized in due form and listened to the papers accompanying the resignation of Dr. Webb and those that attended the call to Dr. Griffis. The latter made a statement of his Christian experience and religious belief. At every council, how many sharp ears are pricked in the direction of the pastor-elect announcing his theological views! Every word, even if not precious, is put in the scales and weighed at once. Then comes the calling of the roll of the council, and delegates are invited to question the candidate. This is a time when old "war-horses" are sure to charge on any weak places in a candidate's defences, and sometimes old war-horses that differ among themselves get very much interested in charging at one another. A clergyman was telling me of his experience when at a council he was asked his opinion concerning an item in the catechism. One brother on the council said it read one way and a second insisted that it read another way. While the lions were roaring the candidate, meek and lamb-like, piped up and asked, "To which version of the catechism shall I reply?" "To neither, unless he wished it," the Moderator replied, and the matter was dropped.

Within a generation the points of doctrinal controversy in New England have shifted very much. Human ability and Divine sovereignty were the special topics of discussion. Emphasis was laid on the distinctions, "Old School" and "New School" thus applied, and Prof. Park, of Andover, was not by any means classified as an Old School man. Some people, when they snuffed a breeze blowing off from the hill tops of Andover, always scented "heresy." Now it is around those centres, the nature of the atonement, the extent of the inspiration of the Scriptures, the fixedness of the state of the impenitent dead, that discussion rages. As we all know, Prof. Park is now a champion of the "Old School" in comparision with the progressive views entertained by some. Andover has gone beyond him, and walking in the line of its traditions, it is still "New School," though after a different fashion from former days. A generation from now what will be the "heresy" that in the winds blowing from Andover's hill-tops may be scented by the then Old School men, among whom may be the followers of to-day's New School men?

But I am straying years away from the Shawmut Church Council. Dr. Griffis' examination was declared satisfactory to the Council, and in the evening a large congregation gathered to witness the installation services. The church has a fine audience-room, furnished with galleries, and while a representative of Congregationalism was in the pulpit, it might be taken for granted that a representative Congregationalism was in the pews. Rev. Dr. Alexander McKenzie, of Cambridge, preached the sermon, using the words between Philip and the Saviour in John 14: 8, 9. In treating his subject, the preacher worked a vein yielding much fine, helpful, spiritual thought. Among the other parts were the prayer of installation by Dr. T. E. Herrick, the charge to the pastor by Dr. J. L. Withrow, the right hand of fellowship by Dr. R. R. Meredith, and the charge to the people by the pastor emeritus, Dr. E. B. Webb.

Dr. Griffis' reception by the Shawmut Church has been very hearty and hospitable. One pleasant incident of his welcome to Boston was a dinner given him by Shawmut Church at a leading hotel, and there he met honored brethren among the clergy and laity. Rev. Dr. Webb presided at this love-feast. Dr. Griffis, as pastor of one of Boston's prominent churches, has a splendid opportunity for usefulness. I think the opportunity is matched by the man.

Those who attended a late Sunday service at the Warren Street Methodist Church may have been prompted to inquire if any of John Wesley's family were straying off into ritualism. On the pulpit stood a tall lighted wax taper. The ritualism was of a very innocent and healthy kind. The church has been in debt. An incubus of a mortgage note for $8,000 rested upon it. This nightmare, though, has been thrown off and the debt paid. The duty of that lighted taper was to burn the mortgage note, held to the flame by an officer of the church. It is said the silence was very impressive during this conflagration, but I fancy some old-fashioned "Amens" were echoing in the thoughts of the people.

The Massachusetts conscience that has been sleeping over the iniquitous "share"-gambling at fairs, has stirred at last. Governor Robinson in an official proclamation, frowned on the evil and the police are issuing their warnings, so that Grand Army posts, churches and charitable organizations breaking the law must expect to catch the law breaker's reward. At Lynn it is said that schemes involving a distribution of forty thousand dollars' worth of "prizes" were warned that there would be trouble if there were transgression.

Massachusetts is in a ferment about various things. The labor agitation is felt here, affecting movements in business and building. That article, liquor, we expect to be always fermenting, but the sale of it has been stopped in a large number of towns. Temperance sentiment feels the resistance of very positive head winds, and yet it is making progress. It is in the development of public opinion rather than the present execution of law, that I find reason for encouragement. However, strengthen the former, and the arm swinging the axe of the latter will come down effectively on evil-doers. We are working for both results in Massachusetts.

Boston is anticipating Easter. The observance of this festival has an increasing growth. All denominations honor it, and as we gather round that riptured tomb in the garden we forget that there are jarring sects; we are one in thought, and together we cry, "The Lord is risen! Hallelujah!"

NEPONSET.

Once More.

DEAR EDITOR: Your correspondent, "J.," in answering my question, to which he refers, goes out of his way to mix up things that differ. He uses the terms temperance and prohibition as if they were identical. Temperance is a Scriptural term, meaning the moderate use of anything. Prohibition is not a Scriptural term, and means the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all intoxicants by legal enactment. Temperance is enjoined in Scripture, but total abstinence and prohibition are not.

Now then, I urge total abstinence upon individuals, (and this can only be secured by moral suasion, because it must be the voluntary act of the individual,) because I believe it the safest thing to do; but in this I do not judge him who is temperate, lest I should be found condemning him whom the Scriptures commend. God forbid!

I advocate prohibition, because I perceive there is no other way of reaching the rum-maker and rum-seller; but I judge not them who are striving for the same thing by restriction. I work with them where this is the only practical way of reaching these men by law. I judge them not. God forbid!

I did not vote for the third party candidate, simply because my mind was too dull to comprehend how prohibition could be furthered in that way, (under the circumstances,) even if St. John had been elected, for the reason that this success would have been secured by a very small minority who happened for the time being to hold the balance of power, but had no one to represent it in either house of Congress, and only a small backing among the people; and, this being the fact, such a party could accomplish less in the way of permanent reform by law than the party which was then in power.

According to "J.'s" judgment I was inconsistent; but in my own, consistent. Who shall judge between us? I cannot recognize him as my judge, but this may be because I am not "intelligent."

Let the third party partisans turn from berating their brethren to something practical, and they will have no time for evil-speaking and no inclination to exercise the prerogatives which belong to God. Let them work to secure prohibition in their immediate neighborhoods, extend it over their counties and their States, and, when this is accomplished, then they can elect their State legislators, and through them their senators. And, when that is done, they will doubtless elect their President, who will be something more than a mere figure-head.

In the meanwhile there is enough room for high license and prohibition advocates to work without stepping on each other's corns,—enough work to engage the mind, and heart, and tongue of every earnest Christian and loyal citizen. Men who walk in the light which God has given them have no business to spend their strength and waste their influence in hurling anathemas at each other, so long as there remains something practical and lasting to be accomplished. "Let us have peace." ???

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....The Fine Art Library has received three additions since our last notice. One volume, by Henry Havard, describes "THE DUTCH SCHOOL OF PAINTING," treating first of its origin and character, then of the first period, beginning early in the fifteenth century and extending to about 1469, and proceeding to the period of transition whose artists are still painting in the grand epoch, which began with Van Mierevelt at about 1585 or soon after and speedily produced the famous Rembrandt, born in 1607. An illustrious line now passes in review—Nicolaas Maas, Van der Helst, Wouwerman, Van Ostade, Jan Steen, Terburg, Metzer, Gerard Dow, Jacob Van Ruysdael, Hobbema, Paul Potter, Van der Velde, Cuyp, and many others. The history concludes with a consideration of the causes of the decline of Dutch art, which began soon after the middle of the seventeenth century and which the author ascribes to a neglect of the study of nature and an imitation of the French school of the time. It is singular that the excellence of the Dutch school, which in some traits has never been equalled, is included within about fifty years.

The interest of the volume is heightened by engravings of the chief pictures of the masters of the school. In a small book such as this many artists are of necessity noticed with extreme brevity, and the reader feels a growing desire to know more of them and their works. But the history is, we believe, one of the best accounts to be had in English of a period distinguished in the annals of art.

The next addition to the series is "A SHORT HISTORY OF TAPESTRY," by Eugene Müntz, translated by Miss Louisa J. Davis. The record begins with the tapestry of Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, and advances to that of Greece and Rome. The larger part of the volume is devoted to a description of the progress and performance of this elegant art in Italy, Spain and France. The beautiful Gobelin tapestries are particularly considered. The appendix contains a number of the marks and monograms of famous factories. The volume is decidedly one of the most engaging of the set, and the illustrations, being more distinct, are more pleasing and satisfactory than those of any one of its predecessors. Just now, when so many are interested in interior decorations, this history, with its engravings, is a book in season, and will be found to abound in valuable information and suggestions.

The last addition is a volume on "THE EDUCATION OF THE ARTIST," by Ernest Chesnau, translated by Clara Bell. The primary motive of M. Chesnau in writing these chapters was to arrest the decline of art in France and to incite artists to such efforts as tend to greatness. His opinion is that art has degenerated largely to a mere mechanical performance, lacking in thought, feeling and individuality. To overcome this the artist must resolve to express himself, and to be able to put his experience and emotions on canvas or in marble he must be thoroughly educated. "Do not bring us your class-books to look at; keep them, if you please, or throw them away. They do not interest us." . . . "Edify us; or, at the very least, charm us." Such expressions convey the keynote of the treatise. Education, class books, for the sake of attaining ability to express oneself, but not to confine the artist to the attainment of a faultless mechanical execution, is the chief theme. The book is written with vigor and animation and will gratify those who are fond of art. The author is no friend to the nude in art and is able to give good reasons for his position. Such an ally to the friends of purity is valuable.

After considering the Æsthetics of Feeling and Education in General, M. Chesnau applies his principles to Religious Art, Heroic Art, Historical Art, Art and Passion, Art and Sentiment, Art and Nature, Art and Modern Life, and other departments and phases of art. The discussion is broad, and is defined by many examples. (Cassell & Co.)

....The "YOUNG PEOPLE'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND," by George Makepeace Towle, will prove quite as captivating as a romance to those for whom it was written, and incalculably more profitable. Notwithstanding the claims put forth now-a-days in behalf of the sciences, and on pure scientific grounds we maintain that the highest study of mankind is man. Even science holds that man is the climax of evolution, and, therefore, ought also to hold that what man has thought and done is the most instructive and valuable branch of knowledge. Mr. Towle vividly narrates the deeds by which Great Britain has become one of the mightiest empires of history and has produced poets, orators, philosophers and statesmen rivalling those of any age, while her merchants and manufacturers and many of her craftsmen have never been equalled. His literary ability is acknowledged, and he has conscientiously recorded the progress of English affairs, the influences which have been dominant and their results. One very valuable characteristic of his treatment of the great theme is the frequent introduction of a chapter on the "Progress of the People." The volume is illustrated. (Lee & Shepard.)

...."POPULAR FAMILY ATLAS OF THE WORLD." A convenient atlas for ready reference in ordinary reading—not so heavy as to be disagreeable to handle—not so full as to be confusing to the eye,—but full enough for all ordinary uses and brought down to 1885. Tables of populations and land areas of the United States and of the nations of the world, to the same date, accompany the maps. The whole is furnished and sent to any address for the marvellously low price of thirty cents. (J. B. Lippincott & Co.)

...."MADAME ROLAND," by Mathilde Blind, is another volume of the series of Famous Women. The story of the life of this brilliant, beautiful and powerful woman, who was "the soul of the Gironde," and one of the chief martyrs of the republic, is one of the saddest and most tragic episodes of the French Revolution of 1792. It is told in this small volume with singular vividness and force, grouping around her the principal figures in the history of the period and tracing the events in which she was a leader with clearness, skill and regard for the cause for which she gave her life. (Roberts Brothers.)

...."THE CAPTAIN OF THE JANIZARIES." A Story of the Times of Scanderbeg and the Fall of Constantinople. By James M. Ludlow. This, we believe, is Dr. Ludlow's first venture in the field of fiction, and it is certainly a very creditable one. The story is true in local color and an adequate representation of the time. The characters are well drawn, and the descriptions of scenery are vivid. While the reader is interested in the progress of the tale, he insensibly obtains a correct conception of the circumstances of the period and the mutual relations of the Turks and their opponents. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

...."THE PARABLES OF CHRIST." By A. L. O. E. From this gifted and favorite author we expect nothing commonplace, nor are our expectations ever disappointed. This is a delightful little treatise on the Parables of our Saviour, charmingly illustrated by both pictures and incidents. It is written from an Oriental standpoint, the original design being to convey a knowledge of Christ and His salvation to the natives of Hindustan, to whom the author is devoting her life as a missionary. It should be in every Sunday-school library. (Robert Carter & Brothers.)

...."THE EPIC SONGS OF RUSSIA." By Isabel Florence Hapgood. With an Introduction by Professor Francis J. Child. So little is known about the poetry of Russia, that this elegant volume supplies a place which was waiting for it, and will receive attention from students of literature. The folk-lore of Russia as here exhibited, though rude and primitive, possesses the true imaginative flame which makes it poetry and not prose. To children there will be the charm of fairy tales in many of these chapters. Others of older growth will be interested in tracing the resemblances which run through all Norse literatures not only, but which go far to prove the common origin of language, and which show a kinship between the legendary treasures of the tropics and the traditions of the frozen zone. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Lutheran Church Review for April has an elaborate and exhaustive article on Luther's Small Catechism as used in this country, giving the history of the Swedish, Dutch and English versions. The writer, Dr. Smucker, gives high praise to the translation in Schaff's Creeds of Christendom as an exact reproduction of the original. The entire article is admirable for its thoroughness and accuracy. Dr. Schaeffer treats impartially of the Indulgence Controversy, giving the substance of Prof. Dieckhoff's treatise. The Erudite Hebraist, Dr. Pick, sets forth The Talmud as a Witness to Christ and Christianity. This is followed by an interesting account of the Lutheran Church in Iceland, which furnishes a fresh illustration of the evils resulting from the interference of the State in ecclesiastical affairs.

....A variety of good reading and a large number of pleasing illustrations are to be found in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Sunday Magazine for May. The papers with pictures on Winchester Cathedral, King Richard's Chateau Gaillard, The Parish Church of Chihuahua, The Lily, Dilettante Days—describing Antwerp, The Indian Training School at Carlisle, Pa., are decidedly attractive. There are also biographical sketches of Mrs. Stowe and Mr. Gough, and articles about Easter observances and May day festivals, which are timely and agreeable. Dr. Talmage, the editor, writes in his best vein about Mr. Gough and Gen. Hancock. From the first to the last page the number is entertaining and profitable.

....Lippincott's Magazine, in its May number, vindicates its position as the best magazine for stories in this country. Besides its thoroughly American and realistic serial "Taken by Siege," and Norris's "A Bachelor's Blunder," Julian Hawthorne and Andrew Lang contribute two striking short stories. "Our Experience Meetings" give the professional autobiographies of Mrs. Potter, the elocutionist, and of Mrs. Ella Wheeler, the author. They are all the more entertaining for being absurdly egotistical. Mr. Joel Benton undertakes the painful task of finding something valuable in Thoreau's attempts at versification. The "Monthly Gossip" is very severe on Mr. James's "Bostonians," not without justice.

....Wide Awake for May contains a thrilling account of the capture of the British General Prescott during the war of the Revolution. "The Top of the Ladder," by Grace Denio Litchfield, and "The Professor's Last Skate," by J. Macdonald Oxley, are short stories, full of animation. Mrs. Mary Treat's paper on Wasps and the sketch of Bayard Taylor, by Amanda B. Harris, well repay perusal.

....St. Nicholas for May contains a great many things that the young folks will take delight in reading. Among them we notice specially: "When Shakespeare Was a Boy," by Rose Kingsley; "A Search for the Lace-Leaf," by Alice May, and "Vegetable Clothing," by C. J. Russell. Horace E. Scudder's biography of Washington and Mrs. Burnett's serial, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," sustain their interest.

....The Rev. Isaac S. Hartley, D.D., of the Reformed Church of Utica, contributes a welcome sketch of the life of Gov. Horatio Seymour to the Magazine of American History It is preceded by an excellent engraved portrait of the ex-Governor, and contains acceptable illustrations of the exterior and interior of his residence. Historical Colorado, the succeeding paper, by Katharine Hodges, both in the text and the illustrations, is one of those wonderful records of progress which abound in the history of our country. In An Old House in New Orleans, represented from a photograph, Mr. Charles Dimitry describes events of great interest, when Gen. Andrew Jackson was fined and paid one thousand dollars to the U. S. District Court. Gen. W. F. Smith critically examines the second day's battle at Shiloh, and Alfred E. Lee continues his account of the Battle of Cross Keys. The number throughout is especially interesting.

....The Quiver for May is full of good things. The description of the abbey of St. Albans, Anne Beale's essay on Sby Power y in Towns, Dr. Bonar's paper on The Resurrection Miracle, Archdeacon Gore's fresh instalment on The Growth of the New Testament, The Life-Story of Dora Greenwell by an anonymous writer, will be read with pleasure. The Short Arrows are excellent. The illustrations are abundant and admirable. For Sunday reading no better magazine can be found.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Robert Carter & Bros.: First Healing, and then Service, and Other Sermons. Preached in 1885. By C. H. Spurgeon, of London. 12mo, pp. 416. $1.

American Tract Society: The Key that Opens the Day. White enamelled paper, tied with blue silk ribbon. 32mo, pp. 76. 50 cents.

Ticknor & Co.: John Bodewin's Testimony. By Mary Hallock Foote. 12mo, pp. 344. $1.50.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Walter Harmsen: A Tale of Reformation Times in Holland. By E. Gerdes. Translated from the Dutch by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 367. $1.25; also,

Ralph Weston's Secret; or, Unto the Fourth Generation. By C. S. M. 16mo, pp. 247. $1.

Funk & Wagnalls: The Simplicity that is in Christ. Sermons to the Woodland Church, Philadelphia. By Leonard Woolsey Bacon. 12mo, pp. 339. $1.50; also,

The Two Books of Nature and Revelation Collated. By George D. Armstrong, D.D. 12mo, pp. 213. $1; also,

A Timid Brave. The Story of an Indian Uprising. By William Justin Harsha. 12mo, pp. 148. 75 cents.

Macmillan & Co.: Chantry House. By Charlotte M. Yonge. 12mo, pp. 405. $1.50.

J. B. Lippincott Company, or E. R. Pelton, N. Y.: Probation and Punishment. A Rational and Scriptural Exposition of the Doctrine of the Future Punishment of the Wicked. By Rev. S. M. Vernon, D.D. 12mo, pp. 300. $1.25.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Found on the Dark Mountains. A True Narrative. 32mo, pp. 64. 10 cents. Robert Carter & Brothers.

A Prince of Darkness. By Florence Warden. (Cassell's "Rainbow" Series.) 16mo, pp. 207. 25 cents. Cassell & Co.

The Evil Genius. A Domestic Story. By Wilkie Collins. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 72.) 16mo, pp. 230. 25 cents; also,

Demos: A Story of English Socialism. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 522.) 4to, pp. 104. 25 cents.

The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott, Bart. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I., No. 14.) 18mo, pp. 191. 10 cents.

Holland-American Almanac and Year Book for 1886. 12mo, pp. 36. Morris Coster, 1166 Broadway, N. Y.

PERIODICALS.

May.—Methodist Review, The Forum, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, Words and Weapons, The Phrenological Journal, Magazine of American History, The Book Buyer, The Century, The English Illustrated Magazine, The Pansy, The New Princeton Review, The Homiletic Review, The Targum.

REMOVAL.

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & CO.,

PUBLISHERS AND BOOKSELLERS,

HAVE REMOVED

from Broadway and 20th Street, to 38 West 23d Street,

SOUTH SIDE.

New Sunday School Song Books.

Songs of Promise.

By J. H. Tenney and E. A. Hoffman. For Sunday Schools, Prayer and Conference Meetings.

SONGS OF PROMISE fill this beautiful book, and they have a great variety, having been contributed by many able writers. The book has 160 pages, and 149 Hymns, each with its own tune. Music and words mostly new.

35 cts. $3.60 per dozen.

The following first rate Sunday School Singers, recently published, continue to be in high favor.

Song Worship.

By Emerson and Sherwin, (35 cts. $3.60 per dozen).

Singing on the Way.

By Jewett and Holbrook, (35 cts. $3.60 per dozen).

Light and Life.

By R. M. McIntosh, (35 cts. $3.60 per dozen).

FRESH FLOWERS, (25 cts. $2.40 per dozen,) by Emma Pitt, a p cture Hymn and Song book for the youngest Sunday Scholars, is a deserved favorite with everybody who sees it.

A fine collection of Songs and Hymns for MEMORIAL DAY will be found in Ditson & Co.'s WAR SONGS, (50 cts. $4.50 per dozen).

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.

ANNETTE L. NOBLE.

16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.

MRS. E. R. CHURCH.

16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.

MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.

MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.

REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.

16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.

Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.

Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.60.

Address orders to

Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

The Newest and Best Sunday School Song Book

FOR THIS YEAR.

THE

GLAD REFRAIN.

By Messrs. LOWRY and DOANE.

It is fully equal to any of their former popular works.

This NEW Song Book embraces a number of NEW features, and is gotten up on an entirely NEW plan, in a NEW shape, and is printed from beautiful NEW type. It is sure to please, and will create a NEW interest in the Song Service. It will be sold at a NEW price,

$25 per 100 Copies, in Boards.

Single copy sent as soon as published on receipt of price.

Specimen pages sent free on request.

An Edition in Aikin's Character Notes, at Same Price.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

DR. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSETS AND BELTS.

Corsets, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00. Belts, $3.00. Nursing Corset, Price, $1.50. Abdominal Corset, Price, $3.00.

Probably, never since the invention of Corsets, has so large a demand been created as now exists for Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets and Belts. Over three thousand families in the City of New York alone are now wearing them daily. Every Man and Woman, well or ill, should daily wear either the Corset or Belt.

OUR CORSETS ARE DOUBLE-STITCHED AND WILL NOT RIP.

If you have any pain, ache or ill-feeling from any cause, if you seem "pretty well," yet lack energy and do not "feel up to the mark," if you suffer from disease, we beg you to at once try these remarkable curatives. They cannot and do not injure like medicine.

Always doing good, never harm. There is no shock or sensation felt in wearing them. There is no waiting a long time for results: electro-magnetism acts quickly, generally the first week, more frequently the first day, and often even during the first hour they are worn their wonderful curative powers are felt.

The mind becomes active, the nerves and sluggish circulation are stimulated, and all the old-time health and good feeling come back. They are constructed on scientific principles, imparting an exhilarating, health-giving current to the whole system. Professional men assert that there is hardly a disease which Electricity or Magnetism may not benefit or cure, and they daily practice the same, as your own physician will inform you.

The Celebrated Dr. W. A. Hammond, of New York, formerly Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, lately lectured upon this subject, and advised all medical men to make trial of these agencies, describing at the same time most remarkable cures he had made, even in cases which would seem hopeless.

The Corsets do not differ in appearance from those usually worn; we substitute our flat steel magnetods in place of the ordinary corset-steels. These Corsets are all equally charged, differing only in quality and design. They are elegant in shape and finish, made after the best French pattern, and warranted satisfactory in every respect. The above applies equally as well to the Electric Belt for gentlemen.

The prices are as follows: $1, $1.50, $2 and $3 for the Corsets, and $3 each for the Belts. We now make all these Corsets in dove and white only. They are sent out in a handsome box, accompanied by a silver-plated compass, by which the Electro Magnetic influence can be tested. We will send either kind to any address, post-paid, on receipt of price, with 20 cents added for packing or registration; and we guarantee safe delivery into your hands. Remit in Post-office Money-order, Draft, Check, or in Currency by Registered Letter at our risk. In ordering kindly mention this paper, and state exact size of corset usually worn. Make all remittances payable to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

N. B.—Each Corset is stamped with the English coat-of-arms, and the name of the Proprietors, THE PALL MALL ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION.

NEWARK, N. Y., June 1.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have entirely cured me of muscular rheumatism and also of a severe case of headache. MRS. L. C. SPENCER.

Hollis Centre, Me., August 29.
I suffered severely from back trouble for years, and found no relief till I wore Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets. They cured me, and I would not be without them. MRS. H. D. BENSON.

Memphis, Tennessee, November 28.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have given me much relief. I suffered four years with breast trouble, without finding any benefit from other remedies. They are invaluable.
MRS. JAS. CAMPBELL.

De Witt, N.Y., June 11.
I have an invalid sister who had not been dressed for a year. She has worn Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets two weeks, and is now able to be dressed and sit up most of the time. MELVA J. DOE.

Chambersburg, Pa., October 8.
I found Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets possessed miraculous power in stimulating and invigorating my enfeebled body, and the hair brush had a magic effect on my scalp.
MRS. T. E. SNYDER, Fancy Goods Dealer.

South Abington, Mass., July 8.
Dr. Scott—My sister and I are very much pleased with your Electric Corsets. They have given us great satisfaction. For weak stomach and nervousness they are unexcelled. I have felt uncommon well since wearing them and can confidently recommend them. FLORA E. COLE.

Niles, Mich., January 5, 1885.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have cured me of acute dyspepsia, from which I had suffered for eight years. His Electric Hair Brush cures my headache every time. MRS. WM. H. PEAK.

Princeton, Minn., June 5.
Your Corsets have accomplished wonders in my case. I was, previously, thoroughly incapacitated, and could not help myself. I have worn your Corsets now for two weeks, and I am able to be up and around, helping to do housework, etc. My friends are astonished. With many thanks, etc.,
JULIA J. MCFARLAND.

Streator, Ills., Jan. 7.
Dr. Scott—Your Electric Corsets are beautiful in appearance, wonderful in effect and elegant in fit and finish.
MRS. M. J. BRIGGS.

2121 Henrietta St., Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 21, 1884.
Dr. Scott—Your Corset has cured me of rheumatism of and around the kidneys. W. H. UPJOHN.

Dr. Scott's Electric Hair Brushes, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00; Flesh Brushes, $3.00; Dr. Scott's Electric Tooth Brushes, 50 cents; Insoles, 50 cents; CHEST PROTECTOR, $3.00; ELECTRIC HAIR CURLER, 50 cents, LADIES' BELTS, $3.00.

The Dry Goods Trade Supplied by H. B. CLAFLIN & CO., New York, Sole Wholesale Agents. Remittances for single articles and applications for Canvassing Agents' Terms must be made only to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York.

A GREAT SUCCESS. ☞A Good, Live Canvassing Agent WANTED in your town for these splendidly advertised and best selling goods in the market. LIBERAL PAY, QUICK SALES. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Apply at once. GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

Peter Henderson's

SEEDS EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN PLANTS

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

Holland-American Almanac and Year Book for 1886.

PUBLISHED BY

MORRIS COSTER,

Editor of "New Amsterdam Gazette,"

1166 Broadway, N. Y.

Containing: The Portraits of their Majesties the King and Queen of the Netherlands. A complete almanac for the present year, with the remarkable events of past days. Poetry in the English language by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, Henry Webb Dunshee, Esq., Mrs. Mary (Latscher) Lutz. Sketches of the careers of Hon. Wm. Bennebroek Gravenhorst, Vice-Consul for the Netherlands, New York, and Morris Goodhart, Esq., Counsellor-at-Law, New York, with portraits. Dutch poetry by Prof. N. Beets, etc. List of Consuls for the Netherlands in the United States, Holland, and Colonies. Protestant Reformed Churches in New York with their pastors. Important improvements made by the New York Agency of the Netherlands-American Steam Navigation Company, (in the Dutch language), etc., etc.

Price 30 cents, and on superfine paper 50 cents. Also for sale at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

NOW READY!

FLOWER PRAISE

A FLORAL SERVICE

FOR

The Children of the Sunday School.

By CLARA LOUISE BURNHAM and GEO. F. ROOT.

This little Service or Cantata is designed more especially for

Children's Day, Flower Sunday, AND SPECIAL ANNIVERSARIES,

but it is also adapted for use on any occasion where children's voices can be utilized. The words are bright, pretty and instructive, while the music is written in Dr. Root's happiest vein and most strikingly illustrates the sentiment of the words. Bound in handsome heavy paper covers. Price 20 cts. each by mail, postpaid; $2.00 a dozen by express, charges not prepaid.

SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

The John Church Co, Cincinnati, O.

J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

Floral Praise

No. 4.

A Beautiful Musical Service for

Children's Day and Flower Sunday,

By HUBERT P. MAIN.

Price $4 per 100 copies; 5 cts. each by Mail.
Previous issues furnished at same price.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

AGENTS wanted for PINKERTON'S SPY of the REBELLION, the most thrilling war book ever published. PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED. ABSOLUTELY THE EASIEST BOOK TO SELL EVER KNOWN! For full particulars, special territory and terms to agents, Address G. W. CARLETON & CO., Publishers, New York.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, F. G. SNOW, JR., Ass't Sec's.

BARNES' NATIONAL INK.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Fugitive Poetry.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

"AND what do you read first in your favorite magazine?" said my friend, turning with loving appreciation to the beautiful illustrated monthly which the postman had just left.

"The serial, of course," was the reply, a tiny accent of emphasis on the definite article, for as all the world knows, there is always a serial which takes precedence in interest of every other that happens to be publishing. In this case it was East Angels. But my friend ignored the implied challenge.

"The serial is not of course with me," she answered, with the virtuous satisfaction of a person to whom "duty first, pleasure afterward," is an invariable and lifelong rule. "By no means of course, my dear. I always read my magazine straight through. Why, I do not even skip the poetry!"

It took a few moments for astonishment and admiration to expend themselves on the fortitude which could wade through what it did not appreciate before enjoying a mental feast, and the wonder grew whether or not it may be possible that there are symmetrically developed souls to whom articles historical, light or heavy, descriptive, clever or sketchy, archæological, social and polemic disquisition, are equally entertaining and profitable, who can as easily and joyously undertake the serious as the amusing portions of the periodical, who do not even skip the poetry in haste to get at the stories.

It is quite the fashion to adopt a patronizing and tolerant tone with regard to poetry, as though it belonged to the decorative arts and had no essential end to serve, or as though the place grudingly accorded it in the newspapers might better be otherwise utilized. Toward the masterpieces of literature, Paradise Lost or the Inferno, or the Iliad, to the Excursion, or the Prelude, even to the Course of Time and the Seasons, the Deserted Village, and the Essay on Man, most people hold an attitude of respect, the more pronounced that they have read very little of these world-famed productions. They like to have them on the shelves, where they confer an air of grave respectability, giving a sort of certificate of culture to the family; but to read them, "No, thank you!" The misdemeanors of pedagogues, for which they deserve the pillory, have made some of these epics odious in the memory to unfortunate middle-aged people, who, a generation ago, found Paradise Lost a nightmare when compelled to parse it. It is the felicity of only a small minority of the reading public to be on familiar terms with Milton, Dryden, Wordsworth or Pope. Cowper was a favorite with all well-bred and well-read persons a few years ago, yet it is to be feared that the number of people is lessening who have now any real acquaintance with the Task, or who know the gentle poet by anything beyond one or two beautiful hymns and the rollicking humor of John Gilpin. To skip poetry is the general rule in this busy day.

It is a pity that there are educated young people indifferent to the charms of Mrs. Browning's muse, ignorant of the sumptuous splendors of Tennyson, cold and unmoved at the thrilling music of Scott, and insensible to the all-comprehending variety of Shakespeare. Most inadequate is the theory of education, which in its haste to cram the youthful memory with facts, forgets to feed and nourish the youthful imagination. The life shall be shorn of much beauty which has "skipped the poetry" in this realistic way.

Everybody repeats the mournful plaint, No time. But little time is needed for reading the bright, inspiring verse which floats hither and yon in the current issues of the press.

The person who should in the May Harper, for instance, omit the poetry would be a loser, for not often is it our privilege to come unexpectedly upon a finer lyric, more soul-stirring, worthier of a place in memory and among our choicest scrap-book treasures, than Clairvoyance, by Harriet Prescott Spofford. It is too long for quotation, but it is a rendering in musical and jewel-dripping verse of the old story of Elisha at Dothan.

Reading it in a moment of transient weakness, it was like a draught of crystal water on a summer day, and the brave cadence of the closing lines was a rally of enthusiasm.

> The chariots of fire and the horsemen!
> Shall the lad in his innocence see
> The help of the hills and shall nature
> Deny it to me?
> O shadows that close round my spirit
> In the clefts of the rocks haste and hide!
> For me, too, the mountain is trembling
> Where heaven's hosts abide,
> Great forces are thrilling and arming—
> God fights on my side!"

This lyric, from the pen of an author whose words are colors and whose style is masterly, is undoubtedly above the average of magazine and newspaper verse. But the busy man, absorbed in affairs, hard-headed, practical and little skilled in the nice distinctions of rhetoric, has an unsuspected corner in his heart and in his pocketbook for bits of rhyme which are drifting about in the papers, little fairy yachts evading on the one side the grave political leaders, and on the other the bristling reports of the markets.

Else, why does he keep tucked away from sight the little home-truth, set to silvery jingle which turned out half a song, half a sermon, to its author's astonishment? We who write such verses are aware of days when our instrumentality in their production is akin to that of the uncanny little Planchette, for the verses either write themselves or they seem to be written for us. How labored so ever the poem which is ambitious of literary fame may be, the successful newspaper poem, the waif which is a voice and a message, is usually spontaneous. It is not always, indeed, dashed off at white heat, but it is not worked over and wrought out and elaborated. The offspring of a mood, the cry of a passion, the throb of a soul, the expression of a want, its strength and its charm are in its truth to nature. Representing a genuine impulse, it appeals to a responsive audience and not swifter is the string to answer the touch of the musician than are hearts, beating with human want and woe, to acknowledge the call of a true poet, although it be only a single note.

Thus, Charles Kingsley's "Three Fishers," said and sung a thousand times, has a perennial freshness and never falls wearily upon the jaded ear. Longfellow's Psalm of Life, Lowell's Auf Wiedersehen, Aldrich's Good-Night, belongs each in its way to the higher rank of newspaper verse. It is no disparagement of the beloved Whittier that his best utterances, the poems which most truly evince his deep sincerity and his seer-like quality, possess most of the melody which goes straight to the common heart. How swiftly his war-lyrics found their way into the homes of plain men and women who could say "Thy will be done," but needed a poet's hand and a poet's ear for time and tune to wed it to a grand and solemn measure. How glad we are to learn by heart those lines, instinct with humble trustfulness,

> "I know not where His islands lift
> Their fronded psalms in air,
> I only know I cannot drift
> Beyond His love and care."

"But you cannot call the poems of Whittier fugitive?" exclaims my friendly critic. "They belong to permanent literature."

"Certainly; yet fugitive they are, winged with the plumes of the dove, flying forever to and fro with their messages of peace and good-will. The permanence that is no longer fugitive is petrifaction. We cannot think that it will ever become the fate of our Longfellow or our Whittier.

Beside me, as I write, lies a pile of papers, the accumulation of a week in a house to which every mail brings its complement of printed matter. Opening the first I find a little homily in song addressed to children. It has a dainty grace of its own, and the barbed arrow may suit some older person than the wee woman who points its moral.

WHAT THE CHOIR SANG ABOUT THE NEW BONNET.

A foolish little maiden bought a foolish little bonnet,
With a ribbon and a feather and a bit of lace upon it;
And that the other maidens of the little town might know it,
She thought she'd go to meeting the next Sunday, just to show it.

But though the little bonnet was scarce larger than a dime,
The getting of it settled proved to be a work of time;
So when it was fairly tied, all the bells had stopped their ringing,
And when she came to meeting, sure enough the folks were singing.

So this foolish little maiden stood and waited at the door,
And she shook her ruffles out behind, and smoothed them down before.
"Hallelujah! Hallelujah!" sang the choir above her head:
"Hardly knew you! hardly knew you!" were the words she thought they said!

This made the little maiden feel so very, very cross,
That she gave her mouth a twist and her head a little toss:
For she thought the very hymn they sang was all about her bonnet,
With a ribbon and a feather and a bit of lace upon it!

And she did not wait to listen to the sermon or the prayer,
But pattered down the silent street and hurried up the stair,
Till she reached her little bureau, and in a bandbox on it
Had hidden safe from critic's eye her foolish little bonnet.

Which proves, my little maidens, that each of you will find
In every Sabbath service but an echo of your mind;
And the little head that's filled with all these silly airs,
Will never get a blessing from sermons or from prayers.

—Miss Hammond.

Here is a sparkle of cheerful philosophy:

> "Whatever the weather may be," says he—
> "Whatever the weather may be,
> It's the song ye sing and the smile ye wear
> That's makin' the sun shine everywhere—
> And the world of gloom is a world of glee,
> Wid the birds in the bush and the bud in the tree;
> Whatever the weather may be," says he—
> "Whatever the weather may be."

Simple and tenderly sweet is the next selection:

ONLY A SONG.

It was only a song that the maiden sang,
With a thoughtless tone, yet the echo rang
In the heart of the lad. Like a pure white hand,
It guided him over sea and land.

Only an old, old-fashioned hymn,
Sung in the twilight, gray and dim,
By mother's side or on father's knee;
Yet time cannot blot it from memory.

Only a song from the lips of one
Whose mission is past, whose brief life is done—
A simple song; and yet, after all,
I never can sing it but tears will fall.

Only a song from a feeble pen,
And a faltering hand and heart; but then,
Who knows? Perhaps some life once sad
In sin was made to rejoice and be glad.

Brief as a song is this life of ours,
Fleeting as sunshine and frail as the flowers;
Then sing, my heart! oh, sing and be strong!
Thou shalt one day join in the "New, New Song."

We have room for no more. Could we look into mother's work-basket, into sister's portfolio, into Aunt Mary's desk, we should discover many an unpretending copy of verses hardly presuming to the dignified title of poem, but worth much notwithstanding, because in a sad day they were consolatory, in a doubtful day they were auspicious, to a happy hour they added gladness, or to a fainting heart they brought courage.

The writers are unknown, or if known hold a very lowly place in the singing choir, and still, in the scales of Divine Love, their work may outweigh in value much that the world prizes at a higher rate.

The Best Way.

TO those who feel that giving is worship, and that we never rise to the fulness of our privileges until we deny ourselves for Christ's sake, the little note appended will come with the force of a suggestion, not novel but pertinent. Which of our auxiliaries will be first to imitate the good example and follow in the path of the New Brunswick society? Will the Woman's Board and Executive Committee please take notice.

At the last quarterly meeting (held in March) of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Reformed Church of New Brunswick, which society is auxiliary to both Boards, a new plan was proposed for raising funds for missions instead of resorting to fairs and festivals. It was suggested that each lady present give at that time what she felt she could, even if it called for sacrifice. Twenty ladies were present; each one responded generously and heartily to the call. In a few moments $79 was given. A lady present pledged herself to raise $25 more, so we closed our meeting with $104 contributed. All present felt it was more blessed to give than to receive, and sang from the heart on closing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The absent ones on hearing what a grand meeting we had had, also contributed willingly, thus $163 were raised. We have sent a part to be used toward the debt of Foreign Missions and the remainder to the Parsonage Fund.

SECRETARY.

A Word to Contributors.

